gous to "household." The difficulty with the former construction is that it practically liberates the word from all restrictions. If it be construed as referring to locality, what is the locality to which it should be confined? Is it the immediate neighborhood, township, county, or state, or may it be given the same construction as given to it in connection with the words commerce or manufacturing, and be extended to the whole United States? If either of these constructions were possible, it would result in the destruction of all timber standing upon public mineral lands, as well as in an unfair discrimination against those less favorably situated, who are compelled to pay for the fuel consumed in the treatment of ores. I do not think the word "other" can be used as an enlargement of the word "domestic," and that it should be confined, as are the preceding words, to timber used for other analogous structural purposes and for household consumption,—in short, to other purposes domestic in their character.

For these reasons I am constrained to dissent from the opinion of the court.

I am authorized to state that Mr. Justice Harlan and Mr. Justice Peckham concur in this dissent.

UNION STOCK YARDS COMPANY OF OMAHA

v.

CHICAGO, BURLINGTON, & QUINCY RAILROAD COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 217-228.)

Negligence — contribution among wrongdoers.

A terminal company whose negligence toward one of its employees in failing, by a proper inspection, to discover a defective brake on a car delivered to it by a railroad company has been established by a competent tribunal, cannot enforce contribution or recover indemnity from the railroad company because of the latter's like neglect of duty.

[No. 100.]

Argued December 14, 15, 1904. Decided January 9, 1905.

ON A CERTIFICATE from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit, presenting a question as to the liability of a railroad company which has delivered a car in bad order to a terminal company, to indemnify the latter for damages which it has been compelled to pay to one of its employees because of its negligence in failing properly to inspect the car. Answered in the negative.

NOTE.—As to contribution between wrongdoers—see notes to Smith v. Ayrault, 1 L. R. A. 313; Memphis & C. R. Co. v. Greer, 4 L. R. A. 859; and Boston v. Simmons, 6 L. R. A. 630.

Statement by Mr. Justice Day:

This case comes here on the certificate of the United States circuit court of appeals for the eighth circuit. The facts embodied therein are: The circuit court of the United States, sitting at Omaha, Neb., sustained a demurrer to the petition of the plaintiff in error against the defendant in error. The facts stated in the petition, in substance, are as follows:

"The plaintiff, the stock yards company, is a corporation which owns stock yards at South Omaha, Nebraska, railroad tracks appurtenant thereto, and motive power to operate cars for the purpose of switching them to their ultimate destinations in its yards from a transfer track which connects its tracks with the railways of the defendant, the Burlington company. The Burlington company is a railroad corporation engaged in the business of a common carrier of freight and passengers. The defendant places the cars destined for points in the plaintiff's yards on the transfer track adjacent to the premises of the plaintiff, and the latter hauls them to their points of destination in its yards for a fixed compensation, which is paid to it by the defendant. The plaintiff receives no part of the charge to the shipper for the transportation of the cars, but the defendant contracts with the shipper to deliver the cars to their places of ultimate destination in the plaintiff's yards, and receives from the shipper the compensation therefor. The defendant delivered to the plaintiff upon the transfer track a refrigerator car of the Hammond Packing Company, used by the defendant to transport the meats of that company, to be delivered to that company by the plaintiff in its stock yards. This car was in bad

[219] order, in that the nut above the wheel upon the brake staff was not fastened to the staff, although it covered the top of the staff, and rested on the wheel as though it was fastened thereto, and this defect was discoverable upon reasonable inspection. The plaintiff undertook to deliver the car to the Hammond company, and sent Edward Goodwin, one of its servants, upon it for that purpose, who, by reason of this defect, was thrown from the car and injured while he was in the discharge of his duty. He sued the plaintiff, and recovered a judgment in one of the district courts of Nebraska for the damages which he sustained by his fall, on the ground that it was caused by the negligence of the stock yards company in the discharge of its duty of inspection to its employee. This judgment was subsequently affirmed by the supreme court of Nebraska (Union Stock-Yards Co. v. Goodwin, 57 Neb. 138, 77 N. W. 357), and was paid by the plaintiff."

Upon this certificate the circuit court of appeals propounds the following question:

"Is a railroad company which delivers a car in bad order to a terminal company, that is under contract to deliver it to its ultimate destination on its premises for a fixed compensation, to be paid to it by the railroad company, liable to the terminal company for the damages which the latter has been compelled to pay to one of its employees on account of injuries he sustained while in the customary discharge of his duty of operating the car, by reason of the defect in it, in a case in which the defect is discoverable upon reasonable inspection?"

Mr. Frank T. Ransom argued the cause and filed a brief for the stock yards company:

Where one of several persons answerable for a negligent act or condition which he has not joined in or created has been compelled to respond in damages for such act or condition, he may have redress against the others.

Gray v. Boston Gaslight Co. 114 Mass. 149, 19 Am. Rep. 324; Lowell v. Boston & L. R. Corp. 23 Pick. 24, 34 Am. Dec. 33; Cooley, Torts, 1st ed. p. 144; Bishop, Non-Contract Law, § 535; Carterville v. Cook, 16 Am. St. Rep. 254, note, 129 Ill. 152, 4 L. R. A. 721, 22 N. E. 14; Acheson v. Miller, 2 Ohio St. 202, 59 Am. Dec. 663; Adamson v. Jarvis, 4 Bing. 66; Betts v. Gibbins, 2 Ad. & El. 57; Farwell v. Becker, 129 Ill. 261, 6 L. R. A. 400, 16 Am. St. Rep. 267, 21 N. E. 792; Minneapolis Mill Co. v. Wheeler, 31 Minn. 121, 16 N. W. 698.

The rule that wrongdoers cannot have contribution or redress against each other is confined to cases where the plaintiff is presumed to have known he was doing a wrongful act.

Bishop, Non-Contract Law, 56, 535; Vandiver v. Pollak, 97 Ala. 467, 19 L. R. A. 628, 12 So. 473; Block v. Estes, 92 Mo. 318, 4 S. W. 731; Scofield v. Gaskill, 60 Ga. 277; Owen v. McGehee, 61 Ala. 440; Armstrong County v. Clarion County, 66 Pa. 218, 5 Am. Rep. 368; Jacobs v. Pollard, 10 Cush. 287, 57 Am. Dec. 105; Cooley, Torts, 148; Pollock, Torts, 171; Horbach v. Elder, 18 Pa. 33; Farwell v. Becker, 129 Ill. 261, 6 L. R. A. 400, 16 Am. St. Rep. 267, 21 N. E. 792.

Nor does the rule apply to a person made a wrongdoer by inference of law.

See Merryweather v. Nixon, 2 Smith, Lead.

Cas. 456-460; Pearson v. Skelton, 1 Mees. & W. 504; Adamson v. Jarvis, 4 Bing. 66.

Where the neglect is joint,—as, where it consists of the omission of a duty which each of the parties was equally bound, both in law and in good conscience, to discharge,—each is entitled to contribution from the other.

Carterville v. Cook, 16 Am. St. Rep. 257, note, 129 Ill. 152, 4 L. R. A. 721, 22 N. E. 14; Armstrong County v. Clarion County, 66 Pa. 218, 5 Am. Rep. 368; Ankeny v. Moffett, 37 Minn. 109, 33 N. W. 320.

In Nebraska the rule has been declared to be that, in determining whether one joint wrongdoer is entitled to contribution from another, the test is whether the former knew, at the time of the commission of the act for which he has been compelled to respond, that such act was wrongful.

Johnson v. Torpy, 35 Neb. 604, 37 Am. St. Rep. 447, 53 N. W. 575; Ankeny v. Moffett, 37 Minn. 109, 33 N. W. 320.

Mr. Charles J. Greene argued the cause and filed a brief for the Chicago, Burlington, & Quincy Railroad Company.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

We take it that this inquiry must be read, in the light of the statement accompanying it. While instruction is asked broadly as to the liability of the railroad company to the terminal company, for damages which the latter has been compelled to pay to one of its own employees on account of injuries sustained, it is doubtless meant to limit the inquiry to cases wherein such recovery was had because of the established negligence of the terminal company in the performance of the specific duty stated, and which it owed to the employee. For it must be taken as settled that the terminal company was guilty of negligence after it received the car in question, in failing to perform the duty of inspection required of it as to its own employee. The case referred to in the certificate (Union Stock-Yards Co. v. Goodwin, 57 Neb. 138, 77 N. W. 357) is a final adjudication between the terminal [223] company and the employee, *and it therein appears that the liability of the company was based upon the defective character of the brake, which defect a reasonably careful inspection by a competent inspector would have revealed, and it was held that in permitting the employee to use the car without discovering the defect the company was rendered liable to him for the damages sustained. We have, therefore, a case in which the question of the plaintiff's negligence has been established by a competent tribunal, and the inquiry here is, may the terminal company recover contribution, or, more strictly speaking, indemnity, from the railroad company because of the damages which it has been compelled to pay under the circumstances stated?

Nor is the question to be complicated by a decision of the liability of the railroad company to the employee of the terminal company, had the latter seen fit to bring the action against the railroad company alone, or against both companies jointly. There seems to be a diversity of holding upon the subject of the railroad company's liability under such circumstances, in courts of high authority.

In Moon v. Northern P. R. Co. 46 Minn. 106, 24 Am. St. Rep. 194, 48 N. W. 679, and Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Snyder, 55 Ohio St. 342, 60 Am. St. Rep. 700, 45 N. E. 559, it was held that a railroad company was liable to an employee of the receiving company who had been injured on the defective car while in the employ of the latter company when, under a traffic arrangement between the companies, the delivering company had undertaken to inspect the cars upon delivery, and, as in the Moon Case, where there was a joint inspection by the inspectors of both companies. This upon the theory that the negligence of the delivering company, when it was bound to inspect before delivery, was the primary cause of the injury, notwithstanding the receiving company was also guilty of an omission to inspect the car before permitting an employee to use the same.

A different view was taken in the case of Glynn v. Central R. Co. 175 Mass. 510, 78 Am. St. Rep. 507, 56 N. E. 698, in which the opinion was delivered by Mr. Justice Holmes, then chief justice of Massachusetts, *in which it was held that, as the car, after [224] coming into the hands of the receiving company, and before it had reached the place of the accident, had crossed a point at which it should have been inspected, the liability of the delivering company for the defect in the car, which ought to have been discovered upon inspection by the receiving company, was at an end. A like view was taken by the supreme court of Kansas in the case of Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Merrill, 65 Kan. 436, 59 L. R. A. 711, 93 Am. St. Rep. 287, 70 Pac. 358, reversing its former decision in the same case reported in 61 Kan. 671, 60 Pac. 819. But we do not deem the determination of this question necessary to a decision of the present case.

Coming to the very question to be determined here, the general principle of law is well settled that one of several wrongdoers cannot recover against another wrongdoer, although he may have been compelled to pay all the damages for the wrong done. In many instances, however, cases have been taken out of this general rule, and it has been held inoperative in order that the ultimate loss may be visited upon the principal wrongdoer, who is made to respond for all the damages, where one less culpable, although legally liable to third persons, may escape the payment of damages assessed against him by putting the ultimate loss upon the one principally responsible for the injury done. These cases have, perhaps, their principal illustration in that class wherein municipalities have been held responsible for injuries to persons lawfully using the streets in a city, because of defects in the streets or sidewalks caused by the negligence or active fault of a property owner. In such cases, where the municipality has been called upon to respond because of its legal duty to keep public highways open and free from nuisances, a recovery over has been permitted for indemnity against the property owner, the principal wrongdoer, whose negligence was the real cause of the injury.

[225] Of this class of cases is Washington Gaslight Co. v. District of Columbia, 161 U. S. 316, 40 L. ed. 712, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564, in which a resident of the city of Washington had been injured by an open gas box, placed and *maintained on the sidewalk by the gas company, for its benefit. The District was sued for damages, and, after notice to the gas company to appear and defend, damages were awarded against the District, and it was held that there might be a recovery by the District against the gas company for the amount of damages which the former had been compelled to pay. Many of the cases were reviewed in the opinion of the court, and the general principle was recognized that, notwithstanding the negligence of one, for which he has been held to respond, he may recover against the principal delinquent where the offense did not involve moral turpitude, in which case there could be no recovery, but was merely malum prohibitum, and the law would inquire into the real delinquency of the parties, and place the ultimate liability upon him whose fault had been the primary cause of the injury. The same principle has been recognized in the court of appeals of the state of New York in Oceanic Steam Nav. Co. v. Compañia Transatlantica Española, 134 N. Y. 461, 30 Am. St. Rep. 635, 31 N. E. 897, the second proposition of the syllabus of the case being:

"Where, therefore, a person has been compelled, by the judgment of a court having jurisdiction, to pay damages caused by the negligence of another, which ought to have been paid by the wrongdoer, he may recover of the latter the amount so paid, unless he was a party to the wrong which caused the damage."

In a case cited and much relied upon at the bar (Gray v. Boston Gaslight Co. 114 Mass. 149, 19 Am. Rep. 324), a telegraph wire was fastened to the plaintiff's chimney without his consent, and, the weight of the wire having pulled the chimney over into the street, to the injury of a passing traveler, an action was brought against the property owner for damages, and notice was duly given to the gas company, which refused to defend. Having settled the damages at a figure which the court thought reasonable, the property owner brought suit against the gas company, and it was held liable. In the opinion the court said:

*"When two parties, acting together, com-[226] mit an illegal or wrongful act, the party who is held responsible in damages for the act cannot have indemnity or contribution from the other, because both are equally culpable or participes criminis, and the damage results from their joint offense. This rule does not apply when one does the act or creates the nuisance, and the other does not join therein, but is thereby exposed to liability and suffers damage. He may recover from the party whose wrongful act has thus exposed him. In such case the parties are not in pari delicto as to each other, though, as to third persons, either may be held liable."

In a later case in Massachusetts (Boston Woven Hose & Rubber Co. v. Kendall, 178 Mass. 232, 51 L. R. A. 781, 86 Am. St. Rep. 478, 53 N. E. 657), it was held that a manufacturer of an iron boiler known as a vulcanizer, which had been furnished upon an order which required a boiler which would stand a pressure of 100 pounds to the square inch, which order was accordingly accepted, the manufacturer undertaking to make the boiler in a good and workmanlike manner, but which, because of a defect, in that the hinge of the door was constructed in such a way that it did not press tight enough against the face of the boiler to stand a pressure of 75 pounds, at which pressure the packing blew out and allowed the naphtha vapor to escape, was liable for the damages which the hose company had been compelled to pay to one of its employees, injured by the accident, although the defect might have been discovered upon reasonable inspection by the hose company. In that case the boiler was sold upon a warranty. As was said by Mr. Chief Justice Holmes, delivering the opinion of the court:

"The very purpose of the warranty was that the boiler should be used in the plain-tiff's works with reliance upon the defendants' judgment in a matter as to which the defendants were experts and the plaintiff presumably was not. Whether the false warranty be called a tort or a breach of contract, the consequences which ensued must be taken to have been contemplated and were not too remote. The fact that the reliance *was not justified as toward the men does not do away with the fact that the defendants invited it, with notice of what might be the consequences if it should be misplaced, and there is no policy of the law opposed to their being held to make their representations good."

Other cases might be cited which are applications of the exception engrafted upon the general rule of noncontribution among wrongdoers, holding that the law will inquire into the facts of a case of the character shown, with a view to fastening the ultimate liability upon the one whose wrong has been primarily responsible for the injury sustained. In the present case there is nothing in the facts as stated to show that any negligence or misconduct of the railroad company caused the defect in the car which resulted in the injury to the brakeman. That company received the car from its owner, the Hammond Packing Company, whether in good order or not the record does not disclose. It is true that a railroad company owes a duty of inspection to its employees as to cars received from other companies as well as to those which it may own. Baltimore & P. R. Co. v. Mackey, 157 U. S. 73, 39 L. ed. 624, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 491. But in the present case the omission of duty for which the railroad company was sought to be held was the failure to inspect the car with such reasonable diligence as would have discovered the defect in it. It may be conceded that, the railroad company having a contract with the terminal company to receive and transport the cars furnished, it was bound to use reasonable diligence to see that the cars were turned over in good order, and a discharge of this duty required an inspection of the cars by the railroad company upon delivery to the terminal company. But that the terminal company owed a similar duty to its employees, and neglected to perform the same, to the injury of an employee, has been established by the decision of the supreme court of Nebraska, already referred to.

The case then stands in this wise: The railroad company and the terminal company have been guilty of a like neglect of duty in failing to properly inspect the car before [228] putting it in *use by those who might be injured thereby. We do not perceive that, because the duty of inspection was first required from the railroad company, that the case is thereby brought within the class which hold the one primarily responsible, as the real cause of the injury, liable to another less culpable, who may have been held to respond for damages for the injury inflicted. It is not like the case of the one who creates a nuisance in the public streets; or who furnishes a defective dock; or the case of the gas company, where it created the condition of unsafety by its own wrongful act; or the case of the defective boiler, which blew out because it would not stand the pressure warranted by the manufacturer. In all these cases the wrongful act of the one held finally liable created the unsafe or dangerous condition from which the injury resulted. The principal and moving cause, resulting in the injury sustained, was the act of the first wrongdoer, and the other has been held liable to third persons for failing to discover or correct the defect caused by the positive act of the other.

In the present case the negligence of the parties has been of the same character. Both the railroad company and the terminal company failed, by proper inspection, to discover the defective brake. The terminal company, because of its fault, has been held liable to one sustaining an injury thereby. We do not think the case comes within that exceptional class which permits one wrongdoer who has been mulcted in damages to recover indemnity or contribution from another.

For the reasons stated, the question propounded will be answered in the negative.

*LUTHER CLAY SLAVENS, Appt., [229]
v.

UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 229-238.)

Postoffice—mail contracts—right of Postmaster General to terminate—extra services.

1. The Postmaster General may cancel a mail contract, the service under which has been materially decreased by using street cars to carry mail, in the exercise of his authority under the contract and U. S. Postal Laws and Regulations, § 817, to increase, decrease, or extend the service contracted for without change of pay, and to discontinue the entire service whenever the public interests, in his judgment, require it.
2. A change of service under a mail contract by directing the carrying of the mails to and from street cars at certain street crossings is fairly within the power reserved by the contract in the Postmaster General to order, without additional compensation, any additional service caused by change of location of postoffice, stations, or landings, or by the establishment of others than those existing at the time of the contract, or rendered necessary, in his judgment, from any cause, and to change the schedule, vary the routes, increase, decrease, or extend the service without change of pay.

3. A contractor for carrying the mails is not entitled to extra compensation for services outside the terms of his contract which were performed in compliance with the unauthorized demand of the local postmaster, where, upon protest to the Postmaster General, the contractor was promptly relieved from such services, and another contract was made for their performance.

[No. 228.]

Argued December 7, 8, 1904. Decided January 9, 1905.

A PPEAL from the Court of Claims to review a judgment dismissing a petition to recover for the alleged wrongful termination of certain mail contracts and for extra services performed in connection therewith. Affirmed.

See same case below, 38 Ct. Cl. 574.

Statement by Mr. Justice Day:

The appellant filed his petition in the court of claims to recover for the alleged wrongful termination of certain mail contracts in the cities of Boston, Brooklyn, and Omaha; and, also, for extra services performed in connection therewith. The court of claims, in disposing of the case, made separate findings of fact and conclusions of law. The findings of fact may be abridged for the purpose of this case, reference being made for fuller details to the findings in the court of claims. 38 Ct. Cl. 574. In pursuance of an advertisement for proposals for transporting the mails,—“covered regulation wag-[230] on, mail, *messenger, and mail station service,”—the appellant entered into contracts for four years each for the cities of Boston and Brooklyn, and two years for the city of Omaha. The Boston and Brooklyn contracts began on July 1, 1893, and the Omaha contract on July 1, 1894. Compensation for the Boston contract was at the rate of $49,516 per annum; for the Brooklyn contract, $18,934 per annum; and for the Omaha contract at $3,780 per annum. During the terms of the Boston and Brooklyn contracts the Postmaster General determined to carry certain of the mails within the district contracted for on electric street-railway lines. In both cases the appellant was offered the privilege of continuing the contract for the reduced service, but refused to do so in each case. The Postmaster General terminated the Boston and Brooklyn contracts, above referred to, the former on February 1, 1896, the latter on March 1, 1896, acting, as he avers, under the authority vested in him by law and the contract between the parties, but not because of any negligence or default on the part of the contractor. He afterwards relet the same service, as thus reduced, to another contractor, for the remaining period of the contract of the seventeen months of the Boston contract, at the compensation of $37,000 per annum. The difference between the contract price and the amount it would cost the appellant to furnish the service in Boston during said seventeen months would be $18,884.14. The service of the Brooklyn contract for the remaining period of sixteen months was let to another contractor at a compensation of $9,720 per annum. The court did not find the amount of the loss to the appellant by reason of the termination of this contract. The contracts contained certain stipulations, as set forth in the opinion.

The contracts covered certain specified stations, landings, and mail stations from which the contractor was required to carry the mail, and during the terms of such contracts he was required to perform certain services, which he alleges to be extra services, and for which he was entitled to extra compensation,—in the Boston contract, carrying the mails from the general *postoffice, [231] in the city of Boston, to the stopping places of the street-car lines of the railway company from May 1, 1895, until February 1, 1896. Also, carrying the mails between the Back Bay postoffice and the Brookline office, a distance of from 2½ to 3 miles, which services were not included in the terms of the contract, but which he was required to perform by the postmaster of the city of Boston, against his protest. The contractor did not protest to the Postmaster General or any officer of the Postoffice Department until August 14, 1894. Whereupon the Postmaster General dispensed with the service by the appellant, and entered into a contract with another contractor to perform the service.

Under the Brooklyn contract, which contained specifications as to the places between which the mail had to be carried during the term of the contract, the contractor was required to perform service between the Brooklyn postoffice and the mail routes established on the street-car lines, and between the motor routes and the mail stations. Under the Omaha contract appellant was required, in addition to the places specifically named in the contract, to carry the mail to and from street cars of the Omaha Street Railway at its crossings. It also appears that under the three contracts the new service required, in lieu of the service specified in the contract, was much less in mileage required than was the service stipulated by the original contract. The court of claims dismissed the petition (38 Ct. Cl. 574), and the claimant appeals to this court.

Mr. A. A. Hoehling, Jr., argued the cause and filed a brief for appellant.

Mr. Joseph Stewart argued the cause, and, with Assistant Attorney General Pradt, filed a brief for appellee.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

From the foregoing statement of facts it is [232] evident that the *case resolves itself into three propositions: (1) Can the appellant recover for the alleged wrongful termination of his contracts by the Postmaster General? (2) Under the contracts were the services performed in carrying mails from street cars, at the places designated, extra services, for which compensation outside of the contract should be awarded? (3) Under the Boston contract did the service required in carrying the mails to and from Brookline constitute extra service, for which compensation should be awarded?

To determine the first proposition it is essential to have in mind certain provisions of the statute, the preliminary notice to bidders, and, most important of all, the terms of the contract itself. In the notice to bidders it is said:

"There will be no diminution of compensation for partial discontinuance of service or increase of compensation for new, additional, or changed service that may be ordered during the contract term; but the Postmaster General may discontinue the entire service on any route whenever the public interest, in his judgment, shall require such discontinuance, he allowing, as full indemnity to the contractor, one month's extra pay."

In the contract it is stipulated:

"It is hereby stipulated and agreed by the said contractor and his sureties that the Postmaster General may change the schedule and termini of the route, vary the routes, increase, decrease, or extend the service thereon, without change of pay; and that the Postmaster General may discontinue the entire service whenever the public interest, in his judgment, shall require such discontinuance; but for a total discontinuance of service the contractor shall be allowed one month's extra pay as full indemnity."

Section 817, Postal Laws and Regulations, 1887, provides:

"The Postmaster General may discontinue or curtail the service on any route, in whole or in part, in order to place on the route superior service, or whenever the public interests, *in his judgment, shall require such [233] discontinuance or curtailment for any other cause, he allowing as full indemnity to the contractor one month's extra pay on the amount or service dispensed with, and a pro rata compensation for the amount of service retained and continued."

Under the power supposed to be conferred upon him by the terms of the contract, made in pursuance of the preliminary advertisement and the authority vested in him by the Postal Laws and Regulations, above cited, the Postmaster General, having decreased the service under the contract, by reason of the introduction of the method of carrying the mails on the street railways, until the service required originally would be much more than paid for by the compensation agreed upon, discontinued the original service, and, the contractor declining to perform the work remaining at the lower compensation, put an end to the contract by an order of discontinuance, allowing the contractor one month's extra pay as full indemnity. It is contended by the appellant that this contract, properly construed, while it permits the Postmaster General to make changes in the schedule and termini of the route, to reduce the same, to increase, decrease, or extend the service, without change of pay, does not confer the right to cancel the contract except upon abandoning the entire service, which may be done with the allowance of one month's extra pay to the contractor. But, it is insisted, so long as any part of the service remains to be performed, it is not within the power of the Postmaster General to put an end to the service of the contractor, and relet a part of it to another, substituting a different character of service for a part of the field theretofore covered by the contract. In other words, it is contended that the total discontinuance of service, which only can terminate the contract, must not leave any service to be performed in the district covered.

We cannot accede to this narrow construction of the powers given the Postmaster General by the terms of this contract. He is given general power to increase, decrease, or extend the *service contracted for, [234] without change of pay. Furthermore, whenever the public interests in his judgment require it, he may discontinue the entire service. We think the advertisement and the regulations under which this contract was made and the contract, as entered into, were intended to permit the Postmaster General, when, in his judgment, the public interest requires it, to terminate the contract, and, if a service of a different character has become necessary in his opinion, to put an end to the former service upon the stipulated indemnity of one month's extra pay being given to the contractor. It is not reasonable to hold that the power given to the Postmaster General for the public interest can only be exercised when the mail service in the district is to be entirely abandoned. In the present case the contract was for mail service in three cities of importance, two of them among the large cities of the country, and all of them thriving and growing communities. It is hardly possible that the parties, in making this contract, could have had in view a time when the mail service would be dispensed with. On the other hand, the condition which the contract contemplated, and which in fact arose, made it desirable to extend to this district the use of street railways to carry the mails, with which to improve the facilities for mail delivery.

The authority given to the Postmaster General is broad and comprehensive, requiring him to exercise his judgment to end the service, and thereby terminate the contract, whenever the public interest shall demand such a change. In that event the contractor takes the risk that the exercise of this authority might leave him only the indemnity stipulated for,—one month's extra pay. We are not called upon to say in this case that the Postmaster General, merely for the purpose of reletting the contract at a lower rate, may advertise and relet precisely the same service for the purpose of making a more favorable contract for the government, no change having arisen in the situation except the desire for a better bargain. And it may readily be conceived that, in some instances, there may be such a diminution of the service contracted for in the district, by reason of the substitution of new and improved methods, as will render the compensation agreed upon altogether disproportionate to the services left to be rendered, and thereby invoking the authority of the Postmaster General to exercise the power reserved to him to terminate the contract. In the present case the findings of fact do not disclose a case of the arbitrary exercise of power. A new means of service within the district by means of the street railway was deemed by the Postmaster General to be required in the public interest. This necessitated the cutting down of the former service to make way for the new, and the Postmaster General exercised the power given him under the contract, and put an end to the service and the contract. If the contention of the appellant is to be sustained, while in the present case the street-railway service was not a large proportion of the total service required, the same argument, carried to its legitimate conclusion, would prevent the Postmaster General from taking advantage of this stipulation, although it was manifest that a large proportion, maybe practically all, of the service could be better rendered to the public by substituting the new method, leaving only a small part of the old service to be rendered. In this contingency, as construed by the appellant, the contract price must still be paid, notwithstanding the changed conditions. These contracts were made for a term of years,—two for four years and one for two years. It is insisted that the construction contended for by the government practically puts the contractor into the power of the Postmaster General, and makes the stipulation, in substance, an agreement upon his part to do whatever that officer may require. The obvious answer to this contention is that the contractor is not obliged to carry on the contract when the Postmaster General elects to cancel it. Such action puts an end to the obligations of the contractor as well as the government. Under the postal regulations, it appears that the contractor is given the opportunity to perform the reduced service at a lower rate. This he was not obliged *to do, and, in[236] the present case, declined to undertake. Our conclusion is that, acting in good faith, of which there is every presumption in favor of the conduct of so important a department of the government, the Postmaster General may, as was done in this case, discontinue the service, and thereby put an end to the contract, when the public interest, of which he is the sole judge, authorizes such action.

This view of the contract renders it unnecessary to consider at length the provisions of § 817 of the Postal Laws and Regulations, above quoted. It is urged that this section applies more particularly to star route and steamboat service, but the provisions of the law are broad and comprehensive, and not limited by the terms of the act to such specific service, but the power is given the Postmaster General whenever, in his judgment, the public interest shall require, to discontinue or curtail the same, giving the contractor as indemnity one month's extra pay. Speaking of the action authorized under § 263 of the former rules and regulations, this court, in Garfield v. United States, 93 U. S. 242-246, 23 L. ed. 779, said:

"There was reserved to the Postmaster General the power to annul the contract when his judgment advised that it should be done, and the compensation to the contractor was specified. An indemnity agreed upon as the amount to be paid for canceling a contract must, we think, afford the measure of damages for illegally refusing to award it."

And upon similar contract stipulations this court, in Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. United States, 104 U. S. 680, 684, 26 L. ed. 891, 892, said:

"It is true that, under this reservation, the Postmaster General would be authorized to discontinue the entire service contemplated by the contract, and the practical effect of that would be to terminate the contract itself on making the indemnity specified."

As to the other claim for extra services: In the stipulation of the contracts, it appears that the contractor was required to perform all new or additional or changed [237] covered wagon *mail station service that the Postmaster General should order, without additional compensation, whether caused by change of location of postoffice, stations, or landings, or by the establishment of others than those existing at the time of the contract, or rendered necessary in the judgment of the Postmaster General from any cause, and that officer has the right to change the schedule, vary the routes, increase, decrease, or extend the service without change of pay. It is insisted that these stipulations, properly construed, permit the Postmaster General to require only additional service of the same kind as that stipulated for, and that the carrying of the mails from street cars, where the same might be ordered to be met at crossings, was a new and different kind of service, and was not a change caused by a different location of a postoffice, station, or landing within the meaning of the contract. But we think this is too narrow a construction of the terms of the agreement. Strictly speaking, the carrying of the mails from the street cars at the crossings is not taking them from the stations, but it practically amounts to the same thing. It imposes no additional burden upon the contractor; indeed, the findings of fact show that it greatly decreased his burden by lessening the number of miles of carrying required. We think this change of service was fairly within the power reserved to the Postmaster General, and the right given to him to designate such changes in the services as the public interest might require in the performance of this contract. It is true that if these services were not within the terms of the contract, and if they were of a different character, the fact that they greatly decreased the burden of the contractor might not require a disallowance of the claim for extra services. But we think the services were within the contract, fairly construed, and do not entitle the contractor to extra compensation.

In reference to the services rendered in 196 U. S.

Boston, required by the postmaster, between Back Bay station, in Boston, and the Brookline postoffice, outside the limits of the city of Boston, and not within the terms of the contract, it does not appear *that the [238] requirement of such service was made, except by the postmaster of the city of Boston, who had no authority, so far as we can discover, to require such service. When the claimant protested to the Postmaster General he was promptly relieved from the service, and another contract was made for the performance of the same.

It is said that this claim is in all respects like the one sustained by this court in United States v. Otis, 120 U. S. 115, 30 L. ed. 609, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 449, where the contractor was allowed extra compensation for carrying the mails across the Hudson river, from the Pennsylvania Railway depot at the foot of Cortlandt street, New York, to the depot of the same line in Jersey City, N. J., when the contract required him to carry the mails only to and from the depots in New York. In the opinion in that case Mr. Justice Blatchford said: "The United States directed the performance of this service." Presumably this was done by some one having the authority of the United States. In this case the court of claims has held, as we think rightly, that the postmaster, having no power or authority to contract in respect to the mail messenger service, was not the agent of the government for such service, and could not bind the government by his knowledge or acts in respect thereto. Roberts v. United States, 92 U. S. 41, 48, 23 L. ed. 646, 648; Hume v. United States, 132 U. S. 406, 33 L. ed. 393, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 134; Whitsell v. United States, 34 Ct. Cl. 5. As the additional service in this case was not required by the authorized agent of the government, we think the contractor is not entitled to extra compensation therefor.

Finding no error in the proceedings of the Court of Claims, its decision is affirmed.

*WESLEY E. TRAVIS, Appt.,
v.

[239]

UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 239.)

Postoffice—mail contract—right of Postmaster General to terminate.

This case is governed by the decision in Slavens v. United States, ante, 457.

[No. 84.]

Argued December 7, 8, 1904. Decided January 9, 1905.

APPEAL from the Court of Claims to review a judgment dismissing a petition to recover for the alleged wrongful termination of a mail contract. Affirmed.

See same case below, 38 Ct. Cl. 590.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. A. A. Hoehling, Jr., argued the cause and filed a brief for appellant.

Mr. Joseph Stewart argued the cause, and, with Assistant Attorney General Pradt, filed a brief for appellee.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

This case was argued with Slavens v. United States (just decided), 196 U. S. 229, ante, 457, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229. It involves the same question as to the right of the Postmaster General to terminate a mail contract. The court of claims dismissed the petition. 38 Ct. Cl. 590. For the reasons stated in the opinion in the Slavens Case, the judgment of the Court of Claims is affirmed.

MADISONVILLE TRACTION COMPANY,
Appt.,
v.

SAINT BERNARD MINING COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 239-261.)

Courts — original jurisdiction of circuit court over eminent domain proceedings — removal of causes — time of removing.

1. A proceeding for the taking of land by eminent domain, authorized by Ky. Stat. §§ 835-839, to be begun in the courts of that state, is, where the requisite diversity of citizenship exists, a suit involving a controversy between citizens of different states, of which a Federal circuit court has original jurisdiction, and is therefore removable to that court when commenced in the state court.
2. The time for removing to a Federal circuit court, for diversity of citizenship, a proceeding for the taking of land by eminent domain, begun in a Kentucky county court, under the authority of Ky. Stat. §§ 835-839, is not postponed until after the case has been taken by appeal to a state circuit court, where

It can be tried de novo, inasmuch as under the state statute, the condemning party is entitled, even after such appeal, to pay into court the damages assessed in the county court, and, before the case is concluded in the higher court, to take possession of the land, and oust the owner.

[No. 362.]

Submitted November 28, 1904. Decided January 16, 1905.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Western District of Kentucky to review a decree enjoining a further prosecution in the County Court of Hopkins county, in that state, of a condemnation proceeding in which a sufficient petition and bond had been filed to effect the removal of the case to a Federal circuit court for diversity of citizenship. Affirmed.

See same case below, 130 Fed. 794.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. David W. Fairleigh and N. T. Crutchfield submitted the cause for appellant:

Condemnation proceedings prior to the judiciary act of 1887 were sometimes transferable from the state court in which they were pending into the circuit court of the United States. When the proceedings in the state court reached the point where nothing remained to be done but to inquire into and adjudge the amount of damages, then they became, at that time, a transferable controversy, and not before.

Mississippi & R. River Boom Co. v. Patterson, 98 U. S. 403, 25 L. ed. 206; Searl v. School Dist. No. 2, 124 U. S. 197, 31 L. ed. 415, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 460.

A cognate question arising out of the assessment of property for taxation was decided by this court in Upshur County v. Rich, 135 U. S. 467, 34 L. ed. 196, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651.

The jurisdiction of the United States circuit courts on removal is now limited to suits of which they have original jurisdiction.

Tennessee v. Union & Planters' Bank, 152 U. S. 454, 38 L. ed. 511, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 654; Mexican Nat. R. Co. v. Davidson, 157 U. S. 201, 39 L. ed. 672, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 563.

NOTE.—As to diverse citizenship as ground of Federal jurisdiction—see Shipp v. Williams, 10 C. C. A. 247, and note; Mason v. Dullaghan, 27 C. C. A. 296, and note; Scddon v. Virginia, T. & C. Steel & I. Co. 1 L. R. A. 108, and note; and Myers v. Murray, N. & Co. 11 L. R. A. 216, and note. And see note to Roberts v. Lewis, 36 L. ed. U. S. 579.

On removal of causes generally from state to Federal courts, where the Constitution of the United States, or an act of Congress, or a treaty comes in question—see note to Little York Gold Washing & Water Co. v. Keyes, 24 L. ed. U. S. 656. See also Ferguson v. Ross, 3 L. R. A. 322, and note, and Austin v. Gagan, 5 L. R. A. 476, and note.

As to when an application for the removal of a cause to the Federal court must be made—see notes to Huskins v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. 3 L. R. A. 546; Bierbower v. Miller, 9 L. R. A. 230; and Brodhead v. Shoemaker, 11 L. R. A. 569.

The right of eminent domain is distinctly and exclusively an attribute of government,—of sovereignty.

Kohl v. United States, 91 U. S. 371, 23 L. ed. 451.

Condemnation proceedings under the laws of Connecticut cannot be brought originally in the circuit court of the United States.

Hartford & C. W. R. Co. v. Montague, 94 Fed. 227.

Mr. E. G. Sebree submitted the cause for appellee.

Messrs. C. J. Waddill and Gordon & Gordon & Cox were on his brief:

Notwithstanding the prohibition of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 720, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 581, a United States court has a right to enjoin a state court from interfering with its orders and decrees.

French v. Hay, 22 Wall. 253, 22 L. ed. 858; Dietzsch v. Huidekoper (Kern v. Huidekoper) 103 U. S. 494, 26 L. ed. 497.

When a case is removed to the United States circuit court, that court has a right to enjoin any further prosecution of it in the state court.

Wagner v. Drake, 31 Fed. 849.

The law has conferred on the county courts the right to act judicially in condemnation proceedings.

Portland & G. Turnp. Co. v. Bobb, 88 Ky. 230, 10 S. W. 794.

Where the other conditions prescribed by the Federal statutes exist, any action is removable in which a judicial question is pending before a state court authorized to exercise judicial function in such action.

Mississippi & R. River Boom Co. v. Patterson, 98 U. S. 403, 25 L. ed. 206; Pacific Railroad Removal Cases (Union P. R. Co. v. Kansas) 115 U. S. 1-25, 29 L. ed. 319-327, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1113; Searl v. School Dist. No. 2, 124 U. S. 197, 31 L. ed. 415, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 460.

Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion of the court:

The Madisonville Traction Company, a Kentucky corporation, having by its charter authority to construct an electric railroad, filed its application in the county court of Hopkins county, in that commonwealth, to condemn for its use certain lands belonging to the Saint Bernard Mining Company, a Delaware corporation engaged in mining coal,—the traction company being styled in the application as plaintiff, and the mining company as defendant.

The application was made under the Kentucky statutes relating to the condemnation of lands. The nature of those proceedings, whether judicial or not, appears from certain provisions of those statutes, which may be summarized as follows:

Any company authorized to construct a railroad, if "unable to contract with the owner of any land or material necessary for its use for the purpose thereof," may file in the office of the clerk of the county court a description of such land or material, and have commissioners appointed to assess the damages which the owner is entitled to receive. Ky. Stat. § 835.

The commissioners are required to make their award of damages in writing, giving the names of the owners, and whether non-residents of the state, infants, of unsound mind, or married women. Ky. Stat. § 836.

It is made the duty of the clerk of the court, upon application *of the company, to [242] issue process against the owners, to show cause why the report should not be confirmed, and make such orders as to nonresidents and persons under disability as are required by the Civil Code of Practice in actions against them in the circuit court. Ky. Stat. § 837.

At the first regular term, "after the owners shall have been summoned the length of time prescribed by the Civil Code of Practice before an answer is required," the court must examine the report, and pass upon it. Ky. Stat. § 838.

If exceptions are filed by either party, a jury must be empaneled to try the issues of fact, and judgment rendered in conformity to the verdict, if sufficient cause to the contrary be not shown. Either party may appeal to the circuit court, the appeal to be tried de novo.

Upon the confirmation of the report of the commissioners or the assessment of damages by the court, as provided, and the payment to the owners of the amount due, as shown by the report of the commissioners when confirmed, or as shown by the judgment of the court when the damages are assessed by it, and all costs adjudged to the owner, the railroad company becomes entitled to take possession of the land and material, and to use the same for the purpose for which it was condemned as fully as if the title had been conveyed to it. But when an appeal is taken from the judgment of the county court by the company, it is not entitled to take possession of the land or material condemned until it pays into court the damages assessed and all costs. Ky. Stat. § 839.

The commissioners appointed by the county court, in the above proceeding, awarded $100 as damages to be paid to the mining company.

Process having issued, the mining company, before any action was taken upon the report, filed its petition and bond for the removal of the case into the circuit court of the United States, alleging, among other things, that the value of the matter in dispute, exclusive of interest and costs, exceeded $2,000. The petition for removal [243] distinctly alleged, as the *ground of removal, that the two companies were corporations of different states.

The sufficiency of the bond was not disputed. But the county court refused to recognize any right of removal, and the Kentucky corporation was about to proceed in the prosecution of its case in that court, despite the application for removal. Thereupon the Delaware corporation filed in the circuit court of the United States a complete transcript of the proceedings in the state court.

Subsequently the present original suit in equity was instituted in the Federal court by the mining company against the traction company. The bill, repeating the allegations in the petition for removal as to the diverse citizenship of the two corporations, showed that, notwithstanding what had been done to have the cause removed from the state court, the traction company was about to proceed to have the lands condemned in the case instituted in the county court. Among other things the bill alleged that plaintiff denied the right of the traction company to have the lands in question condemned, and averred that the report of the commissioners was insufficient in law; that the commissioners acted improperly, unfairly, and unfaithfully in their viewing of the land, in the preparation of their report, and in awarding damages; that $100 was wholly inadequate as compensation, and was assessed and given under the influence of passion and prejudice, or some other illegal motive; that the land sought to be taken was worth, intrinsically, a great deal more than that amount; that the incidental damages done to the property of plaintiff in the construction of the road (which damages, under the laws of Kentucky, the said commissioners should have taken into consideration, and assessed, but did not, § 836) exceeded $2,000; that the plaintiff's property and business will not be benefited in the least degree by the construction or prudent operation of the railroad; and that "it is proposed to deprive it of over 9 acres of its land, which, through its location, is valued at and is worth over $2,500, and is so situ-

[244]ated that such *deprivation will irreparably injure and damage its remaining land."

The relief asked in the present suit was that the traction company be restrained and enjoined from further prosecuting the case in the county court, or taking any further steps therein.

The traction company demurred to the bill, one of the grounds of demurrer being that the circuit court was without jurisdiction or authority, under the Constitution and laws of the United States, to grant the injunction asked for, or any other relief. The circuit court sustained its jurisdiction and overruled the demurrer. The traction company stood by its demurrer, and a final decree was entered, enjoining that company from any further prosecution of the case in the county court.

It has been observed that the parties to the proceeding in the county court are corporations, and therefore each is to be deemed, for the purpose of suing and being sued in the Federal court, a citizen of the state by whose laws it was created. The questions presented by the record are these: Was the proceeding in the state court a suit or controversy to which the judicial power of the United States extends? If a suit or controversy, was it removable to the circuit court of the United States? If removable, was it, in law, removed, and was it competent for that court, after the removal of the case, to enjoin the traction company from further proceeding in the state court?

We recognize the importance of these questions, and have given them the fullest consideration.

Certain principles, relating to the removal of cases, have been settled by former adjudications. They are:

1. If a case be a removable one, that is, if the suit, in its nature, be one of which the circuit court could rightfully take jurisdiction, then, upon the filing of a petition for removal, in due time, with a sufficient bond, the case is, in law, removed, and the state court in which it is pending will lose jurisdiction to proceed further, and all subsequent proceedings in that court will be void. New Orleans, M. & F. R. Co. v. Mississippi, 102 *U. S. 135, 141, 26 L. ed. 96, 98; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Koontz, 104 U. S. 5, 14, 26 L. ed. 643, 645; National S. S. Co. v. Tugman, 106 U. S. 118, 122, 27 L. ed. 87, 89, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 58; St. Paul & C. R. Co. v. McLean, 108 U. S. 212, 216, 27 L. ed. 703, 704, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 498; Crehore v. Ohio & M. R. Co. 131 U. S. 240, 243, 33 L. ed. 144, 145, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 692; Kern v. Huidekoper, 103 U. S. 485, 493, 26 L. ed. 354, 357; Marshall v. Holmes, 141 U. S. 589, 595, 35 L. ed. 870, 872, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62.

2. After the presentation of a sufficient petition and bond to the state court in a removable case, it is competent for the circuit court, by a proceeding ancillary in its nature—without violating § 720 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 581) forbidding a court of the United States from enjoining proceedings in a state court—to restrain the party against whom a cause has been legally removed from taking further steps in the state court. French v. Hay, 22 Wall. 252, 22 L. ed. 857; Dietzsch v. Huidekoper, 103 U. S. 494, 496, 497, 26 L. ed. 497,

498; Moran v. Sturgess, 154 U. S. 256, 270, 38 L. ed. 981, 985, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1019. See, also, Sargent v. Helton, 115 U. S. 352, 29 L. ed. 413, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 78; Harkrader v. Wadley, 172 U. S. 165, 43 L. ed. 405, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 119; Gates v. Bucki, 4 C. C. A. 116, 12 U. S. App. 69, 53 Fed. 969; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Kuteman, 4 C. C. A. 503, 13 U. S. App. 99, 54 Fed. 551; Re Whitelaw, 71 Fed. 733, 738; Iron Mountain R. Co. v. Memphis, 37 C. C. A. 410, 96 Fed. 131; James v. Central Trust Co. 39 C. C. A. 126, 98 Fed. 489.

3. It is well settled that if, upon the face of the record, including the petition for removal, a suit does not appear to be a removable one, then the state court is not bound to surrender its jurisdiction, and may proceed as if no application for removal had been made. Stone v. South Carolina, 117 U. S. 430, 432, 29 L. ed. 962, 963, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 799; Carson v. Hyatt, 118 U. S. 279, 281, 30 L. ed. 167, 168, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1050; Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co. v. Dunn, 122 U. S. 513, 515, 30 L. ed. 1159, 1160, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1262.

So that the fundamental question here is whether the case, brought in the county court, was a removable one. If it was, then the decree of the circuit court, restraining the traction company from taking further steps in the local court after the removal of the case to the Federal court, was right; but if the case was not a removable one, then the decree was erroneous.

The rule is now settled that, under the judiciary act of 1887, 1888 [24 Stat. at L. 552, chap. 373, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 508, 25 Stat. at L. 433, chap. 866, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 508] a suit cannot be [246] removed from a state court unless *it could have been brought originally in the circuit court of the United States. Tennessee v. Union & Planters' Bank, 152 U. S. 454, 38 L. ed. 511, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 654; Mexican Nat. R. Co. v. Davidson, 157 U. S. 201, 39 L. ed. 672, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 563; Metcalf v. Watertown, 128 U. S. 586, 32 L. ed. 543, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 173; Minnesota v. Northern Securities Co. 194 U. S. 48, 48 L. ed. 870, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 598.

Why could not the proceeding instituted in the county court have been brought originally in the Federal court? The case, as made in the county court, was, beyond question, a judicial proceeding; it related to property rights; the parties are corporate citizens of different states; and the value of the matter in dispute exceeded the amount requisite to give jurisdiction to the circuit court. It was, therefore, a proceeding embraced by the very words of the Constitution of the United States, which declares that the "judicial power shall extend . . . to controversies . . . between citizens of different states," as well as by the act of 1887 (§ 1), which declares "that the circuit courts of the United States shall have original cognizance, concurrent with the courts of the several states, of all suits of a civil nature at common law or in equity, where the matter in dispute exceeds, exclusive of interest and costs, the sum or value of $2,000, . . . in which there shall be a controversy between citizens of different states." In view of these explicit provisions it is clear that the proceeding in the county court was a suit or controversy within the meaning both of the Constitution and of the judiciary act. We could not hold otherwise without overruling former decisions of this court. Let us see whether this be not so.

Referring to the clause of the Constitution defining the judicial power of the United States, Chief Justice Marshall, speaking for the court in Osborn v. Bank of the United States, 9 Wheat. 738, 819, 6 L. ed. 204, 223, said: "This clause enables the judicial department to receive jurisdiction to the full extent of the Constitution, laws, and treaties of the United States, when any question respecting them shall assume such a form that the judicial power is capable of acting on it. That power is capable of acting only when the subject is submitted to it by a party *who [247] asserts his rights in the form prescribed by law. It then becomes a case, and the Constitution declares that the judicial power shall extend to all cases arising under the Constitution, laws, and treaties of the United States."

In Kohl v. United States, 91 U. S. 367, 376, 23 L. ed. 449, 452, which was a suit in the circuit court of the United States to condemn lands for a public building, this court, speaking by Mr. Justice Strong, said: "It is difficult, then, to see why a proceeding to take land in virtue of the government's eminent domain, and determining the compensation to be made for it, is not, within the meaning of the statutes, a suit at common law, when initiated in a court. It is an attempt to enforce a legal right."

Two cases very much in point are Mississippi & R. River Boom Co. v. Patterson, 98 U. S. 403, 25 L. ed. 206, and Searl v. School Dist. No. 2, 124 U. S. 197, 31 L. ed. 415, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 460.

Mississippi & R. River Boom Co. v. Patterson was a case of condemnation under a statute authorizing a county district court to appoint commissioners to appraise the value of the property to be taken. The local statute provided that if the appraisal was not satisfactory, the matter could be brought before the court, where the issues of fact would be tried by a jury, unless a jury was waived. It was a case of diverse citizenship, and, upon the petition of the defendant, a citizen of another state, it was removed from the inferior local court to the circuit court of the United States. One question was whether the case was, in its nature, excluded from the jurisdiction of the Federal court. Referring to the contention that the proceeding to take private property for public use was an exercise by the state of its sovereign right of eminent domain, and with its exercise the United States, a separate sovereignty, had no right to interfere by any of its departments, this court, speaking by Mr. Justice Field, said: "But notwithstanding the right is one that appertains to sovereignty, when the sovereign power attaches conditions to its exercise, the inquiry whether the conditions have been observed is a proper matter for judicial cognizance. If that inquiry take the form of a proceeding before the courts between parties,—the owners of the land on the one side and *the company seeking the appropriation on the other,—there is a controversy which is subject to the ordinary incidents of a civil suit, and its determination derogates in no respect from the sovereignty of the state." Again, in the same case: "It has long been settled that a corporation will be treated, where contracts or rights of property are to be enforced by or against it, as a citizen of the state under the laws of which it is created, within the clause of the Constitution extending the judicial power of the United States to controversies between citizens of different states. Paul v. Virginia, 8 Wall. 177, 19 L. ed. 359. And in Gaines v. Fuentes, 92 U. S. 20, 23 L. ed. 524, it was held that a controversy between citizens is involved in a suit whenever any property or claim of the parties, capable of pecuniary estimation, is the subject of litigation, and is presented by the pleadings for judicial determination. Within the meaning of these decisions, we think the case at bar was properly transferred to the circuit court, and that it had jurisdiction to determine the controversy."

Searl v. School Dist. No. 2 was also a proceeding for the condemnation of private property to public use for school purposes. It was commenced by petition filed in a county court, a subordinate tribunal of one of the counties of Colorado. The local statute authorized the compensation to be fixed by a jury of six freeholders, with a right of appeal. The question in the case was as to the removability of the case from the county court to the Federal court. This court, speaking by Mr. Justice Matthews, said: "Such a proceeding, according to the decision of this court in Kohl v. United States, 91 U. S. 367, 23 L. ed. 449, is a suit at law within the meaning of the Constitution of the United States and the acts of Congress conferring jurisdiction upon the courts of the United States." After referring to prior cases, including Mississippi & R. River Boom Co. v. Patterson, the opinion proceeds: "The fact that the Colorado statute provides for the ascertainment of damages by a commission of three freeholders, unless, at the hearing, a defendant shall demand a jury, does not make the proceeding from its commencement any the *less a suit at law[249] within the meaning of the Constitution and acts of Congress and the previous decisions of the court. . . . It is an adversary judicial proceeding from the beginning. The appointment of commissioners to ascertain the compensation is only one of the modes by which it is to be determined. The proceeding is, therefore, a suit at law from the time of the filing of the petition and the service of process upon the defendant." 124 U. S. 199, 31 L. ed. 416, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 461.

It will be observed, from an examination of the Searl Case, that this court cited with approval Colorado Midland R. Co. v. Jones, 29 Fed. 193, and the Mineral Range R. Co. v. Detroit & L. S. Copper Co. 25 Fed. 515. Those cases fully sustain the proposition that the case brought in the state court was a suit within the meaning of the Constitution and the judiciary act.

In the first one named, which was a proceeding under a local statute in an inferior state tribunal for the condemnation of lands for the use of a railway company, Mr. Justice Brewer, then circuit judge, after referring to the local statute under which the company proceeded, and to Mississippi & R. River Boom Co. v. Patterson, and Searl v. School Dist. No. 2, held the case to be removable, although the proceedings for condemnation were somewhat different from those in an ordinary trial, saying: "I do not suppose that a state can, by making special provisions for the trial of any particular controversy, prevent the exercise of the right of removal. If there was no statutory limitation, the legislature could provide for the trial of many cases by less than a common-law jury, or in some other special way. But the fact that it had made such different and special provisions would not make the proceeding any the less a trial, or such a suit as, if between citizens of two states, could not be removed to the Federal courts. If this were possible, then the only thing the legislature of a state would have to do to destroy the right of removal entirely would be to simply change and modify the details of procedure."

In Mineral Range R. Co. v. Detroit & L. S. Copper Co. Mr. Justice Brown, then district judge, after referring to Mississippi & R. River Boom Co. v. Patterson, and many other adjudged cases, said: "But conceding that if the only question in this case were the amount of damages to be paid by the railroad company, the jurisdiction of this court would be sustained by the authorities above cited, it is insisted that these cases are inapplicable, because, by the statute of this state, the jury or commissioners must pass upon the question of the necessity for taking the property, as well as the amount of damages to be awarded. But we think that, in this particular, counsel overlook the distinction between the power to condemn, which confessedly resides in the state, and proceedings to condemn, which the state has delegated to its courts. The proceeding is certainly not deprived of its character as a suit by reason of its taking cognizance of this additional question; and if it be a suit, the right of removal attaches. Whenever a right is given by the law of a state, and the courts of such state are invested with the power of enforcing such right, the proceeding may be removed to a Federal court if the other requisites of removability exist." 25 Fed. 520.

In the more recent case of Smith v. Adams, 130 U. S. 167, 173, 32 L. ed. 895, 897, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 566, 568, Mr. Justice Field, speaking for the court, and referring to the clauses of the Constitution and the statutes relating to the judicial power and the courts of the United States, said: "By those terms are intended the claims or contentions of litigants brought before the courts for adjudication by regular proceedings established for the protection or enforcement of rights, or the prevention, redress, or punishment of wrongs. Whenever the claim or contention of a party takes such a form that the judicial power is capable of acting upon it, then it has become a case, or controversy."

It may be here said that the provisions of the local statutes of condemnation, referred to in the above cases, are substantially the same as those in the Kentucky statutes.

We cannot doubt, in view of the authorities, that the case presented in the county [251] court was a "suit" or "controversy *between citizens of different states," within the meaning of the Constitution and the laws of the United States. It was, as already said, a judicial proceeding initiated in a tribunal which constitutes a part of the judicial establishment of Kentucky, as ordained by its Constitution (Ky. Const. § 140); and the court, although charged with some duties of an administrative character, is a judicial tribunal and a court of record. Fletcher v. Leight, 4 Bush, 303; Pennington v. Woolfolk, 79 Ky. 13.

Are the above cases inapplicable by reason of their having been decided prior to the passage of the judiciary acts of 1887, 1888, limiting the right of removal to suits of which the circuit courts of the United States could take original cognizance? Clearly not. The difference between that act and the act of 1875 [18 Stat. at L. 470, chap. 137, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 508] is wholly apart from the present discussion; for both acts gave the circuit courts original jurisdiction of all suits having the requisite amount in dispute, and in which there was a controversy between citizens of different states. So that what was a suit or controversy to which, by reason of diverse citizenship, the judicial power of the United States extended under the act of 1875, must be deemed a suit under the acts of 1887, 1888. The only effect of the latter act, so far as the present question is concerned, was to restrict the right of removal from the state court to cases of which the circuit court could take original cognizance. And the present case, being a suit involving a controversy between citizens of different states, is manifestly of that character.

It is said, however, that when it is proposed to take private property for public purposes, the question of appropriation is one primarily and exclusively for the state to determine.

There ought not to be any dispute, at this day, in reference to the principles which must control in all cases of the condemnation of private property for public purposes. It is fundamental in American jurisprudence that private property cannot be taken by the government, national or state, except for purposes which are of a public character, although such *taking be accompanied by [252] compensation to the owner. That principle, this court has said, grows out of the essential nature of all free governments. Citizens Sav. & L. Asso. v. Topeka, 20 Wall. 655, 22 L. ed. 455; Cole v. LaGrange, 113 U. S. 1, 6, 28 L. ed. 896, 897, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 416. If the purpose be public, the taking may be outright, provided reasonable, certain, and adequate provision is made, at the time of appropriation, to ascertain and secure the compensation to be made to the owner. Cherokee Nation v. Southern Kansas R. Co. 135 U. S. 641, 659, 34 L. ed. 295, 303, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 965; Sweet v. Rechel, 159 U. S. 380, 399, 40 L. ed. 188, 196, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 43; Western Union Teleg. Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (the present term) 195 U. S. 540, ante, 312, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 133. Any state enactment in violation of these principles is inconsistent with the due process of law prescribed by the 14th Amendment. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 41 L. ed. 979, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 174 U. S. 739, 754, 43 L. ed. 1154, 1160, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 804; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 525, 42 L. ed. 819, 841, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418. The position taken by the highest court of Kentucky on this general subject appears from Tracy v. Elizabethtown, L. & B. S. R. Co. 80 Ky. 259, 269.

It was there said: "It is erroneous to suppose that the legislature is beyond the control of the courts in exercising the power of eminent domain, either as to the nature of the use or the necessity to the use of any particular property. For if the use be not public, or no necessity for the taking exists, the legislature cannot authorize the taking of private property against the will of the owner, notwithstanding compensation may be required."

Speaking generally, it is for the state, primarily and exclusively, to declare for what local public purposes private property within its limits may be taken upon compensation to the owner, as well as to prescribe a mode in which it may be condemned and taken. But the state may not prescribe any mode of taking private property for a public purpose, and of ascertaining the compensation to be made therefor, which would exclude from the jurisdiction of a circuit court of the United States a condemnation proceeding which, in its essential features, is a suit involving a controversy between citizens of different states. "A state cannot," this court has said, *"tie up a citizen of another state, having property rights within its territory invaded by unauthorized acts of its own officers, to suits for redress in its own courts." Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co. 154 U. S. 362, 391, 38 L. ed. 1014, 1021, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047.

Now, it is true that the circuit court could not have the property in question condemned for local public purposes if the state had not previously, by statute, authorized its condemnation. After the removal of a case of condemnation from a state court, the Federal court would proceed under the sanction of state legislation. It would enforce the state law, unless that law authorized the appropriation of private property for purposes that were not really of a public nature. So far as authority to take the property for local public purposes was concerned, the circuit court could not enforce any other than the state law. It would respect the sovereign power of the state to define the legitimate public purposes for which private property may be taken, upon compensation to the owner being made or secured. But, at the same time, it could enforce, as of course it must, the authority of the supreme law of the land, which expressly extends the judicial power of the United States to all suits involving controversies between citizens of different states, and which also, by statute, gives the circuit courts of the United States, without qualification, jurisdiction of such controversies. A state cannot, by any statutory provisions, withdraw from the cognizance of the Federal courts a suit or judicial proceeding in which there is such a controversy. Otherwise the purpose of the Constitution in extending the judicial power of the United States to controversies between citizens of different states would thereby be defeated. If the judiciary act of Congress admitted of the case in the county court being brought within the original cognizance of the circuit court, that is an end of the matter, although it be a case of the appropriation of private property to public uses under the authority of the state. Under any other view a state, by its own tribunals, could deprive citizens of other states of their property by condemnation, *without giving them an opportunity to protect themselves, in a national court, against local prejudice and influence.

It may, however, be urged that the Delaware corporation can be fully protected by the state court in its rights of property, because, if any Federal right be denied it, the authority of this court can be invoked upon writ of error to the highest court of the state. But the question whether the property is authorized by the local statute to be condemned, as well as the question of the amount of compensation to the owner, could not come here by writ of error from the state court. Such questions would not ordinarily involve a Federal right. In the present case the commissioners reported the damages to be only $100; whereas, the owner alleges that the amount awarded was grossly inadequate, practically confiscatory. That question, as well as the question whether the statute authorized the traction company to take the property, the Delaware corporation is constitutionally entitled, as between it and the Kentucky corporation, by reasons of the diverse citizenship of the parties, to have determined upon their merits in a court of the United States, in which, presumably, it will be protected against local prejudice or influence. The circuit court, recognizing the right of the traction company to appropriate the land in question, if necessary for its purposes, could do all that is required by the Kentucky statute, and meet fully the ends of justice. Besides, a court always looks to substance, and not to mere forms. Mere forms are not of vital consequence in cases of condemnation. Kohl v. United States, 91 U. S. 367, 375, 23 L. ed. 449, 452; United States v. Jones, 109 U. S. 514, 519, 27 L. ed. 1015, 1017, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 346.

It is suggested that the state legislature might have consummated the taking of the property of the Delaware corporation by means of a nonjudicial tribunal, and thus left open simply the question of compensation to the owner of the property taken. We do not perceive that this suggestion is at all material in the present discussion; for the state has *chosen to provide for the taking by means of what is conceded to be a suit in one of its judicial tribunals. It is, in effect, conceded that the circuit court may be given jurisdiction of the question of compensation. But the contention is, that in no case can the judicial power of the United States be invoked until the question of taking is consummated by a proceeding in the particular local tribunal designated by the state. This view, it is supposed, finds support in the cases in which it has been held that an original suit directly against a state, or a suit against an officer of the state, which, by reason of the particular relief sought, is, in effect, a suit against the state, may be limited by the state to suits brought in one of its own courts. Smith v. Reeves, 178 U. S. 436, 44 L. ed. 1140, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 919. This illustration is wide of the mark; for the mandate of the Constitution of the United States (11th Amendment) is that "the judicial power of the United States shall not be construed to extend to any suit in law or equity commenced or prosecuted against one of the United States by citizens of another state, or by citizens or subjects of any foreign state;" whereas, the judicial power of the United States and the original jurisdiction of the circuit courts, whatever may be ordained by state legislation, extends to suits in which there is a controversy between citizens of different states. The exercise by the circuit courts of the United States of the jurisdiction thus conferred upon them is pursuant to the supreme law of the land, and will not, in any proper sense, entrench upon the dignity, authority, or autonomy of the states; for each state, by accepting the Constitution, has agreed that the courts of the United States may exert whatever judicial power can be constitutionally conferred upon them. In the exercise of that power a circuit court of the United States, sitting within the limits of a state, and having jurisdiction of the parties, is, for every practical purpose, a court of that state. Its function, under such circumstances, is to enforce the rights of parties according to the law of the state, taking care, always, as the state courts must take care, not to infringe any right secured by the Constitution and the laws of the United States. It should, however, be remarked that there is nothing in the Kentucky statute which indicates any purpose on the part of the legislature of that commonwealth to fly in the face of the above cases, or to evade the principles announced in them. It is not to be implied from the statute in question that the state intended to exclude, or supposed that it could exclude, from the Federal courts, jurisdiction of any suit to which the judicial power of the United States extended.

[256]

It was said that if the case was a removable one, the time for removal was after it was taken by appeal to the state circuit court, where it could be tried de novo. There is nothing in the acts of 1887, 1888, which sustains this view. Was the case, as it was in the county court, a suit in which there was a controversy between corporations of different states? If so, the right of removal was perfect under the acts of 1887, 1888. Under the Kentucky statute the condemning party was entitled, even after appeal to the circuit court, to pay into court the damages assessed in the county court, and, before the case was concluded in the circuit court, to take possession of the land, and oust the owner. Ky. Stat. § 839; 80 Ky. 259, 269. Clearly, the owner was not bound to wait until the proceedings in the county court were concluded, or until he was put out of possession, before exercising his right of removal, if the case was a removable one.

We hold that, as the proceeding in the county court was a suit involving a controversy between corporate citizens of different states, it was one of which the circuit court of the United States could have taken original cognizance, under the judiciary act, and it was, therefore, a removable case. And being a removable case, it is to be regarded as having been removed upon the filing of the petition and accompanying bond for removal; in which event, it was competent for the circuit court, having thus acquired jurisdiction of the subject-matter, and of the parties, to enjoin the traction company from proceeding further in the state court.

*For the reasons stated, the decree of the [257] Circuit Court awarding the injunction must be affirmed.

It is so ordered.

Mr. Justice Holmes, dissenting:

I regret that I am unable to agree with the decision of the court. The question on which I differ is whether a proceeding for the taking of land by eminent domain, authorized by the state of Kentucky to be begun in the courts of Kentucky, can be begun in the circuit court of the United States, whenever one of the parties is a citizen of another state. Of course, I am speaking of the proceeding for the taking of the land, not of that for compensation, to which I shall refer later. The argument which does not command my assent, stated in a few words, is that such a proceeding in such a case is a controversy between citizens of different states, and therefore, by the very words of the Constitution, must be within the jurisdiction of the United States courts. It seems to me that this is rather too literal a reading, and, on the whole, is a sacrifice of substance to form.

The fundamental fact is that eminent domain is a prerogative of the state, which, on the one hand, may be exercised in any way that the state thinks fit, and, on the other, may not be exercised except by an authority which the state confers. The taking may be direct, by an act of the legislature. It may be delegated to a railroad company, with a certain latitude of choice with regard to the land to be appropriated. It may be delegated subject to the approval of a legislative committee or of a board other than a court. When the state makes use of a court, instead, for instance, of a railroad commission, the character of the proceeding is not changed. The matter still is wholly within its sovereign control. The state may intervene after the proceedings have been begun, and take the land. It may direct the entry of a decree of condemnation. An illustration of its continuing power may be seen in Re Northampton, *158 Mass. 299, 33 N. E. 568. The matter of grade crossings had been referred by the legislature of Massachusetts to the courts, and a petition was pending for the abolition of certain grade crossings in Northampton. The case had been sent to commissioners, and they had reported. Pending a motion to confirm their report the legislature passed an act forbidding a change in that case without the consent of the city council. It was held that, as the whole subject was originally within the control of the legislature, it did not cease to be so by being referred to the courts, and the act was sustained.

A further illustration, and one in which substance has prevailed over form, is to be found in the case of suits by citizens of another state against officers of a state. In form such suits are controversies between citizens of different states, and within the jurisdiction of the United States courts. But if, in substance, they have the effect of suits against a state, the jurisdiction is denied. And the decisions do not stop there, but when the state has waived its immunity, as it may, and has given permission to a suit against the officer in a state court, it still is held that, although there is a controversy between citizens of different states which thus has become subject to litigation, that litigation must be confined to the courts which the state has named. Yet, there is no doubt that, with the state's consent, its officers, or the state itself, could be sued in the courts of the United States. Smith v. Reeves, 178 U. S. 436, 44 L. ed. 1140, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 919; Chandler v. Dix, 194 U. S. 590, 48 L. ed. 1129, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 766.

It seems to me that, if a state authorizes a taking to be accomplished by certain machinery, the United States has no constitutional right to intervene and to substitute other machinery because the state has chosen to use its law courts rather than a legislative committee, and thus to give to the exercise of its sovereign power the external form of a suit at law. It seems to me plain that the exercise of that power depends wholly on the state, may be limited as the state chooses, and cannot be carried further than the state has authorized in terms. Suppose that a proceeding for taking land is removed *to the United States court, contrary to the legislation of the state,—by whose authority, I ask myself, is a subsequent taking to be decreed? It is open to anyone who can think it to say that the attempt to use the state courts to the exclusion of the United States courts makes the taking void; but I cannot understand how a taking unauthorized by the state can be good. If I am right in supposing that the state has an absolute right to limit the exercise of eminent domain as it sees fit, then, so far as the construction of the Kentucky statute is concerned, I need only invoke the cases last cited, to show that the statute imports that the state meant to confine the proceedings to its own courts. Certainly it does not purport to authorize them elsewhere, and that is enough. Smith v. Reeves, 178 U. S. 436, 44 L. ed. 1140, 1145, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 919; Chandler v. Dix, 194 U. S. 590, 592, 48 L. ed. 1129, 1131, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 766. The difference between myself and the majority is not merely on the construction of the Kentucky statutes. If that were all, I should not express my dissent. But the difference as to construction is a consequence and incident of a difference on the far more important question of power. Of course, what I have said is without prejudice to the possibility that, in case a question of rights under the Constitution of the United States should arise and be carried to the highest court of the state, it might be brought here by writ of error, as was said by Mr. Justice Harlan in Smith v. Reeves. I do not go into that, as it is immaterial now.

It is said that the question which I am discussing has been settled by the adjudications of this court. I do not think so. The only cases that have any bearing are Mississippi & R. River Boom Co. v. Patterson, 98 U. S. 403, 25 L. ed. 206, and Searl v. School Dist. No. 2, 124 U. S. 197, 31 L. ed. 415, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 460. In the former of these cases Mr. Justice Field states, in the most explicit way, that, at the stage the case had reached when it was removed from the state court, the compensation to be paid the owner of the land was the only question open. I have no criticism to make on that case. It seems to me to favor my views throughout. I think it very possible that, after the title to property has been taken, if the question [260] of compensation *still is unsettled, that may be a controversy within the meaning of the Constitution. The sovereign power of the state is at an end, and the former owner has a right, under the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States, to get his pay.

Mississippi & R. River Boom Co. v. Patterson was followed by Searl v. School Dist. No. 2, seemingly without noticing the distinction that, in the latter case, the property had not yet been appropriated. There was no serious reasoning in the case, and I should think it a most inadequate justification for trenching upon the powers of the states, even if it were strictly in point. It arose, however, under the former statute as to removals, which did not limit them to cases which could have been begun in the United States courts. Whether I should think that a sufficient distinction if that case were before me now I shall not consider; but I feel warranted in believing that no one who took part in that decision imagined that he was establishing the doctrine now laid down or any principle broad enough to cover the present case. I cannot think that even Mr. Justice Matthews would have denied that the day after removal the state could have withdrawn the power to condemn the land, and left the court in the air, or could have condemned the land pending the proceedings, without paying them the slightest regard. If the state did retain those powers, I think it no less retained the delectus personarum and the right to confine its authority, while it left it outstanding, to the persons of its choice.

I wish to add only that I am not aware of any limitations in the Constitution of the United States upon a state's power to condemn land within its borders, except the requirements as to compensation. All that was decided in Citizens' Sav. & L. Asso. v. Topeka, 20 Wall. 655, 22 L. ed. 455, and Cole v. LaGrange, 113 U. S. 1, 28 L. ed. 896, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 416, was that the Constitutions of certain states did not authorize the taking of private property for a private use. But if those decisions had been rested on the 14th Amendment, which they were not, and [261] in my opinion could not have been, *I do not perceive that they have any bearing upon what I have said or upon the case at bar.

I am authorized to say that the CHIEF JUSTICE, Mr. Justice Brewer, and Mr. Justice Peckham concur in this dissent.

196 U. S.

CHARLES P. COOK et al., Plffs. in Err.,
v.

COUNTY OF MARSHALL, Iowa.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 261-275.)

Commerce—state regulation—original package—cigarette boxes—equal protection of the laws.

1. The tax imposed on cigarette selling by Iowa Code, § 5007, is not an invalid regulation of commerce as applied to sales at retail of packages of ten cigarettes in small pasteboard boxes, sealed and stamped with the revenue stamp, which had been shipped loose to the retailer from another state by an express company which merely issued a receipt in duplicate, showing the number of packages and the name of the consignee, the packages not being separately or otherwise addressed, since such a box can in no just sense be considered an original package.
2. The equal protection of the laws is not denied a retail tobacco dealer by the tax imposed on cigarette selling by Iowa Code, § 5007, because sales by jobbers and wholesalers, in doing an interstate business with customers outside of the state, are excepted from its provisions.

[No. 98.]

Argued December 9, 12, 1904. Decided January 16, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Iowa to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District Court of Marshall County, in that State, sustaining a demurrer to, and dismissing, a petition for the remission of a tax imposed on cigarette selling. Affirmed.

See same case below, 119 Iowa, 384, 93 N. W. 372.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brown:

This was a petition by the owner and ten-

NOTE.—On state regulation of interstate or foreign commerce—see notes to Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Com. 13 L. R. A. 107; McCanna & F. Co. v. Citizens' Trust & Surety Co. 24 C. C. A. 13; Ratterman v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 32 L. ed. U. S. 229; Harmon v. Chicago, 37 L. ed. U. S. 216; Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 38 L. ed. U. S. 1041; and Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Adams, 39 L. ed. U. S. 311. As to police power as affecting commerce—see notes to People v. Budd, 5 L. R. A. 559; State ex rel. Corwin v. Indiana & O. Oil, Gas, & Mln. Co. 6 L. R. A. 579.

On importations in original packages—see notes to Re Wilson, 12 L. R. A. 624; State ex rel. Cochran v. Winters, 10 L. R. A. 616; Pittsburg & S. Coal Co. v. Bates, 39 L. ed. U. S. 539.

As to validity of class legislation—see State v. Goodwill, 6 L. R. A. 621, and note; State v. Loomis, 21 L. R. A. 789, and note.

As to constitutional equality of privileges, immunities, and protection—see Louisville Safety Vault & T. Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 14 L. R. A. 579, and note.

[262]ant of a certain *room in the city of Marshalltown, Iowa, addressed to the board of supervisors, for the remission of a tax of $300, imposed upon the business of selling cigarettes, which business was carried on by Charles P. Cook, one of the plaintiffs in error. The petition being denied, an appeal was taken to the district court, where a demurrer was interposed, which was sustained by that court, and an appeal taken to the supreme court, where the judgment of the district court was affirmed. 119 Iowa, 384, 93 N. W. 372.

Mr. Junius Parker argued the cause, and, with Messrs. W. W. Fuller and Frank S. Dunshee, filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

It cannot now be contended that the immunity given to original packages, or, rather, to sellers of original packages, from interference or regulation by state legislation, is to wholesalers of such packages who sell to retailers, and not to retailers of such packages who sell directly to consumers.

Schollenberger v. Pennsylvania, 171 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 49, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 757.

If the test, as intimated in the prevailing opinion in Austin v. Tennessee, 179 U. S. 343, 45 L. ed. 224, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132, and also as intimated in the opinion of the supreme court of Iowa in Cook v. Marshall County, 119 Iowa, 384, 93 N. W. 372, is to be the ordinary package of shipment, and the position of the court is to be that immunity will be given to the ordinary package of shipment, and such package be considered an original package, and that no immunity shall be given to an extraordinarily sized package, and such extraordinarily sized package shall not be regarded as an original package, courts will be involved in a maze of inquiry arising out of each individual case.

The manufacturer of cigarettes has been sometimes criticized, if not denounced, because he has attempted to evade a state statute. It is undoubtedly true that the manufacturer of cigarettes in the case at bar intended and hoped that the consignee of these cigarettes would be able to sell them without making himself liable to state regulation. Can anyone suppose that the party, manufacturer or otherwise, who shipped oleomargarine into Pennsylvania (Schollenberger v. Pennsylvania, 171 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 49, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 757), or that the brewer or distiller who shipped liquors into Iowa (Leisy v. Hardin, 135 U. S. 100, 34 L. ed. 128, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 36, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681), did not intend and hope for the same immunity?

Under all the adjudications of this court, including Austin v. Tennessee, 179 U. S.

343, 45 L. ed. 224, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132; Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat. 419, 6 L. ed. 678; Bowman v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 125 U. S. 465, 31 L. ed. 700, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 823, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 689, 1062; Leisy v. Hardin, 135 U. S. 100, 34 L. ed. 128, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 36, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681; Vance v. W. A. Vandercook Co. 170 U. S. 438, 42 L. ed. 1100, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 674; Rhodes v. Iowa, 170 U. S. 412, 42 L. ed. 1088, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 664; and Schollenberger v. Pennsylvania, 171 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 49, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 757,—cigarettes that are manufactured without the state of Iowa are, from the time they are put in transit until the importer in Iowa breaks the original package, or until after he has himself disposed of such original package, under the exclusive regulation of Congress.

This power of regulation includes the power absolutely to prohibit this interstate traffic in them (Lottery Case [Champion v. Ames] 188 U. S. 321, 47 L. ed. 492, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 321). While this status continues and this authority of Congress may be exercised, the legislature of Iowa is as utterly powerless to regulate such transit and first disposition—if made before breaking of original package—as it would be powerless to regulate affairs in Illinois or Nebraska or any other adjacent or nonadjacent state.

Congress has not by statute spoken and said that commerce in cigarettes shall be free; it has not said that the importer who receives them from without the state may sell them in the original package in which he received them, and shall not be forbidden or regulated in such act by state legislation, but by this silence it has, under the decisions of this court, said just those things as emphatically and authoritatively as it could do even by the passage of the most solemn statute.

Vance v. W. A. Vandercook Co. 170 U. S. 438, 444, 42 L. ed. 1100, 1103, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 674; Robbins v. Shelby County Taxing Dist. 120 U. S. 489, 493, 30 L. ed. 694, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 45, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 592; Leisy v. Hardin, 135 U. S. 100, 109, 34 L. ed. 128, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 36, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681.

The statute under which the tax in these cases is sought to be levied and collected is invalid because in contravention of the Constitution of the United States in that it denies persons within the state the equal protection of the laws.

Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540, 46 L. ed. 679, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431.

The procedure involved is not due process of law in that it makes provision for fixing a lien and a personal judgment upon the owner of real estate without any sort of notice, actual or constructive, to such owner that his real estate is becoming subject to a lien, and he subject to personal judgment.

McBride v. State, Revenue Agent, 70 Miss. 716, 12 So. 699.

Mr. F. E. Northup argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error.

It seems to have been in contemplation of the mind of the courts who have followed the long line of "original package" decisions, that it was such a bale, package, cask, or collection as would be likely to assume proportions with an idea of convenience in shipment and safety in transit, and bearing through all the stages of its transition from the manufacturer to the dealer a separate and distinct identity.

Austin v. Tennessee, 179 U. S. 343, 45 L. ed. 224, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132; Leisy v. Hardin, 135 U. S. 100, 34 L. ed. 128, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 36, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681; Schollenberger v. Pennsylvania, 171 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 49, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 757; Woodruff v. Parham, 8 Wall. 123, 19 L. ed. 382; Keith v. State, 91 Ala. 2, 10 L. R. A. 430, 8 So. 353; State ex rel. Gelpi Board of Assessors, 46 La. Ann. 146, 49 Am. St. Rep. 318, 15 So. 10; Austin v. State, 101 Tenn. 563, 50 L. R. A. 478, 70 Am. St. Rep. 703, 48 S. W. 305; McGregor v. Cone, 104 Iowa, 465, 39 L. R. A. 484, 65 Am. St. Rep. 522, 73 N. W. 1041.

Objections to the policy of a legislative enactment have no place in the consideration of this case, so long as it is free from objection on constitutional grounds.

People v. Jackson & M. Pl. Road Co. 9 Mich. 285; New Orleans Gaslight Co. v. Louisiana Light & H. P. & Mfg. Co. 115 U. S. 650, 29 L. ed. 516, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 252; Black, Constitutional Prohibitions, § 62.

Police regulations may be passed and be valid in restricting and preventing the sale of articles deleterious to public health, or for the public safety or public morals, even to the extent of requiring the discontinuance of the manufacturing or traffic, and even though a corporation might thereby suffer inconvenience and loss of property rights.

Austin v. Tennessee, 179 U. S. 343, 45 L. ed. 224, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132; Bartemeyer v. Iowa, 18 Wall. 129, 21 L. ed. 929; Boston Beer Co. v. Massachusetts, 97 U. S. 25, 24 L. ed. 989; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 31 L. ed. 205, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Foster v. Kansas, 112 U. S. 201, 28 L. ed. 629, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 8, 97; Powell v. Pennsylvania, 127 U. S. 678, 32 L. ed. 253, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 992, 1257; Plumley v. Massachusetts, 155 U. S. 461, 39 L. ed. 223, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 590, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154.

In Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat. 419, 6 L. ed. 678, it was conceded that, so long as the packages remained in their original case, they were not subject to taxation, but this exemption immediately ceased as soon as the boxes were opened.

The same rule was followed in the case of May v. New Orleans, 178 U. S. 496, 44 L. ed. 1165, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 976, holding that where a mode of putting up a package is not adopted to meet the requirements of the state of commerce, but the requirements of an unlawful retail trade, the dealer will not be protected on the ground that he is selling a thing in an original package.

In Com. v. Bishman, 138 Pa. 639, 21 Atl. 12, it was held that where the defendant engaged in the sale of liquors at retail in pint bottles enclosed within pasteboard boxes which were shipped in barrels, his claim that he was selling "original packages" was little better than a burlesque.

Wherever the enactment is a bona fide exercise of the police power, dictated by conscientious regard for the public health or safety in prohibiting the sale of obnoxious products, such legislation has been respected, although it may interfere directly with interstate commerce.

Robbins v. Shelby County Taxing Dist. 120 U. S. 489, 30 L. ed. 694, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 45, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 592; Vanderbilt v. Adams, 7 Cow. 349; Willson v. Black Bird Creek Marsh Co. 2 Pet. 245, 7 L. ed. 412; Sherlock v. Alling, 93 U. S. 99, 23 L. ed. 819.

The power to prescribe regulations to protect the health of the community and prevent the spread of disease is incident to all local municipal authority, however much these regulations may interfere with the movements of commerce.

Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 196, 29 L. ed. 158, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 382, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Finley, 38 Kan. 550, 16 Pac. 951; Kimnish v. Ball, 129 U. S. 217, 32 L. ed. 695, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 407, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277; Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. v. Husen, 95 U. S. 465, 24 L. ed. 527; Salzenstein v. Mavis, 91 Ill. 391; Urton v. Sherlock, 75 Mo. 247; State, Waterbury, Prosecutor, v. Newton, 50 N. J. L. 534, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 63, 14 Atl. 604; McGregor v. Cohn, 104 Iowa, 465, 39 L. R. A. 484, 65 Am. St. Rep. 522, 73 N. W. 1041.

*Mr. Justice Brown delivered the opinion [268] of the court:

This case involves the constitutionality of § 5007 of the Iowa Code, imposing a tax of $300 per annum upon every person, and also upon the real property and the owner thereof, whereon cigarettes are sold or kept for sale. The section is printed in full in the margin.†

The facts of the case were that the plaintiff, Charles P. Cook, carried on a retail cigar and tobacco store upon premises leased by him from his co-plaintiff. Cook ordered his cigarettes of the American Tobacco Company, at St. Louis. They were delivered to an express company, and brought by such company from St. Louis, or other places outside of the state of Iowa, directly to the place of business of the plaintiff, in small pasteboard boxes, containing ten cigarettes each, each package being sealed and stamped with the revenue stamp. These packages were shipped absolutely loose, and were not boxed, baled, wrapped, or covered, nor were they in any way attached together. Nothing appears in the record to indicate the means used in transporting these cigarettes from the factory of the manufacturer to the place of business of the retail dealer, and we are left to infer that they were shoveled into and out of a car, and delivered to plaintiffs [269] in that condition. The packages *were not separately or otherwise addressed, but at the time they were delivered to the express company the driver gave a receipt showing the number of packages and the name of the person to whom they were to be sent, retaining a duplicate himself.

The constitutionality of the act as applied to the plaintiffs was attacked upon two grounds:

(1) That it was an attempt to interfere with the power of Congress to regulate commerce between the states.

(2) That it denied to the plaintiffs the equal protection of the laws.

The argument of the plaintiffs is the same as that which was pressed upon our attention a few years ago in Austin v. Tennessee, 179 U. S. 343, 45 L. ed. 224, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132, that the packages of ten cigarettes were each the original packages in which these cigarettes were imported from other states, and that, under the decisions of this court in Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat. 419, 6 L. ed. 678, Leisy v. Hardin, 135 U. S. 100, 34 L. ed. 128, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 36, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681, and Schollenberger v. Pennsylvania, 171 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 49, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 757, they were entitled to the immuni-ties attaching to original packages. We reviewed these and a large number of other cases in our opinion, and, came to the conclusion that these boxes were in no just sense original packages within the spirit of the prior cases, and that their shipment in this form was not a bona fide transaction, but was merely a convenient subterfuge for evading the law forbidding the sale of cigarettes within the state. This case differs from that only in the fact that in the Austin Case the packages were thrown loosely into baskets, which were shipped on board the train, and carried to Austin's place of business. These baskets, it is argued, might have been considered as the original packages.

This difference, however, was not insisted upon as distinguishing the two cases in principle. Indeed, it was admitted to be one not of "great magnitude or seeming legal significance." The main argument of the plaintiffs was frankly addressed to a reconsideration of the principle involved in the Austin Case, and a reinsistence upon the position there taken, *that the packages in [270] which the cigarettes were actually shipped must govern, and that we cannot look to the motives which actuated such shipment, or to the fact that ordinary importations of cigarettes were made in boxes containing a large number of these so-called original packages. We have carefully reconsidered the principle of that case, and, without repeating the arguments then used in the opinions, we have seen no reason to reverse or change the views there expressed.

The term "original package" is not defined by any statute, and is simply a convenient form of expression adopted by Chief Justice Marshall in Brown v. Maryland, to indicate that a license tax could not be exacted of an importer of goods from a foreign country who disposes of such goods in the form in which they were imported. It is not denied that, in the changed and changing conditions of commerce between the states, packages in which shipments may be made from one state to another may be smaller than those "bales, hogsheads, barrels, or tierces," to which the term was originally applied by Chief Justice Marshall, but, whatever the form or size employed, †Sec. 5007. Tax on sale.—There shall be assessed a tax of $300 per annum against every person, partnership, or corporation, and upon the real property and the owner thereof, within or whereon any cigarettes, cigarettes wrapper, or any paper made or prepared for the use in making cigarettes, or for the purpose of being filled with tobacco for smoking, are sold or given way, or kept with the intent to be sold, bartered, or given away, under any pretext whatever. Such tax shall be in addition to all other taxes and penalties, shall be assessed, collected, and distributed in the same manner as the mulct liquor tax, and shall be a perpetual lien upon all property, both personal and real, used in connection with the business; and the payment of such tax shall not be a bar to prosecution under any law prohibiting the manufacturing of cigarettes or cigarettes paper, or selling, bartering, or giving away the same. But the provisions of this section shall not apply to the sales by jobbers and wholesalers in doing an interstate business with customers outside of the state.

there must be a recognition of the fact that the transaction is a bona fide one, and that the usual methods of interstate shipment have not been departed from for the purpose of evading the police laws of the states.

In Leisy v. Hardin, 135 U. S. 100, 34 L. ed. 128, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 36, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681, quarter barrels, and even one-eighth barrels and cases of beer, were recognized as original packages or kegs, though the size of such packages and the usual methods of transporting beer do not seem to have been made the subject of discussion. There is nothing in the opinion to indicate that it was not legitimate to ship beer in kegs of this size. So, too, in Schollenberger v. Pennsylvania, oleomargarine transported and sold in packages of 10 pounds weight was recognized as bona fide, but it was expressly found by the jury in that case that the package was an original package, as required by the act of Congress, and was of such "form, size, and weight as is used by producers or shippers for the purpose of securing both convenience in handling and security in transportation *of merchandise between dealers in the ordinary course of actual commerce, and the said form, size, and weight were adopted in good faith, and not for the purpose of evading the laws of the commonwealth of Pennsylvania, said package being one of a number of similar packages forming one consignment, shipped by the said company to the said defendant." [271] While it may be impossible to define the size or shape of an original package, the principle upon which the doctrine is founded would not justify us in holding that any package which could not be commercially transported from one state to another as a separate importation could be considered as an original package.

But it is insisted with much earnestness that, in determining the lawfulness of sales in original packages, we are bound to consider that package as original in which the articles were actually shipped, particularly where Congress, for the purpose of taxation, has prescribed a certain size of package to be separately stamped, and that we have no right to look beyond the letter of the term, and inquire into the motives which dictated the size of the packages in each case. This argument was also made in the Austin Case, was considered at some length, and held to be unsound. In delivering the opinion we said (p. 359, L. ed. p. 232, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 138): "The real question in this case is whether the size of the package in which the importation is actually made is to govern, or the size of the package in which bona fide transactions are carried on between the manufacturer and the wholesale dealer residing in different states. We hold to the latter view. The whole theory of the exemption of the original package from the operation of state laws is based upon the idea that the property is imported in the ordinary form in which, from time immemorial, foreign goods have been brought into the country."

While it is doubtless true that a perfectly lawful act may not be impugned by the fact that the person doing the act was impelled thereto by a bad motive, yet, where the lawfulness or unlawfulness of the act is made an issue, the intent of the *actor may have a [272] material bearing in characterizing the transaction. We have had frequent occasions to treat of this subject in passing upon the validity of legislative acts or municipal ordinances. So, where the lawfulness of the method used for transporting goods from one state to another is questioned, it may be shown that the intent of the party concerned was not to select the usual and ordinary method of transportation, but an unusual and more expensive one, for the express purpose of evading or defying the police laws of the state. If the natural result of such method be to render inoperative laws intended for the protection of the people, it is pertinent to inquire whether the act was not done for that purpose, and to hold that the interstate commerce clause of the Constitution is invoked as a cover for fraudulent dealing, and is no defense to a prosecution under the state law.

The power of Congress to regulate commerce among the states is perhaps the most benign gift of the Constitution. Indeed, it may be said that without it the Constitution would not have been adopted. One of the chief evils of the confederation was the power exercised by the commercial states of exacting duties upon the importation of goods destined for the interior of the country or for other states. The vast territory to the west of the Alleghanies had not yet been developed or subdivided into states, but the evil had already become so flagrant that it threatened an utter dissolution of the confederacy. The article was adopted that all of states of the Union might have the benefit of the duties collected at the maritime ports, and to relieve them from the embarrassing restrictions imposed upon the internal commerce of the country. But the same policy which authorizes the use of this power as a shield to protect commerce from the vexatious interference of the states forbids its employment as a sword to assail measures designed for the preservation of the public health, morals, and comfort. States may differ among themselves as to the necessity and scope of such measures, but so long as they are adopted in good faith, with an eye single to the *public wel-[273] fare, they are as much entitled to the recognition of the general government as if they were uniformly adopted by all the states.

While this court has been alert to protect the rights of nonresident citizens, and has felt it its duty, not always with the approbation of the state courts, to declare the invalidity of laws throwing obstacles in the way of free intercommunication between the states, it will not lend its sanction to those who deliberately plan to debauch the public conscience and set at naught the laws of a state. The power of Congress to regulate commerce is undoubtedly a beneficent one. The police laws of the state are equally so, and it is our duty to harmonize them. Undoubtedly a law may sometimes be successfully and legally avoided if not evaded; but it behooves one who stakes his case upon the letter of the Constitution not to be wholly oblivious of its spirit. In this case we cannot hold that plaintiffs are entitled to its immunities without striking a serious blow at the rights of the states to administer their own internal affairs.

2. The argument that § 5007 of the Iowa Code denies to the plaintiffs the equal protection of the laws is based upon an alleged discrimination arising from the final sentence that "the provisions of this section shall not apply to the sales by jobbers and wholesalers in doing an interstate business with customers outside of the state."

We are referred in this connection to a series of well-known cases arising under the anti-trust laws of the several states, to the effect that laws against combinations in trade must be uniform in their application as applied to all persons within the same general class. The leading case upon this point is Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540, 46 L. ed. 679, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431, where a law of Illinois against combinations to regulate prices and productions, and create restrictions, was held to be invalid by reason of the exemption of agricultural productions or live stock while in the hands of the producer or raiser.

A similar case is that of Cotting v. [274] Kansas City Stock Yards Co. 183 U. S. 79, 46 L. ed. 92, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30, wherein a statute of Kansas regulating the prices to be paid for the use of public cattle stock yards was held invalid by reason of the fact that it was intended to apply only to the stock yards of Kansas City, and not to other companies or corporations engaged in like business in other portions of the state.

These cases, however, have but limited application to laws imposing taxes, where the right of classification is held to permit of discrimination between different trades and callings when not obviously exercised in a spirit of prejudice or favoritism. Kentucky Railroad Tax Cases, 115 U. S. 321, 29 L. ed. 414, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 57; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 42 L. ed. 1037, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; American Sugar Ref. Co. v. Louisiana, 179 U. S. 89, 45 L. ed. 102, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 43; Bell's Gap R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 134 U. S. 232, 33 L. ed. 892, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533.

This distinction was recognized by Mr. Justice Harlan in Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. on page 562, (L. ed. p. 690, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 440) wherein it is said: "A state may, in its wisdom, classify property for purposes of taxation, and the exercise of its discretion is not to be questioned in a court of the United States, so long as the classification does not invade rights secured by the Constitution of the United States." It can scarcely be doubted that, if the Connolly Case had dealt with the subject of taxation, a discriminative tax upon producers of agricultural products, either greater or less than that imposed upon other manufacturers or producers, might have been held valid without denying to either party the equal protection of the laws. The holding in that case was simply that, considering that the object of the statute was to prevent combinations of capital or skill for certain purposes, the exemption of farmers was based upon no sound distinction, and rendered the law invalid as to other classes included within it.

There is a clear distinction in principle between persons engaged in selling cigarettes generally or at retail, and those engaged in selling by wholesale to customers without the state. They are two entirely distinct occupations. One sells at retail, the other at wholesale; one to the public generally, *and the other to a particular class; one [275] within the state, the other without. From time out of mind it has been the custom of Congress to impose a special license tax upon wholesale dealers different from that imposed upon retail dealers. A like distinction is observed between brewers and rectifiers, wholesale and retail dealers in leaf tobacco and liquors, manufacturers of tobacco and manufacturers of cigars, as well as peddlers of tobacco. It may be difficult to distinguish these several classes in principle, but the power of Congress to make this discrimination has not, we believe, been questioned.

Why the legislature should have made the distinction found in § 5007 is not entirely clear, but it probably arose from the belief that the imposition of a license tax upon wholesale exporters of cigarettes would be as much an interference with interstate commerce as the imposition of a similar tax upon importers from abroad was held to be in Brown v. Maryland. We are satisfied the section is not open to the objection of denying to the dealers in cigarettes the equal protection of the laws.

The judgment of the Supreme Court is, therefore, affirmed.

Mr. Justice White, concurring:

The only difference between this and the Austin Case is that in this no basket was used to hold the many small packages shipped at one and the same time to the same person. In my opinion, such fact is not sufficient to take the case out of the reach of the reasoning stated by me for concurring in the decree in the Austin Case. For the reasons given for my concurrence in that case I concur in the judgment rendered in this.

The CHIEF JUSTICE, Mr. Justice Brewer, and Mr. Justice Peckham dissented.

[276]*ROBERT E. HODGE et al., Plffs. in Err.,
v.

MUSCATINE COUNTY et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 276-282.)

Federal courts—when decisions of state courts will be followed—due process of law in tax on cigarette selling—error to state court—questions of local law.

1. The construction by the Iowa supreme court of the annual charge imposed by Iowa Code, § 5007, upon cigarette dealers and "upon the real property and the owner thereof" whereon cigarettes are sold, the payment of which is not to bar criminal proceedings, as being a tax upon the traffic, and not a penalty, is not so clearly erroneous as to justify the Federal Supreme Court in adopting a different construction on a writ of error to the state court, in which such statute is asserted to deny due process of law.
2. Due process of law does not require that, as to a person actually carrying on the business of selling cigarettes, notice be given of the assessment or levy of the tax imposed by Iowa Code, § 5007, upon the traffic, there being no discretion as to the amount of the tax.
3. An owner of real property is not denied due process of law by Iowa Code, § 5007, making the tax imposed thereby on the business of cigarette selling a lien upon the property where the business is carried on.
4. Sufficient provision for notice and hearing to constitute due process of law is afforded the owner of real property who is made personally liable, and his property impressed with a lien, under Iowa Code, § 5007, for the tax imposed thereby on cigarette selling on the premises, by §§ 2441, 2442, which permit him to make application to the board of supervisors to remit the tax, and, in case of a denial of the petition, to appeal to the district court for a judicial determination of his liability.

5. Whether the Iowa Constitution is violated by Iowa Code, § 5007, imposing a tax on cigarette selling, because the statute does not distinctly state the tax and the object to which it is applied, is a purely local question, which cannot be considered by the Federal Supreme Court on writ of error to a state court.

[No. 150.]

Argued December 9, 12, 1904. Decided January 16, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Iowa, to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District Court of Muscatine County, in that State, sustaining demurrers to, and dismissing, a bill to enjoin the assessment and collection of the tax on cigarette selling. Affirmed.

See same case below, 121 Iowa, 482, 96 N. W. 968.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brown:

This was a petition in the district court by the owner and tenant of certain real estate in Muscatine, used for a tobaccoconist's shop, to enjoin the defendants from assessing and collecting a tax of $240, upon the ground of the unconstitutionality of the law.

Demurrers were interposed to the petition and to certain amendments thereto, which were sustained, the bill dismissed, and an appeal taken to the supreme court of Iowa, which affirmed the judgment of the court below. 121 Iowa, 482, 96 N. W. 968.

Mr. Junius Parker argued the cause, and, with Messrs. W. W. Fuller and Frank S. Dunshee, filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

For contentions of these counsel see their brief as reported in Cook v. Marshall County, ante, 471.

Mr. Ed. P. Ingham argued the cause, and, with Mr. Henry Jayne, filed a brief for defendants in error:

Whatever article of commerce is recog-

NOTE.—As to what constitutes due process of law—see Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L. R. A. 655, and note; Re Gannon, 5 L. R. A. 359, and note; Uiman v. Baltimore, 11 L. R. A. 224, and note; and Gilman v. Tucker, 13 L. R. A. 304, and note. And see notes to People v. O'Brien, 2 L. R. A. 255; Pearson v. Yewdall, 24 L. ed. U. S. 436; and Wilson v. North Carolina, 42 L. ed. U. S. 865.

196 U. S.

On notice and hearing required to constitute due process of law—see notes to Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L. R. A. 657; Chauvin v. Valiton, 3 L. R. A. 194; and Uiman v. Baltimore, 11 L. R. A. 225.

On what questions the Federal Supreme Court will consider in reviewing the judgments of state courts—see note to Missouri ex rel. Hill v. Dockery, 63 L. R. A. 571.

nized as fit for barter or sale, when its manufacture is made subject to Federal regulation and taxation, must be regarded as a legitimate article of commerce, although it may be within the police power of the states.

Re Rahrer (Wilkerson v. Rahrer) 140 U. S. 559, 35 L. ed. 575, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 865; Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat. 419, 6 L. ed. 678; Leisy v. Hardin, 135 U. S. 100, 34 L. ed. 128, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 36, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681; Austin v. State, 101 Tenn. 563, 50 L. R. A. 478, 70 Am. St. Rep. 703, 48 S. W. 305.

And if Congress authorizes its importation, no state has a right to prohibit its introduction.

License Cases (Thurlow v. Massachusetts) 5 How. 504, 12 L. ed. 256.

However, a state is not bound to furnish a market for such articles, or abstain from passing any law which may be necessary or advisable to guard the health or morals of its citizens, although such law may discourage importations or diminish profits of the importer.

Boston Beer Co. v. Massachusetts, 97 U. S. 25, 24 L. ed. 989; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 31 L. ed. 205, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Foster v. Kansas, 112 U. S. 201, 28 L. ed. 629, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 8, 97.

A state cannot prohibit the sale of articles of lawful commerce imported by the importer, when such articles do not become a part of the common mass of property within the state, and so long as they remain in the original packages in which they are imported.

Leisy v. Hardin, 135 U. S. 100, 34 L. ed. 128, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 36, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681; Schollenberger v. Pennsylvania, 171 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 49, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 757; Bowman v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 125 U. S. 465, 31 L. ed. 700, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 823, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 689, 1062; State ex rel. Cochran v. Winters, 44 Kan. 723, 10 L. R. A. 616, 25 Pac. 237; May v. New Orleans, 178 U. S. 496, 44 L. ed. 1165, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 976; License Cases (Thurlow v. Massachusetts) 5 How. 504, 12 L. ed. 256; Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat. 419, 6 L. ed. 678.

An original package has been defined to be such form and size of package as is used by producers or shippers for the purpose of securing both convenience in handling and security in transportation of merchandise between dealers in the ordinary course of actual commerce.

Com. use of Philadelphia v. Schollenberger, 156 Pa. 201, 22 L. R. A. 155, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 488, 36 Am. St. Rep. 32, 27 Atl. 30; McGregor v. Cone, 104 Iowa, 465, 39 L. R. A. 484, 65 Am. St. Rep. 522, 73 N. W. 1043.

The rule is that where the mode of putting up a package is not adopted to meet the requirements of interstate commerce, but the requirements of an unlawful domestic retail trade, the dealer will not be protected on the ground that he is selling an original package.

Austin v. State, 101 Tenn. 563, 50 L. R. A. 478, 70 Am. St. Rep. 703, 48 S. W. 305. See also Com. v. Bishman, 138 Pa. 639, 21 Atl. 12; Haley v. State, 42 Neb. 556, 47 Am. St. Rep. 718, 60 N. W. 962; Com. v. Paul, 170 Pa. 284, 30 L. R. A. 396, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 506, 33 Atl. 82; State v. Chapman, 1 S. D. 414, 10 L. R. A. 432, 47 N. W. 411.

The size of the package is immaterial where bona fide transactions are carried on.

License Cases (Thurlow v. Massachusetts) 5 How. 608, 12 L. ed. 303; Com. v. Zelt, 138 Pa. 615, 11 L. R. A. 602, 21 Atl. 7; Austin v. State, 101 Tenn. 563, 50 L. R. A. 478, 70 Am. St. Rep. 703, 48 S. W. 305.

The police power may be lawfully resorted to for the purpose of preserving public health, safety, or morals, or abating public nuisances. A large discrimination is necessarily vested in the legislature to determine what public interests require and what measures are necessary for the protection of such interests.

Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 366, 392, 42 L. ed. 780, 791, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383; Boston Beer Co. v. Massachusetts, 97 U. S. 25, 24 L. ed. 989; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 31 L. ed. 205, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Foster v. Kansas, 112 U. S. 201, 28 L. ed. 629, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 8, 97; Austin v. State, 101 Tenn. 563, 50 L. R. A. 478, 70 Am. St. Rep. 703, 48 S. W. 305.

The cigarette tax, in and of itself, is in the nature of an additional penalty under police regulation to protect the public from the evils arising from the use of cigarettes, and an occupation charge for the purpose of revenue.

Hodge v. Muscatine County, 121 Iowa, 482, 96 N. W. 969.

The power to tax is inherent in the government. It is a legislative power, and is limited only by constitutional provisions; subject thereto, it extends to everything and everybody as the legislature may see fit to apply it. Courts cannot control its exercise, unless such exercise conflicts with constitutional limitations.

25 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 18, and cases cited; Ferry v. Deneen (Iowa) 82 N. W. 424; Hanson v. Vernon, 27 Iowa, 28, 1 Am. Rep. 215; Porter v. Rockford, R. I. & St. L. R. Co. 76 Ill. 561; Wisconsin C. R. Co. v. Taylor County, 52 Wis. 53, 8 N. W. 833; Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, 111 U. S. 701, 28 L. ed. 569, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663.

The power to impose privilege and occupation taxes exists independently and concurrently in the state and Federal government, subject to constitutional restrictions. The only direct limitation therein contained is that no tax shall be laid on articles exported from any state. Being in the discretion of the legislature, it may select some for this purpose and exempt others, and select the mode in which taxes shall be levied.

25 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law pp. 21, note, 479, 481, 492; Ward v. Maryland, 12 Wall. 418, 20 L. ed. 449; License Cases (Thurlow v. Massachusetts) 5 How. 504, 12 L. ed. 256; License Tax Cases, 5 Wall. 462, 18 L. ed. 497; Munn v. People, 69 Ill. 80; U. S. Const. art. 1, § 9, ¶ 5; People v. Coleman, 4 Cal. 46, 60 Am. Dec. 581; Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Com. 133 Mass. 161; Durach's Appeal, 62 Pa. 491; Weaver v. State, 89 Ga. 639, 15 S. E. 840; Singer Mfg. Co. v. Wright, 33 Fed. 121.

It may be said that the demand made for money under the police power is secondary to the police regulation out of which the demand grows; while in the case of taxation the principal object is revenue. This distinction is not to be lost sight of, even though the procedure for collection may be similar in both cases.

25 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 20; Van Horn v. People, 46 Mich. 183, 41 Am. Rep. 159, 9 N. W. 246; East St. Louis v. Wehrung, 46 Ill. 392; Cooley, Taxn. 2d ed. p. 586; Re New York, 11 Johns. 77; License Tax Cases, 5 Wall. 462, 18 L. ed. 497.

That a tax is imposed for the double purpose of regulation and revenue is no reason for declaring it invalid.

Hodge v. Muscatine County, 121 Iowa, 482, 96 N. W. 968; 2 Desty, Taxn. 1384.

An occupation charge is different from a general tax, and the constitutional provisions that all taxes shall be equal and uniform apply only to general taxation. It is sufficient if all in the same class are taxed alike.

25 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, pp. 480, 481, 489; Ex parte Hurl, 49 Cal. 557; Higgins Ferry Co. v. East St. Louis, 102 Ill. 560; Baker v. Cincinnati, 11 Ohio St. 534; Standard Underground Cable Co. v. Atty. Gen. 46 N. J. Eq. 270, 19 Am. St. Rep. 394, 19 Atl. 733; Durach's Appeal, 62 Pa. 491; Weaver v. State, 89 Ga. 639, 15 S. E. 840; Singer Mfg. Co. v. Wright, 33 Fed. 121; State v. Stephens, 4 Tex. 137; Society for Savings v. Coite, 6 Wall. 606, 18 L. ed. 902; Ferry v. Deneen (Iowa) 82 N. W. 424; Hale v. Kenosha, 29 Wis. 599; Auburn v. Paul, 84 Me. 215, 24 Atl. 817; Richmond & A. R. Co. v. Lynchburg, 81 Va. 473; Smith v. Skow, 97 Iowa, 640, 66 N. W. 893.

The difference between a general tax and an occupation charge or tax is that the general tax is assessed solely for revenue; while the occupation tax or charge may be assessed under police regulations to protect public health and morals or public safety,—the regulation of the object specified, and not for revenue.

25 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 20; Cooley, Taxn. 2d ed. 586.

The tax imposed was for indemnity and protection to the public against evils resulting from the nature and character of the business, and is also in the nature of a police regulation, but is not to be wholly so regarded.

Hodge v. Muscatine County, 121 Iowa, 482, 96 N. W. 968.

Such tax was a charge for carrying on the business, and acted the same upon all persons and property coming within its provisions; and as the law is general in its scope and provisions, all persons liable thereunder must appear and pay the tax without notice; and notice is no more necessary to the property owner than in cases of taxes generally.

Re Smith, 104 Iowa, 199, 73 N. W. 605; Smith v. Skow, 97 Iowa, 640, 66 N. W. 893.

The tax imposed is also a penalty, and the rules governing ordinary taxes should not govern.

Ferry v. Deneen (Iowa) 82 N. W. 424.

The supreme court of Iowa has determined that the tax provided in Code, § 5007, is a penalty and occupation charge.

Hodge v. Muscatine County, 121 Iowa, 482, 96 N. W. 968.

Being a penalty and occupation charge, the legislature, inherently possessing that power incidental to sovereignty, may, in its discretion, and so long as there is no conflict with constitutional limitations, impose such tax upon any certain occupation for the protection of public health and morals, and provide and select the mode in which such tax may be assessed and levied.

Society for Savings v. Coite, 6 Wall. 606, 18 L. ed. 902; Ferry v. Deneen (Iowa) 82 N. W. 424.

As usual, the administrative officers are empowered to collect taxes without the aid of any judicial process, and yet "due process of law" has not been violated.

Glidden v. Harrington, 189 U. S. 255, 47 L. ed. 798, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 574.

The meetings of the board of revision are fixed by law, and of these all persons must take notice.

Hodge v. Muscatine County, 121 Iowa, 482, 96 N. W. 968; Palmer v. McMahon, 133 U. S. 662, 33 L. ed. 772, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 327; Glidden v. Harrington, 189 U. S. 255, 47 L. ed. 798, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 574.

The intention of §§ 2441 et seq. is to provide, and they do provide, such measures as take the liquor tax law from under the prohibition of taking property without due process of law. Such sections certainly save the law from that objection, and consequently no notice to the owner of the property assessed and levied upon is necessary.

Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 24 L. ed. 616.

Nor is it necessary that the person who conducts the business be present, or have an opportunity to be present, when the assessment is made.

McMillen v. Anderson, 95 U. S. 37, 24 L. ed. 335.

Mr Justice Brown delivered the opinion of the Court:

This case involves the same questions as those just disposed of in Cook v. Marshall County, 196 U. S. 261, ante, 471, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 233, and in addition thereto the point is made that the laws of Iowa deny to the owner of property leased for the sale of cigarettes due process of law.

To answer satisfactorily the question thus presented, it is necessary to consider the laws of Iowa respecting the tax upon cigarette dealers, and the methods of enforcing the same.

By § 5006 a fine and imprisonment are imposed for selling cigarettes.

By § 5007, printed in full in the Marshall County Case, a tax of $300 per annum is assessed "against every person . . . and upon the real property and the owner thereof," whereon cigarettes, etc., are sold, or kept with intent to be sold, with a provision that "such tax shall be in addition to all other taxes and penalties, shall be assessed, collected, and distributed in the same manner as the mulct liquor tax, and shall be a perpetual lien upon all property, both personal and real, used in connection with the business; and the payment of such tax shall not be a bar to prosecution under any law prohibiting" the selling of cigarettes.

This assessment is made collectible as is a similar charge made upon dealers in liquor as follows:

By § 2433 the assessor makes quarterly returns to the auditor of the persons liable to the tax, a description of the real property whereon the business has been carried.

[278] *By § 2436 the charge is made payable in quarterly instalments, and shall be a lien upon the real property.

By § 2437 the auditor certifies quarterly to the county treasurer a list of the names returned to him by the assessor, with a description of the names of the tenant and owner.

By § 2438 the county treasurer enters upon the mulct tax book a quarterly instalment of the tax as a lien and charge upon the real property.

By § 2439, if the tax is not paid within a month, it shall be considered delinquent, and be collectible as other delinquent taxes.

By § 2440 the treasurer may collect the same after it has become delinquent, by seizing and selling any personal property.

By § 2441 application may be made to the board of supervisors to remit the tax by petition duly verified and filed with the county auditor eight days before the time set for the consideration of the case, notice of which must be served upon the county attorney.

By § 2442 the owner of the property may be heard in support of his application. A majority of the board determines whether the tax shall stand or be remitted, and either party may take an appeal to the district court.

These are all of the provisions of the law material to be considered.

We do not deem it necessary to affix a definition to the charge imposed by § 5007. It is certainly not an ordinary license tax, as the payment of such tax is no bar to a prosecution for selling cigarettes under § 5006. In Smith v. Skow, 97 Iowa, 640, 66 N. W. 893, it is said, in speaking of the mulct liquor tax, to which this is analogous, that though called a tax in the statute, it is not in fact a tax as we usually use the word. "It is in reality a charge or license for carrying on the business of vending liquors, which charge is made a lien upon all property used or connected with the business." In Ferry v. Deneen (Iowa) 82 N. W. 424, it is *observed by the same court, "it is ap-[279] parent, taking all the provisions of this act together, that the amount imposed, while called a 'tax,' is, at the same time, a penalty."

But, in the opinion of the court in the case under consideration, the charge imposed by § 5007 is said to be "clearly not a license, for it does not grant permission to do an act which, without such permission, would be invalid, . . . [that] it is manifestly a tax upon the traffic which the legislature saw fit to impose, not for the purpose of giving countenance to the business, but as a deterrent against engaging therein. . . . Indeed, we think it may be fairly said to be a tax upon the business. That a tax is imposed for the double purpose of regulation and revenue is no reason for declaring it invalid. . . . Being a tax, it was competent for the legislature to prescribe the proceedings and processes for its collection."

This being the latest expression of opinion of the supreme court of Iowa, we accept it for the purposes of this case. If it be not a construction binding upon us, it is, at least, a construction which we ought to follow.

unless we are clearly of opinion that it is wrong.

In the case of McBride v. State Revenue Agent, 70 Miss. 716, 12 So. 699, cited by plaintiffs, it was held that a statute providing that a person selling liquor unlawfully should be subject to pay, "where the offense is committed," the sum of $500, and should also be liable to a "criminal prosecution," imposed a penalty, and not a tax, and that a proceeding to collect such penalty by distress was unconstitutional; but a distinction was drawn in that case between a penalty and a tax, and it was intimated that a proceeding by distress to collect a tax would not be open to a like objection.

It is not easy to draw an exact line of demarcation between a tax and a penalty, but, in view of the fact that the statute denominates the assessment a "tax," and provides proceedings appropriate for the collection of a tax, but not for the enforcement of a penalty, and does not contemplate a criminal prosecution, we cannot go far afield in [280] treating it as a tax *rather than a penalty.

Section 5006 does, indeed, impose a penalty, but § 5007 imposes a tax, with an additional provision that the payment of the tax shall not absolve the party from the penalty. It would be a distortion of the words employed to speak of § 5007 as imposing an additional penalty. The act itself provides in terms that such a tax shall be an addition to all other taxes and penalties, and elaborate provision is made for its enforcement. The mere fact that the charge, whatever it may be, is made a lien upon the real estate, and a personal claim against the landlord, indicates that it is in the nature of a tax rather than a penalty.

There is no conflict between the two sections, the state reserving to itself an election to proceed under the one or the other. If Congress may provide that a license granted by it to sell liquors shall not be construed to authorize the sale of such liquors when prohibited by the laws of the state, as was held by this court in McGuire v. Massachusetts, 3 Wall. 387, 18 L. ed. 164, License Tax Cases, 5 Wall. 463, 18 L. ed. 497, Com. v. Crane, 158 Mass. 218, 33 N. E. 388, Parvear v. Massachusetts, 5 Wall. 475, 18 L. ed. 608, we see no reason why the state itself may not exercise the same power, and reserve to itself the right to tax or prohibit, as in individual cases it may see fit.

2. Coming now to the provisions for its enforcement, it is entirely clear that, as to the person actually carrying on the business, no notice of the assessment or levy of the tax is necessary. If the person carries on the business, the imposition of the tax follows as a matter of course. There is no discretion as to the amount. McMillen v. Anderson, 95 U. S. 37, 24 L. ed. 335; Hager v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, 111 U. S. 701, 28 L. ed. 569, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663; Turpin v. Lemon, 187 U. S. 51, 47 L. ed. 70, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 20; Re Smith, 104 Iowa, 199, 73 N. W. 605.

It was within the power of the legislature to make the tax a lien upon the property whereon the business was carried. If general taxes upon real estate and specific taxes for improvements thereto, including pavements, sidewalks, sewers, the opening of streets and keeping them clean, may be made liens upon the property affected, it is difficult to see why a tax *upon the business [281] carried on upon such property may not be made a lien as well as a claim against the owner. The owner is not only chargeable with a knowledge of the law in respect thereto, but he is presumed to know the business there carried on, and to have let the property with knowledge that it might become encumbered by a tax imposed upon such business. Sheldon v. Van Buskirk, 2 N. Y. 473; Brown Shoe Co. v. Hunt, 103 Iowa, 586, 39 L. R. A. 291, 64 Am. St. Rep. 198, 72 N. W. 765; Polk County v. Hierb, 37 Iowa, 367; State v. Snyder, 34 Kan. 425, 8 Pac. 860; Hardten v. State, 32 Kan. 637, 5 Pac. 212; Sears v. Cottrell, 5 Mich. 251; Waldron v. Lee, 5 Pick. 323; Spencer v. McGowen, 13 Wend. 256; Simpson v. Serwiss, 3 Ohio C. C. 433.

Acts of Congress impressing liens upon real estate for taxes or penalties arising from business illegally carried on there have been the frequent subject of controversy in this court.

Conceding that the landowner is entitled to notice before he can be personally liable, or before his property can be impressed with a lien, we are of opinion that he is protected by §§ 2441 and 2442, which permit him to make application at the meeting of the board of supervisors next following the listing of the property, the sessions of which board are fixed by law (Iowa Code, § 412), to remit the tax. This application may be made at any time after the property has been assessed, upon eight days' notice being given to the county attorney. Witnesses are examined under oath before the board, which determines by a majority vote whether the tax shall stand or be remitted. If the petition be denied, the owner of the property can appeal to the district court for a judicial determination of his liability. This is sufficient. If the taxpayer be given an opportunity to test the validity of the tax at any time before it is made final, whether the proceedings for review take place before a board having a quasi judicial character, or before a tribunal provided by the state for the purpose of determining such questions, due process of law is not denied. It was held by this court in Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 154 U. S. 421, 426, 38 L. ed. 1031, 1036, 14 Sup.

[282] Ct. Rep. 1114, that a hearing before *judgment, with full opportunity to present the evidence and the arguments which the party deems important, is all that can be adjudged vital. See also King v. Mullins, 171 U. S. 404, 43 L. ed. 214, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 925.

In the amendment to the petition in this case the landowner states that she had no knowledge whatever that her real estate was being used for the sale of cigarettes until after the assessment was levied, and never consented to the same; that she resides in Illinois, and rented the property through an agent, who had had no knowledge himself of the sale of cigarettes upon the premises. There is no allegation, however, that she did not have knowledge within ample time to make application to the board of supervisors for the remission of the tax. If such application had been made, it would have been the duty of the board to take the matter into consideration, and determine whether her want of knowledge would justify the remission of the tax. It is not for us to determine whether the defense be a valid one, since, having the opportunity to make it, she declined to do so.

The question is made whether § 5007 violates the Constitution of Iowa in not stating distinctly the tax and the object to which it is to be applied; but as this is purely a local question, we are not called upon to consider it.

Affirmed.

The CHIEF JUSTICE, Mr. Justice Brewer, and Mr. Justice Peckham dissented.

[283] *JOSEPH RALPH BURTON, Plff. in Err.,
v.

UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 283-310.)

Direct appeal from district court—criminal law—sufficiency of indictment—evidence—requested instructions.

1. A question respecting an alleged privilege of freedom from arrest as a United States senator, under U. S. Const. art. 1, § 6, is one involving the construction, and application of the Federal Constitution, which will sustain a writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court to review a conviction in a district court.

2. An indictment charges an offense under U. S. Rev. Stat. § 1782 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1212), making it a misdemeanor for a United States senator to receive compensation for services rendered before any department, in relation to any proceedings in which the United States is interested, where it avers that the accused, being such a senator, received compensation for services rendered before the Postoffice Department for the purpose of inducing a decision favorable to his client in a fraud order inquiry pending before that Department.

3. An averment in an indictment, charging a United States senator with having received certain checks at St. Louis, Missouri, as compensation for services rendered before the Postoffice Department, in violation of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 1782 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1212), and alleging the payment to him of the money thereon at that place, is not supported by evidence that the checks, drawn on a St. Louis trust company, were received by him in the city of Washington, and were by him there indorsed and deposited with a local bank, and were afterwards paid at St. Louis, and that the amount of each check was, immediately upon deposit, credited by the Washington bank to the account of defendant, who had the right to draw against the account without waiting for payment at St. Louis.

4. The refusal to charge the jury in a criminal case, on their return into court for further instructions because of their inability to agree, that certain applicable requests to charge, given by the court at defendant's request, were material to the case then on trial, is reversible error where such requests, when originally made, were received as abstract propositions of law, which the court gave in connection with the charge, saying that he was willing to give them inasmuch as they were asked, and as they contained general propositions of law.

5. The trial court ought not to inquire of the jury in a criminal case, when brought in to court because of their inability to agree, how the jury is divided, even though the scope of the question is confined to the proportions of the division, without reference to how the jury stands with respect to conviction or acquittal.

[No. 343.]

*Argued November 30, December 1, 1904.
Decided January 16, 1905.*

[N ERROR to the District Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Missouri, to review a conviction of the violation of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 1782 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1212), making it a NOTE.—On direct appeal to Federal Supreme Court from Federal district and circuit courts—see note to Gwin v. United States, 46 L. ed. U. S. 741.

On the province of court and jury in trials in the Federal courts—see note to Vany v. Peirce, 26 C. C. A. 528.

misdeemeanor for a United States senator to receive compensation for services rendered before any department, in relation to any proceeding in which the United States is interested. Reversed and remanded for a new trial.

See same case below, on demurrer to indictment, 131 Fed. 552.

Statement by Mr. Justice Peckham:

The plaintiff in error having been convicted in the district court of the United States for the eastern district of Missouri of a violation of the Revised Statutes of the United States, § 1782 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1212), and set forth in the margin,[†] has brought the case here directly from that court by writ of error.

[285] *The defendant was a member of the Senate of the United States, representing the state of Kansas. The indictment under which he was tried contained nine counts. The first count, after averring that the defendant was a senator from the state of Kansas, averred that on the 26th day of March, 1903, he received, at St. Louis, Missouri, from the Rialto Grain & Securities Company, $500 in money, as compensation for his services theretofore on November 22, 1902, and on divers other days between that day and the 26th day of March, 1903, rendered for the company before the Postoffice Department of the United States, in a certain matter then and there pending before that Department, in which the United States was directly interested, that is to say: Whether the company had violated the provisions of § 5480 of the Revised Statutes of the United States (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3696), in that the company had, through its officers, devised a scheme and artifice to defraud, which was to be effected through correspondence by means of the postoffice establishment of the United States, and whether the correspondence of the company at St. Louis, Missouri, should not be returned with the word "fraudulent" plainly written or stamped upon the outside, as authorized by law. It is also averred that the services rendered by defendant to the company consisted in part of visits to the Postmaster General, the chief inspector, and other officers of the Postoffice Department, and of statements made to the Postmaster General, the chief inspector, and other officers, which visits and statements made by the defendant were made with a view and for the purpose of inducing the Postmaster General, the chief inspector, and other officers to decide the question then pending before *the Post-[286] office Department in a way favorable to the Rialto Company. The second count of the indictment was the same as the first, except that it averred the United States was "indirectly," instead of "directly," interested in the question as to whether or not a "fraud" order should be issued. Upon the third count the jury rendered a verdict of not guilty. Upon the fourth and fifth counts the government entered a nolle prosequi. The third, fourth, and fifth counts concededly charged but one offense, which was the same as that charged in the first and second counts, and all of these counts were based upon the payment of $500 in cash to defendant, at St. Louis, on the 26th of March, 1903. The sixth count averred the receipt by defendant, at the city of St. Louis, in the state of Missouri, of a check for the payment of $500, which was received by the defendant on the 22d of November, 1902, the check being drawn upon the Commonwealth Trust Company, of St. Louis, payable to the order of the defendant, and by him duly indorsed, and such check was paid by the trust company to defendant at St. Louis, as compensation for his services to the company between the 22d of November, 1902, and the 26th of March, 1903, before the Postoffice Department, in a matter in which the United States was directly interested. The count then contained the same averments of the character of the question pending before the Postoffice Department as are set forth in the first count. The seventh count is the same as the sixth, except that it averred the making of a check and the payment thereof to the defendant on the 15th day of December, 1902, at the city of St. Louis, in the state of Missouri, for the sum of $500; all other averments being the same as the sixth count. The eighth count averred the giving of a check for the sum of $500 on the 22d day of January, 1903, at the city of St. Louis, in the state of Missouri, in payment of services of the same

[†]U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1212.

Sec. 1782. No senator, representative, or delegate, after his election, and during his continuance in office, and no head of a department, or other officer or clerk in the employ of the government, shall receive or agree to receive any compensation whatever, directly or indirectly, for any services rendered, or to be rendered, to any person, either by himself or another, in relation to any proceeding, contract, claim, controversy, charge, accusation, arrest, or other matter or thing in which the United States is a party, or directly or indirectly interested, before any department, court-martial, bureau, officer, or any civil, military, or naval commission whatever. Every person offending against this section shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be imprisoned not more than two years, and fined not more than ten thousand dollars, and shall, moreover, by conviction therefor, be rendered forever thereafter incapable of holding any office of honor, trust, or profit under the government of the United States.

nature as stated in the sixth and seventh counts. The ninth count is the same as the sixth, seventh, and eighth, except that it averred the receipt of a check by the defendant, dated the 16th day of February, 1903, at the city of St. Louis, in the state [287] of Missouri, for the same *class of services and upon the same matter then pending before the Postoffice Department. The defendant demurred to the indictment on the ground that it stated no crime, and that it showed that the United States had no interest, direct or indirect, in the matter before the Postoffice Department, inasmuch as the interest of the United States, under the statute, must be either a pecuniary or property interest, which may be favorably or unfavorably affected by action sought or taken in the given matter pending before the Department. The demurrer was overruled, and the defendant then pleaded not guilty.

Messrs. John F. Dillon and Fred W. Lehmann argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Harry Hubbard, John M. Dillon, and W. H. Rossington, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

Where a statute or other document enumerates several classes of persons or things, and, immediately following and classed with such enumeration, the clause embraces "other" persons or things, the word "other" will generally be read as "other such like," so that the persons or things therein comprised may be read as ejusdem generis with, and not of a quality superior to or different from, those specifically enumerated.

21 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 1012, and cases cited; Alabama v. Montague, 117 U. S. 602, 610, 29 L. ed. 1000, 1003, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 911.

Applying the principles of construction stated by Mr. Justice Miller in Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 24 L. ed. 616, we maintain that the question of the issuance of a fraud order against the Rialto Grain & Securities Company is not included in this statute as a matter or thing in which the United States is directly or indirectly interested.

The interest which the United States must have in a matter or thing, in order to bring the matter or thing within the prohibition of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 1782 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1212), must, under the ordinary rules and principles of law which must necessarily govern in cases of this kind, be, in the language of Mr. Chief Justice Shaw in the case of Northampton v. Smith, 11 Met. 390, one that is visible, demonstrable, and capable of precise proof; one in which the United States will gain or lose something by the decision.

The words "interest" or "interested," as used in U. S. Rev. Stat. § 1782 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1212), had a well-settled legal meaning well known to the lawyers who framed that section, which meaning is in direct conflict with the opinion and decision of the trial court in this case.

Northampton v. Smith, 11 Met. 390; MeGrath v. People, 100 Ill. 464; Evans v. Eaton, 7 Wheat. 356, 5 L. ed. 472; State v. Sutton, 74 Vt. 12, 52 Atl. 116; Foreman v. Marianna, 43 Ark. 324; Taylor v. Highway Comrs. 88 Ill. 526; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Kellogg, 54 Neb. 138, 74 N. W. 403; Sauls v. Freeman, 24 Fla. 209, 12 Am. St. Rep. 190, 4 So. 525; Bowman's Case, 67 Mo. 146.

The statute, like any other statute, and especially a statute which makes an act a crime, or a statute denouncing fines, imprisonment, forfeiture of office, and perpetual infamy, must be strictly construed.

United States v. Wiltberger, 5 Wheat. 76, 5 L. ed. 37; United States v. Sheldon, 2 Wheat. 119, 4 L. ed. 199; United States v. Morris, 14 Pet. 464, 10 L. ed. 543; United States v. Clayton, 2 Dill. 219, Fed. Cas. No. 14,814.

The relation between Burton and the Riggs Bank was that of creditor and debtor immediately on the deposit being made and credit therefor given to Burton, and not that of principal and agent, or any other fiduciary relation.

Cragie v. Hadley, 99 N. Y. 131, 52 Am. Rep. 9, 1 N. E. 537; St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Johnston, 133 U. S. 566, 576, 33 L. ed. 683, 686, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 390; Metropolitan Nat. Bank v. Loyd, 90 N. Y. 530; National Bank v. Millard, 10 Wall. 152, 19 L. ed. 897; Thompson v. Riggs, 5 Wall. 663, 18 L. ed. 704; Phoenix Bank v. Risley, 111 U. S. 125, 28 L. ed. 374, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 322; Scammon v. Kimball, 92 U. S. 362, 23 L. ed. 483.

Even if the Riggs National Bank of Washington was the agent of Burton to collect the four checks, yet the subsequent indorsees of such checks, if they were agents at all, were the agents of the Riggs National Bank, and were not the agents of Burton.

Hoover v. Wise, 91 U. S. 308, 23 L. ed. 393.

Burton was not present in St. Louis when these checks were paid; he was not there in person, and he was not there constructively through any agent. Hence the court clearly erred, on the undisputed facts in the case, in submitting to the jury the question whether or not the checks were collected by the Riggs National Bank, or by any subsequent indorsees as agents of Burton.

Exchange Nat. Bank v. Third Nat. Bank, 112 U. S. 276, 28 L. ed. 722, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141; Tradesman's Nat. Bank v. Third Nat.

Bank, 112 U. S. 293, 28 L. ed. 728, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 149.

Solicitor General Hoyt argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

The inquiry pending before the Postoffice Department was a matter or thing in which the United States was "interested," within the purview of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 1782 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1212).

United States v. Bunting, 82 Fed. 883; United States v. Bates, Sup. Ct. D. C. 18 Rep. Civ. Serv. Com. 141; Palmer v. Colladay, 18 App. D. C. 426; Tyner v. United States, 23 App. D. C. 324; Curley v. United States, 130 Fed. 1; McGregor v. United States, 134 Fed. 187.

It is impossible to sustain the view that the checks, the ordinary cash and demand items of banking transactions, were not actually and legally paid to Burton, the payee upon their face, at St. Louis and by the banking institution located there upon which they were drawn.

Ward v. Smith, 7 Wall. 447, 19 L. ed. 207; Dodge v. Freedman's Sav. & T. Co. 93 U. S. 379, 23 L. ed. 920; Evansville Bank v. German American Bank (Old Nat. Bank v. German American Nat. Bank) 155 U. S. 556, 39 L. ed. 259, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 221; Scott v. Ocean Bank, 23 N. Y. 289.

A criminal law, as much as any other, must be interpreted according to the fair and reasonable import of its words. The intent must be found in the language. To determine that a case is within the intention of a statute, its language must authorize us to say so.

United States v. Wiltberger, 5 Wheat. 76, 5 L. ed. 37.

But though penal laws are to be construed strictly, yet the intention of the legislature must govern in the construction of penal as well as other statutes; and they are not to be construed so strictly as to defeat the obvious intention of the legislature.

United States v. Lacher, 134 U. S. 624, 33 L. ed. 1080, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 625.

There is a hint to be borrowed here from customs law, in which frequently there is an enumeration followed by an omnibus clause, and where the word "including" is sometimes used to specify particularly that which belongs to the genus, and is sometimes used to add to the general class a species which does not naturally belong to it.

Hiller v. United States, 45 C. C. A. 229, 106 Fed. 74; Re Merchandise, 75 Fed. 998; Hills Bros. Co. v. United States, 39 C. C. A. 500, 99 Fed. 264.

Mr. Justice Peckham, after making the foregoing statement of facts, delivered the opinion of the court:

Counsel for defendant base their right to obtain a direct review by this court of the judgment of conviction in the district court of Missouri upon the contention that the case involves the construction and application of the Constitution of the United States in several particulars. They insist that under article 3, § 2, of the Constitution, and also under the 6th Amendment of the same, the defendant was entitled to be tried by a jury of the state or district in which the crime alleged against him in the indictment was committed. This question arises by reason of those counts of the indictment which charge the receipt by defendant of various checks therein set forth, at St. Louis, in the state of Missouri, while the evidence in the case shows, without contradiction, that the checks were received in the city of Washington, D. C., and payment thereof made to defendant by one of the banks of that city. Counsel contended that if any crime were committed by the receipt of these checks and the payment thereof to the defendant (which is denied), that crime was committed in Washington, and not in Missouri, and that it did not come within § 731 of the Revised Statutes of the United States (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 585), providing *that when an offense against the [295] United States is begun in one judicial circuit, and completed in another, it shall be deemed to have been committed in either, and may be dealt with, etc., in either district, in the same manner as if it had been actually and wholly committed therein. Counsel for defendant also contend that the case involves the construction and application of § 6 of article 1 of the Constitution of the United States, providing that senators and representatives shall, in all cases except treason, felony; and breach of the peace, be privileged from arrest during their attendance at the sessions of their respective houses, and in going to and returning from the same. These questions were raised in the court below. Whether the defendant waived his alleged privilege of freedom from arrest as senator would probably depend upon the question whether the offense charged was in substance a felony, and if so, was that privilege a personal one only, and not given for the purpose of always securing the representation of a state in the Senate of the United States. However that may be, the question is not frivolous, and in such case the statute grants to this court jurisdiction to issue the writ of error directly to the district court, and then to decide the case without being restricted to the constitutional question. Horner v. United States, 143 U. S. 570, 36 L. ed. 266, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 522. It is not the habit of the court to decide questions of a constitutional nature unless absolutely necessary to a decision of the case. Having jurisdiction to decide all questions in the case on this writ of error, we deny the motion for a certiorari, and proceed to an examination of the record.

First. The question of the construction of the statute upon which this indictment was framed is the first to arise. Upon that question a majority of the court (Mr. Justice Harlan, Mr. Justice Brown, Mr. Justice McKenna, Mr. Justice Holmes, and Mr. Justice Day, concurring) are of opinion that the facts alleged in the indictment show a case that is covered by the provisions of the statute, while the Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Brewer, Mr. Justice White, and the [296]writer of this opinion *dissent from that view, and are of opinion that the statute does not cover the case as alleged in the indictment.

Second. Assuming that the statute applies to the facts stated in the indictment, a further question arises upon the general merits of the case, whether there was sufficient evidence of guilt to be submitted to the jury, and a majority of the court (the same justices concurring) are of opinion that there was, or are not prepared to say there was not, and the same minority dissent from that view, and are of opinion that there was no evidence whatever upon which to found a verdict of conviction.

There are, however, other questions remaining, which we now proceed to discuss on the theory that the statute covers the case.

Third. The sixth, seventh, eighth, and ninth counts of the indictment aver the receipt by the defendant of the different checks described, at the city of St. Louis, in the state of Missouri, and the payment of the money thereon to the defendant at St. Louis, in that state, as compensation for services theretofore performed by the defendant for the Rialto Company. It may be assumed that, on the facts averred in these various counts in the indictment upon the checks, each of them was good. It turned out, however, on the trial that these averments of the place where the different checks were received and paid were not true; but, on the contrary, the evidence was wholly undisputed that each of them was received by the defendant in the city of Washington, D. C., and by him there indorsed and deposited with the Riggs National Bank, of Washington, D. C., and that they were afterwards duly paid by the Commonwealth Trust Company, at St. Louis, Missouri; that the amount of each was in each instance immediately credited by the Riggs National Bank to the account of the defendant with the bank, and the cashier testified that the defendant had the right, immediately after the credit was made, to draw out the whole, or any portion thereof, without waiting for the payment of the check at St. Louis.

*There was no oral or special agreement[297] made between the defendant and the bank at the time when any one of the checks was deposited and credit given for the amount thereof. The defendant had an account with the bank, took each check when it arrived, went to the bank, indorsed the check, which was payable to his order, and the bank took the check, placed the amount thereof to the credit of the defendant's account, and nothing further was said in regard to the matter. In other words, it was the ordinary case of the transfer or sale of the check by the defendant, and the purchase of it by the bank, and upon its delivery to the bank, under the circumstances stated, the title to the check passed to the bank, and it became the owner thereof. It was in no sense the agent of the defendant for the purpose of collecting the amount of the check from the trust company upon which it was drawn. From the time of the delivery of the check by the defendant to the bank, it became the owner of the check; it could have torn it up or thrown it in the fire or made any other use or disposition of it which it chose, and no right of defendant would have been infringed. The testimony of Mr. Brice, the cashier of the Riggs National Bank, as to the custom of the bank when a check was not paid, of charging it up against the depositor's account, did not in the least vary the legal effect of the transaction; it was simply a method pursued by the bank of exacting payment from the indorser of the check, and nothing more. There was nothing whatever in the evidence showing any agreement or understanding as to the effect of the transaction between the parties,—the defendant and the bank,—making it other than such as the law would imply from the facts already stated. The forwarding of the check "for collection," as stated by Mr. Brice, was not a collection for defendant by the bank as his agent. It was sent forward to be paid, and the Riggs bank was its owner when sent. With reference to the jurisdiction of the court over the offense described in the sixth and following counts in the indictment, the court held that if the checks were actually received by the defendant in Washington, and *the money[298] paid to him by the bank in that city, and the title and ownership of the checks passed to the bank at that time, the court in Missouri had no jurisdiction to try the offenses set forth in those counts of the indictment already referred to. There was no question that such was the fact, and it was error to submit the matter to the jury to find some other fact not supported by any evidence. The court said:

"The government claims that the compensation referred to in this count was sent to the accused by the Rialto Grain & Securities Company, in the form of a check, drawn by it on the Commonwealth Trust Company, payable to the order of the accused, by mail; that he received the check representing this compensation at Washington, in the District of Columbia, and then and there indorsed the check, deposited it to his own credit in the Riggs National Bank, at Washington; that the last-mentioned bank afterwards forwarded the check by and through its correspondents to St. Louis for payment by the Commonwealth Trust Company, upon which it was drawn, and that the Riggs bank and its correspondents in all this matter became and were the agents of the accused for securing this money, and when the money called for by the check was finally paid at St. Louis, Missouri, by the trust company on which it was drawn, it amounted to a payment of that money to the accused at St. Louis, Missouri. This suggests an important feature of the case, for the reason that, unless it be true that the accused received the money represented by and paid on this check at St. Louis, this court would have no jurisdiction to try the case.

"The Constitution of the United States confers upon the accused in every criminal case the right to be tried by an impartial jury of a state and district where the crime shall have been committed.

"The receipt of the money is the gist of the crime charged against the accused, and if he did not receive it in this district, in fact in St. Louis, where he is charged to have received it, he is not amenable to the law in this district, and cannot be convicted *in this court on this sixth count. Accordingly, it becomes your duty to ascertain and find from the evidence, what were the true relations between the accused and the Washington bank when he deposited the check in question with that bank, and what was the understanding between them as to their respective rights in relation to the check and the proceeds thereof. On this question the court charges you as follows:

"If it was the intent and understanding of the Washington bank and the accused, at the time the latter deposited the check in question with the former, that the bank should forward the same in the usual course, by and through its correspondents to St. Louis, for payment, and that in so doing it and its correspondents should act only as the agent of the accused for that purpose, then the final payment by the Commonwealth Trust Company, at St. Louis, of the check to the correspondents of the Washington bank, would amount in law to a payment in St. Louis, as charged in the sixth count, of the amount of the check to the accused. If, on the contrary, it was the understanding and intent of the Washington bank and the accused at the time the latter deposited the check in question with the former that the bank should become the purchaser of the check, and should thereafter be the absolute owner thereof, and not act as just indicated, as the agent of the accused in the collection of the check, then the payment at St. Louis by the Commonwealth Trust Company would amount in law to a payment to the Washington bank, and not to the accused. In the latter event no crime would have been committed by the accused in this district, by reason of the check referred to in the sixth count of the indictment.

"In order to find the accused guilty on the sixth count, you must find from the evidence, by the same measure of proof as is required in all criminal cases, that the check referred to in the sixth count was deposited by the accused in the Washington bank for collection, and that the bank was to act in collecting the same, as the agent of the accused, and not as the owner of the check in question.

*"In determining this issue, you are at [300] liberty to and should consider all the evidence adduced; the actual transaction as it occurred at the Riggs bank, where the check was deposited, the check itself, and all its indorsements, the rights and privileges which were immediately accorded the accused upon making the deposit, the actual conduct and purpose of the Riggs bank in forwarding the check to St. Louis for payment, the customary conduct and usage of that bank and all banks in Washington at the time, so far as shown by the proof. And if, from all these facts and all other facts disclosed by the proof, you find that the check in question was in fact deposited by the accused, with the intent and knowledge on his part, as well as on the part of the bank itself, that it should be forwarded to St. Louis for collection for account of the accused, the bank and its correspondents acting as agents for the accused to make such collection, you should find that when the same was actually paid to the last indorser on the check at St. Louis by the trust company upon which it was drawn, it was, in contemplation of law, paid to the accused himself.

"If, on the contrary, you find from the evidence that the accused and the Riggs bank, at the time of the deposit of the check in question, understood and intended that the bank should become the purchaser of the check, and be its absolute owner, then the subsequent forwarding of it to St. Louis for payment was the act of the bank itself, and the final payment of the check by the trust company at St. Louis was a payment, not to the accused, but to the bank; and if such is the fact your verdict on the sixth count must be not guilty."

A careful scrutiny of the evidence with relation to this charge to the jury shows that there was no foundation for submitting to the jury the question of what was the understanding (other than such as arose from the transaction itself, as shown by uncontradicted evidence) between the defendant and the bank at the time when these various checks were deposited with the bank, and their proceeds placed to the credit of the defendant. There was no agreement [301] or understanding of any kind other *than such as the law makes from the transaction detailed, which was itself proved by uncontradicted evidence offered by the government itself. In the absence of any special agreement that the effect of the transaction shall be otherwise (and none can be asserted here), there is no doubt that its legal effect is a change of ownership of the paper, and that the subsequent action of the bank in taking steps to obtain payment for itself of the paper which it had purchased can in no sense be said to be the action of an agent for its principal, but the act of an owner in regard to its own property. The learned judge, in his charge to the jury, did not, indeed, deny the general truth of this proposition, but he left it to the jury to determine whether there was not an agreement or understanding made or arrived at by the parties at the time the checks were taken by the defendant to the bank, which altered the legal effect of the transaction actually proved. This, as we have said, there was not the slightest evidence of, and it was error to submit that question to the jury.

The general transaction between the bank and a customer in the way of deposits to a customer's credit, and drawing against the account by the customer, constitute the relation of creditor and debtor. As is said by Mr. Justice Davis, in delivering the opinion of the court in National Bank of the Republic v. Millard, 10 Wall. 152, 19 L. ed. 897, in speaking of this relationship (page 155, L. ed. p. 899):

"It is an important part of the business of banking to receive deposits; but when they are received, unless there are stipulations to the contrary, they belong to the bank, become part of its general funds, and can be loaned by it as other moneys. The banker is accountable for the deposits which he receives as a debtor, and he agrees to discharge these debts by honoring the checks which the depositor shall, from time to time, draw on him. The contract between the parties is purely a legal one, and has nothing of the nature of a trust in it. This subject was fully discussed by Lords Cottenham, Brougham, Lyndhurst, and Campbell in the House of Lords in the case of Foley* [302] v. Hill, 2 H. L. Cas. 28, and they all concurred in the opinion that the relation between a banker and customer, who pays money into the bank, or to whose credit money is placed there, is the ordinary relation of debtor and creditor, and does not partake of a fiduciary character, and the great weight of American authorities is to the same effect."

When a check is taken to a bank, and the bank receives it and places the amount to the credit of a customer, the relation of creditor and debtor between them subsists, and it is not that of principal and agent. This principle is held in Thompson v. Riggs, 5 Wall. 663, 18 L. ed. 704, and also in Marine Bank v. Fulton Bank, 2 Wall. 252, 17 L. ed. 785. See also Scammon v. Kimball, 92 U. S. 362, 369, 23 L. ed. 483, 485; Davis v. Elmira Sav. Bank, 161 U. S. 275, 288, 40 L. ed. 700, 702, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 502.

The case of Cragie v. Hadley, 99 N. Y. 131, 52 Am. Rep. 9, 1 N. E. 537, contains a statement of the rule as follows, per Andrews, Chief Judge:

"The general doctrine that upon a deposit made by a customer, in a bank, in the ordinary course of business, of money, or of drafts or checks received and credited as money, the title to the money, or to the drafts or checks, is immediately vested in, and becomes the property of, the bank, is not open to question. Commercial Bank v. Hughes, 17 Wend. 94; Metropolitan Nat. Bank v. Loyd, 90 N. Y. 530. The transaction, in legal effect, is a transfer of the money, or drafts, or checks, as the case may be, by the customer to the bank, upon an implied contract on the part of the latter to repay the amount of the deposit upon the checks of the depositor. The bank acquires title to the money, drafts, or checks on an implied agreement to pay an equivalent consideration when called upon by the depositor in the usual course of business."

In Metropolitan Nat. Bank v. Loyd, 90 N. Y. 530, one of the cases referred to by Judge Andrews, Judge Danforth, in speaking of the effect of placing a check to the credit of a depositor in his account with the bank, said that:

"The title passed to the bank, and they [the checks] were not again subject to his control. . . . Scott v. Ocean Bank, *23 [303]

N. Y. 289 [and other cases cited in the opinion].

"It is true no express agreement was made, transferring the check for so much money, but it was delivered to the bank, and accepted by it, and the bank gave Murray credit for the amount, and he accepted it. That was enough. The property in the check passed from Murray, and vested in the bank. He was entitled to draw the money so credited to him, for, as to it, the relation of debtor and creditor was formed, and the right of Murray to command payment at once was of the very nature and essence of the transaction. On the other hand, the bank, as owner of the check, could confer a perfect title upon its transferee, and, therefore, when, by its directions, the plaintiff received and gave credit for it upon account, it became its owner, and entitled to the money which it represented. . . . If, as the appellant insists, the check had been deposited for a specific purpose,—for collection,—the property would have remained in the depositor; but there is no evidence upon which such fact could be established, nor is it consistent with the dealings between the parties, or with any of the admitted circumstances.

"These show that it was the intention of both parties to make the transfer of the check absolute, and not merely to enable the bank to receive the money upon it as Murray's agent."

The same principle is set forth in Taft v. Quinsigamond Nat. Bank, 172 Mass. 363, 52 N. E. 387. In that case the court said: "So when, without more, a bank receives upon deposit a check indorsed without restriction, and gives credit for it to the depositor as cash in a drawing account, the form of the transaction is consistent with and indicates a sale, in which, as with money so deposited, the check becomes the absolute property of the banker."

In the case at bar the proof was not disputed. The checks were passed to the credit of defendant unconditionally, and without any special understanding. The custom of [304]the bank *to forward such checks for collection is a plain custom to forward for collection for itself. The only liability of defendant was on his indorsement. All this made a payment at Washington, and as a result there was a total lack of evidence to sustain the sixth, seventh, eighth, and ninth counts of the indictment. The court should have, therefore, directed a verdict of not guilty on those counts.

This is not a case of the commencement of a crime in one district and its completion in another, so that, under the statute, the court in either district has jurisdiction.

Rev. Stat. § 731, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 585. There was no beginning of the offense in Missouri. The payment of the money was in Washington, and there was no commencement of that offense when the officer of the Rialto Company sent the checks from St. Louis to defendant. The latter did not thereby begin an offense in Missouri.

Fourth. The judgment must also be reversed because of the error in the refusal of the court to charge as requested when the jury came into court and announced an inability to agree. Previous to the retirement of the jury the defendant's counsel submitted to the court certain requests to charge the jury,—twelve in all. Those numbered seven, ten, and eleven were refused. Numbers ten and eleven referred to the checks and the effect of the transaction of depositing them with the Riggs bank. The other instructions referred to many of the questions arising in the case, and material upon the subject of the trial then before the court. After the court had concluded his main charge to the jury, he added that he had been "asked by counsel for the defendant to give certain declarations here, and while I think they have, in the main, been covered by the charge, yet I will give them to you." (They were the instructions requested by defendant, and above described.) "These are abstract propositions of law, which I give in connection with the charge, as perhaps more fully amplifying it. I am willing to give them, inasmuch as they are asked, and they contain general propositions of law." The jury then retired, *and after [305] being out from Saturday evening at 8 o'clock until the following Monday morning at 10 o'clock, without agreeing, returned into court, and were charged by the court in relation to their duty as jurors. In the course of that charge the court said to the jury as follows:

"I gather from this letter, Mr. Foreman, what I may be incorrect about. I would like to ask the foreman of the jury how you are divided. I do not want to know how many stand for conviction, or how many for acquittal, but to know the number who stand the one way and the number who stand another way. I would like the statement from the foreman.

"The Foreman: Eleven to one.

"The Court: The jury stand eleven to one. I gather that from the communication. In the light of that fact I feel constrained to make a statement to you, and in making it to use the language of the Supreme Court of the United States as found in Allen v. United States." 164 U. S. 492, 41 L. ed. 528, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154.

The court then charged the jury in relation to its duty to agree if possible, and directed that the jury should, in the light of the comments of the court then made, retire and make a serious attempt to arrive at a verdict in the case. Counsel for the defendant then asked the court to indicate to the jury that the requests to charge theretofore asked by the defendant, and which were given by the court, constitute as much a part—

"The Court: If you will wait a moment the jury may retire.

"Mr. Krum: I beg your Honor to state to the jury—

"The Court: Stop a moment, and then I will hear your argument. I will, after the jury retire, hear counsel if they have anything to say, or any exceptions they may wish to take to the charge. The court here handed the foreman of the jury the charge and instructions heretofore referred to, and directed the jury to retire for further consideration of their verdict.

"Mr. Lehmann: I do not believe that the requests to charge, in the manner made by defendant, and given by the court to the jury, were given as they should have been, the suggestions being made by the court at the time, that they were mere abstract statements, which had the effect to deprive them of something of their force, when they were [306] not intended as mere abstractions, *and were believed by counsel to have specific reference to the case; and those instructions as well as others ought to be called to the attention of the jury. We must except here as earnestly as it is in our power to do, against the charge of the court made now.

"The Court: If you except, I will allow the exception.

"Mr. Krum: What I desire to do in the presence of the jury was to ask your Honor to indicate to the jury, as it was evident the jury did not understand, that it was a fact that the requests to charge which were recognized by the court, acquiesced in by the court, and given by the court, were just as much a part of your Honor's charge as that which the court read as emanating from the court itself.

"The Court: I did tell the jury so on Saturday.

"Mr. Krum: I submit it is apparent that they do not understand that they are just as much to be controlled by that part of the instructions as any other part. That is evident from the inquiry made.

"The Court: The court has endeavored to answer the only request made by the jury, and that is all I think should be done."

We think the court should have instructed the jury as requested by counsel for the defendant, and that its refusal to do so was error. Here was a case of very great doubt in the minds of some of the jury. It had deliberated for more than thirty-six hours, and been unable to agree upon a verdict. The requests to charge originally made by counsel for defendant had, at that time, been received as abstract propositions of law, which the court gave in connection with the charge, saying that he was willing to give them inasmuch as they were asked, and as they contained general propositions of law. It does not appear from the bill of exceptions that defendant's counsel then excepted to those remarks by the court, but when the jury subsequently returned into court, and announced their *inability to [307] agree, counsel for defendant immediately saw the extreme importance of having the requests to charge made to the court regarded by the jury, not as abstract or general propositions of law, but as requests which affected the case then on trial with reference to the facts proved in the case; and so, before the jury again retired, they commenced to propound their requests upon the subject to the court, but the court, before listening to them, instructed the jury to retire, and then followed the colloquy above set forth between court and counsel.

Balanced as the case was in the minds of some of the jurors, doubts existing as to the defendant's guilt in the mind of at least one, it was a case where the most extreme care and caution were necessary in order that the legal rights of the defendant should be preserved. Considering the attitude of the case as it existed when the jury returned into court for further instructions, we think the defendant was entitled, as matter of legal right, to the charge asked for in regard to the previous requests to charge, which had been granted by the court under the circumstances stated, and it was not a matter of discretion whether the jury should, or should not, be charged as to the character of those requests. A slight thing may have turned the balance against the accused under the circumstances shown by the record, and he ought not to have longer remained burdened with the characterization of his requests to charge, made by the court, and when he asked for the assertion by the court of the materiality and validity of those requests which had already been made, the court ought to have granted the request.

We must say in addition, that a practice ought not to grow up of inquiring of a jury, when brought into court because unable to agree, how the jury is divided; not meaning by such question, how many stand for conviction or how many stand for acquittal, but meaning the proportion of the division, not which way the division may be. Such a practice is not to be commended, because [308] we cannot see how it may be material *for the court to understand the proportion of division of opinion among the jury. All that the judge said in regard to the propriety and duty of the jury to fairly and honestly endeavor to agree could have been said without asking for the fact as to the proportion of their division; and we do not think that the proper administration of the law requires such knowledge or permits such a question on the part of the presiding judge. Cases may easily be imagined where a practice of this kind might lead to improper influences, and for this reason it ought not to obtain.

Our conclusion is, that the judgment must be reversed and the cause remanded to the District Court of Missouri, with directions to grant a new trial.

So ordered.

Mr. Justice Harlan, dissenting:

I dissent from so much of the opinion and judgment as holds that the offenses charged against the defendant, based on the checks made at St. Louis, and mentioned in the sixth, seventh, eighth, and ninth counts, were committed in this district, where the checks were received by him, and not at St. Louis, where they were paid by the bank on which they were drawn for his benefit. I am of opinion that the Riggs National Bank, upon receiving the checks from the accused, became, in every substantial sense, his agent and representative to present the checks and receive the proceeds thereof; in which case, the offense of receiving, by means of those checks, compensation for services rendered in violation of the statute, was committed at St. Louis, not at Washington. In a strict sense, no title or ownership of the checks passed to the Riggs National Bank, as in the case of an unconditional sale, consummated by actual delivery, of tangible, personal property, for the recovery of the possession of which the owner could, of right, maintain an action in his own name; for, if the St. Louis bank on which the checks were drawn had refused to accept or honor [309] them, no *action on the checks, or at all, could have been maintained against it by the Riggs National Bank. National Bank of the Republic v. Millard, 10 Wall. 152, 156, 19 L. ed. 897, 899; First Nat. Bank v. Whitman, 94 U. S. 343, 344, 24 L. ed. 229, 230; St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Johnston, 133 U. S. 566, 574, 33 L. ed. 683, 685, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 390; Fourth Street Nat. Bank v.

196 U. S.

Yardley, 165 U. S. 634, 643, 41 L. ed. 855, 861, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 439. The checks were made at St. Louis, and sent by mail from that city to the accused, in discharge of an obligation assumed by his client at that city, and, as between him and his client, in the absence of any special agreement on the subject, compensation for services rendered by him before the Department could only be deemed to have been really made when the checks were paid by the bank on which they were directly drawn. It is true that when the Riggs National Bank received the checks, and credited the account of the accused on its books with the amount thereof, there arose, as between that bank and him, only the relation of debtor and creditor. But when his account at that bank was so credited, he became liable, by implied contract,—if the St. Louis bank failed to accept or pay the check when presented,—to pay back to the bank an amount equal to the credit he received on the books of the Riggs National Bank. If the St. Louis bank had refused to accept or pay the checks when presented, and if the accused had then sued his client on its original contract with him, the latter could not have resisted recovery upon the ground that he received compensation by having his account at the Washington bank credited with the amount of the checks. Suppose the accused had been indicted in Washington on the day after the checks were indorsed to the Riggs National Bank, and the checks were not honored or paid when presented at the St. Louis bank—could he, in that case, have been convicted under the statute by proof that he received such credit at the former bank for the amount of the checks? Clearly not. Yet he could have been, if it be true that he was compensated, within the meaning of the statute, when his account with the Riggs National Bank was credited with the amount of the checks. As between the accused and his client, he was not, in any true *sense, compensated for the services al-[310] leged to have been rendered in violation of the statute, until, by payment of the checks by the St. Louis bank, he was relieved of all liability to the Riggs National Bank, arising from his indorsing the checks to it. The accused is to be regarded as having received, at St. Louis, compensation for his services, because the check made in his behalf was paid there to his representative. The offense was, therefore, consummated at that city, and the Federal court at St. Louis had jurisdiction.

Nor, in my opinion, does the record show any error, in respect of instructions, that was to the substantial prejudice of the accused; no error for which the judgment should be reversed.

It seems to me that in reversing the judgment upon the grounds stated in the opinion the court has sacrificed substance to mere form. The result, I submit, well illustrates the familiar maxim: Qui hæret in litera hæret in cortice.

UNITED STATES, Appt.,

v.

HARVEY STEEL COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 310-319.)

Contracts—liability under, for royalties for use of patented process—estoppel—invalidity of patent as defense—failure to use patent.

1. The alleged invalidity of the patent for the Harvey process of treating armor plate cannot be set up by the United States as a defense to a suit for the royalties due under a contract for the use of the process, which provided that the payment of royalties was to cease "in case it should at any time be judicially decided" that the patent was invalid.
2. The defense that the United States has not used the patent for the Harvey process of treating armor plate, if such patent be properly construed, is not available in a suit for the royalties due under a contract for the use of the process "known as the Harvey process," although the process is also identified in the contract as a patented one, where it is not denied that the United States has used the process communicated to it under the contract, which is known in common speech as the "Harvey process."

[No. 275.]

Argued January 3, 4, 1905. Decided January 16, 1905.

APPPEAL from the Court of Claims to review a judgment awarding royalties under a contract for the use by the United States of the Harvey process of treating armor plate. Affirmed.

See same case below, 38 Ct. Cl. 662.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Assistant Attorney General Pradt argued the cause and filed a brief for appellant.

Messrs. James Russell Soley and Fred-eric H. Betts argued the cause and filed a brief for appellee.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a claim for royalties upon a contract made between the parties to the suit under the following circumstances: The Harvey Steel Company is the owner of a patent, numbered 460,262, for a process for hardening armor plates 'and for armor plates. After careful experiments, made by the Navy Department before the patent was granted, a contract was made on March 21, 1892, the material elements of which are these: It recited that the company was the owner of the patented rights to a process "known as the 'Harvey Process' for the treatment of armor plate for use in the construction of vessels;" an agreement that armor plate "treated under the said 'Harvey process'" shall be applied to certain vessels; the previous giving of an option to the Navy Department "of purchasing the right to use and employ the 'Harvey process' for treating armor plates, as follows: 'We hereby agree to give to the Navy Department an option for the purchase of the application of the Harvey process for treating armor plates, which was tested at the Naval Ordnance Proving Ground, Annapolis, Maryland, February 14, 1891,'" on terms set forth, one of which *was that Harvey, the in-[314] ventor, should furnish all details in his possession, or which he might develop in the perfection of his methods; the acceptance of the offer by the Navy Department; and an agreement by the United States to pay the expense of applying "the said process," etc. The contract then went on to agree that the United States, upon the terms stated, might use "the hereinbefore-mentioned process known as the 'Harvey process,'" gave the company a royalty of one half of one cent a pound up to $75,000, when the royalty was to cease, and stated other terms.

This contract had conditions for further tests, etc. Numerous further experiments were made, and on October 8, 1892, the company was informed by letter that "the Harvey process for armor plate has been definitely adopted by the Navy Department." In pursuance of the offer mentioned in the contract, the Navy Department required and received from Harvey a revelation of the secret process and improvements, and thereafter, on April 12, 1893, the parties made a new contract upon which this suit is brought. This recited, as before, that the company was owner of the patented rights to a process "known as the Harvey process," and referred to the patent by number and date. It then recited the making of the agreement of March 21, 1892, "whereby the party of the first part granted to the party of the second part the right to use and employ the Harvey process aforesaid," etc. It then canceled the old contract, and agreed that, in consideration of $96,056.46 royalty, the United States might use "the aforesaid Harvey process" for all naval vessels authorized by Congress up to and including July 19, 1892, and further, that it might use the "aforesaid Harvey process" upon vessels authorized after that date, "paying therefor" a half a cent a pound. The company covenanted to hold the United States harmless from further claims, and from demands on account of alleged infringement of "patented rights appertaining to said process;" to furnish full information regarding the composition and application of the compounds employed in the Harvey process, *and all improvements which it might make upon "said process as covered by the aforesaid letters patent," and that the United States might adopt and use such improvements. Finally, it was agreed that "in case it should at any time be judicially decided that the party of the first part is not legally entitled, under the letters patent aforesaid, to own and control the exclusive right to the use and employment of said process, and the decrementally hardened armor plates produced thereunder, as set forth in the letters patent aforesaid, then the payment of royalty under the terms of this agreement shall cease, and all sums of money due the party of the first part from the party of the second part, as royalty for the use and employment of said process and armor plates, as aforesaid, shall become the property of the party of the second part."

The United States has built battle ships armored by the Harvey process communicated to it, and, subject to the questions which will be mentioned, by the terms of the contract there was due a royalty of $60,-806.45, to which sum the court of claims found the claimant entitled. 38 Ct. Cl. 662. It never has been judicially decided that the claimant has not the rights mentioned in the last-quoted clause of the contract. The United States asked additional findings, which, it now contends, would establish that the patent was invalid, or, if valid, valid only if restricted to the use of a heat above 3100° Fahrenheit, in which case the patent was not used by the United States. These findings were refused as immaterial and the United States appealed. The main question is whether, under the last-quoted clause of the contract, the United States can set up the invalidity of the patent in this suit. It is argued also that the United States ought to have been allowed to show that it had not used the patent, properly construed, although it is not denied that it has used the process communicated to it and known in common speech as the Harvey process.

It is not argued that there was a technical entire failure of consideration. The claimant was under continuing obligations, [316] *which it is not suggested that it did not perform or is not still performing, and one of which, the imparting of its secret information and improvements, it had performed under the original agreement, out of which the last contract sprang. The argument is put mainly on the construction of the clause quoted, coupled with the further argument that the United States ought not to be estopped, as licensee, to deny the validity of the patent, because it is not a vendor, but simply a user, of the patented article, and therefore has not enjoyed the advantage of a practical monopoly, as a seller might have enjoyed it even if the patent turned out to be bad. This distinction between sale and use, even for a noncompetitive purpose, does not impress us. So far as the practical advantage secured is matter for consideration, whether a thing made under a patent supposed to be valid is used or sold, it equally may be assumed that the thing would not have been used or sold but for the license from the patentee. We regard the clause in the contract as the measure of the appellant's rights.

The words of the condition on which the payment of royalty was to cease, taken in their natural and literal sense, do not mean what the government says. A plea of that condition, to satisfy the words "in case it should at any time be judicially decided" that the patent was bad, would have to be that it had been decided to that effect. It would not be enough to say that the defendant thought the patent bad, and would like to have the court decide so now. We see no reason to depart from the literal meaning of the words. It is argued that, so construed, they are very little good to the United States, since private persons would not use the armor plates, and the more the United States used them the larger would be the royalties which the company received, so that it would have no motive, even if it had a right, to sue the makers of the plate. It is answered that armor was made for foreign governments, and that the makers were sued by the claimants in good faith, although, as it turned out, the final decrees were entered by consent. *And it is [317] argued on the other hand that the government's construction would put the claimants at a great disadvantage, and would be giving up all benefit of the patent at the moment it was issued. We do not amplify the considerations of this sort on one side or the other. They are too uncertain to have much weight. The truth seems to be that the proviso is a more or less well-known and conventional one in licenses (Charter Gas Engine Co. v. Charter, 47 Ill. App. 36, 51), not a special contrivance for the special case, and that fact alone is enough to invalidate attempts to twist the meaning of the words to the interest of either side. The proviso was inserted, no doubt, on the assumption that a licensee, when sued for royalties, is estopped to deny the validity of the patent which he has been using, and to give him the benefit of litigation by or against third persons, notwithstanding that rule.

We have somewhat more difficulty with the other question mentioned. It is argued that the agreement was only to pay for the use of the process covered by the patent named, and that if the meaning of the parties was to cover anything broader than the patent, even what was known in their speech as the Harvey process, that meaning could be imported into the contract only by reformation, not by construction of the contract as it stands. But we are of opinion that this defense also must fail. In the first place, it is not fully open on the record. The findings asked had a different bearing. All that were asked might have been made without necessitating a judgment for the United States as matter of law, and the court believed that the difference between patent and process was trivial. But we should hesitate to admit the defense in any event. The argument is that at the time of the contract it was supposed that the heat required for the process was greater than that actually used, that the patent was valid only for a process with the greater heat, and that the contract covers no more than the patent. But the fact that the parties assumed that the process used and intended to be used was covered by the patent works both ways. It shows that [318] they thought *and meant that the agreement covered, and should cover, the process actually used. We think that this can be gathered from the agreement itself, apart from the mere supposition of the parties. The contract dealt with a process "known as the Harvey process." It imported the speech of the parties and the common speech of the time into the description of the subject-matter. The words "Harvey process" commonly are put in quotation marks in the first contract, thus emphasizing the adoption of common speech. They mean the process actually used. The contract states that it is dealing with the same thing that had been the subject of the former agreement. That agreement further identified that subject as a process which was tested at the Naval Ordnance Proving Ground. It also identified it, it is true, as a patented process; but, if the incompatibility of the two marks is more than trivial, as it was regarded by the court which found the facts with which we have to deal, the identification by personal familiarity and by common speech is more pungent and immediate than that by reference to a document couched in technical terms, which the very argument for the United States declares not to have been understood. It is like a reference to monuments in a deed. As we have said, this identification by a personal experiment and by common speech is carried forward into the contract in suit. The latter contract manifests on its face that it is dealing with a process actually in use, which requires the communication of practical knowledge, and which further experience may improve.

We have not thought it useful to do more than indicate the line of thought which leads us to the conclusion that the claimant must prevail. We have confined ourselves to the dry point of the law. It might have been enough to say even less, and to affirm the judgment on the ground that the findings asked and refused, so far as they were not refused because not proved, were only grounds for further inferences, not a special verdict establishing the defense as matter of law. But the fuller the statement should be made, the more fully it would *appear that the United States was [319] dealing with a matter upon which it had all the knowledge that any one had, that it was contracting for the use of a process which, however much it now may be impugned, the United States would not have used when it did but for the communications of the claimant, and that it was contracting for the process which it actually used,—a process which has revolutionized the naval armor of the world.

Judgment affirmed.

JOHN ROONEY, Plff. in Err.,
v.

STATE OF NORTH DAKOTA.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 319-327.)

Constitutional law — ex post facto laws — changes in execution of death sentence.

The substitution in cases of convictions of murder in the first degree, made by N. D. act March 9, 1903, of close confinement in the penitentiary for not less than six nor more than nine months after judgment and before execution of the death penalty, in lieu of confinement in the county jail for not less than three nor more than six months, and the change of the place of execution from the county jail to the penitentiary, do not render the statute ex post facto as applied to a person convicted of that crime before its passage, since it did not alter the existing situation to the material disadvantage of the criminal.

NOTE.—As to what laws are ex post facto—see notes to State v. Cooler, 3 L. R. A. 181; Anderson v. O'Donnell, 1 L. R. A. 632; Calder v. Bull, 1 L. ed. U. S. 648; Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 L. ed. U. S. 529; Re Medley, 33 L. ed. U. S. 835; Otoe County v. Baldwin, 28 L. ed. U. S. 331; and Barnitz v. Beverly, 41 L. ed. U. S. 94.

[No. 123.]

Argued January 12, 1905. Decided January 23, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of North Dakota to review a judgment which affirmed a conviction of murder in the first degree in the District Court of Cass County in that State. Affirmed.

See same case below, 12 N. D. 144, 95 N. W. 513.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. B. F. Spalding argued the cause, and, with Mr. Seth Newman, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

No one can be criminally punished in this country except according to the law prescribed for his government by the sovereign authority before the imputed offense was committed, or by some law passed afterwards by which the punishment is not increased.

Re Medley, 134 U. S. 160, 33 L. ed. 835, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 384.

If the imprisonment under the later statute was to be in the county jail, as under the earlier, the statute would be ex post facto because the punishment is increased by the three months' added imprisonment.

People v. McNulty (Cal.) 28 Pac. 816.

Imprisonment in the penitentiary, as compared with imprisonment in the county jail, is an increased and greater punishment.

Re Medley, 134 U. S. 160, 33 L. ed. 835, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 384.

Mr. Emerson Hall Smith argued the cause, and, with Mr. W. H. Barnett, filed a brief for defendant in error:

In order for a law to be ex post facto it must be such a one as creates or aggravates the crime, or increases the punishment, or changes the rule of evidence for the purposes of conviction.

Calder v. Bull, 3 Dall. 386, 391, 1 L. ed. 648, 650; Cooley, Const. Lim. 322; United States v. Hall, 2 Wash. C. C. 366, Fed. Cas. No. 15,285, Affirmed in 6 Cranch, 171, 3 L. ed. 189; Kring v. Missouri, 107 U. S. 221, 27 L. ed. 506, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 443; Hopt v. Utah, 110 U. S. 574, 28 L. ed. 262, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 202; Re Medley, 134 U. S. 160, 33 L. ed. 835, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 384; Cummings v. Missouri, 4 Wall. 277, 18 L. ed. 356; Ex parte Garland, 4 Wall. 333, 18 L. ed. 366; State v. Hayes, 140 N. Y. 484, 23 L. R. A. 830, 37 Am. St. Rep. 572, 35 N. E. 951.

Death is the extreme penalty that can be inflicted. Any change in the penalty short of that is considered a mitigation; and postponement of the time of its infliction is also a mitigation.
196 U. S.

Com. v. Gardner, 11 Gray, 438; Com. v. Wyman, 12 Cush. 239; Cooley, Const. Lim. § 272; Re Tyson, 13 Colo. 487, 6 L. R. A. 472, 22 Pac. 810.

If the shortening of the life for a single day is to the disadvantage of the convict, the extending of life for a day or three months must be considered to his advantage.

Territory v. Miller, 4 Dak. 173, 29 N. W. 7, 11; State v. Rooney (N. D.) 95 N. W. 517.

Neither the law, the judgment, nor the commitment requires solitary confinement. No presumption can be indulged that the officers of the penitentiary charged with the execution of the judgment of the court will go beyond the letter of its mandate and make appellant's confinement solitary, in fact, when there is no legal authority therefor and when to do so would, as to appellant, be illegal.

Holden v. Minnesota, 137 U. S. 483, 34 L. ed. 734, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 143.

The confinement is no part of the punishment, but is an incident connected therewith, referable to penal administration as its primary object.

Re Tyson, 13 Colo. 487, 6 L. R. A. 472, 22 Pac. 810; Holden v. Minnesota, 137 U. S. 483, 34 L. ed. 734, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 143.

Nothing can aggravate the disgrace and infamy following a capital conviction for wilful, deliberate, and premeditated murder.

Re Tyson, 30 Colo. 487, 6 L. R. A. 472, 22 Pac. 810.

Which would be the severer punishment, imprisonment for thirty days longer before hanging, under the new law, or death by hanging thirty days earlier, under the old law,—is a question of law, pure and simple, for the courts to decide.

People v. Hayes, 140 N. Y. 488, 23 L. R. A. 830, 37 Am. St. Rep. 572, 35 N. E. 951.

Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion of the court:

This writ of error brings in question a final judgment of the supreme court of the state of North Dakota, affirming the *judg-[320] ment of an inferior court of that state, by which, pursuant to the verdict of a jury, the plaintiff in error, John Rooney, was sentenced to death for the crime of murder in the first degree.

The sole question upon which the plaintiff in error seeks the judgment of this court, and the only one that will be noticed, is whether the statute under which he was sentenced was ex post facto, and therefore unconstitutional in its application to his case. His counsel agrees that the judgment must stand if the statute be constitutional.

Before, as well as after, the passage of the statute under which the sentence was pronounced, the punishment prescribed by the state for murder in the first degree was death or imprisonment in the penitentiary for life. N. D. Rev. Codes, 1899, § 7068.

By the statutes in force at the time of the commission of the offense, August 26th, 1902, as well as when the verdict of guilty was rendered, it was provided that when a judgment of death is rendered the judge must deliver to the sheriff of the county a warrant stating the conviction and judgment, and appointing a day on which the judgment is to be executed, "which must not be less than three months after the day in which judgment is entered, and not longer than six months thereafter" (§ 8305); that when there was no jail within the county, or whenever the officer having in charge any person under judgment of death deemed the jail of the county where the conviction was had insecure, unfit, or unsafe for any cause, he could confine the convicted person in the jail of any other convenient county of the state (§ 8320); that the judgment of death should be executed within the walls or yard of the jail of the county in which the conviction was had, or within some convenient inclosure within such county (§ 8321); and that judgment of death must be executed by the sheriff of the county where the conviction was had, or by his deputy, one of whom, at least, must be present at the execution. N. D. Rev. Codes, 1899, pp. 1622, 1623.

[321] *The sentence of death was pronounced March 31st, 1903. Prior to that date, namely, on March 9th, 1903, the legislature—without changing the law prescribing death or imprisonment for life as the punishment for the crime of murder in the first degree—passed an act providing that all executions should take place at the penitentiary, and amending certain sections of the Revised Codes of 1899. By that act it was provided:

"§ 1. The mode of inflicting the punishment of death shall be by hanging by the neck until the person is dead; and the warden of the North Dakota penitentiary, or, in case of his death, inability, or absence, the deputy warden, shall be the executioner; and when any person shall be sentenced, by any court of the state having competent jurisdiction, to be hanged by the neck until dead, such punishment shall only be inflicted within the walls of the North Dakota penitentiary at Bismarek, North Dakota, within an inclosure to be prepared for that purpose under the direction of the warden of the penitentiary and the board of trustees thereof, which inclosure shall be higher than the gallows, and so constructed as to exclude public view."

"§ 3. When a person is sentenced to death, all writs for the execution of the death penalty shall be directed to the sheriff by the court issuing the same, and the sheriff of the county wherein the prisoner has been convicted and sentenced shall, within the next ten days thereafter, in as private and secure a manner as possible to be done, convey the prisoner to the North Dakota penitentiary, where the said prisoner shall be received by the warden, superintendent, or keeper thereof, and securely kept in close confinement until the day designated for the execution. . . ."

"§ 14. That § 8305 of the Revised Codes of 1899, relating to judgment of death, warrant to execute, be amended so as to read as follows: § 8305. When the judgment of death is rendered the judge must sign and deliver to the sheriff of the county a warrant duly attested by the clerk under the seal of the court, stating the conviction and judgment, and appointing *a day upon which [322] the judgment is to be executed, which must not be less than six months after the day in which the judgment is entered, and not longer than nine months thereafter."

"§ 16. All acts and parts of acts in conflict with the provisions of this act are hereby repealed." N. D. Laws, 1903, chap. 99, p. 119.

By the sentence it was ordered that the accused be conveyed to the state penitentiary, "there to be kept in close confinement until October the 9th, 1903," and, within an inclosure in that building to be erected for the purpose, be hung by the warden of the penitentiary, or, in case of his inability to act or his absence therefrom, by the deputy warden, before the hour of sunrise on the day fixed for the execution.

It appears from the statement of the case that the statutes in force when the sentence of death was pronounced differed from those in force when the crime was committed and when the verdict was rendered, in these particulars:

1. By the later law, close confinement in the penitentiary for not less than six months and not more than nine months, after judgment and before execution, was substituted for confinement in the county jail for not less than three months nor more than six months after judgment and before execution.

*2. By the later law, hanging within an [325] inclosure at the penitentiary, by the warden or his deputy, was substituted for hanging by the sheriff within the yard of the jail of the county in which the conviction occurred.

We are of opinion that in the particulars just mentioned the statute of 1903 is not repugnant to the constitutional provision declaring that no state shall pass an ex post facto law. It did not create a new offense, nor aggravate or increase the enormity of the crime for the commission of which the accused was convicted, nor require the infliction upon the accused of any greater or more severe punishment than was prescribed by law at the time of the commission of the offense. The changes, looked at in the light of reason and common sense and applied to the present case, are to be taken as favorable, rather than as unfavorable, to him. It may be sometimes difficult to say whether particular changes in the law are or are not in mitigation of the punishment for crimes previously committed. But it must be taken that there is such mitigation when, by the later law, there is an enlargement of the period of confinement prior to the actual execution of the criminal by hanging. The giving, by the later statute, of three months' additional time to live, after the rendition of judgment, was clearly to his advantage, for the court must assume that every rational person desires to live as long as he may. If the shortening of the time of confinement, whether in the county jail or in the penitentiary, before execution, would have increased, as undoubtedly it would have increased, the punishment to the disadvantage of a criminal sentenced to be hung, the enlargement of such time must be deemed a change for his benefit. So that a statute which mitigates the rigor of the law in force at the time a crime was committed cannot be regarded as ex post facto with reference to that crime. Calder v. Ball, 3 Dall. 386, 391, 1 L. ed. 648, 650, Chase, J.; Story, Const. § 1345; Cooley, Const. Lim. *267; Com. v. Gardner, 11 Gray, 443; 1 Bishop, Crim. Law. § 280. Besides, the extension of the time to live, given by the later law, increased the opportunity of [326] the accused *to obtain a pardon or commutation from the governor of the state before his execution.

Nor was the punishment, in any substantial sense, increased or made more severe by substituting close confinement in the penitentiary prior to execution for confinement in the county jail. It is contended that "close confinement" means "solitary confinement;" and Re Medley, 134 U. S. 160, 33 L. ed. 835, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 384, is cited in support of the contention that the new law increased the punishment to the disadvantage of the accused. We do not think that the two phrases import the same kind of punishment. Although solitary confinement may involve close confinement, a criminal could be kept in close confinement without being subjected to solitary confinement. It cannot be supposed that any criminal would be subjected to solitary confinement when the mandate of the law was simply to keep him in close confinement.

Again, it is said that the law in force when the crime was committed only required confinement, whereas the later statute required close confinement. But this difference of phraseology is not material. "Confinement" and "close confinement" equally mean such custody, and only such custody, as will safely secure the production of the body of the prisoner on the day appointed for his execution.

The objection that the later law required the execution of the sentence of death to take place within the limits of the penitentiary rather than in the county jail, as provided in the previous statute, is without merit. However material the place of confinement may be in case of some crimes not involving life, the place of execution, when the punishment is death, within the limits of the state, is of no practical consequence to the criminal. On such a matter he is not entitled to be heard.

The views we have expressed are in accord with those announced by the supreme court of North Dakota. State v. Rooney, 12 N. D. 144, 152, 95 N. W. 513.

We are of opinion that the law of 1903 did not alter the *situation to the material [327] disadvantage of the criminal, and, therefore, was not ex post facto when applied to his case in the particulars mentioned.

Judgment affirmed.

UNITED STATES, Appt.,

v.

WALTER S. CROSLLEY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 327-337.)

Navy — pay of aid to rear admiral — mounted pay.

1. An aid to a rear admiral is entitled, in addition to the regular pay of his rank, to the same compensation for the additional service as is allowed an aid to a major general, in view of the provision of the Navy personnel act (30 Stat. at L. 1004, chap. 413, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1072), § 13, that officers of the Navy shall receive the same pay and allowances, except for forage, as are, or may be, provided by law for officers of the Army of corresponding rank.
2. Mounted pay cannot be given to an aid to a rear admiral, although the Navy personnel act (30 Stat. at L. 1004, chap. 413, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1072), § 13, equalizes his compensation with that of an aid to a major general, who is entitled to mounted pay under Army regulations of 1895, § 1301, since this section and the two immediately following, when read in the light of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 1270, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 899, giving to Army officers the pay of cavalry officers of the same grade when assigned to duty which requires them to be mounted, indicate a general purpose to give mounted pay to Army officers only when their duties are such as may require them to be actually mounted, or are such as may at any time subject them to the necessity of rendering mounted service, which obviously could not be required of an aid to a rear admiral.

[No. 96.]

Submitted December 9, 1904. Decided January 23, 1905.

APPEAL from the Court of Claims to review a judgment which awarded a Navy officer additional pay as an aid to a rear admiral, together with mounted pay for his services as such aid. Modified by disallowing the item for mounted pay and longevity pay based thereon, and, as modified, affirmed.

See same case below, 38 Ct. Cl. 82.

Statement by Mr. Justice Day:

This case was tried in the court of claims upon a petition filed to recover pay for services in the United States Navy, rendered by the defendant in error while he was a lieutenant of the junior grade, and acting as aid to Rear Admiral Watson, then serving with the rank of rear admiral in the nine higher numbers of that grade, and, under § 1466 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1029), entitled to rank with a major general in the Army. The claimant alleges that he should have received from the 1st day of July, 1899, to the 8th day of September, 1899,—

[328]*Pay of a first lieutenant in the Army, being the grade corresponding to lieutenant, junior grade, in the Navy, under Rev. Stat. § 1261, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 893.....	$1,500
Longevity pay under Rev. Stat. § 1262, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 896, for second five years of service	150
Pay as aid to rear admiral of corresponding grade to major general, under Rev. Stat. § 1261.....	200
Mounted pay due under Army Regulations of 1895, paragraph 1301, to "authorize aids duly appointed"..	100
Longevity pay upon the last two items, under Rev. Stat. § 1262....	30
Total	$1,980

That from September 9, 1899, to September 8, 1900 he was entitled to pay as follows:

Pay of a first lieutenant in the Army under Rev. Stat. § 1261.....	$1,500
Longevity pay under Rev. Stat. § 1262, for third five years of service	300
Pay as aid to rear admiral of corresponding grade to major general, under Rev. Stat. § 1261	200
Mounted pay due under Army Regulations of 1895, paragraph 1301...	100
Longevity pay on the last two items under Rev. Stat. § 1262.....	60
Total	$2,160

He received pay during the period in controversy at the rate of $1,800 per annum, being from July 1, 1899, to September 8, 1899, the rate of pay granted by statute (Rev. Stat. § 1556, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1067) to a lieutenant, junior grade, at sea during his first five years in that rank, and for the period from September 9, 1899, to September 8, 1900, being the rate fixed by Rev. Stat. § 1261, for a first lieutenant not mounted, with the longevity allowance of the statute (§ 1262) for the third five years of service; and he claims that, in addition to the amount allowed, *he is entitled[329] to pay or allowance as aid to a rear admiral; also, mounted pay due for such service, with the longevity pay arising from the items in question. In all, he claims the sum of $394.

The court of claims, upon the hearing, made the following findings of fact:

"I. The claimant entered service in the United States Navy on the 9th day of September, 1889, and from the 1st day of July, 1899, until the 8th day of September, 1900, was a lieutenant, junior grade, in the Navy, and an aid to Rear Admiral J. C. Watson; Rear Admiral Watson was at that time one of the nine higher numbers of the grade of rear admiral, and was entitled, under § 1466 of the Revised Statutes, to rank with a major general in the United States Army. II. During said period claimant was paid at the rate of $1,800 a year."

And as conclusions of law held: "Upon the foregoing findings of fact the court decides, as a conclusion of law, that the claimant recover judgment of and from the United States in the sum of three hundred and ninety-four dollars ($394)."

From the judgment of that court the United States appeals to this court.

Assistant Attorney General Pradt and Mr. John Q. Thompson submitted the cause for appellant.

Messrs. George A. King and William B. King submitted the cause for appellee.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

The decision of this case turns upon the answers to two questions arising under the facts stated: First, was the claimant entitled to the extra $200, the same as allowed an aid to a major general in the Army? Second, was he entitled to the "mounted pay" as allowed to the major general's aid? [332] *The Navy personnel act, so called, has been so frequently before this court in recent cases as to require little general discussion of its objects and purposes. Rodgers v. United States, 185 U. S. 83, 46 L. ed. 816, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 582; White v. United States, 191 U. S. 545, 48 L. ed. 295, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 171; Gibson v. United States, 194 U. S. 182, 48 L. ed. 926, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 613; United States v. Thomas, decided at this term, 195 U. S. 418, ante, 259, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 102.

As pointed out in the opinion in the last-named case, while the act of July 16, 1862 (Rev. Stat. § 1466, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1029), had fixed the relative rank of Army and naval officers, no provision for similarity of pay was made until the passage of the Navy personnel act (30 Stat. at L. 1004, chap. 413, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1072), which act, while providing against a reduction of then existing pay of commissioned officers of the Navy, undertook to equalize the pay of naval officers (theretofore generally below that paid to officers of corresponding rank in the Army) with that of officers in the Army of equal rank. Under the act of July 16, 1862, rear admirals ranked with major generals. Section 13 of the Navy personnel act provides:

"That after June 30, 1899, commissioned officers of the line of the Navy and of the Medical Pay Corps shall receive the same pay and allowances, except forage, as are or may be provided by or in pursuance of law for the officers of corresponding rank in the Army."

The claimant, as lieutenant of the junior grade in the Navy, corresponded in rank with a first lieutenant in the Army (Rev. Stat. § 1466, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1029), the rank of "master," named in § 1466, being subsequently changed to lieutenant, junior grade. 22 Stat. at L. 472, chap. 97, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 986. By § 1098 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 807) it is provided that each major general shall have three aids, who may be chosen by him from the captains or lieutenants of the Army. First lieutenants, officers of the Army, under § 1261 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 893), are entitled to pay as follows:

Stat. 1901, p. 893), are entitled to pay as follows:

"The officers of the Army shall be entitled to pay herein stated after their respective designations: . . . First lieutenant, mounted, sixteen hundred dollars a year; first lieutenant, *not mounted, fifteen hundred dollars a year; . . . aid to major general, two hundred dollars a year, in addition to the pay of his rank."

For each five years of service it is provided in § 1262 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 896):

"There shall be allowed and paid to each commissioned officer below the rank of brigadier general, including chaplains and others having assimilated rank or pay, ten per centum of their current yearly pay for each term of five years of service."

The contention of the government is that, while the pay of naval officers is made to correspond with that of Army officers of like rank, the naval officer assigned to duty as aid may not receive the $200 additional pay, as it is not pay on account of rank, but on account of service. But we think this is too narrow a construction of the terms of the act, in view of its intent and purpose. For while we may not add to or take from the terms of a statute, the main purpose of construction is to give effect to the legislative intent as expressed in the act under consideration. An aid to a rear admiral renders services similar to those rendered by an aid to a major general in the Army. The naval aids are appointed under paragraphs 343 and 345 of the Naval Regulations of 1895, which are:

"§ 343. The chief of staff, flag lieutenant, clerk, and aids shall constitute the personal staff of a flag officer.

"§ 345. (1) A flag officer may select any officer of his command to serve as flag lieutenant or clerk, provided his grade accords with the rules laid down in article 344. (2) He may also, when necessary, select other line officers junior to the flag lieutenant to serve on his personal staff as aids, but shall not assign naval cadets to such duty."

They are selected for like service, and it is admitted that there would have been reason for a like express statutory provision in their favor as to compensation. The sum of $200 is allowed to an aid to a major general in addition to the regular pay of his rank. It is allowed as payment for the additional service imposed. Bearing in mind the purpose of the act to give the same compensation to corresponding officers of the *Army and Navy, and that it is expressly provided that officers of the Navy shall receive the same pay and allowances, except for forage, as are or may be provided by law for officers of the Army of corresponding rank, we think it does no violence to, but rather carries out, the purpose of Congress to construe this section so as to give to an aid of a rear admiral, in addition to the regular pay of his rank, pay similar to that allowed an aid to a major general. We reach the conclusion that the court of claims was right in its allowance of this item.

The solution of the question as to mounted pay depends upon whether such pay is given to an officer whose duty requires him to be subject to mounted duty, or whether it is a term used to designate the pay of aids whether they are required to render mounted service or not. Section 1301 of the Army Regulations of 1895 provides:

"The following officers, in addition to those whose pay is fixed by law, are entitled to pay as mounted officers: Officers of the staff corps below the rank of major, officers serving with troops of cavalry, officers of a light battery duly organized and equipped, authorized aids duly appointed, officers serving with companies of mounted infantry, and officers on duty which, in the opinion of the department commander, requires them to be mounted and so certified by the latter on their pay vouchers."

The contention of the appellee is that aids, duly appointed under this section, serving in the Army, are entitled to this compensation, whether required to be mounted or not. And further, that the language "pay as mounted officers" is used in the paragraph rather with a view of fixing the amount to be paid than to characterize the service required. It is doubtless true that the term "mounted pay" may be used in this sense. Richardson v. United States, 38 Ct. Cl. 182, is cited as an illustration of this use of the phrase. In that case it was held that an assistant surgeon in the Navy was entitled to mounted pay under the Navy personnel act, because an assistant surgeon in the Army was entitled thereto. Under § 1163 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 834) an assistant surgeon in the [335] Army ranked *with a lieutenant of cavalry for the first three years of service, and with a captain of cavalry after the expiration of that period. Under these provisions the assistant surgeon was held entitled to mounted pay.

We are further cited to a decision of the Comptroller of the Treasury (10 Comp. Dec. 523), holding that officers of the pay corps of the Navy are entitled to mounted pay, as officers of the pay corps of the Army are given by law cavalry or mounted pay. It may well be that in these cases mounted pay was descriptive of the compensation to be paid, and an officer may therefore be entitled to it, although he renders no mounted service.

But the right of mounted pay to an aid to a rear admiral, assuming that the Navy personnel act assimilates the compensation of an admiral's aid to that of an aid to a major general in the Army, depends upon whether an aid to a major general under paragraph 1301 of the Army Regulations above quoted, although he renders no mounted service, and may not be required to be mounted, is entitled to such compensation. We think §§ 1302 and 1303 of the Army Regulations may also be noticed in this connection. They are:

"Sec. 1302. Department commanders will announce, in orders, the authority obtained from the Secretary of War for mounting companies of infantry, giving the date from which such mounted service commences, and termination of the same.

"Sec. 1303. Muster rolls and returns of light batteries and companies of mounted infantry will show the number, date, and source of order authorizing mounted service. The pay accounts of officers charging mounted pay will contain the same information. A copy of the order will be attached to the first muster rolls prepared after the battery or company has been equipped or mounted; a copy of the order discontinuing such service will appear on the first muster rolls prepared after its discontinuance."

We think these sections, with § 1301 of the Army Regulations above quoted, read in the light of the statute (Rev. Stat. *§ 1270, [336] U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 899), giving to Army officers the pay of cavalry officers of the same grade when assigned to duty which requires them to be mounted, indicate a general purpose to give to officers of the Army mounted pay when their duties are such as may require them to be actually mounted, or are such as may at any time subject them to the necessity of rendering mounted service. The particular section (1301) under which it is insisted that a naval aid is entitled to mounted pay designates officers who either are, or may be, required to be mounted in the discharge of their duties, and likewise to "officers on duty which, in the opinion of the department commander, requires them to be mounted, and so certified by the latter on their pay vouchers."

This paragraph was intended to include the particular classes of officers who are entitled to pay as mounted officers under the classification in the first part thereof, and gives the benefit of the higher rate of compensation to other officers, not expressly named therein, whose duties require them to be mounted. It may be true, as argued at the bar, that there may be times when the duties of an aid to a major general will not require him to be mounted. But, as we understand the Army Regulations, such officers may be at any time required to render mounted service, and are therefore given the pay of that class. Obviously, the duties of an aid to a rear admiral are not such as to require him to render mounted service, and, as the Navy personnel act only undertakes to afford a measure of compensation for duties which can properly be required of a naval officer, it can have no operation to provide pay for services peculiar to the Army. As was held in United States v. Thomas, 195 U. S. 418, ante 259, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 102, it does not follow, because Congress gives special pay to Army officers, that the same right of compensation applies to naval officers also. In that case it was held that an allowance to Army officers who might be ordered to sea or a foreign port could not be given to naval officers whose regular duties require them to engage in service upon the sea, and to cruise upon foreign waters and serve in foreign ports.

[337] *The present case affords still less reason for giving the pay of an Army officer to one in the Navy, where the compensation is given for a character of service which never can be required except in the Army.

Upon this branch of the case we think the court of claims was in error, and the judgment for mounted pay should not have been rendered in favor of the claimant.

The judgment of the Court of Claims is modified, disallowing the sums claimed in the petition and carried into the judgment on account of mounted pay and longevity pay based thereon, and, as modified, is affirmed.

CREEDE & CRIPPLE CREEK MINING & MILLING COMPANY, Petitioner,
v.

UINTA TUNNEL MINING & TRANSPORTATION COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 337-360.)

Mining claims—lode location—time of discovery—conclusiveness of patent—tunnel site—adverse suit.

1. The discovery of the vein or lode before any other steps are taken to perfect the location is not required by the provision of U. S. Rev.

NOTE.—On rights under tunnel site locations—see note to Brewster v. Shoemaker, 53 L. R. A. 793.

196 U. S. U. S., Book 49.

Stat. § 2320, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1424, that "no location of a mining claim shall be made until the discovery of the vein or lode within the limits of the claim located," which means nothing more than that no location shall be considered complete until there has been a discovery.

2. An entry of a lode mining claim, sustained by a patent, though conclusive evidence that, at the time of entry, there had been a valid location, does not preclude the owner of a tunnel site located across the lode, who claims that his location was prior to any discovery in the lode claimed, from showing the order of the steps taken to perfect the lode location, including the date of discovery, notwithstanding the provision of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 2320, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1424, that "no location of a mining claim shall be made until the discovery of the vein or lode within the limits of the claim located," which means nothing more than that no location shall be considered complete until there has been a discovery.
3. The owner of a tunnel site who simply seeks to protect his tunnel, and has as yet discovered no lode claim, is not required, by U. S. Rev. Stat. §§ 2325, 2326, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 1429, 1430, to adverse an application for the patent of the lode claim through which the tunnel runs, the lode of which was discovered on the surface.

[No. 18.]

Argued April 15, 18, 1904. Ordered for re-argument October 31, 1904. Reargued January 10, 11, 1905. Decided January 30, 1905.

ON WRIT OF CERTIORARI to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit to review a judgment which reversed a judgment of the Circuit Court for the District of Colorado, in favor of plaintiff, in an action for the possession of certain mining property, and damages, which was originally brought in the District Court of the County of El Paso, in that State. Affirmed.

See same case below, 57 C. C. A. 200, 119 Fed. 164.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Charles S. Thomas argued the cause, and, with Messrs. A. T. Gunnell, William H. Bryant, H. H. Lee, T. M. Patterson, E. F. Richardson, and H. N. Hawkins, filed a brief for petitioner:

As a question of pleading, and without reference to any other consideration, testimony concerning the want of discovery in the plaintiff's claims was properly rejected.

Reynolds v. Stockton, 140 U. S. 254, 35 L. ed. 464, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 773; Munday v. Vail, 34 N. J. L. 418; Hicks v. Murray, 43 Cal. 522; Tucker v. Parks, 7 Colo. 68, 1 Pac. 427; Miller v. Hallock, 9 Colo. 551, 13 Pac. 541.

There can be no higher evidence of title tunnel site by posting in a conspicuous place and at the entrance to the tunnel a notice of their intent to claim and work the tunnel; that they had performed work therein to the value of $270 in driving said tunnel, and $80 in furnishing and putting in timbers, and that it was their bona fide intent to prosecute the work with diligence and dispatch for the discovery of lodes and for mining purposes. The certificate also contained a full description of the boundaries of the tunnel site as claimed.

In a general way it may be said that the defenses which were stricken out were a priority of right and an estoppel. We quote these paragraphs from the answer:

"It further avers that the patent of the United States issued for said Ocean Wave and Little Mary lodes and lode mining claims was issued subject to the act of Congress in reference to tunnel rights, and subject to the laws of the state of Colorado in reference to the right to run tunnels through ground that may be patented, for the purpose of reaching territory that belongs to tunnel owners beyond such patented claims, and subject to the rights which the defendant, The Uinta Tunnel Mining & Transportation Company and its grantors, had acquired by reason of the location of said Uinta tunnel, and in and to any and all lodes, veins, and mining claims that it might cut or discover in driving said tunnel, as is guaranteed to the locator of said tunnel under and by virtue of § 2323 of the Revised Statutes of the United States (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1426); that the pretended discovery alleged and pretended to have been made in and upon said pretended Ocean Wave and Little Mary lodes and lode mining claims, and by virtue of which the plaintiff claims the right to patent the same under the laws of the United States, was not made until long after the location of said Uinta tunnel, and at the time said pretended locations were made said locators thereof were advised and knew that said tunnel had been located and had been and was being prosecuted with due diligence and in strict compliance with the terms and conditions of the statutes of the follow said lode claims as located by this defendant, and to reach lode claims so owned by this defendant, as hereinbefore and hereinafter stated.

[341] United States *and of the state of Colorado, which authorize and provide for the location and prosecution of such tunnels, and which define and determine the rights pertaining thereto; and that said pretended Ocean Wave and Little Mary lode mining claims, so far as the same may be now claimed and possessed by said plaintiff, were taken and held subject to the rights of this defendant as owner of said Uinta tunnel, located in accordance with § 2323 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, and also subject to the rights of this defendant to cross said claims, and to drive drifts therein, and to

196 U. S.

"It alleges that it and its grantors have expended in and upon said tunnel the sum of more than one hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars ($125,000), and in addition to said expenditures have also expended upon surface work, in improvements and expenses, the further sum of not less than ten thousand dollars ($10,000).

"It alleges that its work and the work of its said grantors in and upon said tunnel has been done openly and without concealment; that the same has been at all times prosecuted under the claim of the defendant and its grantors of the right so to do by virtue of the location of said tunnel and tunnel site location, under and by virtue of the laws of the United States, and under the provisions of § 2323 of the Revised Statutes of the United States; and that the expenditures thereof and the developments made thereon have been made in compliance with the terms and provisions of, and in reliance upon, said statute.

"That the plaintiff, by permitting and allowing this defendant to expend more than the sum of one hundred and thirty-five thousand dollars ($135,000) as aforesaid in reaching, uncovering, and discovering said ore body, has no right to interfere with the defendant in operating its tunnel over, through, and along said pretended Ocean Wave and Little Mary lodes and lode mining claims, but that, on the contrary, the plaintiff,*by its conduct and actions in the [342] premises as hereinabove recited and set forth, has permitted and allowed the defendant to expend said sum of one hundred and thirty-five thousand dollars ($135,000), and has permitted and allowed the defendant so to proceed with said tunnel through and across said pretended Ocean Wave and Little Mary lodes and lode mining claims until the same has ripened into such a license and permission as entitled the defendant to use its said tunnel as it penetrates said pretended Ocean Wave and Little Mary lodes and lode mining claims, and that said license and permission is such that the defendant cannot be disturbed therein."

It was also alleged that the tunnel had been driven some 2,200 feet; that it entered the ground of the plaintiff at about 550 feet from its portal, and in running through that ground the tunnel was driven 625 feet, leaving the plaintiff's ground at about 1,175 feet from the portal; that after passing it the defendant discovered in the tunnel three or four blind lodes, which it duly located; and it was not until after the discovery and of union, where their veins contained in the respective separate locations had united upon their dip.

2 Lindley, Mines, § 730; Champion Min. Co. v. Consolidated Wyoming Gold Min. Co. 75 Cal. 78, 16 Pac. 513; Eureka Consol. Min. Co. v. Richmond Consol. Min. Co. 4 Sawy. 302, Fed. Cas. No. 4,548; Kahn v. Old Teleg. Min. Co. 2 Utah, 188; Last Chance Min. Co. v. Tyler Min. Co. 9 C. C. A. 613, 15 U. S. App. 456, 61 Fed. 557.

The title by patent issued upon the relocation of a mining claim does not relate back to the original location, if that was invalid; and, when it becomes material, evidence of the invalidity of the original location is admissible for the purpose, not of impeaching the patent, but of determining the time to which such title relates.

Fisher v. Seymour, 23 Colo. 542, 49 Pac. 30.

Whether the patent, when issued, relates back simply to the date of entry, or to the very origin of the rights of the claimant of the property, is immaterial here, though it is different under different circumstances.

2 Lindley, Mines, p. 975; Heydenfeldt v. Daney Gold & Silver Min. Co. 93 U. S. 634, 23 L. ed. 995; St. Louis Smelting & Ref. Co. v. Kemp, 104 U. S. 636, 26 L. ed. 875; Deffebach v. Hawke, 115 U. S. 392, 405, 29 L. ed. 423, 427, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 95; Silver Bow Min. & Mill. Co. v. Clark, 5 Mont. 378, 5 Pac. 570; Talbott v. King, 6 Mont. 76, 9 Pac. 434; Butte City Smoke-House Lode Cases, 6 Mont. 397, 12 Pac. 858; Deno v. Griffin, 20 Nev. 249, 20 Pac. 308; Eureka Consol. Min. Co. v. Richmond Consol. Min. Co. 4 Sawy. 302, Fed. Cas. No. 4,548; Kahn v. Old Teleg. Min. Co. 2 Utah, 174; Barringer & Adams, Mines & Mining, p. 417; Morrison, Mining Rights, 11th ed. p. 129, 10th ed. p. 149.

The Ajax-Calhoun Case must be construed in the light of its own facts, and cannot be applied to the essentially different facts existing in the case at bar.

Carroll v. Carroll, 16 How. 275, 14 L. ed. 936; Northern Nat. Bank v. Porter Twp. 110 U. S. 615, 28 L. ed. 260, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 254; St. Louis, V. & T. H. R. Co. v. Terre Haute & I. R. Co. 145 U. S. 404, 36 L. ed. 753, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 953; United States v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U. S. 679, 42 L. ed. 901, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 456.

The discovery of mineral, not the filing of the certificate of location, nor the date recited therein, is the inauguration of a locator's rights.

1 Lindley, Mines, pp. 433, 434; Barringer & Adams, Mines & Mining, p. 214; Erhardt v. Boaro, 113 U. S. 527, 28 L. ed. 1113, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 560; North Noonday Min. Co. v. Orient Min. Co. 6 Sawy. 299, 196 U. S.

1 Fed. 522; Jupiter Min. Co. v. Bodie Consol. Min. Co. 7 Sawy. 96, 11 Fed. 666; Cheesman v. Shreeve, 40 Fed. 787; Overman Silver Min. Co. v. Corcoran, 15 Nev. 147; McLaughlin v. Thompson, 2 Colo. App. 135, 29 Pac. 816.

The filing of the location certificate is the last step required under the Colorado statutes, is in no manner evidence of title, and is only, at the time of filing, a notice of a claim, and is not proof of anything mentioned or recited therein as having been done, nor of more than its own filing and contents.

Barringer & Adams, Mines & Mining, p. 239; Cheesman v. Hart, 42 Fed. 98.

A location certificate is not required by the United States statutes, or by the statutes of all the states; but in those states in which it is required it is prima facie evidence only of its own existence and filing.

1 Lindley, Mines, p. 502; 2 Jones, Ev. § 521; Campbell v. Rankin, 99 U. S. 261, 25 L. ed. 435; Jantzon v. Arizona Copper Co. 3 Ariz. 6, 20 Pac. 93; Pollard v. Shively, 5 Colo. 309.

The time of location and of discovery is not essential to the issuance of the patent, and is not concluded thereby. As to discoveries made subsequent to a location, while they validate the claim and date back to the location, they expressly do so provided no adverse rights intervene.

Morrison, Mining Rights, 10th ed. p. 29; 1 Lindley, Mines, p. 454 and note; Smith v. Newell, 86 Fed. 56.

Among the well-known limitations upon the effect and force of patents and their unassailable nature is that they cannot grant what has been by the government already granted, and so far as they attempt or purport so to do they are void, and their void nature may be shown in any proceeding at law or in equity in which the controversy arises.

St. Louis Smelting & Ref. Co. v. Kemp, 104 U. S. 636-657, 26 L. ed. 875-882.

If a location be made before discovery, but is followed by a discovery in the discovery shaft before any adverse rights intervene, such subsequent discovery cures the original defect, and the claim is valid.

McGinnis v. Egbert, 15 Morrison, Min. Rep. 329; Golden Terra Cotta Co. v. Mahler, 4 Morrison, Min. Rep. 390; Jupiter Co. v. Bodie Co. 4 Morrison, Min. Rep. 411; Zollars v. Evans, 4 Morrison, Min. Rep. 407; North Noonday Co. v. Orient Co. 9 Morrison, Min. Rep. 529; Erwin v. Perego, 35 C. C. A. 482, 93 Fed. 608; Nevada Sierra Oil Co. v. Home Oil Co. 98 Fed. 673; Brewster v. Shoemaker, 28 Colo. 176, 53 L. R. A. 793, 89 Am. St. Rep. 188, 63 Pac. 309; Reins v. Raunheim, 28 Land Dec. 526.

But where a location and record were made with no discovery, a subsequent discovery will not relate back and cut out an intervening location.

Beals v. Cone, 27 Colo. 473, 83 Am. St. Rep. 92, 62 Pac. 948.

When such important rights are to attach to the date of discovery, the date relied on should be a true one, and it must be established, when it is to take effect against another, in a proceeding to which he is a party. This is but to state an axiom of law.

Lindley, Mines, §§ 335, 337.

The fact of discovery must be proved by the party alleging it as the inception of his possessory right.

Morrison, Mining Rights, 11th ed. p. 30; Sands v. Cruikshank, 15 S. D. 142, 87 N. W. 589.

Where a location is made without a discovery, the land remains public domain until there be a discovery.

Tuolumne Consol. Min. Co. v. Maier, 134 Cal. 583, 66 Pac. 863.

Mr. J. C. Helm by special leave also argued the cause and filed a brief as amicus curiæ:

Respondent should have filed its adverse, and should have litigated in the adverse suit the priority of its location.

Bodie Tunnel & Min. Co. v. Bechtel Consol. Min. Co. 1 Land Dec. 586; Re Burton, 29 Land Dec. 235; Back v. Sierra Nevada Consol. Min. Co. 2 Idaho, 420, 17 Pac. 83; Hope Min. Co. v. Brown, 11 Mont. 370, 28 Pac. 732; Enterprise Min. Co. v. Rico Aspen Consol. Min. Co. 167 U. S. 115, 42 L. ed. 101, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 762.

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

Certiorari to review a judgment of the United States circuit court of appeals for the eighth circuit (57 C. C. A. 200, 119 Fed. 164), reversing a judgment of the circuit court of the United States, rendered upon a verdict of a jury, directed by the court.

The action was originally brought by the Creede & Cripple Creek Mining & Milling Company, as plaintiff, against the Uinta Tunnel Mining & Transportation Company, as defendant, in the district court of the county of El Paso, Colorado, for the possession of certain mining claims, and for damages. Equitable relief was also prayed. On motion of the defendant the action was removed to the United States circuit court for the district of Colorado, where, also on its motion, the pleadings were reformed, and the action made one for the possession of the property, and damages.

The plaintiff filed an amended complaint, alleging in substance that it was the owner in fee and in possession, and entitled to the possession, of the Ocean Wave and Little Mary lode mining claims, being survey lot No. 8192, evidenced by mineral certificate No. 338, the patent of the United States to said plaintiff for said claims bearing date December 21, 1893; that said claims were duly located and discovered on the 2d of January, 1892, and that the patent related back and took effect of that date for all purposes given and provided *by the laws of the [339] United States and the state of Colorado concerning mining claims.

Entry upon the claims and ouster of plaintiff by defendant by means of its tunnel were also alleged.

Thereafter the defendant filed its answer. Upon motion of plaintiff certain portions thereof were stricken out, and on the trial testimony offered by the defendant in support of the portions stricken out was rejected.

The matter to be determined is the sufficiency of the defenses pleaded and stricken out. To appreciate them fully it is well to state some facts about which there is no dispute, and it is sufficient to state the facts in reference to one of the lode mining claims, as the proceedings in respect to the two were alike. On February 1, 1892, J. B. Winchell and E. W. McNeal filed in the office of the county clerk of El Paso county (the county in which the mining claim was situated) a certificate of location which, not verified by affidavit or other testimony, stated that they had, on January 2, 1892, located and claimed, in compliance with the mining acts of Congress, 1,500 linear feet on the Ocean Wave lode, and gave the boundaries of the claim. By several mesne conveyances the title of Winchell and McNeal passed to the plaintiff. On August 5, 1893, the plaintiff made an entry of the claim in the proper land office of the United States, and, no proceedings in adverse being instituted, a patent therefor was issued to it on December 21, 1893. There is no reference in the patent to the discovery or the filing of the location certificate. The first appearance of the claim on the records of any office of the United States is the entry in the local land office of August 5, 1893, and the only prior record in any state office is the location certificate, unsworn to, filed February 1, in which the parties filing the certificate stated that they had discovered the lode on January 2, 1892. On February 25, 1892, a location certificate of the defendant's tunnel was filed in the office of the county clerk of El Paso county, which, verified by the oath of one of the locators, stated that on January 13, 1892, they *had located the [340] 196 U. S.

tunnel site by posting in a conspicuous place and at the entrance to the tunnel a notice of their intent to claim and work the tunnel; that they had performed work therein to the value of $270 in driving said tunnel, and $80 in furnishing and putting in timbers, and that it was their bona fide intent to prosecute the work with diligence and dispatch for the discovery of lodes and for mining purposes. The certificate also contained a full description of the boundaries of the tunnel site as claimed.

In a general way it may be said that the defenses which were stricken out were a priority of right and an estoppel. We quote these paragraphs from the answer:

"It further avers that the patent of the United States issued for said Ocean Wave and Little Mary lodes and lode mining claims was issued subject to the act of Congress in reference to tunnel rights, and subject to the laws of the state of Colorado in reference to the right to run tunnels through ground that may be patented, for the purpose of reaching territory that belongs to tunnel owners beyond such patented claims, and subject to the rights which the defendant, The Uinta Tunnel Mining & Transportation Company and its grantors, had acquired by reason of the location of said Uinta tunnel, and in and to any and all lodes, veins, and mining claims that it might cut or discover in driving said tunnel, as is guaranteed to the locator of said tunnel under and by virtue of § 2323 of the Revised Statutes of the United States (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1426); that the pretended discovery alleged and pretended to have been made in and upon said pretended Ocean Wave and Little Mary lodes and lode mining claims, and by virtue of which the plaintiff claims the right to patent the same under the laws of the United States, was not made until long after the location of said Uinta tunnel, and at the time said pretended locations were made said locators thereof were advised and knew that said tunnel had been located and had been and was being prosecuted with due diligence and in strict compliance with the terms and conditions of the statutes of the follow said lode claims as located by this defendant, and to reach lode claims so owned by this defendant, as hereinbefore and hereinafter stated.

[341] United States *and of the state of Colorado, which authorize and provide for the location and prosecution of such tunnels, and which define and determine the rights pertaining thereto; and that said pretended Ocean Wave and Little Mary lode mining claims, so far as the same may be now claimed and possessed by said plaintiff, were taken and held subject to the rights of this defendant as owner of said Uinta tunnel, located in accordance with § 2323 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, and also subject to the rights of this defendant to cross said claims, and to drive drifts therein, and to

"It alleges that it and its grantors have expended in and upon said tunnel the sum of more than one hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars ($125,000), and in addition to said expenditures have also expended upon surface work, in improvements and expenses, the further sum of not less than ten thousand dollars ($10,000).

"It alleges that its work and the work of its said grantors in and upon said tunnel has been done openly and without concealment; that the same has been at all times prosecuted under the claim of the defendant and its grantors of the right so to do by virtue of the location of said tunnel and tunnel site location, under and by virtue of the laws of the United States, and under the provisions of § 2323 of the Revised Statutes of the United States; and that the expenditures thereof and the developments made thereon have been made in compliance with the terms and provisions of, and in reliance upon, said statute.

"That the plaintiff, by permitting and allowing this defendant to expend more than the sum of one hundred and thirty-five thousand dollars ($135,000) as aforesaid in reaching, uncovering, and discovering said ore body, has no right to interfere with the defendant in operating its tunnel over, through, and along said pretended Ocean Wave and Little Mary lodes and lode mining claims, but that, on the contrary, the plaintiff,*by its conduct and actions in the [342] premises as hereinabove recited and set forth, has permitted and allowed the defendant to expend said sum of one hundred and thirty-five thousand dollars ($135,000), and has permitted and allowed the defendant so to proceed with said tunnel through and across said pretended Ocean Wave and Little Mary lodes and lode mining claims until the same has ripened into such a license and permission as entitled the defendant to use its said tunnel as it penetrates said pretended Ocean Wave and Little Mary lodes and lode mining claims, and that said license and permission is such that the defendant cannot be disturbed therein."

It was also alleged that the tunnel had been driven some 2,200 feet; that it entered the ground of the plaintiff at about 550 feet from its portal, and in running through that ground the tunnel was driven 625 feet, leaving the plaintiff's ground at about 1,175 feet from the portal; that after passing it the defendant discovered in the tunnel three or four blind lodes, which it duly located; and it was not until after the discovery and location of these lodes that the plaintiff commenced this action.

Was there error in striking out these defenses? By § 2319, Rev. Stat. (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1424), "all valuable mineral deposits in lands belonging to the United States, both surveyed and unsurveyed, are hereby declared to be free and open to exploration and purchase." Until, therefore, the title to the land passes from the government, the minerals therein are "free and open to exploration and purchase." A lode locator acquires a vested property right by virtue of his location (Clipper Min. Co. v. Eli Min. & Land Co. 194 U. S. 220, 48 L. ed. 944, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 632); but what is the extent of that property right? Section 2322 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1425) defines it as follows: "The locators . . . shall have the exclusive right of possession and enjoyment of all the surface included within the lines of their locations, and of all veins, lodes, and ledges throughout their entire depth, the top or apex of which lies inside of such surface lines extended downward vertically, although such veins, lodes, or ledges [343] may so far depart from a *perpendicular in their course downward as to extend outside the vertical side lines of such surface locations." The express grant to the locator made by this section includes only the surface and the veins apexing within the boundaries of the location. Until, therefore, by entry and payment to the government the equitable title to the ground passes to the locator, he is in no position to question any rights of exploration which are granted by other provisions of the statute. The fee still remains in the government. By § 2320 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1424) it is provided that "no location of a mining claim shall be made until the discovery of the vein or lode within the limits of the claim located." And by § 2324 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1426): "The miners of each mining district may make regulations not in conflict with the laws of the United States, or with the laws of the state or territory in which the district is situated, governing the location, manner of recording, amount of work necessary to hold possession of a mining claim, subject to the following requirements: The location must be distinctly marked on the ground, so that its boundaries can be readily traced. All records of mining claims hereafter made shall contain the name or names of the locators, the date of the location, and such a description of the claim or claims located, by reference to some natural object or permanent monument, as will identify the claim." Tunnel rights are granted by § 2323 (U. S. Comp. Stat. p. 1426) which reads:

"Where a tunnel is run for the development of a vein or lode, or for the discovery of mines, the owners of such tunnel shall have the right of possession of all veins or lodes within three thousand feet from the face of such tunnel on the line thereof, not previously known to exist, discovered in such tunnel, to the same extent as if discovered from the surface; and locations on the line of such tunnel of veins or lodes not appearing on the surface, made by other parties after the commencement of the tunnel, and while the same is being prosecuted with reasonable diligence, shall be invalid; but failure to prosecute the work on the tunnel for six months *shall be considered as an aban-[344] donment of the right to all undiscovered veins on the line of such tunnel."

It does not appear from the answer or testimony that the tunnel had reached the boundaries of the plaintiff's claims prior to the entry or even prior to the patent. For the purpose of this case, therefore, we must assume that, although its line had been marked out,—a line extending through the plaintiff's ground,—yet in fact no work had been done within such ground prior to the patent.

The propositions upon which the plaintiff relies are that discovery is the initial fact; that the patent when issued relates back to that initial fact and confirms all rights as of that date; that no inquiry is permissible as to the time of that discovery, it being concluded by the issue of the patent; that such time antedated anything done in or for the tunnel; that no adverse proceedings were instituted after it had applied for patent, and that, therefore, its right became vested in the ground, the same right which any other landowner has, and which could not be disturbed by the defendant by means of its tunnel. St. Louis Min. & Mill. Co. v. Montana Min. Co. 194 U. S. 235, 48 L. ed. 953, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 654.

On the other hand, defendant contends that, as the first record in any office of the government was the record of the entry on August 5, 1893, the patent issued in an ex parte proceeding is conclusive only that every preceding step, including discovery, had then been taken; that it in fact located its tunnel site prior to any discovery or marking on the ground of plaintiff's claim; that it was not called upon to adverse plaintiff's application for a patent, because no patent is ever issued for a tunnel, and it had not then discovered any veins within its tunnel; that plaintiff, with full knowledge of defendant's tunnel location, permitted the driving of the tunnel through its ground and beyond, at an expenditure of $135,000, and made no objection until the discovery of the veins beyond its ground, and then, for the first time, and to prevent defendant from developing such veins, brought this action, and [345] that by such acquiescence *it was now estopped to question defendant's use of the tunnel.

Obviously the parties divide as to the effect of plaintiff's patent. The circuit court held with the plaintiff, the court of appeals with the defendant. It may be conceded that a patent is conclusive that the patentee has done all required by law as a condition of the issue; that it relates to the initiation of the patentee's right, and cuts off all intervening claims. It may also be conceded that discovery of mineral is the initial fact. But when did the initial fact take place? Are all other parties concluded by the locator's unverified assertion of the date or the acceptance by the government of his assertion as sufficient, with other matters, to justify the issue of a patent? Undoubtedly, so far as the question of time is essential to the right, the patent is conclusive, but is it beyond that?

In order to reach a clear understanding of the question it seems necessary to consider the legislation. Three things are provided for: discovery, location, and patent. The first is the primary, the initial fact. The others are dependent upon it, and are the machinery devised by Congress for securing to the discoverer of mineral the full benefit of his discovery. Chap. 6 of Title 32, Rev. Stat., is devoted to the subject of "Mineral Lands and Mining Resources." The first section, 2318 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1423), reserves mineral lands for sale, except as expressly directed. The next provides that all valuable mineral deposits in government lands shall be free and open to exploration and purchase, and the lands in which they are found to occupation and purchase. In the next it is declared that no location of a mining claim shall be made until the discovery of the vein or lode within the limits of the claim. The whole scope of the chapter is the acquisition of title from the United States to mines and mineral lands, the discovery of the mineral being, as stated, the initial fact. Without that no rights can be acquired. As said by Lindley, in his work on Mines, 2d ed., vol. 1, § 335:

"Discovery, in all ages and all countries, [346] has been regarded *as conferring rights or claims to reward. Gamboa, who represented the general thought of his age on this subject, was of the opinion that the discoverer of mines was even more worthy of reward than the inventor of a useful art. Hence, in the mining laws of all civilized countries the great consideration for granting mines to individuals is discovery. 'Rewards so bestowed,' says Gamboa, 'besides being a proper return for the labor and anxiety of the discoverers, have the further effect of stimulating others to search for veins and mines, on which the general prosperity of the state depends.'"

Location is the act or series of acts by which the right of exclusive possession of mineral veins and the surface of mineral lands is vested in the locator. For this the only requirement made by Congress is the marking on the surface of the boundaries of the claim. By § 2324 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1426), however, Congress recognized the validity of any regulations made by the miners of any mining district not in conflict with the laws of the United States or the laws of the state or territory within which the district is situated. This is held to authorize legislation by the state. Thus, in Belk v. Meagher, 104 U. S. 279, 284, 26 L. ed. 735, 737, it was said:

"A location is not made by taking possession alone, but by working on the ground, recording, and doing whatever else is required for that purpose by the acts of Congress and the local laws and regulations."

In Kendall v. San Juan Silver Min. Co. 144 U. S. 658, 664, 36 L. ed. 583, 585, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 779, 781, is this language:

"Section 2324 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1426) makes the manner of locating mining claims and recording them subject to the laws of the state or territory, and the regulations of each mining district, when they are not in conflict with the laws of the United States."

See also Erhardt v. Boaro, 113 U. S. 527, 533, 534, 535, 28 L. ed. 1113, 1115, 1116, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 560; Butte City Water Co. v. Baker, 196 U. S. 119, ante, 409, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 221.

And many territories and states (Colorado among the number) have made provisions in respect to the location other *than the [347] mere marking on the ground of the boundaries of the claim. So, before a location in those states is perfected, all the provisions of the state statute as well as of the Federal must be complied with, for location there does not consist in a single act. In Morrison, Mining Rights, 11th ed. p. 37, the author, having primarily reference to the laws of Colorado, says:

"The location of a lode consists in defining its position and boundaries, and in doing such acts as indicate and publish the intention to occupy and hold it under the license of the United States. The formal parts of location include: 1, the location notice at discovery; 2, the discovery shaft; 3, the boundary stakes."

In St. Louis Smelting & Ref. Co. v. Kemp, 104 U. S. 636, 649, 26 L. ed. 875, 879, Justice Field, referring to the fact that the terms

"location" and "mining claim" are often indiscriminately used to denote the same thing, says by way of definition:

"A mining claim is a parcel of land containing precious metal in its soil or rock. A location is the act of appropriating such parcel, according to certain established rules."

See also Northern P. R. Co. v. Sanders, 1 C. C. A. 192, 7 U. S. App. 47, 49 Fed. 129, 135.

The patent is the instrument by which the fee-simple title to the mining claim is granted.

Returning now to the matter of location, the Colorado statutes in substance require—

"1. To place at the point of discovery, on the surface, a notice containing the name of the lode, the name of the locator, and the date of the discovery.

"2. Within sixty days from the discovery, to sink a discovery shaft 10 feet deep, showing a well-defined crevice.

"3. To mark the surface boundaries by six posts, one at each corner and one at the center of each side line, hewed or marked on the side or sides in towards the claim.

"4. The disclosure of the lode in an open cut, cross cut, or tunnel suffices instead of a 10-foot shaft.

[348] *"5. Within three months from date of discovery he must file a location certificate with the county recorder giving a proper description of the claim, and containing also the name of the lode, the name of the locator, the date of the location, the number of feet in length on each side of the center of the discovery shaft, and the general course of the lode." Morrison, Mining Rights, 11th ed. p. 59.

The issue of a patent for a lode claim in Colorado is therefore not only a conclusive adjudication of the fact of the discovery of the mineral vein, but also of compliance with these several provisions of its statutes. The supreme court of that state has decided that the order is not essential, providing no intervening rights have accrued. In Brewster v. Shoemaker, 28 Colo. 176, 180, 53 L. R. A. 793, 798, 89 Am. St. Rep. 188, 190, 63 Pac. 309, 310, it said:

"The order of time in which these several acts are performed is not of the essence of the requirements, and it is immaterial that the discovery was made subsequent to the completion of the acts of location, provided, only, all the necessary acts are done before intervening rights of third parties accrue. All these other steps having been taken before a valid discovery, and a valid discovery then following, it would be a useless and idle ceremony, which the law does not require, for the locators again to locate their claim and refile their location certificate, or file a new one."

And that has been the general doctrine. In 1 Lindley, Mines, 2d ed. § 330, the author says:

"The order in which the several acts required by law are to be performed is non-essential, in the absence of intervening rights. The marking of the boundaries may precede the discovery, or the discovery may precede the marking; and if both are completed before the rights of others intervene, the earlier act will inure to the benefit of the locator. But if the boundaries are marked before discovery, the location will date from the time discovery is made."

In 1 Snyder, Mines, § 354, it is said:

"While the general rule is, as stated elsewhere in the foregoing *sections, that a [349] location must rest upon a valid discovery, yet a location otherwise good, with a discovery made after location, and before the intervention of adverse claims or the creation of adverse rights, will validate the location from the date of discovery, and generally from the first act towards claim and appropriation,—this by relation."

In Morrison, Mining Rights, 11th ed. p. 32:

"If a location be made before discovery, but is followed by a discovery in the discovery shaft, before any adverse rights intervene, such subsequent discovery cures the original defect and the claim is valid."

In Re Mitchell, 2 Land Dec. 752, it was held by Commissioner McFarland that, "although prior to location no discovery of mineral was made within the ground claimed, upon a subsequent discovery prior to application for patent the location became good and sufficient, in the absence of any adverse rights."

In Reins v. Raunheim, 28 Land Dec. 526, 529, Secretary Hitchcock declared that "it is immaterial whether the discovery occurred before or after the location, if it occurred before the rights of others intervened. Erwin v. Perego, 35 C. C. A. 482, 93 Fed. 608."

Reference is made to the statement of Secretary Smith in Etling v. Potter, 17 Land Dec. 424, 426, as though that announced a different conclusion, that "a location certificate is but one step—the last one—in the location of a mining claim." But a location certificate is simply a certificate required by the local statute or custom that some things have been done, and, of course, it must come after those things have been done.

Again, in the same volume, pp. 545 and 546 (Northern P. R. Co. v. Marshall), he said:

"In the location of a mineral claim, placer or lode, the first requirement of the law is a discovery. §§ 2319, 2320 Rev. Stat. U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1424. All rights inuring to the benefit of the locators are based upon this initial act. Erhardt v. Boaro, 113 U. S. 537, 28 L. ed. 1116, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 565; United States v. Iron Silver Min. Co. 128 U. S. 673, 32 L. ed. 571, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 195; O'Reilly v. Campbell, 116 U. S. 418, 29 L. ed. 669, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 421.

[350] When, therefore, a *legal location has been made on land returned as agricultural, the slight presumption in favor of the return of the surveyor general is, ipso facto, overcome, and the burden of proof shifts to the party attacking such mineral entry. By such discovery and location it is demonstrated that the return was erroneous, and it would be trifling with physical facts to put the onus on the locator to present further evidence until it is shown that, as a matter of fact, he had no discovery."

But the question he was considering was simply as to the burden of proof between one claiming land returned as agricultural land and one claiming a portion thereof as an apparently legal location of a mineral claim.

In North Noonday Min. Co. v. Orient Min. Co. 6 Sawy. 299, 1 Fed. 522, 531, Judge Sawyer, in charging the jury, said:

"I instruct you further, that if a party should make a location in all other respects regular, and in accordance with the laws, and the rules, regulations, and customs in force at the place at the time, upon a supposed vein, before discovering the true vein or lode, and should do sufficient work to hold the claim, and after such location should discover the vein or lode within the limits of the claim located, before any other party had acquired any rights therein, from the date of his discovery his claim would be good to the limits of his claim, and the location valid."

To the same effect was the charge of the same judge in Jupiter Min. Co. v. Bodie Consol. Min. Co. 7 Sawy. 96, 11 Fed. 666, 676.

In Cedar Canyon Consol. Min. Co. v. Yarwood, 27 Wash. 271, 91 Am. St. Rep. 841, 67 Pac. 749, the supreme court of Washington ruled that—"In the absence of intervening rights, the fact that mineral is not discovered on a claim until after the notice of location is posted and the boundary marked is immaterial; and, where the discovery is the result of work subsequently done by the locator, his possessory rights under his location are complete from the date of such discovery."

[351] Nevada Sierra Oil Co. v. Home Oil Co. 98 Fed. 673; Erwin v. Perego, 35 C. C. A. 482, 93 Fed. 608; Jupiter Min. Co. v. Bodie Consol. Min. Co. 7 Sawy. 96, 11 Fed. 196 U. S.

666; 1 Lindley, Mines, § 335, and cases cited."

See especially Erwin v. Perego, cited in this quotation, decided by the court of appeals for the eighth circuit. Tending in the same direction are Thompson v. Spray, 72 Cal. 528, 533, 14 Pac. 182; Gregory v. Pershbaker, 73 Cal. 109, 118, 14 Pac. 401; Tuolumne Consol. Min. Co. v. Maier, 134 Cal. 583, 585, 66 Pac. 863.

But what is the meaning of the statute? Its language is "no location of a mining claim shall be made until the discovery of the vein or lode within the limits of the claim located." Does that require that a discovery must be made before any marking on the ground, especially when, as under the Colorado statutes, several other steps in the process of location are prescribed, or does it mean that no location shall be considered as complete until there has been a discovery? Bearing in mind that the principal thought of the chapter is exploration and appropriation of mineral, does it mean anything more than that the fact of discovery shall exist prior to the vesting of that right of exclusive possession which attends a valid location?

This may be looked at in another aspect. Suppose a discovery is not made before the marking on the ground and posting of notice, but is then made, and it and all other statutory provisions are complied with before the entry, which is an application for the purchase of the ground,—of what benefit would it be to the government to require the discoverer to repeat the marking on the ground, the posting of notice, and other acts requisite to perfect a location? If everything has been done which, under the law, ought to be done to entitle the party to purchase the ground, wherein is the government prejudiced if the precise order of those acts is not followed? Or, to go a step farther, suppose, on an application for a patent, an adverse suit is instituted, and on the trial it appeared that the plaintiff in that suit had made a discovery and taken all the *steps necessary for a location in the statu [352] tory order, although not until after the applicant for the patent had done everything required by law, would there be any justice in sustaining the adverse suit, and awarding the property to the plaintiff therein, on the ground that the applicant had not made any discovery until the day after his marking on the ground, and so the discovery did not precede the location?

These suggestions add strength to the concurring opinion of three leading commentators on mining law, the general trend of the rulings of the department and decisions of the courts, to the effect that the order in which the several acts are done is not essential, except so far as one is dependent on another. Doubtless a locator does not acquire the right of exclusive possession unless he has made a valid location, and discovery is essential to its validity; but if all the acts prescribed by law are done, including a discovery, is it not sacrificing substance to form to hold that the order of those acts is essential to the creation of the right? It must be remembered that the discovery and the marking on the ground are not matters of record but in pais, and, if disputed in an adverse suit or otherwise, must be shown, as other like facts, by parol testimony. It must also be remembered that the certificate of location required by the Colorado statutes need not be verified. The one in this case was not. A locator might, if so disposed, place the date of discovery before it was in fact made, and at any time within three months prior to the filing of the certificate.

But it has been said that the question has been decided by this court adversely to these views, and Enterprise Min. Co. v. Rico-Aspen Consol. Min. Co. 167 U. S. 108, 42 L. ed. 96, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 762, and Cathoun Gold Min. Co. v. Ajax Gold Min. Co. 182 U. S. 499, 45 L. ed. 1200, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 885, are cited. In the former case the question was as to when a vein discovered in a tunnel must be located, and in the opinion (p. 112, L. ed. p. 100, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 763) we said:

[353] "In order to make a location there must be a discovery; at least, that is the general rule laid down in the statute. Section*2320 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1424) provides: 'But no location of a mining claim shall be made until the discovery of the vein or lode within the limits of the claim located.' The discovery in the tunnel is like a discovery on the surface. Until one is made there is no right to locate a claim in respect to the vein, and the time to determine where and how it shall be located arises only upon the discovery,—whether such discovery be made on the surface or in the tunnel."

But that comes far short of meeting the question before us. It is undoubtedly true that discovery is the initial fact. The language of the statute makes that plain, and parties may not go on the public domain and acquire the right of possession by the mere performance of the acts prescribed for a location. But the question here is whether, if there be both a discovery and the performance of all the acts necessary to constitute a location, the order in which these things take place is essential to the right of exclusive possession which belongs to a valid location.

In the Ajax Case the contest was between mining claims, on the one hand, and a mining claim and tunnel site, on the other. All the mining claims had passed to patent. The plaintiff in error, who was defendant below, held the junior patent issued upon a later entry, and the entries of plaintiff's claims were made and the receiver's final receipts issued prior to the location of the tunnel site. In other words, the defendant, admitting that its right to a tunnel had not been established by a location at the time of the entries of plaintiff's claims, sought to invalidate them by proof that there had been no previous discovery of mineral. This was refused by the trial court, and we sustained the ruling, saying (p. 510, L. ed. p. 1206, Sup. Ct. Rep. 890):

"The patents were proof of the discovery, and related back to the date of the locations of the claims. The patents could not be collaterally attacked. This has been decided so often that a citation of cases is unnecessary."

An entry, sustained by a patent, is conclusive evidence that, at the time of the entry, there had been a valid location, and *such[354] valid location implies, as one of its conditions, a discovery; and the decision only went to the extent that this could not be challenged by one who, at the time of the entry, had made no location, and therefore had acquired no tunnel right. There is nothing in this ruling to conflict with the views we have expressed.

It would seem, therefore, from this review of the authorities as well as from the foregoing considerations that, as between the government and the locator, it is not a vital fact that there was a discovery of mineral before the commencement of any of the steps required to perfect a location, and that if, at the time of the entry, everything has been done which entitled the party to an entry, to wit, a discovery and a perfected location, the government would not be justified in rejecting the application on the ground that the customary order of procedure had not been followed. In other words, the government does not, by accepting the entry, and confirming it by a patent, determine as to the order of proceedings prior to the entry, but only that all required by law have been taken.

If, therefore, the entry and patent do not of themselves necessarily determine the order of the prior proceedings, why may not anyone who claims rights anterior to the entry, and dependent upon that order, show, as a matter of fact what it was? One not a party to proceedings between the government and the patentee is concluded by the action of the government only so far as that action involves a determination. There is a determination by the fact of entry and patent that there was, prior to the entry, a discovery and a location. Having been so determined, third parties may be concluded thereby.

But it may be said that when the time of a particular fact is concluded by an adjudication, or when an opportunity is presented for such an adjudication, and not availed of, the time as stated must be considered as settled; that when the plaintiff applied for its patent, if there was any question to be made by the defendant of any statement of fact made in the location certificate or other record, it should have been [355]challenged by *an adverse suit. Failing to do so, the fact must be considered to be settled as stated. Undoubtedly, if, in an adverse suit, the time of any particular matter is litigated, the judgment is conclusive; and if the date of discovery stated in the plaintiff's location certificate had been challenged in an appropriate action brought by the defendant, and determined in favor of the plaintiff, there could be now no inquiry. So, when the owner of a lode claim makes application for a patent, and the owner of another seeks to challenge the former's priority of right on account of the date of discovery, it is his duty to bring an adverse suit; and, if he fails to do so, that question will be, as to him, concluded. Such is the purpose and effect of the adverse proceedings.

Is the same rule also applicable to a tunnel site? This opens up the question of what are the rights and obligations of the owner of a tunnel. And here these facts must be borne in mind: The owner of a tunnel never receives a patent for it. There is no provision in the statute for one, and none is in fact ever issued. No discovery of mineral is essential to create a tunnel right or to maintain possession of it. A tunnel is only a means of exploration. As the surface is free and open to exploration, so is the subsurface. The citizen needs no permit to explore on the surface of government land for mineral. Neither does he have to get one for exploration beneath the surface for like purpose. Nothing is said in § 2323 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1426) as to what must be done to secure a tunnel right. That is left to the miners' customs or the state statutes, and the statutes of Colorado provide for a location and the filing of a certificate of location. When the tunnel right is secured the Federal statute prescribes its extent,—a tunnel 3,000 feet in length and a right to appropriate the veins discovered in such tunnel to the same extent as if discovered from the surface.

If the tunnel right was vested before a discovery in the plaintiff's lode claim the defendant ought to have the benefit of it.

The plaintiff's right does not antedate his discovery; at least it does not prevail over any then-existing right. But, it *is said, [356] the defendant did not adverse the plaintiff's application for a patent; that its omission so to do precludes it from now asserting a right prior to the date of discovery named in the certificate of location, just as a judgment in an adverse suit involving the question of date would have been conclusive. Is the owner of a tunnel who simply seeks to protect his tunnel, and has, as yet, discovered no lode claim, bound to adverse an application for the patent of a lode claim, the lode of which was discovered on the surface? It is contended that the case of Enterprise Min. Co. v. Rico-Aspen Consol. Min. Co. 167 U. S. 108, 42 L. ed. 96, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 762, decides this question. But in that case the line of the tunnel did not enter the ground of the lode claim, but ran parallel with and distant from it some 500 feet, and we held that the mere possibility that, in the line of the tunnel, might be discovered a vein which extended through the ground of the distant lode claim, did not necessitate adverse proceedings. Here the line of the tunnel runs directly through the ground of the plaintiff, and the question is distinctly presented whether, in order to protect the right to that tunnel, the defendant was called upon to adverse? Whatever might be the propriety or advantage of such action, the statute does not require it.

Sections 2325 and 2326 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 1429, 1430) provide the manner of obtaining a patent and for adverse proceedings. The first commences: "A patent for any land claimed and located for valuable deposits may be obtained in the following manner." This, obviously, does not refer to easements or other rights, nor the acquisition of title to land generally, but only to land claimed and located for valuable deposits. Then, after prescribing certain proceedings, the statute adds: "If no adverse claim shall have been filed with the register . . . it shall be assumed that the applicant is entitled to a patent . . . and that no adverse claim exists." The next section commences, "where an adverse claim is filed during the period of publication, it shall be upon oath of the person or persons making the same, and shall show the nature, boundaries, and *extent of such [357] adverse claim." The section then authorizes the commencement of an action by the adverse claimant and a stay of proceedings in the Land Department pending such action, and adds:

"After such judgment shall have been rendered, the party entitled to the possession of the claim, or any portion thereof, may, without giving further notice, file a certified copy of the judgment roll with the register of the land office, together with the certificate of the surveyor general that the requisite amount of labor has been expended or improvements made thereon, and the description required in other cases, and shall pay to the receiver five dollars per acre for his claim, together with the proper fees, whereupon the whole proceedings and the judgment roll shall be certified by the register to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, and a patent shall issue thereon for the claim, or such portion thereof, as the applicant shall appear, from the decision of the court, to rightly possess. If it appears from the decision of the court that several parties are entitled to separate and different portions of the claim, each party may pay for his portion of the claim, with the proper fees, and file the certificate and description by the surveyor general, whereupon the register shall certify the proceedings and judgment roll to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, as in the preceding case, and patents shall issue to the several parties according to their respective rights."

Reading these two sections together, it is apparent that they provide for a judicial determination of a controversy between two parties contesting for the possession of "land claimed and located for valuable deposits;" in other words, the decision of a conflict between two mining claims,—a decision which will enable the Land Department, without further investigation, to issue a patent for the land. A tunnel is not a mining claim, although it has sometimes been inaccurately called one. As we have seen, it is only a means of exploration. The owner has a right to run it in the hope of finding a mineral vein. When one is found he is called upon to make a location of the [358] *ground containing that vein, and thus creates a mining claim, the protection of which may require adverse proceedings. As the claimant of the tunnel he takes no ground for which he is called upon to pay, and is entitled to no patent. A judgment in adverse proceedings instituted by him (if such proceedings were required) might operate to create a limitation on the estate of the applicant for a patent to the mining claim, and, thus as it were, engraft an exception on his patent. But, taking the whole surface, the applicant is required to pay the full price of $5 per acre, with no deduction because of the tunnel. The statute provides for no reduction on account of any tunnel. The tunnel owner might be said to have established his right to continue the tunnel through the lode claim after patent,—a right which he undoubtedly had before patent, or at least before entry. There is no statutory warrant for placing in a patent to the owner of a lode claim any limitation of his title by a reservation of tunnel rights. In Deffebach v. Hawke, 115 U. S. 392, 406, 29 L. ed. 423, 427, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 95, 101, we said:

"The position that the patent to the plaintiff should have contained a reservation excluding from its operation all buildings and improvements not belonging to him, and all rights necessary or proper to the possession and enjoyment of the same, has no support in any legislation of Congress. The land officers, who are merely agents of the law, had no authority to insert in the patent any other terms than those of conveyance, with recitals showing a compliance with the law and the conditions which it prescribed."

Other limitations in the full title granted by a patent for a mineral claim are recognized in the statutes. Thus, by § 2339 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1437), which is found in the same chapter as the other sections quoted, the one devoted to "Mineral Lands and Mining Resources," it is provided that:

"Whenever, by priority of possession, rights to the use of water for mining, agricultural, manufacturing, or other purposes, have vested and accrued, and the same are recognized and acknowledged by the local customs, laws, and the decisions *of [359] courts, the possessors and owners of such vested rights shall be maintained and protected in the same; and the right of way for the construction of ditches and canals for the purposes herein specified is acknowledged and confirmed."

But it has never been supposed that the owner of any of these rights was compelled to adverse an application for a patent for a mining claim, for they are not "mining claims."

The decisions on the question of the duty of the tunnel owner to adverse the application of the lode claimant are not harmonious. In Bodie Tunnel & Min. Co. v. Bechtel Consol. Min. Co. 1 Land Dec. 584, Secretary Kirkwood held that a tunnel location was a mining claim and necessitated adverse proceedings to protect its rights as against an applicant for a lode claim (see also Back v. Sierra Nevada Consol. Min. Co. 2 Idaho, 420, 17 Pac. 83), while the supreme court of Colorado, in Corning Tunnel Co. v. Pell, 4 Colo. 507, denied the right of a tunnel owner to adverse the application for a patent for a lode claim where the lode had not been discovered in the tunnel, and the discovery shaft was not on the line of the tunnel. Lindley, § 725, referring to the decision in Enterprise Min. Co. v. Rico

Aspen Consol. Min. Co. 167 U. S. 108, 42 L. ed. 96, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 762, said:

"In the light of this decision and the one which it affirms, the rule may be thus formulated: Where a lode claimant applies for a patent to a location embracing a lode which has previously been discovered in the tunnel, the tunnel claimant will be compelled to adverse to protect his rights. A right in the particular lode inures to the tunnel proprietor immediately upon its discovery in the tunnel, which right is essentially adverse to the lode applicant; but where there has been no discovery in the tunnel, and it cannot be demonstrated that the lode will be cut by the tunnel bore, there is no necessity for an adverse claim."

[360] Without further review of the conflicting authorities, it would seem that whatever may be the propriety or advantage of an adverse suit, one cannot be adjudged necessary when *Congress has not specifically required it. Until the discovery of a lode or vein within the tunnel, its owner has only a possibility. He is like an explorer on the surface. Adverse proceedings are called for only when one mineral claimant contests the right of another mineral claimant.

If the defendant was not estopped by a failure to institute adverse proceedings, then the trial court erred in striking out the parts of the answer in reference to the date of plaintiff's discovery, and the judgment of the court of appeals was right.

This conclusion avoids the necessity of any inquiry as to the effect of the alleged estoppel, and the judgment of the Circuit Court of Appeals is affirmed.

SUSAN A. RAMSEY, Plff. in Err.,
v.

TACOMA LAND COMPANY and Philadelphia Trust, Safe Deposit, & Insurance Company and John C. Bullitt, Trustees of the estate of Charles B. Wright, Deceased.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 360-364.)

Railroad land grants—bona fide purchasers—state corporation a citizen—effect of delay on right to purchase from government.

1. A state corporation is a citizen of the United States within the meaning of the act of March 3, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 557, chap. 376, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1595), § 5, conferring upon such citizens who are bona fide purchasers from a railway company of land excepted from its grant, the right to purchase the same from the government.

NOTE.—As to land grants to railroads—see note to Kansas P. R. Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 28 L. ed. U. S. 794.

196 U. S.

2. Delay cannot successfully be urged to prevent bona fide purchasers from a railway company of land excepted from its grant from exercising the right to purchase the same from the government, conferred by the act of March 3, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 557, chap. 376, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1595), § 5, where the application to purchase was made within ten months after the land had been stricken from the company's list, pursuant to a decision of the Land Department, and, prior to such decision, both the railway company and the Land Department had assumed that the land was already the property of the railway company's grantee by virtue of its purchase from that company.

[No. 138.]

Submitted January 17, 1905. Decided January 30, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Washington to review a judgment which reversed a decree of the Superior Court of Pierce County, in favor of plaintiff, in a suit to establish a trust in certain real property, and dismissed the suit. Affirmed.

See same case below, 31 Wash. 351, 71 Pac. 1024.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brewer:

*This was a suit commenced in the superior court of Pierce county, Washington, by the plaintiff in error, praying that she be decreed to be the owner of the S. W. $\frac{1}{4}$ of the N. W. $\frac{1}{4}$ of section 3, township 20 north, range 2 east, in said county, and that the defendants be adjudged to hold the legal title in trust for her. A decree of the trial court in her favor was reversed by the supreme court of the state, and the cause dismissed. 31 Wash. 351, 71 Pac. 1024.

The essential facts, which are not disputed, are stated in the opinion of the supreme court. The land was within the primary limits of the grant to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company by joint resolution of Congress, of May 31, 1870. 16 Stat. at L. 378. The company filed its map of general route on August 13, 1870, and its map of definite location on May 14, 1874. The Land Department thereupon withdrew from sale and entry this with other tracts. On May 19, 1869, one W. C. Kincaide made a pre-emption filing on the land, but had abandoned the filing and the land prior to the act of 1870. Subsequently to the filing of the map of definite location the tract was held by the company and considered by the Land Department to have passed to the company until the departmental decision of July 13, 1896, in Corlis v. Northern P. R. Co. 23 Land Dec. 265, on review, 26 Land Dec. 652, which held that lands situated as this were excepted from the grant. In 1874 the railroad company, for value and in good faith, sold and conveyed the land to the Tacoma Land Company, a corporation created under the laws of Pennsylvania. Thereafter that company, for value, and in good faith, sold to the other defendants, who also acted in good faith. The several deeds representing these transactions were placed on record in the county where the tract is situated. On October 13, 1896, the Commissioner of the General Land Office canceled the railroad company's list of the tract in question, on the basis of the decision in Cortis v. Northern P. R. Co. On February 24, 1897, the plaintiff filed in the local land office her application to enter the land as a home-[362]stead, which filing was accepted by the local officers, and in May of that year she went upon the land, and has there since remained, making improvements to the value of $1,200. In August, 1897, the land company filed its application to purchase the tract, under § 5 of the act of Congress of March 3, 1887. 24 Stat. at L. 557, chap. 376, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1595. A contest between the plaintiff and the land company was had in the Department, which resulted in a decision in its favor, and to it a patent was issued.

Mr. John F. Shafroth submitted the cause for plaintiff in error. Messrs. John C. Stallcup and J. W. A. Nichols were on his brief.

Mr. Stanton Warburton submitted the cause for defendants in error. Mr. E. R. York was on his brief.

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

Plaintiff in error presents but two questions which have not already been determined by this court. One is whether a state corporation is entitled to the benefit of § 5 of the act of 1887, which names as beneficiaries "citizens of the United States," or "persons who have declared their intentions to become such citizens." This can scarcely be considered a debatable question, for in United States v. Northwestern Exp., Stage & Transp. Co. 164 U. S. 686, 41 L. ed. 599, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 296, similar language in the Indian depredations statute [26 Stat. at L. 851, chap. 538, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 758] was adjudged broad enough to include a state corporation. No review of authorities there considered and no restatement of the argument is necessary. Obviously, in a remedial statute like this, the term "citizens" is to be considered as including state corporations, unless there be something beyond the mere use of the word to indicate an intent on the part of Congress to exclude them.

The other question arises on the contention of the plaintiff that the statute of 1887 is not curative, but simply permissive; that it does not attempt to confirm the title of the purchaser *from the railroad company, [363] but simply gives him the privilege of purchasing from the government at the ordinary price. It is urged that it cannot be presumed that Congress intended that the land should be held indefinitely, waiting for the election of the purchaser, and that the privilege must be exercised at once or considered as abandoned. It is said that the land company did not attempt to exercise the privilege immediately after the passage of the act, but waited for more than ten years. Obviously the statute is not a curative one, confirms no title, but simply grants a privilege. We shall assume that that privilege is not one continuing indefinitely, that the land is not held free from entry until the purchaser from the railroad company has formally refused to purchase, and that he must act within a reasonable time. Nevertheless, we are of opinion that the action of the Land Department must be sustained. It is true that the land company did not proceed immediately after the passage of the act of 1887, but until 1896 both the railroad company and the Land Department assumed that the land was already the property of the land company by its purchase from the railroad company. While all parties considered the full equitable title as vested in the land company, there was no duty cast upon it of securing a further title by purchase from the government. Only after the decision in the Cortis Case in 1896, and on October 13 of that year, was the land stricken from the railroad company's list. Within ten months thereafter the land company made its application. Now, whether it acted with reasonable promptness was a question primarily for the consideration of the Land Department. That Department had before it the application of the plaintiff to enter the land under the general land laws, and that of the land company to purchase it under the act of 1887; and after a full consideration it decided in favor of the land company,—a decision which, in effect, determined that the company had acted with all necessary promptness, and was entitled to the benefit of the statute. Of course, the privilege granted by the statute would be of little or no avail if it had *to be exercised [364] on the very day. Some time must be allowed for acquiring knowledge of the situation and determining the course of action. The plaintiff was as fully charged with knowledge of this act of 1887 as the land company. Upon the records of the county were the deeds from the railroad to the land company and from the latter to its grantees. So she acted with knowledge both of the law and the facts, and is not in a position now to complain of the action of the Land Department. We are not justified in setting aside the decision of the Land Department, and holding that it erred in awarding to the land company the privilege which the statute, without any express limitation of time, gives to it.

We see no error in the record, and the judgment of the Supreme Court of Washington is affirmed.

MARTHA S. MUNSEY, Plff. in Err.,
v.

M. SWAIN CLOUGH, Sheriff of Merrimack County.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 364-375.)

Extradition—right to hearing—questions open on habeas corpus—prima facie case.

1. The person demanded in interstate extradition proceedings has no right to a hearing before the governor on the question whether he has been substantially charged with a crime and whether he is a fugitive from justice.
2. On habeas corpus to review the issuance of an extradition warrant by the governor of a state, the accused is concluded by the prima facie case made out by the papers upon which the governor acted, where such accused, upon the hearing in the habeas corpus proceedings, waived the right to introduce further evidence.
3. The technical sufficiency of the indictment and the question of the procedure under it are not open to inquiry on habeas corpus to review the issuance of a warrant of arrest in interstate extradition proceedings.
4. Contradictory evidence on the question of the presence or absence of the accused in the state at the time of the commission of the offense will not require his discharge on habeas corpus to review the issuance of a warrant of arrest in interstate extradition proceedings.

[No. 126.]

*Argued and submitted January 13, 1905.
Decided January 30, 1905.*

IN ERROR to the Superior Court of the State of New Hampshire for Merrimack County, to review a judgment refusing to discharge, on habeas corpus, a person arrested under a warrant issued by the governor of that State in extradition proceedings, which judgment was affirmed by the Supreme Court of the State. Affirmed.

NOTE.—On habeas corpus to review extradition proceedings—see notes to State v. Jackson, 1 L. R. A. 373; Cortes v. Jacobus, 34 L. ed. U. S. 464; and Bruce v. Rayner, 62 C. C. A. 506.

On interstate extradition generally—see note to State v. Jackson, 1 L. R. A. 370.

196 U. S.

See same case below in Supreme Court, 71 N. H. 594, 53 Atl. 1086, 72 N. H. 178, 55 Atl. 554.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Edward A. Lane argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Edwin G. Eastman submitted the cause for defendant in error. Mr. George A. Sanderson was on his brief.

Mr. Justice Peckham delivered the opinion of the court:

This was a proceeding on habeas corpus in a state court of New Hampshire to obtain the discharge of the plaintiff in error from arrest under a warrant given by the governor of that state, directing the return of the plaintiff in error to the commonwealth of Massachusetts, as a fugitive from justice. *Upon the hearing the state court refused [369] to discharge the plaintiff in error, the order of refusal was affirmed by the supreme court, and she has brought the case here for review. On a former proceeding in supreme court, see 71 N. H. 594, 53 Atl. 1086.

The proceedings before the governor of New Hampshire to obtain the warrant of arrest were taken under § 5278 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, re-enacting the statute approved February 12, 1793 (1 Stat. at L. 302, chap. 7, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3597), relating to the arrest of persons as fugitives from justice, under clause 2 of § 2 of article 4 of the Constitution of the United States.

The papers before the governor of New Hampshire consisted of a copy of an indictment of the plaintiff in error, found in Massachusetts on the second Monday of February, 1902; it contained three counts, and charged the plaintiff in error with uttering and publishing as true a certain forged instrument, purporting to be a will, well knowing the same to be forged. The first count alleged that the crime was committed on the 28th of February, 1895, at Cambridge, in the county of Middlesex, in the commonwealth of Massachusetts; and it also alleged that since the commission of the offense the plaintiff had not been usually or publicly a resident in that commonwealth.

The second count averred the uttering, etc., to have been on the 17th day of May, in the year 1895, in the same place, and the indictment had the same averment as to the nonresidence of the plaintiff in error as contained in the first count.

The third count averred the uttering at the same place as that named in the other two counts, but laid the date as the 20th day of November, 1901. There was also before the governor of New Hampshire an application, dated the 26th of February, 1902, signed by George A. Sanderson, district attorney for the northern district of Middlesex, to the governor of Massachusetts, requesting a requisition from him upon the governor of New Hampshire for the extradition of *the plaintiff in error, who, as stated in the application, stood charged by indictment with the crime of uttering forged wills, committed in the county of Middlesex (on the days stated in the indictment), and who, to avoid prosecution, had fled from the jurisdiction of the commonwealth, and was a fugitive from justice, and was within the jurisdiction of the state of New Hampshire. It was also stated in the application that the indictment was not found by the grand jury until the February sitting of the superior court in the year 1902. There was also before the governor of New Hampshire a copy of what purported to be an affidavit of one Whitney, the original of which was used before the governor of Massachusetts, to obtain the requisition. It is short, and is as follows:

Commonwealth of Massachusetts, }
Middlesex. } ss.:

I, Jophanus H. Whitney, of Medford, in the county of Middlesex and said commonwealth, on oath depose and say that Martha S. Munsey, who stands charged by indictment with the crime of uttering forged wills, as is more fully set forth in the papers hereto annexed, has fled from the limits of said commonwealth, and is a fugitive from justice. And I further depose that at the time of the commission of said crime she was in the state of Massachusetts, in the county of Middlesex of said commonwealth, and that at the same time and previous thereto she was a resident of Cambridge in the said county of Middlesex; that she fled from said commonwealth of Massachusetts on or about the fourth day of November, A. D. 1901; that she is not now within the limits of the commonwealth, but, as I have reason to believe, is now in Pittsfield, in the state of New Hampshire. The grounds of my knowledge are that I have interviewed her since the fourth of November last in Pittsfield, New Hampshire, where she was living with her husband during the last week January last.

Jophanus H. Whitney.

There was also a certificate of the district attorney for the *northern district of Middlesex, that the offense charged against the plaintiff in error is a felony within that commonwealth, and that application for the arrest and return of the fugitive had not been sooner made because the indictment was not found by the grand jury until February, 1902.

The governor of the commonwealth of Massachusetts having given the requisition applied for, the papers above mentioned were presented to the governor of New Hampshire, and a request made that he should issue his warrant of arrest to take the plaintiff in error back to the commonwealth of Massachusetts, as a fugitive from justice, and for the purpose of being tried on the indictment referred to. The counsel for the plaintiff in error appeared before the governor, and stated they desired a hearing before him before the warrant of arrest should be granted. This hearing was refused, and the governor then granted the warrant for the arrest and return of the plaintiff in error to the commonwealth of Massachusetts as a fugitive from justice. In that warrant it was provided that the plaintiff in error should be afforded an opportunity to sue out a writ of habeas corpus before being delivered over to the authorities of Massachusetts. She availed herself of that right and sued out such writ, and upon its return the plaintiff in error made several objections to the execution of the governor's warrant, and alleged the insufficiency of the papers to authorize the granting of the same. At the close of the hearing the counsel for plaintiff in error moved that she be discharged for the reasons stated in the motion; the motion was denied, subject to the objection and exception of the plaintiff in error. The record then shows the following:

"The court thereupon ordered that the relator proceed to introduce evidence upon the question whether she was in fact a fugitive from justice. This the relator's counsel declined to do, upon the ground that such action, on their part, would constitute a waiver of their right to object to the refusal of the governor to grant a hearing upon this question of fact.

"The court then directed that the counsel for the relator *state whether the relator [372] waived the right to then, or at any future time, introduce further evidence upon this, or any question of fact, and counsel for relator declared that she did waive that right.

"No evidence was offered by the relator either upon the question whether the relator was a fugitive from justice, or upon any other question of fact, other than as above stated."

The question of the legality of the detention of the plaintiff in error is thus brought before the court. The proceedings in matters of this kind before the governor are summary in their nature. The questions before the governor, under the section of the Revised Statutes, above cited, are whether the person demanded has been substantially charged with a crime, and whether he is a fugitive from justice. The first is a question of law and the latter is a question of fact, which the governor, upon whom the demand is made, must decide upon such evidence as is satisfactory to him. Strict common-law evidence is not necessary. The statute does not provide for the particular kind of evidence to be produced before him, nor how it shall be authenticated, but it must at least be evidence which is satisfactory to the mind of the governor. Roberts v. Reilly, 116 U. S. 80, 95, 29 L. ed. 544, 549, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 291. The person demanded has no constitutional right to be heard before the governor on either question, and the statute provides for none. To hold otherwise would, in many cases, render the constitutional provision, as well as the statute passed to carry it out, wholly useless. The governor, therefore, committed no error in refusing a hearing. The issuing of the warrant by him, with or without a recital therein that the person demanded is a fugitive from justice, must be regarded as sufficient to justify the removal, until the presumption in favor of the legality and regularity of the warrant is overthrown by contrary proof in a legal proceeding to review the action of the governor. Roberts v. Reilly, 116 U. S. 80, 29 L. ed. 544, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 291; Hyatt v. New York, 188 U. S. 691, 47 L. ed. 657, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 456.

After the decision of the governor, and the issuing of the warrant, the plaintiff in error sued out this writ of habeas corpus [373]*for the purpose of reviewing his action.

The position taken by the plaintiff in error upon the hearing on the return of the writ, in refusing to introduce evidence upon the question whether she was in fact a fugitive from justice, left the case for decision upon the papers before the governor upon which he acted in issuing the warrant of arrest. We have no doubt that a prima facie case was made out, and as the plaintiff in error waived any right to give further evidence, she is concluded by that prima facie case. The indictment undoubtedly set forth a substantial charge against the plaintiff in error, and the facts therein set forth constituted a felony in the commonwealth of Massachusetts, as certified by the district attorney. The sufficiency of the indictment, as a matter of technical pleading, will not be inquired into on habeas corpus. Ex parte Reggel, 114 U. S. 642, 29 L. ed. 250, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1148; Pearce v. Texas, 155 U. S. 311, 39 L. ed. 164, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 116; Ex parte Hart, 59 Fed. 894.

If the indictment be for three distinct offenses (although of the same nature) set out in the three different counts, as is argued by plaintiff in error, it will not be presumed that such an indictment is void under the laws of Massachusetts, and the question of procedure under the indictment is one for the courts of the state where it was found. The courts of that state would undoubtedly protect her in the enjoyment of all her constitutional rights. These are matters for the trial court of the demanding state, and are not to be inquired of on this writ. If it appear that the indictment substantially charges an offense for which the person may be returned to the state for trial, it is enough for this proceeding.

Upon the question of fact, whether the plaintiff was a fugitive from justice, her counsel, in the argument before this court, set up several objections of a technical nature, which, he argued, showed that the plaintiff in error was not present in Massachusetts at the time when one of the crimes, at least, was alleged to have been committed. As the indictment sets up in the first two counts that the plaintiff in error had not been usually or publicly a resident of Massachusetts at any *time since the commission [374] of the offense set forth in those counts, it is argued that the indictment shows that she was not present in the state at the time when the third count charges a crime to have been committed, and the Whitney affidavit shows she fled from the state before the alleged commission of the crime set forth in the third count. There is no impossibility in the plaintiff in error having returned and been present in the state at the time of the alleged commission of the offense set forth in the third count, even though she had not been "usually or publicly a resident of that state" since the time when it is alleged that she committed the offenses set forth in the first two counts, and had fled therefrom before the commission of the last offense set forth in the third count. The affidavit of Mr. Whitney is to the effect that at the time of the commission of the crimes she was in the state of Massachusetts, and that at the same time, and previous thereto, she was a resident of Cambridge, in the county of Middlesex. Whether she was a resident or not is not important, as to the third count, if she were present in the state and committed the crime therein. The statement in the affidavit that she fled on or about the 4th day of November, 1901, while the third count of the indictment avers the commission of the crime on the 20th November of that year, is sufficiently exact, considering the facts in the case, as the affiant states that she was in the commonwealth at the time of the commission of the crime. Reasonably construed, the affidavit of Whitney shows the presence of the plaintiff in error in the state, and is sufficient, unexplained and uncontradicted, for that purpose.

When it is conceded, or when it is so conclusively proved that no question can be made, that the person was not within the demanding state when the crime is said to have been committed, and his arrest is sought on the ground only of a constructive presence at that time, in the demanding state, then the court will discharge the defendant. Hyatt v. New York, 188 U. S. 691, 47 L. ed. 657, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 456, affirming the judgment of the New York court [375] *of appeals, 172 N. Y. 176, 60 L. R. A. 774, 92 Am. St. Rep. 706, 64 N. E. 825. But the court will not discharge a defendant arrested under the governor's warrant where there is merely contradictory evidence on the subject of presence in or absence from the state, as habeas corpus is not the proper proceeding to try the question of alibi, or any question as to the guilt or innocence of the accused. As a prima facie case existed for the return of the plaintiff in error and she refused to give any evidence upon the return of the writ which she had herself sued out, other than the papers before the governor, no case was made out for her discharge, and the judgment of the Supreme Court of New Hampshire, refusing to grant it, must, therefore, be affirmed.

SWIFT & COMPANY et al., Appts.,
v.
UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 375-402.)

Interstate commerce—unlawful restraints and monopolies—combinations of meat dealers—sufficiency of allegations of bill.

1. A general allegation of intent may color and apply to all the specific charges of a bill which seeks relief against alleged violations of the act of July 2, 1890 (26 Stat. at L. 209, chap. 647, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3200), to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies.
2. A bill charges a violation of the act of July 2, 1890 (26 Stat. at L. 209, chap. 647, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3200), to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies, as against the objections of want of equity, multifariousness, and failure to set forth sufficient definite or specific facts, where it avers the existence of a combination of a dominant proportion of the dealers in fresh meat throughout the United States not to bid against each other in the live stock markets of the different states, to bid up prices for a few days in order to induce shipments to the stock yards, to fix selling prices, and to that end to restrict shipments of meat when necessary, to establish a uniform rule of credit to dealers, and to keep a black list, to make uniform and improper charges for cartage, and to secure less than lawful freight rates, to the exclusion of competitors.

3. A combination of independent meat dealers, in aid of an attempt to monopolize commerce in fresh meat among the states, to restrict the competition of their respective agents when purchasing stock for them in the stock yards, is an interference with interstate commerce, forbidden by the act of July 2, 1890, (26 Stat. at L. 209, chap. 647, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3200), to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies, where such dealers and their slaughtering establishments are largely in different states from those of the stock yards, and the sellers of the cattle largely in different states from either.
4. Trade in fresh meat is sufficiently shown to be commerce among the states, protected from restraint by the act of July 2, 1890 (26 Stat. at L. 209, chap. 647, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3200), by allegations in a bill charging meat dealers with violations of that act, which, even if they import a technical passing of title at the slaughtering places in cases of sales, also import that the sales are to persons in other states, and that the shipments to other states are pursuant to such sales, and by allegations charging sales of such meat by their agents in other states, which indicate that some, at least, of the sales were in the original packages.
5. Vagueness cannot be asserted of a charge in a bill seeking relief against an attempt to monopolize commerce in fresh meat among the states, in violation of the act of July 2, 1890 (26 Stat. at L. 209, chap. 647, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3200), that a combination exists among independent meat dealers to restrain their respective agents from bidding against each other when purchasing live stock for them in the stock yards.
6. Interstate commerce is unlawfully restrained, in violation of the act of July 2, 1890 (26 Stat. at L. 209, chap. 647, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3200), by a combination of independent meat dealers, in aid of an attempt to monopolize commerce in fresh meat among the states, to bid up prices for live stock for a few days at a time, in order to induce cattle men in other states to make large shipments to the stock yards, or by a combination for the same purpose to fix the selling price of fresh meat, and to that end to restrict shipments, when necessary, to establish a uniform rule of credit to dealers, and to keep a black list, or by a combination in aid of such purpose to make uniform and improper charges for cartage for the delivery of meat sold to be shipped to dealers and consumers in the several states.
7. A combination to secure less than lawful freight rates, entered into by independent meat dealers with the intent to monopolize commerce in fresh meat among the several states, is forbidden by the act of July 2, 1890 (26 Stat. at L. 209, chap. 647, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3200), to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies.

NOTE.—On illegal trusts under modern anti-trust laws—see note to Whitwell v. Continental Tobacco Co. 64 L. R. A. 689.

Argued January 6, 9, 1905. Decided January 30, 1905.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois to review a decree on demurrer, granting an injunction against alleged violations of the act of July 2, 1890 (26 Stat. at L. 209, chap. 647, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3200), to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies. Modified by making the injunction more specific, and as modified affirmed.

See same case below, 122 Fed. 529.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. John S. Miller argued the cause, and, with Mr. Merritt Starr, filed a brief for appellants:

The charges in each of the paragraphs or counts of the bill or petition, of alleged violations of the Sherman act, are, respectively, mere statements of legal conclusions. Each is bad on demurrer for that reason.

These charges would be bad on that ground, even in an indictment under this act.

Re Greene, 52 Fed. 104; United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 563, 23 L. ed. 588, 595; United States v. Simmons, 96 U. S. 360, 24 L. ed. 819; United States v. Carll, 105 U. S. 611, 26 L. ed. 1135; United States v. Britton, 107 U. S. 655, 27 L. ed. 520, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 512.

And a fortiori are they bad in a bill or petition in equity, which is required to state the facts essential to the cause of action.

Lawson v. Howell, 118 Cal. 613, 49 L. R. A. 400, 50 Pac. 763; Wright v. Dame, 22 Pick. 59; Ambler v. Choteau, 107 U. S. 586, 591, 27 L. ed. 322, 324, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 556; Van Weel v. Winston, 115 U. S. 228, 237, 238, 29 L. ed. 384, 385, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 22; 1 Foster, Fed. Pr. § 67.

The facts alleged are looked at, and not adjectives or adverbs or epithets.

Magniac v. Thomson, 2 Wall. Jr. 209, Fed. Cas. No. 8,957; Price v. Coleman, 21 Fed. 357; Van Weel v. Winston, 115 U. S. 228, 29 L. ed. 384, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 22; Ambler v. Choteau, 107 U. S. 586, 27 L. ed. 322, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 556.

The importance of applying this rule with strictness here is more marked because answer by the defendants under oath is called for.

This point is properly raised by demurrer.

1 Dan. Ch. Pr. 372.

It was so raised in Van Weel v. Winston, 115 U. S. 228, 29 L. ed. 384, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 22.

The decree complained of, which is merely one of injunction, is erroneous on like grounds of indefiniteness.

196 U. S.

Laurie v. Laurie, 9 Paige, 234; Robinson v. Clapp, 65 Conn. 365, 29 L. R. A. 582, 32 Atl. 939; Whipple v. Hutchinson, 4 Blatchf. 190, Fed. Cas. No. 17,517.

The provisions of the Sherman act do not contemplate such a general proceeding or decree to interfere in advance with future dealings as interstate commerce, which may be interstate trade or may be domestic trade, according to the future and changeable intention of the dealers.

United States v. E. C. Knight Co. 156 U. S. 1, 15, 39 L. ed. 325, 330, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249.

The deliveries by defendants to the carriers, who are agents of the purchasers in that respect, under the allegations of the bill, are deliveries to the purchasers in the state where the sale is made; and the sales and deliveries are there fully completed.

Merchant v. Chapman, 4 Allen, 362; Orcutt v. Nelson, 1 Gray, 543; Waldron v. Romaine, 22 N. Y. 368; Kelsea v. Ramsey & G. Mfg. Co. 55 N. J. L. 320, 22 L. R. A. 415, 26 Atl. 907; Coxe v. Harden, 4 East, 211; Brown v. Hodgson, 2 Campb. 36; Groning v. Mendham, 5 Maule & S. 189; 2 Kent Com. 499; Crossman v. Lurman, 192 U. S. 189, 198-200, 48 L. ed. 401, 405, 406, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 234.

The sellers' act in delivering the merchandise to the common carrier, or carrying the merchandise to the carrier's depot (if that is taken to be in effect alleged), is not any part of the interstate transportation, and does not make the goods the subject of interstate commerce.

Coe v. Errol, 116 U. S. 517, 528, 29 L. ed. 715, 719, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 475.

The fact that the sale is made with a view to the goods being transported by the buyer's agent to another state after the sale and delivery is fully completed does not make the sale interstate commerce.

Kidd v. Pearson, 128 U. S. 1, 23, 24, 32 L. ed. 346, 351, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 232, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 6; United States v. E. C. Knight Co. 156 U. S. 1, 13-17, 39 L. ed. 325, 329-331, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249.

The sales alleged in the third paragraph of the bill, by agents of the owners in other states and territories, to whom the owners of the fresh meats have shipped the same for sale there by such agents on the ground, are not interstate commerce.

Coe v. Errol, 116 U. S. 517, 525, 526, 29 L. ed. 715, 718, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 475; Kidd v. Pearson, 128 U. S. 1, 13-17, 32 L. ed. 346, 348, 349, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 232, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 6; United States v. E. C. Knight Co. 156 U. S. 1, 13, 17, 39 L. ed. 325, 329, 331, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249; Austin v. Tennessee, 179 U. S. 343, 45 L. ed. 224, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132; Crossman v. Lurman, 192 U. S. 189, 198-200, 48 L. ed. 401, 405, 406, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 234; American Harrow Co. v. Shaffer, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 336, 68 Fed. 750; Stevens v. Ohio, 93 Fed. 793.

Under the allegations here in question, it is to be taken that the meats, before the sales here referred to are made, have come to their place of rest, and are at rest for an indefinite time, awaiting sale at their place of destination, and are a commodity in the market where the sales are made; and that the sales are not in the original packages; and that the meats at the time of the sales have become a part of the general property in the state where sold, and are there handled and sold as such.

Pittsburg & S. Coal Co. v. Bates, 156 U. S. 577, 588, 589, 39 L. ed. 538, 544, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 30, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 415; Brown v. Houston, 114 U. S. 623, 632, 633, 29 L. ed. 257, 260, 261, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1091; Emert v. Missouri, 156 U. S. 296, 310, 39 L. ed. 430, 433, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 68, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 367; Singer Mfg. Co. v. Wright, 97 Ga. 123, 35 L. R. A. 497, 25 S. E. 249.

The point here made is entirely consistent with the rulings in many cases, that the owner of merchandise who transports it from one state to another for sale has a right, which cannot be interfered with by state or municipal laws, to sell it as an article of interstate commerce. He also has a right to make such article part of the general property of the state into which it is taken, and he then has the right to sell and others have the right to purchase it as an article of domestic commerce, which cannot be interfered with by Federal law. The Sherman act does not seek to and could not interfere with that right. (United States v. E. C. Knight Co. 156 U. S. 15, 39 L. ed. 330, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249; Kidd v. Pearson, 128 U. S. 1, 32 L. ed. 346, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 232, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 6; Veazie v. Moor, 14 How. 568, 14 L. ed. 545.) But this bill here does seek to interfere with that right.

Again, the point here made is not touched by the line of decisions holding that state or municipal laws are invalid which, by taxation or other regulations, discriminate against merchandise brought from another state, or seek to prevent interstate commerce therein,—such as—

Welton v. Missouri, 91 U. S. 275, 23 L. ed. 347; Walling v. Michigan, 116 U. S. 446, 29 L. ed. 691, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 454; Minnesota v. Barber, 136 U. S. 313, 34 L. ed. 455, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 185, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862; Brimmer v. Rebman, 138 U. S. 78, 34 L. ed. 862, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 485, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 213; Schollenberger v. Penn- sylvania, 171 U. S. 1, 24, 25, 43 L. ed. 49, 57, 58, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 757.

The description of the live stock in the sixth paragraph as live stock produced and owned principally in other states and territories, and shipped by the owners to the place where sold, for sale to persons engaged in producing and dealing in fresh meats, does not show that the sales of the live stock are interstate commerce. The live stock, when offered for sale in the pens of the stock yards, are, under the allegations of fact in the bill, to be considered as having become part of the general mass of property of the state where offered for sale. The defendants purchasing the live stock have the right so to treat and deal therewith.

Brown v. Houston, 114 U. S. 622, 632, 633, 29 L. ed. 257, 260, 261, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1091; Pittsburg & S. Coal Co. v. Bates, 156 U. S. 577, 588, 589, 39 L. ed. 538, 544, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 30, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 415; Robbins v. Shelby County Taxing Dist. 120 U. S. 489, 497, 30 L. ed. 694, 697, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 45, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 592; Diamond Match Co. v. Ontonagon, 188 U. S. 82, 92-97, 47 L. ed. 394, 398-400, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 266.

When purchased, the live stock is, under the allegations of this bill, at rest for an indefinite time, awaiting sale at its place of destination.

Diamond Match Co. v. Ontonagon, 188 U. S. 95, 96, 47 L. ed. 399, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 266.

If these purchases of live stock are interstate commerce, the acts alleged in the sixth and seventh paragraphs are not violations of the Sherman act.

Hopkins v. United States, 171 U. S. 591, 43 L. ed. 295, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40; Anderson v. United States, 171 U. S. 604, 43 L. ed. 300, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 50.

A criminal conspiracy is an agreement of two or more either to do an act criminal or unlawful in itself, or to do a lawful act by means which are criminal or unlawful.

Pettibone v. United States, 148 U. S. 203, 37 L. ed. 422, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 542; Com. v. Shedd, 7 Cush. 514.

Here, neither the act nor the means alleged are criminal or unlawful. The allegation of intent is immaterial.

Stevenson v. Newnham, 13 C. B. 285; Allen v. Flood [1898] A. C. 1.

The restraint of trade, if any, which a combination by defendants to raise or lower their own prices would tend to effect, would be an indirect result, and such result would not necessarily determine the object of the contract, combination, or conspiracy.

United States v. E. C. Knight Co. 156

U. S. 16, 39 L. ed. 330, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249.

The cartage as described is not, under the allegations of the bill, interstate commerce.

New York ex rel. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Knight, 192 U. S. 21, 48 L. ed. 325, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 202; Detroit, G. H. & M. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 21 C. C. A. 103, 43 U. S. App. 308, 74 Fed. 803; Hopkins v. United States, 171 U. S. 578, 592-597, 43 L. ed. 290, 296, 297, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40.

The allegation of the tenth paragraph is of a legal conclusion. It also is too indefinite and general. Sufficient facts are not alleged.

United States v. Hanley, 71 Fed. 672.

With respect to the supposed limitations of the Sherman act upon the right of private contract, that act is to be interpreted in the light of the principles of the common law.

United States v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U. S. 649, 42 L. ed. 890, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 456; Moore v. United States, 91 U. S. 270, 274, 23 L. ed. 346, 347; Minor v. Happersett, 21 Wall. 162, 22 L. ed. 627; Ex parte Wilson, 114 U. S. 417, 422, 29 L. ed. 89, 91, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 935; Boyd v. United States, 116 U. S. 616, 624, 625, 29 L. ed. 746, 748, 749, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 524; Smith v. Alabama, 124 U. S. 465, 31 L. ed. 508, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 804, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564.

The bill of complaint is multifarious, and there is a misjoinder of causes and of parties.

Walker v. Powers, 104 U. S. 251, 26 L. ed. 731; Brown v. Guarantee Trust & Safe Deposit Co. 128 U. S. 403, 32 L. ed. 468, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 127; Ziegler v. Lake Street Elev. R. Co. 22 C. C. A. 465, 46 U. S. App. 242, 76 Fed. 662; Eastern Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Denton, 13 C. C. A. 44, 31 U. S. App. 187, 65 Fed. 569.

The demurrers to so much of the bill as prays for answer under oath, and to so much thereof as prays discovery of defendants' books, papers, etc., are well taken.

Rights protected by the 4th and 5th Amendments are thereby infringed.

United States v. Saline Bank, 1 Pet. 100, 7 L. ed. 69; Boyd v. United States, 116 U. S. 616, 29 L. ed. 746, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 524; Counselman v. Hitchcock, 142 U. S. 547, 35 L. ed. 1110, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 816, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 195; Entick v. Carrington, 19 How. St. Tr. 1029, 2 Wils. 275; Huckle v. Money, 2 Wils. 206; Mitford & Tyler's Eq. Pl. 289.

Attorney General Moody argued the cause, and, with Mr. W. A. Day, filed a brief for appellee:

A combination, conspiracy, or agreement between independent manufacturers or producers of a necessary of life, to fix and maintain uniform prices for their products, or otherwise to suppress competition with each other, is an unlawful restraint upon trade.

United States v. E. O. Knight Co. 156 U. S. 1, 16, 39 L. ed. 325, 330, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249; United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Asso. 166 U. S. 290, 41 L. ed. 1007, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 540; United States v. Joint Traffic Asso. 171 U. S. 505, 43 L. ed. 259, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25; Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. v. United States, 175 U. S. 211, 44 L. ed. 136, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 96; Northern Securities Co. v. United States, 193 U. S. 197, 48 L. ed. 679, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436; Chesapeake & O. Fuel Co. v. United States, 53 C. C. A. 256, 115 Fed. 610; Mogul S. S. Co. v. McGregor [1892] A. C. 46; Morris Run Coal Co. v. Barclay Coal Co. 68 Pa. 173, 8 Am. Rep. 159; Nester v. Continental Brewing Co. 161 Pa. 473, 24 L. R. A. 247, 41 Am. St. Rep. 894, 92 Atl. 102; Central Ohio Salt Co. v. Guthrie, 35 Ohio St. 666, People v. Sheldon, 139 N. Y. 251, 23 L. R. A. 221, 36 Am. St. Rep. 690, 34 N. E. 785; Cummings v. Union Blue Stone Co. 164 N. Y. 405, 52 L. R. A. 262, 79 Am. St. Rep. 655, 58 N. E. 525; Trenton Potteries Co. v. Oliphant, 58 N. J. Eq. 507, 46 L. R. A. 255, 78 Am. St. Rep. 612, 43 Atl. 723; Craft v. McConoughy, 79 Ill. 346, 22 Am. Rep. 171; Noyes, Intercorporate Relations, p. 513, note 1.

Necessarily, the means agreed upon to effect the unlawful object of the combination or conspiracy are inseparable parts of the combination or conspiracy itself, and, along with it, fall within the condemnation of the law.

Interstate commerce, or commerce among the several states, according to Chief Justice Marshall's definition in Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 194, 6 L. ed. 23, 69, is commerce which concerns more states than one; and a combination or agreement between independent manufacturers or producers, to fix and control prices and suppress competition, is a restraint upon commerce.

To destroy or restrict free competition in interstate commerce is to restrain such commerce.

Northern Securities Co. v. United States, 193 U. S. 197, 337, 48 L. ed. 679, 700, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436.

A combination may restrain interstate commerce, although the individual transactions of its members might, standing alone and viewed separate and apart from the purpose and necessary effect of the whole combination, be intrastate in character.

W. W. Montague & Co. v. Lowry, 193 U. S. 38, 48 L. ed. 608, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 307;

Addyston Pipe Steel Co. v. United States, 175 U. S. 211, 240, 44 L. ed. 136, 147, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 96.

The right to transport articles of commerce from one state to another includes the right of the owner or consignee to sell them in the latter free from any burden or restraint that the states might attempt to impose (Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat. 419, 6 L. ed. 678; Bowman v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 125 U. S. 465, 31 L. ed. 700, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 823, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 689, 1062; Leisy v. Hardin, 135 U. S. 100, 34 L. ed. 128, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 36, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681; Rhodes v. Iowa, 170 U. S. 412, 42 L. ed. 1088, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 664) and, a fortiori, free from any burden or restraint that a combination of individuals might impose (Re Debs, 158 U. S. 564, 581, 39 L. ed. 1092, 1101, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 900).

The selling of an article at its destination, which has been brought from another state, may be regarded as an interstate sale, and one which the importer is entitled to make, although the services of the individual employed at the place where the article is sold are not so connected with the subject sold as to make them a portion of interstate commerce.

Hopkins v. United States, 171 U. S. 578, 590, 43 L. ed. 290, 295, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40.

The test for multifariousness is whether the bill, fairly construed, shows a single object and seeks to enforce one general and common right.

14 Enc. Pl. & Pr. 198; 1 Bates, Fed. Eq. Proc. §§ 135, 195.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an appeal from a decree of the circuit court, on demurrer, granting an injunction against the appellants' commission of alleged violations of the act of July 2, 1890 (26 Stat. at L. 209, chap. 647, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3200), "to Protect Trade and Commerce against Unlawful Restraints and Monopolies." It will be necessary to consider both the bill and the decree.

The bill is brought against a number of corporations, firms, and individuals of different states, and makes the following allegations: 1. The defendants * (appellants) are engaged in the business of buying live stock at the stock yards in Chicago, Omaha, St. Joseph, Kansas City, East St. Louis, and St. Paul, and slaughtering such live stock at their respective plants in places named, in different states, and converting the live stock into fresh meat for human consumption. 2. The defendants "are also engaged in the business of selling such fresh meats, at the several places where they are so prepared, to dealers and consumers in divers states and territories of the said United States other than those wherein the said meats are so prepared and sold as aforesaid, and in the District of Columbia, and in foreign countries, and shipping the same meats, when so sold, from the said places of their preparation, over the several lines of transportation of the several railroad companies serving the same as common carriers, to such dealers and consumers, pursuant to such sales." 3. The defendants also are engaged in the business of shipping such fresh meats to their respective agents at the principal markets in other states, etc., for sale by those agents in those markets to dealers and consumers. 4. The defendants together control about six tenths of the whole trade and commerce in fresh meats among the states, territories, and District of Columbia, and, 5, but for the acts charged would be in free competition with one another.

6. In order to restrain competition among themselves as to the purchase of live stock, defendants have engaged in, and intend to continue, a combination for requiring, and do and will require, their respective purchasing agents at the stock yards mentioned, where defendants buy their live stock (the same being stock produced and owned principally in other states and shipped to the yards for sale), to refrain from bidding against each other, "except perfunctorily and without good faith," and by this means compelling the owners of such stock to sell at less prices than they would receive if the bidding really was competitive.

7. For the same purposes the defendants combine to bid up, through their agents, the prices of live stock for a few days at a time, "so that the market reports will show prices much higher than the state of the trade will warrant," thereby inducing stock owners in other states to make large shipments to the stock yards, to their disadvantage.

8. For the same purposes, and to monopolize the commerce protected by the statute, the defendants combine "to arbitrarily, from time to time, raise, lower, and fix prices, and to maintain uniform prices at which they will sell" to dealers throughout the states. This is effected by secret periodical meetings, where are fixed prices to be enforced until changed at a subsequent meeting. The prices are maintained directly, and by collusively restricting the meat shipped by the defendants, whenever conducive to the result, by imposing penalties for deviations, by establishing a uniform rule for the giving of credit to dealers, etc., and by notifying one another of the delinquencies of such dealers, and keeping a black list of delinquents, and refusing to sell meats to them.

9. The defendants also combine to make uniform charges for cartage for the delivery of meats sold to dealers and consumers in the markets throughout the states, etc., shipped to them by the defendants through the defendants' agents at the markets, when no charges would have been made but for the combination.

10. Intending to monopolize the said commerce, and to prevent competition therein, the defendants "have all and each engaged in and will continue" arrangements with the railroads whereby the defendants received, by means of rebates and other devices, rates less than the lawful rates for transportation, and were exclusively to enjoy and share this unlawful advantage to the exclusion of competition and the public. By force of the consequent inability of competitors to engage or continue in such commerce, the defendants are attempting to monopolize, have monopolized, and will monopolize, the commerce in live stock and fresh meats among the states and territories and with foreign countries, and, 11, the defendants are and have been in conspiracy with each [393] other, with *the railroad companies, and others unknown, to obtain a monopoly of the supply and distribution of fresh meats throughout the United States, etc. And to that end defendants artificially restrain the commerce and put arbitrary regulations in force affecting the same from the shipment of the live stock from the plains to the final distribution of the meats to the consumer. There is a prayer for an injunction of the most comprehensive sort, against all the foregoing proceedings and others, for discovery of books and papers relating directly or indirectly to the purchase or shipment of live stock, and the sale or shipment of fresh meat, and for an answer under oath. The injunction issued is appended in a note.†

*To sum up the bill more shortly, it [394] charges a combination of a dominant proportion of the dealers in fresh meat throughout the United States not to bid against each other in the live-stock markets of the different states, to bid up prices for a few days in order to induce the cattle men to send their stock to the stock yards, to fix prices at which they will sell, and to that end to restrict shipments of meat when necessary, to establish a uniform rule of credit to dealers, and to keep a black list, to make uniform and improper charges for cartage, and finally to get less than lawful rates from the railroads, to the exclusion of competitors. It is true that the last charge is not clearly stated to be a part of the combination. But as it is alleged that the defendants have each and all made arrangements with the railroads, that they were exclusively to enjoy the unlawful advantage, and that their intent in what they did was to monopolize the commerce and to prevent competition, and in view of the general allegation to which we *shall refer, we [395] think that we have stated correctly the purport of the bill. It will be noticed further that the intent to monopolize is alleged for the first time in the 8th section of the bill as to raising, lowering, and fixing prices. In the earlier sections, the intent alleged is to restrain competition among themselves. But, after all the specific charges, there is a general allegation that the defendants are conspiring with one another, the railroads and others, to monopolize the supply and distribution of fresh meat throughout the United States, etc., as has been stated above, and it seems to us that this general allegation of intent colors and applies to all the specific charges of the bill. Whatever may be thought concerning the proper construction of the statute, a bill in equity is not to be read and construed as an indictment would have been read and construed a hundred years ago, but it is to

†"And now, upon motion of the said attorney, the court doth order that the preliminary injunction heretofore awarded in this cause, to restrain the said defendants and each of them, their respective agents and attorneys, and all other persons acting in their behalf, or in behalf of either of them, or claiming so to act, from entering into, taking part in, or performing any contract, combination, or conspiracy, the purpose or effect of which will be, as to trade and commerce in fresh meats between the several states and territories and the District of Columbia, a restraint of trade, in violation of the provisions of the act of Congress approved July 2, 1890, entitled 'An Act to Protect Trade and Commerce against Unlawful Restraints and Monopolies,' either by directing or requiring their respective agents to refrain from bidding against each other in the purchase of live stock; or collusively, and by agreement, to refrain from bidding against each other at the sales of live stock; or, by combination, conspiracy, or contract, raising or lowering prices or fixing uniform prices at which the said meats will be sold, either directly or through their respective agents; or by curtailing the quantity of such meats shipped to such markets and agents; or by establishing and maintaining rules for the giving of credit to dealers in such meats, the effect of which rules will be to restrict competition; or by imposing uniform charges for cartage and delivery of such meats to dealers and consumers, the effect of which will be to restrict competition; or by any other method or device, the purpose and effect of which is to restrain commerce as aforesaid; and also from violating the provisions of the act of Congress approved July 2, 1890, entitled 'An Act to Protect Trade and Commerce against Unlawful Restraints and Monopolies,' by combining or conspiring together, or with each other and others, to monopolize or be taken to mean what it fairly conveys to a dispassionate reader by a fairly exact use of English speech. Thus read this bill seems to us intended to allege successive elements of a single connected scheme.

We read the demurrer with the same liberality. Therefore we take it as applying to the bill generally for multifariousness and want of equity, and also to each section of it which makes a charge, and to the discovery. The demurrer to the discovery will not need discussion in the view which we take concerning the relief, and therefore we turn at once to that.

The general objection is urged that the bill does not set forth sufficient definite or specific facts. This objection is serious, but it seems to us inherent in the nature of the case. The scheme alleged is so vast that it presents a new problem in pleading. If, as we must assume, the scheme is entertained, it is, of course, contrary to the very words of the statute. Its size makes the violation of the law more conspicuous, and yet the same thing makes it impossible to fasten the principal fact to a certain time and place. The elements, too, are so numerous and shifting, even the constituent parts alleged are, and from their nature must be, [396]so extensive in time *and space, that something of the same impossibility applies to them. The law has been upheld, and therefore we are bound to enforce it notwithstanding these difficulties. On the other hand, we equally are bound, by the first principles of justice, not to sanction a decree so vague as to put the whole conduct of the defendants' business at the peril of a summons for contempt. We cannot issue a general injunction against all possible breaches of the law. We must steer between these opposite difficulties as best we can.

The scheme as a whole seems to us to be within reach of the law. The constituent elements, as we have stated them, are enough to give to the scheme a body and, for all that we can say, to accomplish it. Moreover, whatever we may think of them separately, when we take them up as distinct charges, they are alleged sufficiently as elements of the scheme. It is suggested that the several acts charged are lawful, and that intent can make no difference. But they are bound together as the parts of a single plan. The plan may make the parts unlawful. Aikens v. Wisconsin, 195 U. S. 194, 206, ante, 154, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 3. The statute gives this proceeding against combinations in restraint of commerce among the states and against attempts to monopolize the same. Intent is almost essential to such a combination, and is essential to such an attempt. Where acts are not sufficient in themselves to produce a result which the law seeks to prevent,—for instance, the monopoly,—but require further acts in addition to the mere forces of nature to bring that result to pass, an intent to bring it to pass is necessary in order to produce a dangerous probability that it will happen. Com. v. Peaslee, 177 Mass. 267, 272, 59 N. E. 55. But when that intent and the consequent dangerous probability exist, this statute, like many others, and like the common law in some cases, directs itself against that dangerous probability as well as against the completed result. What we have said disposes incidentally of the objection to the bill as multifarious. The unity of the plan embraces all the parts.

One further observation should be made. Although the *combination alleged embraces [397] restraint and monopoly of trade within a single state, its effect upon commerce among the states is not accidental, secondary, remote, or merely probable. On the allegations of the bill the latter commerce no less, perhaps even more, than commerce within a attempt to monopolize any part of the trade and commerce in fresh meats among the several states and territories and the District of Columbia, by demanding, obtaining, or, with or without the connivance of the officers or agents thereof, or any of them, receiving from railroad companies or other common carriers transporting such fresh meats in such trade and commerce, either directly or by means of rebates, or by any other device, transportation of or for such meats, from the points of the preparation and production of the same from live stock or elsewhere, to the markets for the sale of the same to dealers and consumers in other states and territories than those wherein the same are so prepared, or the District of Columbia, at less than the regular rates which may be established or in force on their several lines of transportation, under the provisions in that behalf of the laws of the said United States for the regulation of commerce, be, and the same is hereby, made perpetual.

"But nothing herein shall be construed to prohibit the said defendants from agreeing upon charges for cartage and delivery, and other incidents connected with local sales, where such charges are not calculated to have any effect upon competition in the sales and delivery of meats; nor from establishing and maintaining rules for the giving of credit to dealers where such rules in good faith are calculated solely to protect the defendants against dishonest or irresponsible dealers, nor from curtailing the quantity of meats shipped to a given market where the purpose of such arrangement in good faith is to prevent the over-accumulation of meats as perishable articles in such markets.

"Nor shall anything herein contained be construed to restrain or interfere with the action of any single company or firm, by its or their officers or agents (whether such officers or agents are themselves personally made parties defendant hereto or not), acting with respect to its or their own corporate or firm business, property, or affairs."

single state, is an object of attack. See Leloup v. Port of Mobile, 127 U. S. 640, 647, 32 L. ed. 311, 314, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 134, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1380; Crutcher v. Kentucky, 141 U. S. 47, 59, 35 L. ed. 649, 652, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 851; Allen v. Pullman's Palace Car Co. 191 U. S. 171, 179, 180, 48 L. ed. 134, 138, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 39. Moreover, it is a direct object; it is that for the sake of which the several specific acts and courses of conduct are done and adopted. Therefore the case is not like United States v. E. C. Knight Co. 156 U. S. 1, 33 L. ed. 325, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249, where the subject-matter of the combination was manufacture, and the direct object monopoly of manufacture within a state. However likely monopoly of commerce among the states in the article manufactured was to follow from the agreement, it was not a necessary consequence nor a primary end. Here the subject-matter is sales, and the very point of the combination is to restrain and monopolize commerce among the states in respect to such sales. The two cases are near to each other, as sooner or later always must happen where lines are to be drawn, but the line between them is distinct. Montague & Co. v. Lowry, 193 U. S. 38, 48 L. ed. 608, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 307.

So, again, the line is distinct between this case and Hopkins v. United States, 171 U. S. 578, 43 L. ed. 290, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40. All that was decided there was that the local business of commission merchants was not commerce among the states, even if what the brokers were employed to sell was an object of such commerce. The brokers were not like the defendants before us, themselves the buyers and sellers. They only furnished certain facilities for the sales. Therefore, there again the effects of the combination of brokers upon the commerce was only indirect, and not within the act. Whether the case would have been different if the combination had resulted in exorbitant charges was left open. In Anderson v. United States, 171 U. S. 604, 43 L. ed. 300, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 50, the defendants were buyers and sellers at the stock yards, but their agreement was merely not to employ brokers, or [398] to *recognize yard-traders, who were not members of their association. Any yard-trader could become a member of the association on complying with the conditions, and there was said to be no feature of monopoly in the case. It was held that the combination did not directly regulate commerce between the states, and, being formed with a different intent, was not within the act. The present case is more like Montague & Co. v. Lowry, 193 U. S. 38, 48 L. ed. 608, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 307.

For the foregoing reasons we are of opinion
196 U. S.

ion that the carrying out of the scheme alleged, by the means set forth, properly may be enjoined, and that the bill cannot be dismissed.

So far it has not been necessary to consider whether the facts charged in any single paragraph constitute commerce among the states or show an interference with it. There can be no doubt, we apprehend, as to the collective effect of all the facts, if true, and if the defendants entertain the intent alleged. We pass now to the particulars, and will consider the corresponding parts of the injunction at the same time. The first question arises on the 6th section. That charges a combination of independent dealers to restrict the competition of their agents when purchasing stock for them in the stock yards. The purchasers and their slaughtering establishments are largely in different states from those of the stock yards, and the sellers of the cattle, perhaps it is not too much to assume, largely in different states from either. The intent of the combination is not merely to restrict competition among the parties, but, as we have said, by force of the general allegation at the end of the bill, to aid in an attempt to monopolize commerce among the states.

It is said that this charge is too vague and that it does not set forth a case of commerce among the states. Taking up the latter objection first, commerce among the states is not a technical legal conception, but a practical one, drawn from the course of business. When cattle are sent for sale from a place in one state, with the expectation that they will end their transit, after purchase, in another, and when in effect *they do so, with only the interruption [399] necessary to find a purchaser at the stock yards, and when this is a typical, constantly recurring course, the current thus existing is a current of commerce among the states, and the purchase of the cattle is a part and incident of such commerce. What we say is true at least of such a purchase by residents in another state from that of the seller and of the cattle. And we need not trouble ourselves at this time as to whether the statute could be escaped by any arrangement as to the place where the sale in point of law is consummated. See Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Sims, 191 U. S. 441, 48 L. ed. 254, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 151. But the 6th section of the bill charges an interference with such sales, a restraint of the parties by mutual contract, and a combination not to compete in order to monopolize. It is immaterial if the section also embraces domestic transactions.

It should be added that the cattle in the stock yard are not at rest even to the extent that was held sufficient to warrant taxation in American Steel & Wire Co. v. Speed, 192 U. S. 500, 48 L. ed. 538, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 365. But it may be that the question of taxation does not depend upon whether the article taxed may or may not be said to be in the course of commerce between the states, but depends upon whether the tax so far affects that commerce as to amount to a regulation of it. The injunction against taking part in a combination, the effect of which will be a restraint of trade among the states, by directing the defendants' agents to refrain from bidding against one another at the sales of live stock, is justified so far as the subject-matter is concerned.

The injunction, however, refers not to trade among the states in cattle, concerning which there can be no question of original packages, but to trade in fresh meats, as the trade forbidden to be restrained, and it is objected that the trade in fresh meats described in the 2d and 3d sections of the bill is not commerce among the states, because the meat is sold at the slaughtering places, or, when sold elsewhere, may be sold in less than the original packages. But the allegations of the 2d section, even if they [400] import a technical passing *of title at the slaughtering places, also import that the sales are to persons in other states, and that the shipments to other states are part of the transaction,—“pursuant to such sales,”—and the 3d section imports that the same things which are sent to agents are sold by them, and sufficiently indicates that some, at least, of the sales, are of the original packages. Moreover, the sales are by persons in one state to persons in another. But we do not mean to imply that the rule which marks the point at which state taxation or regulation becomes permissible necessarily is beyond the scope of interference by Congress in cases where such interference is deemed necessary for the protection of commerce among the states. Nor do we mean to intimate that the statute under consideration is limited to that point. Beyond what we have said above, we leave those questions as we find them. They were touched upon in Northern Securities Co. v. United States, 193 U. S. 197, 48 L. ed. 679, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436.

We are of opinion, further, that the charge in the 6th section is not too vague. The charge is not of a single agreement, but of a course of conduct intended to be continued. Under the act it is the duty of the court, when applied to, to stop the conduct. The thing done and intended to be done is perfectly definite: with the purpose mentioned, directing the defendants' agents and inducing each other to refrain from competition in bids. The defendants cannot be ordered to compete, but they properly can be forbidden to give directions or to make agreements not to compete. See Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. v. United States, 175 U. S. 211, 44 L. ed. 136, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 96. The injunction follows the charge. No objection was made on the ground that it is not confined to the places specified in the bill. It seems to us, however, that it ought to set forth more exactly the transactions in which such directions and agreements are forbidden. The trade in fresh meat referred to should be defined somewhat as it is in the bill, and the sales of stock should be confined to sales of stock at the stock yards named, which stock is sent from other states to the stock yards for sale, or is bought at those yards for transport to another state.

*After what we have said, the 7th, 8th, and [401] 9th sections need no special remark, except that the cartage referred to in § 9 is not an independent matter, such as was dealt in in New York ex rel. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Knight, 192 U. S. 21, 48 L. ed. 325, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 202, but a part of the contemplated transit,—cartage for delivery of the goods. The general words of the injunction “or by any other method or device, the purpose and effect of which is to restrain commerce as aforesaid,” should be stricken out. The defendants ought to be informed, as accurately as the case permits, what they are forbidden to do. Specific devices are mentioned in the bill, and they stand prohibited. The words quoted are a sweeping injunction to obey the law, and are open to the objection which we stated at the beginning, that it was our duty to avoid. To the same end of definiteness, so far as attainable, the words “as charged in the bill,” should be inserted between “dealers in such meats,” and “the effect of which rules,” and two lines lower, as to charges for cartage, the same words should be inserted between “dealers and consumers” and “the effect of which.”

The acts charged in the 10th section, apart from the combination and the intent, may, perhaps, not necessarily be unlawful, except for the adjective which proclaims them so. At least we may assume, for purposes of decision, that they are not unlawful. The defendants severally lawfully may obtain less than the regular rates for transportation if the circumstances are not substantially similar to those for which the regular rates are fixed. Act of Feb. 4, 1887, 24 Stat. at L. 379, chap. 104, § 2, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3155. It may be that the regular rates are fixed for carriage in cars furnished by the railroad companies, and that the defendants furnish their own cars and other necessities of transportation. We see nothing to hinder them from com-binning to that end. We agree, as we already have said, that such a combination may be unlawful as part of the general scheme set forth in the bill, and that this scheme as a whole might be enjoined. Whether this particular combination can be enjoined, as it is, apart from its connection with the other [402] *elements, if entered into with the intent to monopolize, as alleged, is a more delicate question. The question is how it would stand if the 10th section were the whole bill. Not every act that may be done with intent to produce an unlawful result is unlawful, or constitutes an attempt. It is a question of proximity and degree. The distinction between mere preparation and attempt is well known in the criminal law. Com. v. Peaslee, 177 Mass. 267, 272, 59 N. E. 55. The same distinction is recognized in cases like the present. United States v. E. C. Knight Co. 156 U. S. 1, 13, 39 L. ed. 325, 329, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249; Kidd v. Pearson, 128 U. S. 1, 23, 24, 32 L. ed. 346, 351, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 232, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 6. We are of opinion, however, that such a combination is within the meaning of the statute. It is obvious that no more powerful instrument of monopoly could be used than an advantage in the cost of transportation. And even if the advantage is one which the act of 1887 permits, which is denied, perhaps inadequately, by the adjective "unlawful," still a combination to use it for the purpose prohibited by the act of 1890 justifies the adjective, and takes the permission away.

It only remains to add that the foregoing question does not apply to the earlier sections, which charge direct restraints of trade within the decisions of the court, and that the criticism of the decree, as if it ran generally against combinations in restraint of trade or to monopolize trade, ceases to have any force when the clause against "any other method or device" is stricken out. So modified it restrains such combinations only to the extent of certain specified devices, which the defendants are alleged to have used and intend to continue to use.

Decree modified and affirmed.

[403] *WALTER W. SMALL, Plff, in Err.,
v.

SAMUEL O. RAKESTRAW.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 403-406.)

Public lands—homestead entry—finding of Secretary of the Interior as to residence—effect of residence elsewhere for voting purposes.

1. A finding by the Secretary of the Interior that the residence of a homestead entryman for voting purposes was in another precinct from that in which the land lies cannot be said to be erroneous as a matter of law, where it was admitted that the entryman, on one occasion after his entry, voted in another county from that in which the land is situated, and it does not clearly appear that the Secretary did not have other evidence before him on that question.

2. A residence for voting purposes in another precinct from that in which a homestead entry lies precludes the entryman from claiming residence at the same time on the land for homestead purposes.

[No. 133.]

Argued January 18, 1905. Decided January 30, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Montana to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District Court of Flathead County, in that State, sustaining a demurrer to, and dismissing, a complaint which seeks to establish a trust in certain real property which the defendant holds under a patent from the United States. Affirmed.

See same case below, 28 Mont. 413, 72 Pac. 746.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. George A. King argued the cause, and, with Messrs. William B. King and William E. Harvey, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The action of the officers of the Land Office was not conclusive, and a court of equity may inquire into the proceedings by which the title was vested.

Lindsey v. Hawes, 2 Black, 554, 557, 17 L. ed. 265, 267; Johnson v. Towsley, 13 Wall. 72, 86, 87, 20 L. ed. 485, 487, 488; Cornelius v. Kessel, 128 U. S. 456, 461, 32 L. ed. 482, 483, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 122; Cunningham v. Ashley, 14 How. 377, 14 L. ed. 462; Barnard v. Ashley, 18 How. 43, 15 L. ed. 285; Garland v. Wynn, 20 How. 6, 15 L. ed. 801; Lytle v. Arkansas, 22 How. 193, 16 L. ed. 306; O'Brien v. Perry, 1 Black, 132, 17 L. ed. 114; Minnesota v. Bachelder, 1 Wall. 109, 17 L. ed. 551; Stark v. Starr, 6 Wall. 402, 419, 18 L. ed. 925, 930; Silver v. Ladd, 7 Wall. 219, 19 L. ed. 138; Monroe Cattle Co. v. Becker, 147 U. S. 47, 57, 37 L. ed. 72, 77, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 217; Thayer v. Spratt, 189 U. S. 346, 47 L. ed. 845, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 576; Hodges v. Colcord, 193 U. S. 192, 48 L. ed. 677, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 433.

Poverty excuses noncontinuous residence. Drought excuses noncultivation, provided

NOTE.—On the conclusiveness and effect of the decisions of Land Department—see notes to Hartman v. Warren, 22 C. C. A. 38; Carson City Gold & S. Min. Co. v. North Star Min. Co. 196 U. S.

28 C. C. A. 344; and Uinta Tunnel Min. & Transp. Co. v. Creede & C. C. Min. & Mill. Co. 57 C. C. A. 207.

good faith is manifested by the homestead claimant.

Clark v. Lawson, 2 Land Dec. 149.

Where the entryman's absences were caused by sickness and poverty, and in no instance exceeded four months, and where there was good faith shown in the matter of cultivation and improvement, the entry was allowed to stand.

Foley v. Brasch, 2 Land Dec. 155.

An entryman placed improvements worth $350 on land. He was a newspaper correspondent, and frequently absent, taking his wife with him, but had no fixed abode save on the land. The value of improvements and the fact that the settler made no attempt to conceal the facts were held sufficient.

Re Dunlap, 3 Land Dec. 545.

In the matter of pre-emption entry, the value of the improvements, preparations for a permanent home, and residence after final proof are held as evidence of good faith, and therefore excuse temporary absences from the land.

Kurtz v. Holt, 4 Land Dec. 56.

Though continuous residence is required of the pre-emptor, temporary absences which do not impeach good faith are excused.

Re Healey, 4 Land Dec. 80.

The maintenance of a residence established in good faith is not inconsistent with absences rendered necessary to secure support and improve the land.

Re Prescott, 6 Land Dec. 245.

The establishment of residence within six months from date of homestead entry is not a specific statutory requirement, but a regulation of the Department based on the provisions in U. S. Rev. Stat. § 2297 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1398), authorizing cancellation on proof of abandonment or change of residence for more than six months. The poverty of the claimant, the condition of his family, and the severity of the climate are matters entitled to consideration in determining whether due compliance with the law as to residence has been shown.

Nilson v. St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. 6 Land Dec. 567.

The rule requiring actual residence of the claimant on the land for six months preceding entry is for the purpose of testing the good faith of the claimant.

Re Martel, 6 Land Dec. 566.

Temporary absences from the land, that indicate no intention of abandonment, may be excused after the establishment of a bona fide residence.

Platt v. Graham, 7 Land Dec. 249; Re Wood, 7 Land Dec. 345.

Absences during the winter season, for the purpose of earning money to improve the land, are not inconsistent with the maintenance of residence in good faith.

Re Farringer, 7 Land Dec. 360.

Absences will not be excused where good faith is not shown. Re Fuchser, 7 Land Dec. 467.

After the establishment of residence, temporary absences for the purpose of earning a livelihood do not authorize a presumption of abandonment.

Re Alderson, 8 Land Dec. 517.

After the establishment of residence, absences occasioned by sickness are excusable, and do not interrupt the continuity of residence. The fact that the claimant, while necessarily absent from the land on account of sickness, voted in the precinct where he had been taken for treatment, will not in itself raise a conclusive presumption of abandonment, where he subsequently returned to the land.

Re Edwards, 8 Land Dec. 353.

Residence on land, and actual presence thereon, are not convertible or synonymous terms; and, residence being once established, subsequent absences, animo revertendi and for a lawful purpose, not indicating an intent to abandon, do not break the continuity of such residence.

Re Lutz, 9 Land Dec. 266.

Where the good faith of the settler is otherwise sufficiently established, temporary absences during any period of the inhabitation, for the purpose of earning a living, not inconsistent with an honest intention to comply with the law, may be accounted constructive residence.

Montgomery v. Curl, 9 Land Dec. 57; Re Martel, 6 Land Dec. 566.

Temporary absences caused by ill health do not interrupt the continuity of residence. The cultivation of crops from year to year indicates the good faith of the settler.

Re Smith, 9 Land Dec. 146.

Continuity of residence is not broken by temporary absences made necessary by the poverty of the claimant.

Re Main, 12 Land Dec. 102; Re Williams, 13 Land Dec. 42; Logan v. Gunn, 13 Land Dec. 113.

Good faith of the entryman was not impeached by absence from land to earn money to support himself and family, and to enable him to pay for the land.

Paulsen v. Ellingwood, 17 Land Dec. 1.

Engagement in public service will not be construed into an abandonment of residence, so long as such efforts are made to maintain improvements as manifest good faith on the part of the entryman.

Tomlinson v. Soderlund, 21 Land Dec. 155.

No counsel for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a complaint by the plaintiff in [405] error to charge the *defendant with a trust in respect of land which the latter holds under a patent from the United States. It alleges a homestead entry by the plaintiff, a contest by the defendant, a decision for the defendant by the local register and receiver, a reversal of this by the Commissioner of the Land Office, and a reversal of the latter decision and a cancelation of the plaintiff's entry by the Secretary of the Interior. The last order is set forth in full, and the complaint goes on the ground that this order discloses a mistake of law on its face. The complaint was demurred to, the demurrer was sustained, and the suit dismissed. An appeal was taken to the supreme court of the state, which affirmed the judgment. 28 Mont. 413, 72 Pac. 746. The case then was brought here.

The material portion of the Secretary's decision is as follows:

"January 21, 1892, plaintiff filed his affidavit of contest against the defendant's homestead entry, charging that the entryman had failed to comply with the law as to residence. The testimony of Small, himself, is that he never voted in the precinct in which his homestead entry lies, but did vote at other points a long distance from his homestead at least twice during the time he claims he was seeking to maintain residence upon the land. He runs a carpenter shop in town, and, to use his own words, 'determined to return to the ranch only often enough to keep a good showing of habitation.' His excuse for that was that the plaintiff threatened him with violence if he undertook to stay on the land.

"Without passing upon any other question it is enough to say that a residence for voting purposes in another precinct from the land precludes an entryman from claiming residence, at the same time, on the land for homestead purposes. Re Burns, 4 Land Dec. 62; Hart v. McHugh, 17 Land Dec. 176; Edwards v. Ford (decided June 18, 1894) 18 Land Dec. 546."

The plaintiff's case rests on the assumption that the words "without passing upon [406] any other question," mean without *passing upon any other question than an absolute proposition of law, and that this proposition is that a vote in another precinct is fatal to a claim of residence. But the Secretary found, by implication, that the plaintiff not merely voted elsewhere, but resided elsewhere for voting. It was after this finding that he laid down the rule complained of. The case presents no exceptional circumstances which would warrant our going behind the finding of fact. Bohall v. Dilla, 114 U. S. 47, 29 L. ed. 61, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 782; Lee v. Johnson, 116 U. S. 48, 51, 29 L. ed. 570, 571, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249; Stewart v. McHarry, 159 U. S. 643, 650, 40 L. ed. 290, 292, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 117. The plaintiff admits that, on one occasion after his entry, he voted in a county other than that in which the land lies, so that it appears from the complaint that there was some evidence that his residence for voting was not in the latter county, and, as the supreme court of Montana remarks, it does not appear clearly that all the facts before the Secretary are those set forth. It is true that a vote in another county is only a circumstance to be considered, but, when it leads to the conclusion of a voting residence elsewhere, it leads to the conclusion of a residence elsewhere for all purposes by the very words of the Compiled Statutes of Montana on which the plaintiff relies. §§ 1007, 1020.
196 U. S.

In view of what we have said it does not appear as matter of law that the Secretary's finding of voting residence was wrong, and it does not appear that his proposition, taken as a proposition of law, was wrong. But, further, the words, "without passing on any other question" cannot be taken absolutely to limit the ground of decision to the proposition of law. It hardly goes further than to emphasize one aspect of the facts as dominant in the Secretary's mind. He already had adopted the plaintiff's own words as establishing that the plaintiff's purpose was only to keep up a good showing. This goes to the general conclusion which the Secretary drew, and shows that it was a conclusion, not from the plaintiff's voting residence merely, but from other facts.

Judgment affirmed.

*HAMBURG AMERICAN STEAMSHIP [407] COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.

MINNIE GRUBE, as Administratrix of John Grube, Deceased.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 407-415.)

Error to state court—Federal question—cession to United States—effect of state laws.

1. The contention that the congressional consent, in the act of June 28, 1834 (4 Stat. at

NOTE.—On the general subject of writs of error from United States Supreme Court to state courts—see notes to Hamblin v. Western

L. 708, chap. 126), to the agreement or compact between the states of New Jersey and New York respecting their territorial limits and jurisdiction, vested exclusive jurisdiction in the Federal government over the sea adjoining the two states, does not raise a Federal question which will sustain a writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court to a state court, where there is nothing in the agreement and confirmatory state statutes abdication rights in favor of the United States, and the transaction simply amounted to fixing the boundaries between the two states.

2. A contention, on a motion for a directed verdict, that the cession to the United States, in N. J. act March 12, 1846, of jurisdiction over a certain strip of land at Sandy Hook, vested in the United States exclusive legislative jurisdiction over the littoral waters extending 3 miles to the eastward of the coast line, presents a question respecting the exclusive legislative power of Congress under U. S. Const. art. I., § 8, cl. 17, which will sustain a writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court to a state court.
3. The public laws of New Jersey are in force in the littoral waters of Sandy Hook peninsula below low-water mark, whether enacted prior or subsequently to the cession to the United States, by N. J. act March 12, 1846, of jurisdiction over a portion of that peninsula for military purposes.

[No. 411.]

Submitted January 16, 1905. Decided February 20, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of New York to review a judgment of that court at a term held in and for the County of New York, in favor of plaintiff, in an action to recover damages for death occasioned by the sinking of a vessel as the result of a collision in waters alleged to be subject to the exclusive legislative jurisdiction of the United States, which judgment was affirmed by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court for the First Department, leave to appeal to the Court of Appeals being denied. On motion to dismiss or affirm, Affirmed.

Statement by Mr. Chief Justice Fuller:

This action was brought in the supreme court of New York by Minnie Grube, as administratrix of John Grube, against the Hamburg American Steamship Company, to recover damages for his death, under the statute of New Jersey in that behalf, occasioned by the sinking of the James Gordon Bennett, a vessel owned by a New Jersey corporation, by the steamship Alene, belonging to the steamship company. There was a conflict of evidence as to the place of the collision, evidence being given, on the one hand, that it occurred in waters beyond the 3-mile limit of the coast of the state of New Jersey, and, on the other, that it occurred within the 3-mile limit along that coast.

The record discloses no instructions to the jury requested by defendant below, and no exceptions were taken by it to the charge of the court, which was not included in the bill of exceptions or case made.

*Defendant moved the court to direct a [408] verdict in its favor upon the following grounds:

"Defendant claims the right, under the statute of the United States confirming and approving the agreement as to boundaries between the state of New York and the state of New Jersey, to be free in navigating the main sea to the eastward of Sandy Hook peninsula, from the operation of any law of the state of New Jersey giving a right of action for injuries causing death, and claims that, under the statutes aforesaid, the jurisdiction of that state extends only to the main sea; that is to say, low-water mark along its exterior coast line, and to a line drawn from headland to headland across the entrance to the bay of New York. It therefore asks the court to direct the jury to return a verdict for the defendant, on the ground that it appears by uncontradicted evidence that the collision between the steamship Alene and the schooner James Gordon Bennett, to recover damages for which this suit is brought, occurred upon the main sea and to the eastward of the Sandy Hook peninsula, and at a distance of more than a mile to the eastward of low-water mark upon the exterior line thereof.

"Defendant claims the right, by reason of the purchase by the United States of the Sandy Hook peninsula, and the cession to the United States by the state of New Jersey of jurisdiction over the same, and the long continued use of that peninsula, and of the main sea to the eastward of it, for military purposes, to be free in navigating the main sea to the eastward of that peninsula from the operation of any law of the state of New Jersey, giving a right of action for injuries causing death, and claims that the main sea to the eastward of said peninsula to a distance of 3 miles from the shore is

Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 267; Klpley v. Illinois, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998; and Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884.

On what adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts—see note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L. R. A. 513.

On how and when questions must be raised and decided in a state court in order to make a case for a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States—see note to Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L. R. A. 33.

As to jurisdiction over the sea—see note to Humboldt Lumber Manufacturers' Assn. v. Christopherson, 46 L. R. A. 264.

subject to the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States. It therefore asks the court to direct the jury to return a verdict for the defendant on the ground that it appears by uncontradicted evidence that the collision between the steamship Alene and the schooner James Gordon Bennett, to recover damages for which *this suit is brought, occurred upon the main sea and to the eastward of the Sandy Hook peninsula, and at a distance of more than a mile to the eastward of low-water mark, upon the exterior line thereof."

The court denied the motion, and defendant excepted. The jury found a general verdict for plaintiff below, and assessed the damages. Judgment was entered thereon, which was affirmed by the appellate division of the supreme court, and a writ of error from the court of appeals was denied. This writ of error was then allowed, and the case submitted on motions to dismiss or affirm.

Mr. Everett P. Wheeler submitted the cause for plaintiff in error:

A Federal question was involved.

Wedding v. Meyler, 192 U. S. 573, 48 L. ed. 570, 66 L. R. A. 833, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 322; National Mut. Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Brahan, 193 U. S. 635, 48 L. ed. 823, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 532.

Wherever land is purchased by the United States within the limits of an existing state and with the consent of the legislature, the jurisdiction of Congress, under the Constitution, is exclusive.

Ft. Leavenworth R. Co. v. Lowe, 114 U. S. 525, 29 L. ed. 264, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 995; Story, Const. § 1227; Re Ladd, 74 Fed. 31; United States v. Tucker, 122 Fed. 518; Com. v. Clary, 8 Mass. 72; United States v. King, 34 Fed. 302.

As the states have no longer legislative power over these military tracts, so their inhabitants have none of the rights of citizens of the states to which they originally belonged.

Sinks v. Reese, 19 Ohio St. 306, 2 Am. Rep. 397; Opinion of the Justices, 1 Met. 580; Com. v. Clary, 8 Mass. 72; 6 Ops. Atty. Gen. 577.

The United States has the same jurisdiction over places ceded by states as over those purchased by the consent of a state, in so far as the particular act of cession does not expressly restrict it.

United States v. Carter, 84 Fed. 622.

Littoral waters within 3 miles of a maritime frontier are subject to the jurisdiction of the sovereign of the shore.

Wheaton, International Law, § 177.

The effect of the increase in the range of projectiles is to extend the exclusive jurisdiction of the sovereign of the shore.

Pom. International Law, § 144; 1 Hautefeuille, Droits des Nations Neutres, pp. 53, 54.

The New Jersey act which gave to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the peninsula of Sandy Hook passed the same jurisdiction over the littoral waters.

Ex parte Tatem, 1 Hughes, 588, Fed. Cas. No. 13,759.

To realize the particular object of this cession, control of the waters is peculiarly necessary. It would be difficult to put a case which better illustrates the wisdom of the doctrine that, when the use of a thing is granted, everything is granted by which the grantee may have and enjoy the same.

Kent, Com. 467, note g; United States v. Appleton, 1 Sumn. 492, Fed. Cas. No. 14,463; Potter v. Boyce, 73 App. Div. 383, 77 N. Y. Supp. 24, Affirmed in 176 N. Y. 551, 68 N. E. 1123; Huttemeier v. Albro, 18 N. Y. 48; Richardson v. Bigelow, 15 Gray, 154; Voorhees v. Burchard, 55 N. Y. 98; Simmons v. Cloonan, 81 N. Y. 557; Ex parte Tatem, 1 Hughes, 588, Fed. Cas. No. 13,759.

Before the act of cession, Sandy Hook was subject to the common and statute law of the state of New Jersey. We do not contend that the cession operated ipso facto to abrogate this body of law. On the contrary, it is well recognized that change of sovereignty over territory does not ipso facto work a general change of the law then existing.

Halleck, International Law, chap. 34, § 14; American Ins. Co. v. 356 Bales of Cotton, 1 Pet. 511, 542, 7 L. ed. 243, 255; Com. v. Chapman, 13 Met. 68; Chappell v. Jardine, 51 Conn. 64.

The same doctrine is applied to cessions by particular estates to the United States for military purposes.

Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. McGlinn, 114 U. S. 542, 29 L. ed. 270, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1005; Barrett v. Palmer, 135 N. Y. 336, 17 L. R. A. 720, 31 Am. St. Rep. 835, 31 N. E. 1017; Madden v. Arnold, 22 App. Div. 240, 47 N. Y. Supp. 757.

The effect of such a cession is to subject the territory ceded, to the United States as its sovereign, and to sever all further political relation with the state of which it was formerly a part.

Madden v. Arnold, 22 App. Div. 240, 47 N. Y. Supp. 757.

Thenceforth all legislation must be by the new sovereign, the United States, and New Jersey is utterly without power to enact new laws for this territory.

Re Ladd, 74 Fed. 31; Mitchell v. Tibbetts, 17 Pick. 298; Com. v. Clary, 8 Mass. 72;

Contzen v. United States, 179 U. S. 191, 45 L. ed. 148, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 98.

The New Jersey act of cession contains nothing at variance with the propositions advanced above.

Ft. Leavenworth R. Co. v. Lowe, 114 U. S. 533, 29 L. ed. 267, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 995; United States v. Cornell, 2 Mason, 60, Fed. Cas. No. 14,867; United States v. Mcagher, 37 Fed. 875; Lasher v. State, 30 Tex. App. 387, 28 Am. St. Rep. 922, 17 S. W. 1064; United States v. Hammond, 1 Cranch, C. C. 15, Fed. Cas. No. 15,293.

The court will not adopt a construction which renders the act of cession inconsistent with itself.

United States v. Hammond, 1 Cranch, C. C. 15, Fed. Cas. No. 15,293.

Descriptive matter in a statute must refer to things as they existed at the time of its passage.

McConihay v. Wright, 121 U. S. 201, 205, 30 L. ed. 932, 933, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 940; Morris Canal & Bkg. Co. v. State, 24 N. J. L. 62; Griswold v. Atlantic Dock Co. 21 Barb. 225.

When the phrase "main sea," or its equivalent, "high seas," is used, it means the ocean from low-water mark.

General Iron Screw Collier Co. v. Schurmanns, 1 Johns. & H. 180; United States v. Kessler, Baldw. 15, Fed. Cas. No. 15,528; 1 Bl. Com. p. 110; Coulson & F. Waters, 11; United States v. Ross, 1 Gall. 624, Fed. Cas. No. 16,196.

Statutes of the local authorities do not have any force within the 3-mile limit, unless expressly so stated in the statute.

The Saxonia, Lush. Adm. Cas. 410; Queen v. Keyn, L. R. 2 Exch. Div. 63.

Mr. Gilbert D. Lamb submitted the cause for defendant in error:

This court has no jurisdiction, and will entertain none, unless it affirmatively appears in the record that a Federal question was, of necessity, passed upon by the court below and against the claim of plaintiff in error,—actually and properly set up.

Giles v. Teasley, 193 U. S. 146, 48 L. ed. 655, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 359; Columbia Water Power Co. v. Columbia Electric Street R. Light & P. Co. 172 U. S. 475, 487, 43 L. ed. 521, 525, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 247; Eustis v. Bolles, 150 U. S. 361, 366, 37 L. ed. 1111, 1112, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131; Johnson v. Risk, 137 U. S. 300, 34 L. ed. 683, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111.

The territorial sovereignty of a state extends to a vessel of the state when it is upon the high seas, the vessel being deemed a part of the territory of the state to which it belongs; and it follows that a state statute which creates a liability or authorizes a recovery for the consequences of a tortious act operates as efficiently upon a vessel of the state when the vessel is beyond its boundaries as it does when it is physically within the state.

International Nav. Co. v. Lindstorm, 60 C. C. A. 649, 123 Fed. 475; McDonald v. Mallory, 77 N. Y. 546, 33 Am. Rep. 664; Crapo v. Kelly, 16 Wall. 610, 21 L. ed. 430.

The James Gordon Bennett was a vessel owned by a New Jersey corporation. As such it was subject, with its occupants, including John Grube, to the legislative jurisdiction and law of the state of New Jersey while on the high seas; and, even upon the testimony of plaintiff in error as to the situs of the collision, the verdict as rendered was right.

Ibid.

The claim of Federal jurisdiction not being properly set up in the record, the writ of error should be dismissed.

Hamburg American S. S. Co. v. Lennan, 194 U. S. 629, 48 L. ed. 1157, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 857; Staten Island R. Co. v. Lambert, 131 U. S. cxxi. Appx. and 24 L. ed. 615; Weatherby v. Bowie, 131 U. S. ccxv. Appx. and 25 L. ed. 606; Murdock v. Memphis, 20 Wall. 590, 22 L. ed. 429; Egan v. Hart, 165 U. S. 188, 191, 41 L. ed. 680, 681, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 300; Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. v. Missouri River Packet Co. 125 U. S. 260, 272, 31 L. ed. 731, 736, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 874; Eustis v. Bolles, 150 U. S. 361, 37 L. ed. 1111, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131; New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Louisiana, 185 U. S. 336, 46 L. ed. 936, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 691; Lennan v. Hamburg-American S. S. Co. 73 App. Div. 357, 77 N. Y. Supp. 60; The Alene, 116 Fed. 57.

The jurisdiction of the United States extends only to low-water mark on the New Jersey shore.

Middleton v. La Compagnie, Generale Transatlantique, 41 C. C. A. 98, 100 Fed. 866.

The acquisition of Sandy Hook by the United States was not an instance of a purchase, by the consent of the legislature, of land by the United States authorized by § 8 of art. 1 of the Constitution of the United States.

Ibid; Ft. Leavenworth R. Co. v. Lowe, 114 U. S. 525, 29 L. ed. 264, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 995.

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the opinion of the court:

The assertion by plaintiff in error that Federal questions were decided by the action of the courts below turns on the denial of the motion to direct a verdict on the two grounds above set forth.

As to the first ground, the contention is that the act of Congress of June 28, 1834 (4 Stat. at L. 708; chap. 126), giving consent to the agreement or compact between the states of New Jersey and New York in respect of their territorial limits and jurisdiction, dated September 16, 1833, vested exclusive jurisdiction in the Federal government over the sea adjoining the two states. But there is absolutely nothing in the agreement and confirmatory statutes abdicating rights in favor of the United States, and the transaction simply amounted to fixing the boundaries between the two states. N. Y. Laws 1834, p. 8, chap. 8; N. J. Laws 1834, p. 118. The first proposition raised no Federal question.

As to the second ground, the contention is that the cession by New Jersey to the United States of jurisdiction over a certain strip of land at Sandy Hook vested in the United States exclusive legislative jurisdiction over the littoral waters extending 3 miles to the eastward of the coast line thereof.

Yet there was evidence introduced on behalf of defendant that the collision took place outside of that limit; and the trial court was not requested to instruct the jury that, if they found the collision to have occurred within that limit, the verdict should be for the defendant.

[414] The charge of the court is not before us, nor was any exception *taken to any part of it, and the verdict and judgment must be held to have been rendered on the facts according to law. Hamburg-American S. S. Co. v. Lennan, 194 U. S. 629, 48 L. ed. 1157, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 857.

This being the situation, we hesitate to retain jurisdiction. Nevertheless, as clause 17 of § 8 of article I. of the Constitution† may be regarded as having been properly invoked by the second proposition, we feel justified in declining to sustain the motion to dismiss; and, retaining jurisdiction, we think the judgment must be affirmed.

The jurisdiction of the United States over Sandy Hook is derived from the act of the legislature of New Jersey of March 12, 1846, set forth below.‡ N. J. Laws 1846, p. 146.

†“The Congress shall have power . . . to exercise exclusive legislation in all cases whatsoever, over such district (not exceeding 10 miles square) as may, by cession of particular states and the acceptance of Congress, become the seat of government of the United States, and to exercise like authority over all places purchased by the consent of the legislature of the state in which the same shall be, for the erection of forts, magazines, arsenals, dockyards, and other needful buildings.”

‡1. “That the jurisdiction in and over all that portion of Sandy Hook, in the county of Monmouth, owned by the United States, lying north of an east and west line through the mouth of Young’s creek at low water, and extending across the island or cape of Sandy Hook from shore to shore, and bounded on all other sides by the sea and Sandy Hook bay, be, and the same is

In 1806 and 1817 deeds of the land included in Sandy Hook were given the United States, being simple conveyances of real estate for named money consideration.

The New Jersey act of 1846 was merely one of cession,*and the operation of the [415] general laws of New Jersey was reserved as therein provided. Ft. Leavenworth R. R. Company v. Lowe, 114 U. S. 525, 29 L. ed. 264, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 995; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. McGlinn, 114 U. S. 542, 29 L. ed. 270, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1005.

Moreover, as was held by the circuit court of appeals for the second circuit, in Middleton v. La Compagnie Générale Transatlantique, 41 C. C. A. 98, 100 Fed. 866, the act did not purport to transfer jurisdiction over the littoral waters beyond low-water mark, and for the purposes of this case the public laws of New Jersey must be regarded as obtaining there, whether enacted prior or subsequent to the cession.

Judgment affirmed.

SALLIE J. McDANIEL, Nannie A. Hoshall, and Mary E. Jackson, Appts.,
v.

GEORGE M. TRAYLOR, John F. Stratton,
John F. Smith, et al.

(See S. C. Reporter’s ed. 415-431.)

Courts — jurisdiction of Federal circuit court — diverse citizenship — amount in dispute.

1. A Federal circuit court has jurisdiction of

NOTE.—As to diverse citizenship as ground of Federal jurisdiction—see Shipp v. Williams, 10 C. C. A. 247, and note; Mason v. Dullaghan, 27 C. C. A. 296, and note; Seddon v. Virginia, T. & C. Steel & I. Co. 1 L. R. A. 108, and note; and Myers v. Murray, N. & Co. 11 L. R. A. 216, and note. And see note to Roberts v. Lewis, 36 L. ed. U. S. 579.

As to jurisdiction of United States circuit court as dependent upon amount—see notes to Auer v. Lombard, 19 C. C. A. 72; Tennent-Stribbling Shot Co. v. Roper, 36 C. C. A. 455.

hereby, ceded to the said United States for military purposes; and the said United States shall retain such jurisdiction so long as the said tract shall be applied to the military or public purposes of said United States, and no longer.”

2. “That the jurisdiction ceded in the 1st section of this act shall not prevent the execution on the said tract of land of any process, civil or criminal, under the authority of this state, except so far forth as such process may affect any of the real or personal property of the United States of America within the said tract; nor shall it prevent the operation of the public laws of this state within the bounds of the said tract, so far as the same may not be incompatible with the free use and enjoyment of the said premises by the United States for the purposes above specified.”

a suit in equity brought by citizens of the state in which it sits, against citizens of other states, to set aside, as fraudulently obtained, judgments of a probate court against an intestate's estate, which are a lien on his real property situated within the district and inherited by complainants, since, under the act of March 3, 1875 (18 Stat. at L. 472, chap. 137, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 513), § 8, a circuit court is empowered by final decree to remove any encumbrance or lien or cloud upon the title to real or personal property within the district as against persons not inhabitants thereof, and not found therein, who did not voluntarily appear in the suit.

2. The value of the matter in dispute in a suit to set aside judgments of a probate court establishing claims against the estate of an intestate, which are a lien on his real property inherited by complainants, on the ground that they were fraudulently obtained by defendants acting in concert, is the aggregate amount of the claims whose allowance was procured in furtherance of the unlawful combination.

[No. 129.]

Submitted January 16, 1905. Decided February 20, 1905.

APPPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Arkansas, to review a judgment sustaining a demurrer to, and dismissing for want of jurisdiction, a bill in a suit to set aside, as fraudulently obtained, judgments of probate court establishing claims against the estate of an intestate, which are a lien on his property situated within the district, which is inherited by the complainants. Reversed.

See same case below, 123 Fed. 338.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. George B. Webster submitted the cause for appellants. Mr. J. R. Beasley was on his brief:

The bill is one for the removal of a cloud from title, within the meaning of the rule that in such cases the value of the property upon which the cloud rests, rather than the amount of the defendant's claim, is the amount in controversy for jurisdictional purposes.

Smith v. Adams, 130 U. S. 175, 32 L. ed. 898, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 566; Parker v. Morrill, 106 U. S. 1, 27 L. ed. 72, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 14; Simon v. House, 46 Fed. 317; Woodside v. Ciceroni, 35 C. C. A. 177, 93 Fed. 1; Cowell v. City Water Supply Co. 96 Fed. 769, 57 C. C. A. 393, 121 Fed. 53; Fuller v. Grand Rapids, 40 Mich. 395; Scripture v. Johnson, 3 Conn. 211; Queyrouze v. Thibodeaux, 30 La. Ann. 1114; Simon v. Richard, 42 La. Ann. 842, 8 So. 629; Kahn v. Kerngood, 80

Va. 342; Ayres v. Blair, 26 W. Va. 558; Berthold v. Hoskins, 38 Fed. 772.

The value of the property being the test of the jurisdictional amount, the complainants could have proceeded against any of the defendants, irrespective of the amount of his claim, and therefore may join all in one bill, unless that would make the bill multifarious.

Fellows v. Fellows, 4 Cow. 682, 15 Am. Dec. 412; Story, Eq. Pl. § 271.

And it would be so, even if the defendants claimed under separate judgments, where all were attacked for the same fraud.

Gaines v. Chew, 2 How. 619, 11 L. ed. 402.

Even though the value of the real estate is not the true test of the amount in controversy, the complainants were entitled to join the several defendants in one bill, and, when so joined, the aggregate amount of their claims was the amount in controversy.

1 Pom. Eq. Jur. 2d ed. § 269; Sheffield Waterworks v. Yeomans, L. R. 2 Ch. 8; Campbell v. Mackay, 1 Mylne & C. 603; Hardie v. Bulger, 66 Miss. 577, 6 So. 186; De Forest v. Thompson, 40 Fed. 375; Brown v. Guarantee Trust & S. D. Co. 128 U. S. 403, 32 L. ed. 468, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 127; New York & N. H. R. Co. v. Schuyler, 17 N. Y. 592; Duff v. First Nat. Bank, 13 Fed. 65; Pullman v. Stebbins, 51 Fed. 10; Curran v. Champion, 29 C. C. A. 26, 56 U. S. App. 383, 85 Fed. 67; Marshall v. Holmes, 141 U. S. 589, 35 L. ed. 589, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62; Shields v. Thomas, 17 How. 3, 15 L. ed. 93; Clay v. Field, 138 U. S. 479, 34 L. ed. 1049, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 419; Handley v. Stutz, 137 U. S. 369, 34 L. ed. 708, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 117; Davis v. Schwartz, 155 U. S. 647, 39 L. ed. 296, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 237; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Caffrey, 128 Fed. 770.

Mr. N. W. Norton submitted the cause for appellees:

Where the purpose of a bill is to relieve property of a lien or charge, the amount of the encumbrance is the test of jurisdiction in the courts of the United States, and not the value of the property.

Ross v. Prentiss, 3 How. 771, 11 L. ed. 639; Carne v. Russ, 152 U. S. 250, 38 L. ed. 428, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 578; Farmers Bank v. Hooff, 7 Pet. 168, 8 L. ed. 646; Peyton v. Robertson, 9 Wheat. 527, 6 L. ed. 151; Gibson v. Shufeldt, 122 U. S. 27, 30 L. ed. 1083, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1066.

Separate causes cannot be combined to make the amount necessary to jurisdiction in the courts of the United States.

Walter v. Northeastern R. Co. 147 U. S. 370, 373, 37 L. ed. 206, 208, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 348.

In Marshall v. Holmes, 141 U. S. 589, 35 L. ed. 870, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62, the jurisdiction was not defeated by the fact that the liability had been entered in several small judgments; neither can it be given by an entry of separate matters in one general order.

Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion of the court:

This was a suit in equity, instituted in the circuit court of the United States for the Eastern District of Arkansas by the appellants, citizens of Arkansas, against the appellees, more than thirty in number, and respectively citizens, corporate and individual, of Tennessee, New York, Missouri, Illinois, New Jersey, Connecticut, Ohio, and Georgia.

There was a demurrer to the bill by some of the defendants upon the ground, among others, that the circuit court had no jurisdiction of the parties and subject-matter. The demurrer was sustained, and the bill dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

The question of jurisdiction depends, of course, upon the allegations of the bill. The case made by the bill is this:

On the 13th day of April, 1891, Hiram Evans, a resident of St. Francis county, Arkansas, died intestate and possessed of personal property exceeding $12,000 in value.

He was also seised in fee of 760 acres of land of the value of about $16,000, and left surviving him as his only heirs at law the three appellants, and three sons, James Evans, William E. Evans, and John Evans.

By an order made April 21st, 1891, in the probate court of the county, James Evans was appointed administrator of the estate of the intestate. Having duly qualified as such, he took possession of all the assets of the estate, and acted as such administrator until his death.

Among the assets that came to his hands as administrator was a drug store, which, with its stock of goods, fixtures, book accounts, and other things therein contained, was sold and delivered by him to John Evans [417] on the 1st day of May, 1891. *The latter conducted the business in his own name, and while doing so incurred debts and obligations to the defendants in this suit, aggregating $3,000, as well as debts and obligations to other persons; but no single one of his debts exceeded $2,000.

John Evans became insolvent, and on May 27th, 1892, transferred and delivered to James Evans, administrator of Hiram Evans, the drug store and all that remained of the stock of goods, fixtures, and book accounts.

Thereupon, the bill alleged, the defendants herein "conspired, colluded, and confederated" together and with John Evans and with James Evans, administrator, to secure the payment of their claims and demands against John Evans out of the assets of the estate of Hiram Evans, deceased, and, "so conspiring and confederating," they presented to the probate court their several claims and demands—and James Evans, administrator, fraudulently and illegally approved them—for allowance against the estate of Hiram Evans.

The bill also alleged that the defendants and the administrator of Hiram Evans, still conspiring and confederating together, procured the judgment of the probate court establishing their claims against the estate of Hiram Evans by concealing from the court the fact that they were debts and obligations of John Evans, and cloaking them under the name of expenses of administration of the said estate; "all of which transactions were part of the same scheme, and were participated in by each and all of the said defendants, and by said John Evans and said James Evans, administrator."

It was further alleged: "That the said judgments of said court, establishing and allowing the respective claims and demands of the defendants herein against the said estate, were wholly the result of the conspiracy and confederation hereinbefore mentioned, and the fraud practised in pursuance thereof as aforesaid, and are, therefore, in equity and good conscience, void and ineffectual for any purpose whatsoever, and ought not to be enforced; but that, nevertheless, the same are at law liens *upon the real estate here-[418] inbefore described, and charges against the respective interests" of the plaintiffs; that, in pursuance of the said conspiracy and confederation, the defendants, and John Evans and James Evans, concealed from plaintiffs the matters and things hereinbefore complained of, and failed to disclose to them the sale of the drug store to John Evans, and the fact that the said claims and demands of defendants were the personal debts and obligations of John Evans; that it had been determined by the supreme court of the state in certain proceedings relating to the matters here in controversy that neither the probate court, nor the state circuit court on appeal, had jurisdiction to hear or determine equitable issues, and that plaintiffs' remedy lay "in an original proceeding in a court of competent chancery jurisdiction, and that the said action and ruling of the said supreme court was without prejudice to your orators' beginning and maintaining this bill of complaint."

The bill still further alleged that, under the law of Arkansas, the judgments of the probate court, allowing and classifying the demands of defendants, passed beyond the control of that court at the expiration of the term at which the same were rendered, and that thereafter it was not within its power to alter, amend, or set aside the same; that the time within which plaintiffs might have taken an appeal, or have compelled the administrator to take an appeal, from the judgment, had expired long prior to the time when they acquired knowledge of the matters and things hereinbefore complained of; that, by reason thereof, plaintiffs are wholly without remedy in the premises unless the relief prayed be granted them; that all the acts and doings of the defendants toward procuring the said judgments of the probate court were wrongful, fraudulent, and inequitable, and tended to the manifest wrong, injury, and oppression of plaintiffs; and that, in equity and good conscience, the defendants ought not to have or enjoy the benefit or advantage of the said judgments.

[419] The relief prayed was that the judgments of the probate court be set aside, and held not to be valid or lawful liens upon or against the real estate herein described, nor upon the right, title, or interest therein of the plaintiffs; that the defendants be enjoined from enforcing such judgments, or from taking any benefit, profit, or advantage by them; and that, all the defendants being without the jurisdiction of the circuit court, an order be made directing them to be notified of this suit by publication, according to the provisions of the act of Congress of March 3d, 1875. 18 Stat. at L. 470, chap. 137, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 508.

By the act just referred to it was, among other things, provided: "Sec. 8. That when, in any suit commenced in any circuit court of the United States to enforce any legal or equitable lien upon, or claim to, or to remove any encumbrance or lien or cloud upon, the title to real or personal property within the district where such suit is brought, one or more of the defendants therein shall not be an inhabitant of, or found within, the said district, or shall not voluntarily appear thereto, it shall be lawful for the court to make an order directing such absent defendant or defendants to appear, plead, answer, or demur, by a day certain to be designated, which order shall be served on such absent defendant or defendants, if practicable, wherever found, and also upon the person or persons in possession or charge of said property, if any there be; or, where such personal service upon such absent defendant or defendants is not practicable, such order shall be published in such manner as the court may direct, not less than once a week for six consecutive weeks; and in case such absent defendant shall not appear, plead, answer, or demur within the time so limited, or within some further time, to be allowed by the court, in its discretion, and upon proof of the service or publication of said order, and of the performance of the directions contained in the same, it shall be lawful for the court to entertain jurisdiction, and proceed to the hearing and adjudication of such suit in the same manner as if such absent defendant had been served with process within the said district; but said adjudication shall, as regards said absent defendant or defendants *without appearance, affect only the prop-[420] erty which shall have been the subject of the suit and under the jurisdiction of the court therein within such district. . . ." 1 U. S. Rev. Stat. Supp. pp. 84-5; 18 Stat. at L. 470, chap. 137, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 513.

536

Upon demurrer to the jurisdiction of the circuit court, that court dismissed the suit, being of opinion that the value of the matter in dispute was not sufficient to give jurisdiction. McDaniel v. Traylor, 123 Fed. 338.

If, within the meaning of the judiciary act of 1887-88 [24 Stat. at L. 552, chap. 373], the value of the matter in dispute exceeded the sum of $2,000, exclusive of interest and costs (25 Stat. at L. 433, chap. 866, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 508), then there was no reason for dismissing the bill for want of jurisdiction in the circuit court; for, diversity of citizenship was shown by the bill, and under the above act of March 3d, 1875, chap. 137 (18 Stat. at L. 470), it was competent for the circuit court, by a final decree, to remove any encumbrance or lien or cloud upon the title to real or personal property within the district, as against persons not inhabitants thereof and not found therein, or who did not voluntarily appear in the suit.

The lands of which Hiram Evans died possessed were of the alleged value of $16,000, and we assume that the plaintiffs jointly owned one undivided half of them. Was the value of the joint interest of the plaintiffs in the lands in question to be deemed the value of the matter in dispute, or was the circuit court without jurisdiction if no one of the alleged fraudulent claims held by the defendants exceeded $2,000, exclusive of interest and costs?

Some light will be thrown upon this question by certain cases in which this court held it to be competent for a circuit court, in a suit in equity, to deprive parties of the benefit of a judgment or order fraudulently obtained by them in a state court.

In Johnson v. Waters, 111 U. S. 640, 667, 28 L. ed. 547, 556, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 619, 634, the question was as to the authority of a circuit court to set aside as fraudulent and void certain sales made by a testamentary executor under the orders of a probate court. Conceding that the administration of the estate there in question properly belonged to the probate court, and that in a general sense its decisions were conclusive, especially upon parties, Mr. Justice Bradley, speaking for this court, said: "But this is not universally true. The most solemn transactions and judgments may, at the *instance of the parties, be set aside or rendered inoperative for fraud. The fact of being a party does not estop a person from obtaining in a court of equity relief against fraud. It is generally parties that are the victims of fraud. The court of chancery is always open to hear complaints against it, whether committed in pais or in or by means of judicial proceedings. In such cases the court does not act as a court of review, nor does it inquire into any irregularities or errors of proceeding in another court; but it will scrutinize the conduct of the parties; and, if it finds that they have been guilty of fraud in obtaining a judgment or decree, it will deprive them of the benefit of it, and of any inequitable advantage which they have derived under it."

196 U. S.

In Arrowsmith v. Gleason, 129 U. S. 86, 98, 32 L. ed. 630, 634, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 237, 240, the question was whether the circuit court had jurisdiction by its decree to set aside a sale of an infant's lands fraudulently made by his guardian under authority derived from a probate court, and give such relief as would be consistent with equity. One of the grounds of demurrer to the bill in that case was that the circuit court had no authority to set aside and vacate the orders of the state court. This court said: "If by this is meant only that the circuit court cannot, by its orders, act directly upon the probate court, or that the circuit court cannot compel or require the probate court to set aside or vacate its own orders, the position of the defendants could not be disputed. But it does not follow that the right of Harmoning, in his lifetime, or of his heirs since his death, to hold these lands, as against the plaintiff, cannot be questioned in a court of general equitable jurisdiction upon the ground of fraud. If the case made by the bill is clearly established by proof, it may be assumed that some state court of superior jurisdiction and equity powers, and having before it all the parties interested, might afford the plaintiff relief of a substantial character. But, whether that be so or not, it is difficult to perceive why the circuit court is not bound to give relief according to the recognized rules of equity, as administered [424] in the courts of the *United States, the plaintiff being a citizen of Nevada, the defendants citizens of Ohio, and the value of the matter in dispute, exclusive of interest and costs, being in excess of the amount required for the original jurisdiction of such courts." "While there are general expressions in some cases apparently asserting a 196 U. S.

contrary doctrine, the later decisions of this court show that the proper circuit court of the United States may, without controlling, supervising, or annulling the proceedings of state courts, give such relief, in a case like the one before us, as is consistent with the principles of equity."

After citing the case of Johnson v. Waters, above, the court referred to Reigal v. Wood, 1 Johns. Ch. 402, 406, in which Chancellor Kent said: "Relief is to be obtained, not only against writings, deeds, and the most solemn assurances, but against judgments and decrees, if obtained by fraud and imposition." It also referred to Bowen v. Evans, 2 H. L. Cas. 257, 281, in which Lord Chancellor Cottenham said: "If a case of fraud be established, equity will set aside all transactions founded upon it, by whatever machinery they may have been effected, and notwithstanding any contrivances by which it may have been attempted to protect them. It is immaterial, therefore, whether such machinery and contrivances consisted of a decree of a court of equity and a purchase under it, or of a judgment at law, or of other transactions between the actors in the fraud." The opinion of this court concluded: "These principles control the present case, which, although involving rights arising under judicial proceedings in another jurisdiction, is an original, independent suit for equitable relief between the parties, such relief being grounded upon a new state of facts, disclosing, not only imposition upon a court of justice in procuring from it authority to sell an infant's lands when there was no necessity therefor, but actual fraud in the exercise, from time to time, of the authority so obtained. As this case is within the equity jurisdiction of the circuit court, as defined by the Constitution and laws of the United States, that court may, by its decree, lay hold of the parties, and compel *them to do what, according to the [425] principles of equity, they ought to do, thereby securing and establishing the rights of which the plaintiff is alleged to have been deprived by fraud and collusion."

In Marshall v. Holmes, 141 U. S. 589, 595, 596, 35 L. ed. 870, 872, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62, 64, it appeared that twenty-three judgments for different amounts were fraudulently procured to be rendered in a state court against a citizen of another state. Upon learning of the judgments, the latter brought suit in one of the courts of Louisiana for a decree avoiding them as obtained upon false testimony, and thereafter filed a petition and bond for the removal of the case to the circuit court of the United States. The right of removal was denied, and the court dissolved the preliminary injunction which had been granted, and authorized Mayer, who had become the owner of the judgments, to proceed in their collection. Upon appeal to a higher state court, the original judgment was affirmed, and that judgment was brought here for review by writ of error. This court sustained the right of removal. After stating that the judgments aggregated more than $3,000, and were all held by Mayer and against the plaintiff, we said: "Their validity depends upon the same facts. If she is entitled to relief against one of the judgments, she is entitled to relief against all of them. The cases in which they were rendered were, in effect, tried as one case, so far as she and Mayer were concerned; for the parties stipulated that the result in each one not tried should depend upon the result in the one tried. As all the cases not tried went to judgment in accordance with the result in the one tried; as the property of Mrs. Marshall [the plaintiff] was liable to be taken in execution on all the judgments; *as the judgments were held in the same right; and as their validity depended upon the same facts,—she was entitled, in order to avoid a multiplicity of actions, and to protect herself against the vexation and cost that would come from numerous executions and levies, to bring one suit for a decree finally determining the matter in dispute in all the [426] cases. *And as, under the rules of equity obtaining in the courts of the United States, such a suit could be brought, the aggregate amount of all the judgments against which she sought protection, upon grounds common to all the actions, is to be deemed, under the act of Congress, the value of the matter here in dispute."

The question of jurisdiction here presented arises out of facts not to be found in any case brought to our attention or of which we have knowledge.

The suit is to remove a cloud on the title to certain lands of the value of $16,000. The plaintiffs, being three of the six heirs at law of the intestate, jointly own an undivided interest of one half of those lands, but no interest in any particular part of them. If the value of their joint, undivided interest ($8,000), or the value of the undivided interest of each (one third of $8,000), is to be taken as the value of the matter in dispute, then the circuit court had jurisdiction. But we are of opinion that, within the meaning of the judiciary act of 1887-88, the jurisdiction of the circuit court in this case depended upon the value in dispute measured by the aggregate amount of the claims of the defendants.

It is contended that the jurisdiction of the circuit court must fail, because no one defendant has a claim of the required jurisdictional amount. In support of this contention, several cases are cited of the class to which Walter v. Northeastern R. Co. 147 U. S. 370, 373, 37 L. ed. 206, 208, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 348, 349, belongs. That was a suit by a railroad company against the treasurers and sheriffs of several counties through which its road passed, to enjoin them—separately, of course—from issuing executions against, or seizing the property of, the company for the purpose of collecting a tax based upon an assessment alleged to be unconstitutional and void. The court said: "It is entirely clear that, had these taxes been paid under protest, and the plaintiff had sought to recover them back, it would have been obliged to bring separate actions in each county. As the amount recoverable from each county would be different, no joint* judgment could possibly be rendered. [427] So, had a bill for injunction been filed in a state court, and the practice had permitted, as in some states, a chancery subpoena to be served in any county of the state, these defendants could not have been joined in one bill, but a separate bill would have had to be filed in each county. . . . It is well settled in this court that when two or more plaintiffs, having several interests, unite, for the convenience of litigation, in a single suit, it can only be sustained in the court of original jurisdiction, or on an appeal in this court, as to those whose claims exceed the jurisdictional amount; and that, when two or more defendants are sued by the same plaintiff in one suit, the test of jurisdiction is the joint or several character of the liability to the plaintiff."

The case before us, however, is presented by the bill in an entirely different aspect. The case may be regarded as exceptional in its facts, and may be disposed of without affecting former decisions. There is no dispute as to the amount of any particular claim. So far as the bill is concerned, if any one of the specified claims is good against the estate of Hiram Evans, then all are good; if the lands in question, or any interest in them, can be sold to pay one claim, they must be sold to pay all. The court could not, under the bill, enjoin the prosecution of one claim and leave the others untouched. The matter in dispute is whether the lands in which the plaintiffs have a joint, undivided interest of one half can be sold to pay all the claims, in the aggregate, which the defendants, by combination and conspiracy, procured the probate court to allow against the estate of Hiram Evans. The essence of the suit is the alleged fraudulent combination and conspiracy to fasten upon that estate a liability for debts of John Evans, which were held by the defendants, and which they, acting in combination, procured, in co-operation with James Evans, to be allowed as claims against the estate of Hiram Evans. By reason of that combination, resulting in the allowance of all those claims in the probate court, as expenses of [428] administering the estate of *Hiram Evans, the defendants have so tied their respective claims together as to make them, so far as the plaintiffs and the relief sought by them are concerned, one claim. The validity of all the claims depends upon the same facts. The lien on the lands which is asserted by each defendant has its origin as well in the combination to which all were parties as in the orders of the probate court, which, in furtherance of that combination, were procured by their joint action. Those orders were conclusive against the plaintiffs, as to all the claims, if the claims could be allowed at all against the estate of Hiram Evans. A comprehensive decree by which the plaintiffs can be protected against those orders will avoid a multiplicity of suits, save great expense, and do justice. If the plaintiffs do not prove such a combination and conspiracy, in respect, at least, of so many of the specified claims as in the aggregate will be of the required amount, then their suit must fail for want of jurisdiction in the circuit court; for, in the absence of the alleged combination, the claim of each defendant must, according to our decisions, be regarded, for purposes of jurisdiction, as separate from all the others.

An instructive case on the general subject is Shields v. Thomas, 17 How. 3, 15 L. ed. 93. That was a suit in equity in a Kentucky state court in which the plaintiffs, as the legal representatives of an intestate, sought a decree for certain proportionate amounts alleged to be due them respectively from the defendant, who had married the widow and thereby obtained possession of the property of the deceased. The defendant was charged with having converted to his own use a large amount of the intestate's property to which the legal representatives of the intestate, plaintiffs in the suit, were entitled. In that suit a decree was rendered against the defendant for a large sum of money, "the shares of the respective complainants being apportioned to them in the decree," and the defendant being required by the decree to pay to each of the plaintiffs the specific sum to which he was entitled as his portion of the property misappropriated [429] by him. Subsequently a suit was *brought in a circuit court of the United States (jurisdiction being based on diversity of citizenship) to enforce the decree rendered in the Kentucky state court, and to compel the defendant to pay to the plaintiffs, respectively, the several sums which had been decreed in their favor. A decree to that effect was rendered. The whole amount which the defendant was required by the decree to pay was large enough to give this court jurisdiction on appeal, although the specific sum awarded to each plaintiff was less than the jurisdictional sum. The defendant appealed to this court, and a motion was made to dismiss the appeal on the ground "that the sum due to each complainant is severally and specifically decreed to him; and that the amount thus decreed is the sum in controversy between each representative and the appellant, and not the whole amount for which he has been held liable."

After observing that, if that view of the matter in controversy was correct, this court was without jurisdiction, Chief Justice Taney, speaking for the court, said: "But the court think the matter in controversy, in the Kentucky court, was the sum due to the representatives of the deceased collectively, and not the particular sum to which each was entitled, when the amount due was distributed among them, according to the laws of the state. They all claimed under one and the same title. They had a common and undivided interest in the claim; and it was perfectly immaterial to the appellant how it was to be shared among them. He had no controversy with either of them on that point; and, if there was any difficulty as to the proportions in which they were to share, the dispute was among themselves, and not with him. It is like a contract with several to pay a sum of money. It may be that the money when recovered is to be divided between them in equal or unequal proportions. Yet, if a controversy arises on the contract, and the sum in dispute upon it exceeds $2,000, an appeal would clearly lie to this court, although the interest of each individual was less than that sum. *This be- [430] ing the controversy in Kentucky, the decree of that court, apportioning the sum recovered among the several representatives, does not alter its character when renewed in Iowa. So far as the appellant is concerned, the entire sum found due by the Kentucky court is in dispute. He disputes the validity of that decree, and denies his obligation to pay any part of the money. And if the appellees maintain their bill, he will be made liable to pay the whole amount decreed to them. This is the controversy on his part; and the amount exceeds $2,000. We think the court, therefore, has jurisdiction on the appeal."

The doctrines of Shields v. Thomas have been frequently recognized by this court. In the recent case of Overby v. Gordon, 177 U. S. 214, 218, 44 L. ed. 741, 743, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 603, 605, the court, interpreting the decision in that case, said: "It was held that, where the representatives of a deceased intestate recovered a judgment against an administrator for an amount in excess of the sum necessary to confer jurisdiction to review, and such recovery was had under the same title and for a common and undivided interest, this court had jurisdiction, although the amount decreed to be distributed to each representative was less than the jurisdictional sum." See also The Connemara (Sinclair v. Cooper) 103 U. S. 756, 26 L. ed. 322; Handley v. Stutz, 137 U. S. 369, 34 L. ed. 708, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 117; New Orleans P. R. Co. v. Parker, 143 U. S. 51, 36 L. ed. 68, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 364; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Gentry, 163 U. S. 361, 41 L. ed. 191, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1104; Davis v. Schwartz, 155 U. S. 631, 647, 39 L. ed. 289, 296, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 237.

[431] It is said that as to any single one of the claims in question the plaintiffs in the present case could have released the lands in which they had an undivided interest by paying that particular claim; therefore, it is argued, the value of the matter in dispute, as between the plaintiffs and such defendant, was the amount of the latter's claim. And so as to each separate claim. But that same thing could have been said as to the respective claims involved in Shields v. Thomas. The defendant there could have paid off any of the respective claims involved. This court, however, held that fact to be immaterial because the defendant disputed the validity of the *original decree holding him liable for all the claims, and had no concern as to how the whole amount decreed against him was to be distributed. So here, the plaintiffs, suing to protect their common undivided interest in lands put in peril by fraudulent orders obtained by the defendants acting in combination to obtain such orders for their benefit, are only concerned in preventing the defendants from proceeding under the orders of the probate court, which they procured for their benefit equally, and under which they all now equally claim. The plaintiffs made no contest as to particular claims. They dispute all of them as claims against Hiram Evans's estate. If the orders of the probate court stand for the benefit of the respective defendants, then the plaintiff's interests in the lands are liable for all the claims asserted by the defendants; for there is no dispute here as to the amount of any particular claim. Hence, as we have said, the value of the matter in dispute is the aggregate amount of the claims fraudulently procured by the defendants acting in combination to be allowed in the probate court as claims against the estate of Hiram Evans.

For the reasons stated we hold: 1. That it was competent for the circuit court, upon the case made by the bill, to deprive the defendants, acting in combination and claiming the benefit of the orders made in the probate allowing their respective claims. 2. That the value of the matter in dispute in the circuit court was the aggregate amount of all the claims so allowed against the estate of Hiram Evans.

The decree is reversed with directions to set aside the order dismissing the suit for want of jurisdiction, to overrule the demurrer, and for further proceedings as may be consistent with this opinion and with the law.

Reversed.

*TERRITORY OF NEW MEXICO ex rel. [432]
CALEDONIAN COAL COMPANY, Appt.,
v.

BENJAMIN S. BAKER, Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the Territory of New Mexico and Judge of Second Judicial District Court thereof, etc.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 432-446.)

Action—abatement—substitution of successor in public office—service of summons on officer of corporation.

1. The successor in office of a judge of a territorial court may be substituted in the place of his predecessor on appeal from a final judgment denying mandamus to compel the latter to take jurisdiction of an action attempted to be brought in his court, since the case may properly be considered one in which there is a necessity for such action in order to obtain a settlement of the question involved, within the meaning of the act of February 8, 1899 (30 Stat. at L. 822, chap. 121, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 697), authorizing substitution in actions brought by or against Federal public officers in their official capacity, or in relation to the discharge of their official duties.
2. The mere ownership of lands in New Mexico by a railroad company organized and existing under the act of Congress of March 3, 1897 (29 Stat. at L. 622, chap. 374), none of whose offices are located in the territory, or the bringing of suits in that territory to protect its land against trespasses, is not sufficient, under N. M. Comp. Laws 1897, § 450, to authorize the service of summons upon its president while passing through the territory on a railroad train, in a personal action in which an attachment may be levied upon the lands to satisfy any judgment that may be obtained, even assuming that the provisions of this statute could be made ap-

NOTE.—On the practice and procedure governing the transfer of causes to the Federal Supreme Court on writ of error or appeal—see note to Wedding v. Meyer, 66 L. R. A. 833.

As to service of process on foreign corporation—see notes to Foster v. Charles Betcher Lumber Co. 23 L. R. A. 490; and Eldred v. American Palace-Car Co. 45 C. C. A. 3. pllicable to a corporation created by an act of Congress.

[No. 419.]

Argued January 27, 1905. Decided February 20, 1905.

APPEAL from the Supreme Court of the Territory of New Mexico denying an application for a writ of mandamus to compel the judge of the District Court of the Second Judicial District of that Territory to take jurisdiction of an action attempted to be brought in that court. Affirmed.

See same case below, 78 Pac. 624.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Neill B. Field argued the cause and filed a brief for appellant:

A corporation created by or under authority of an act of Congress has its domicil in every place where it may lawfully exercise its corporate powers.

Bank of Augusta v. Earle, 13 Pet. 588, 10 L. ed. 307; 1 Thomp. Corp. § 681; 2 Morawetz, Priv. Corp. § 984; Com. v. Texas & P. R. Co. 98 Pa. 100; California v. Central P. R. Co. 127 U. S. 39, 32 L. ed. 150, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 153, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1073.

The Santa Fé Pacific Railroad Company holds its lands in New Mexico under the authority of Congress, and that authority is clearly not subject to be circumscribed by territorial legislation. The franchise to exist as a corporation is on the same footing.

Bank of Augusta v. Earle, 13 Pet. 588, 10 L. ed. 307; 1 Thomp. Corp. §§ 675, 681; 2 Morawetz, Priv. Corp. § 984; Com. v. Texas & P. R. Co. 98 Pa. 100; California v. Central P. R. Co. 127 U. S. 39, 32 L. ed. 150, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 153, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1073; Van Dresser v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. 48 Fed. 202; Pacific R. Removal Cases, 115 U. S. 1, 29 L. ed. 319, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1113; Bank of United States v. Roberts, 4 Conn. 323, Fed. Cas. No. 934.

It affirmatively appears from the answer that the service on the Santa Fé Pacific Railroad Company was sufficient, and that appellant is entitled to the relief prayed for.

New Haven Pulp & Board Co. v. Downingtown Mfg. Co. 130 Fed. 605; United States v. Southern P. R. Co. 49 Fed. 297; N. M. Comp. Laws, 1897, §§ 450, 2963; Kansas City, Ft. S. & M. R. Co. v. Daughtry, 138 U. S. 298, 34 L. ed. 963, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 306; Cosmopolitan Min. Co. v. Walsh, 193 U. S. 460, 48 L. ed. 749, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 489.

Mr. Robert Dunlap argued the cause, and, with Mr. E. D. Kenna, filed a brief for appellee:

No court can exercise, at common law, jurisdiction over a party, unless he is served with process within the territorial jurisdiction of the court, or unless he voluntarily appears.

Goldey v. Morning News, 156 U. S. 521, 39 L. ed. 517, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 559; Mexican C. R. Co. v. Pinkney, 149 U. S. 209, 37 L. ed. 705, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 859; Harris v. Harde-man, 14 How. 339, 14 L. ed. 446.

Jurisdiction over a foreign corporation is not acquired by service of process upon its president while he is temporarily in the state for either business or pleasure.

Phillips v. Burlington Library Co. 141 Pa. 462, 23 Am. St. Rep. 304, 21 Atl. 640.

A corporation can be said to have a technical habitat or place of residence, only in the state or district where its corporate meetings are held.

Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Gonzales, 151 U. S. 496, 38 L. ed. 248, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 401; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Texas & P. R. Co. 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 408, 6 C. C. A. 653, 20 U. S. App. 1, 57 Fed. 949; Jones v. Scottish Acci. Ins. Co. L. R. 17 Q. B. Div. 421; Watkins v. Scottish Imperial Ins. Co. L. R. 23 Q. B. Div. 285; Frick Co. v. Norfolk & O. V. R. Co. 32 C. C. A. 31, 57 U. S. App. 286, 86 Fed. 725; St. Clair v. Cox, 106 U. S. 350, 27 L. ed. 222, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 354; Fitzgerald & M. Constr. Co. v. Fitzgerald, 137 U. S. 106, 34 L. ed. 611, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 36; Mecke v. Valleytown Mineral Co. 35 C. C. A. 151, 93 Fed. 697; Beale, Foreign Corp. § 270; Goldey v. Morning News, 156 U. S. 518, 39 L. ed. 517, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 559.

Neither can it make any difference that the corporation at some period prior to the service had been engaged in business in the particular state or district, or that some officer of the corporation had at all times resided therein. The corporation has the right to withdraw from the state or district, and when it is no longer represented in such state or district by an agent transacting therein its ordinary business, it cannot be said to be present therein at the time.

Conley v. Mathieson Alkali Works, 190 U. S. 406, 47 L. ed. 1113, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 728; Geer v. Mathieson Alkali Works, 190 U. S. 428, 47 L. ed. 1122, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 807; De Castro v. Compagnie Francaise Du Telegraphe Co. 76 Fed. 426; Earle v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. 127 Fed. 235; Cady v. Associated Colonies, 119 Fed. 420; Eldred v. American Palace-Car Co. 45 C. C. A. 1, 105 Fed. 455; Beale, Foreign Corp. §§ 279, 281.

It is claimed that the Santa Fé Pacific Railroad Company still owns lands within the territory of New Mexico. This it may do, however, without being represented therein by any authorized agency. By owning or holding lands in such district it is not to be regarded as doing or transacting its business therein.

Missouri Coal & Min. Co. v. Ladd, 160 Mo. 435, 61 S. W. 191.

The test is, Has the corporation an agency within the district, transacting therein its ordinary business, so that it may be said to be impersonated in or represented by such agency for general purposes, including its subjection to the service of process therein?

St. Clair v. Cox, 106 U. S. 351, 27 L. ed. 223, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 354; United States v. American Bell Teleph. Co. 29 Fed. 17.

Neither can it make any difference if it should appear that the corporation was still prosecuting pending suits against trespassers upon its lands; nor does it make much difference whether such suits were pending at the time of the service of process in the particular case, or were instituted thereafter.

McCall v. American Freehold Land Mortg. Co. 99 Ala. 427, 12 So. 806; St. Louis, A. & T. R. Co. v. Fire Asso. 55 Ark. 163, 18 S. W. 43; Utley v. Clark-Gardner Lode Min. Co. 4 Colo. 369.

A corporation is not deemed to be "found" within a district, unless it is transacting therein its ordinary business through an agent who is there representing it in the conduct of its business.

United States v. American Bell Teleph. Co. 29 Fed. 34; Maxwell v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 34 Fed. 286; Bentlif v. London & O. Finance Corp. 44 Fed. 667; Clews v. Woodstock Iron Co. 44 Fed. 31; St. Louis Wire-Mill Co. v. Consolidated Barb-Wire Co. 32 Fed. 802; Good Hope Co. v. Railway Barb Fencing Co. 23 Blatchf. 43, 22 Fed. 635.

Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion of the court:

This appeal brings up for review a final judgment of the supreme court of the territory of New Mexico denying an application to that court by the Caledonian Coal Company for a writ of mandamus to compel Benjamin S. Baker, judge of the district court of the second judicial district of that territory, to take cognizance of a certain action brought in *that court against the Santa Fé Pacific Railroad Company and others.

The petition for mandamus makes the following case:

On the 17th day of February, 1904, the Caledonian Coal Company, organized under the laws of New Mexico, commenced an action in the district court of the second judicial district of that territory against the Santa Fé Pacific Railroad Company, the Atchison, Topeka, & Santa Fé Railroad Company, the Colorado Fuel & Iron Company, and the American Fuel Company, to recover damages for alleged violations of the Interstate Commerce Act of 1887 and the anti-trust act of 1890.

By the 9th section of the above act of 1887 it is provided that "any person or persons claiming to be damaged by any common carrier subject to the provisions of this act may either make complaint to the Commission as hereinafter provided for, or may bring suit in his or their own behalf for the recovery of the damages for which such common carrier may be liable under the provisions of this act, in any district or circuit court of the United States of competent jurisdiction; but such person or persons shall not have the right to pursue both of said remedies, and must in each case elect which one of the two methods of procedure herein provided for he or they will adopt. . . ." 24 Stat. at L. 379, chap. 104, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3159. And by § 7 of the above act of 1890 it was provided that "any person who shall be injured in his business or property by any other person or corporation, by reason of anything forbidden or declared to be unlawful by this act, may sue therefor in any circuit court of the United States in the district in which the defendant resides or is found, without respect to the amount in controversy, and shall recover threefold the damages by him sustained, and the costs of suit, including a reasonable attorney's fee." 26 Stat. at L. 209, chap. 647, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3202.

A summons was issued against the Santa Fé Pacific Railroad Company, and was returned by the marshal of the territory, the return stating that it was served at the above district on *the 13th day of May, [434] 1904, by delivering a true copy thereof, with a copy of the complaint thereto attached, to E. P. Ripley, president of the defendant corporation.

The Santa Fé Railroad Company is a corporation organized and existing under the act of Congress of March 3d, 1897, defining the rights of purchasers under mortgages authorized by an act of Congress approved April 20th, 1871 [17 Stat. at L. 19, chap. 33], concerning the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad Company. 29 Stat. at L. 622, chap. 374.

When the grievances set out in the petition were committed, the Santa Fé Pacific Railroad Company was the owner of a line of railroad within the second judicial district of New Mexico and elsewhere within that territory, but which line, at the commencement of this action, had been sold and transferred to, and was being operated by, the Atchison, Topeka, & Santa Fé Railroad Company under a conveyance authorized by an act of Congress of June 27th, 1902 (32 Stat. at L. 405, chap. 1159); was the owner of several hundred thousand acres of land within that district; and, at the commencement of the action for damages, was prosecuting in one of the counties of the territory, within the same district, suits involving the company's title and possession of parts of those lands.

All of those lands, with the rights, privileges, and franchises appertaining thereto, were acquired by the Santa Fé Pacific Railroad Company as the successor of the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad Company, to which last-named company they were granted by the act of Congress of July 27th, 1866. 14 Stat. at L. 292, chap. 278.

The petition for mandamus alleged that, by reason of the above facts, the Santa Fé Pacific Railroad Company was an "inhabitant" of the second judicial district of New Mexico, and, by reason of the presence of Ripley, its president, in that territory and within that district, and the service of summons in the above action upon him as such president, the company was "found" in the district within the meaning of the acts of Congress.

[435] *Nevertheless, the defendant Baker, associate justice of the supreme court of the territory and judge of the district court of the second judicial district, quashed the return of the above summons, and refused to assume jurisdiction of the action, so far as the Santa Fé Pacific Railroad Company was concerned, or to require that company to answer the declaration or complaint filed by petitioner.

The defendant Baker made a return to a rule issued against him to show cause. From that return it appears that the Santa Fé Pacific Railroad Company specially appeared in the action for the purpose of moving, and did move, to quash the service of process, upon grounds set forth in an affidavit of its president. In that affidavit Ripley stated that, when served with summons, he was only a passenger on a railroad train passing through the territory; that the company had its office in the city of New York, while its land commissioner had an office at Topeka, Kansas, and its president an office at Chicago, Illinois; that the company had no property in the territory of New Mexico, except lands acquired by it under a foreclosure of a mortgage of the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad Company, and which lands were undisposed of; that it has had no office or place of business in the territory since the sale of its road. This affidavit was used on the hearing of the motion to quash, and the facts stated in it were not contradicted.

The contention of the company, therefore, was that the service in question was insufficient to bring the company, personally, before the court.

The return of the judge also stated that the actions in ejectment brought by the railroad company against trespasses upon its property were instituted prior to the sale of its railroad property and franchises to the Atchison, Topeka, & Santa Fé Railroad Company; and that the refusal of the judge to assume jurisdiction in the case referred to was upon the ground that the service upon Ripley as president of the company was not, in his opinion, sufficient to subject it personally to the jurisdiction of the court.

*The relief sought was an alternative writ [436] of mandamus, directing Judge Baker to assume jurisdiction of the cause, so far as the Santa Fé Railroad Company was concerned, and to require that company to plead, answer, or demur.

The supreme court of the territory, after hearing the case, upon the pleadings, return, and the proofs, denied the petition for mandamus, and dismissed the application. From that order the present appeal was prosecuted.

At the present term the appellant suggested that Judge *Baker had been succeeded [440] in office by Judge Ira A. Abbott. And it moved that such order be made in the premises as would be conformable to the rules and practice of this court. Judge Abbott consents that the action may be revived against him as the successor of Judge Baker, and proceed to a hearing, without further summons or notice, upon the record as now presented to the court.

The first question to be considered is whether it is competent for this court, Judge Baker having ceased to be judge, to substitute the name of his successor, as the appellee.

In United States v. Boutwell, 17 Wall. 604, 607, 21 L. ed. 721, 722, which was a mandamus against Mr. Boutwell as Secretary of the Treasury, it appeared that after the case was brought to this court the defendant resigned his office. Thereupon a motion was made to substitute the name of his successor, Mr. Richardson. It did not appear that any previous application was made to the latter for leave to substitute his name, and he opposed the motion, which was denied.

Mr. Justice Strong delivered the opinion of the court, saying: "The office of a writ of mandamus is to compel the performance of a duty resting upon the person to whom the writ is sent. That duty may have originated in one way or in another. It may, as is alleged in the present case, have arisen from the acceptance of an office which has imposed the duty upon its incumbent. But no matter out of what facts or relations the duty has grown, what the law regards, and what it seeks to enforce by a writ of mandamus, is the personal obligation of the individual to whom it addresses the writ. If he be an officer, and the duty be an official one, still the writ is aimed exclusively against him as a person, and he, only, can be punished for disobedience. The writ does not reach the office. It cannot be directed to it. It is therefore, in substance, a personal action, and it rests upon the averred and assumed fact that the defendant has neglected or refused to perform a personal duty, to the performance of which by him the relator has a clear right. Hence, it is an im-

[441]perative rule that, previous *to making application for a writ to command the performance of any particular act, an express and distinct demand or request to perform it must have been made by the relator or prosecutor upon the defendant, and it must appear that he refused to comply with such demand, either in direct terms, or by conduct from which a refusal can be conclusively inferred. Thus, it is the personal default of the defendant that warrants impetration of the writ, and, if a peremptory mandamus be awarded, the costs must fall upon the defendant." The court proceeded: "It necessarily follows from this that, on the death or retirement from office of the original defendant, the writ must abate in the absence of any statutory provision to the contrary. When the personal duty exists only so long as the office is held, the court cannot compel the defendant to perform it after his power to perform has ceased. And, if a successor in office may be substituted, he may be mulcted in costs for the fault of his predecessor, without any delinquency of his own. Besides, were a demand made upon him, he might discharge the duty and render the interposition of the court unnecessary. At all events, he is not in privity with his predecessor; much less is he his predecessor's personal representative. As might be expected, therefore, we find no case in which such a substitution as is asked for now has ever been allowed in the absence of some statute authorizing it."

That case was followed by United States ex rel. Warden v. Chandler, 122 U. S. 643, 30 L. ed. 1244; United States ex rel. Long v. Lochren, 164 U. S. 701, 41 L. ed. 1181, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1001; Warner Valley Stock Co. v. Smith, 165 U. S. 28, 41 L. ed. 621, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 225, and United States ex rel. Bernardin v. Butterworth, 169 U. S. 600, 604, 605, 42 L. ed. 873, 874, 875, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441. In the latter case the court, after referring to prior cases, concluded its opinion in these words: "In view of the inconvenience, of which the present case is a striking instance, occasioned by this state of the law, it would seem desirable that Congress should provide for the difficulty by enacting that, in the case of suits against the heads of departments abating by death or resignation, it should be lawful for the successor in office to be brought into the case by petition, or some other appropriate method."

*Later, Congress, its attention being thus [442] called to the matter, passed the act of February 8th, 1899, chap. 121, by which it was provided "that no suit, action, or other proceeding lawfully commenced by or against the head of any department or bureau or other officer of the United States, in his official capacity, or in relation to the discharge of his official duties, shall abate by reason of his death, or the expiration of his term of office, or his retirement, or resignation, or removal from office; but in such event the court, on motion or supplemental petition filed at any time within twelve months thereafter, showing a necessity for the survival thereof to obtain a settlement of the questions involved, may allow the same to be maintained by or against his successor in office, and the court may make such order as shall be equitable for the payment of costs." 30 Stat. at L. 822, U. S. Comp Stat. 1901, p. 697.

In view of the reasons assigned, in the Boutwell Case, for the inability of the court, in mandamus proceedings, to substitute an existing public officer as a party in the place of his predecessor, who had ceased to be in office, we perceive no reason why, under the act of 1899, the successor of Judge Baker may not be now made a party in his stead. Certainly, the statute authorizes that to be done if, in the judgment of the court, there is a necessity for such action in order to obtain a settlement of the legal question involved. We think such a necessity exists in this case, and, as Judge Abbott waives any formal summons, and consents to the substitution of his name in place of that of Judge Baker, the motion of appellant is granted, and such substitution is ordered to be and is now made, subject, however, to the condition that he shall not be liable for any costs prior to this date.

We come now to the merits of the case.

The act under which the territory of New Mexico was created and organized, approved September 9th, 1850, provides that the legislative power of the territory of New Mexico should extend to all rightful subjects of legislation consistent with the Constitution of the United States. The same act *divides [443] the territory into three judicial districts, and requires a district court to be held in each of such districts by one of the justices of the territorial supreme court. It also provides: "Each of the said district courts shall have and exercise the same jurisdiction, in all cases arising under the Constitution and laws of the United States, as is vested in the circuit and district courts of the United States. . . ." [9 Stat. at L. 450, chap. 49, § 10.] This provision was retained in the Revised Statutes of the United States. § 1910.

The present case clearly arises under the laws of the United States; for the action brought in the territorial district court was expressly based on the Interstate Commerce Act of 1887 and the anti-trust act of 1890.

And the question arises upon the very face of the record, whether the territorial district court could take cognizance at all of suits for damages authorized by those acts. We have seen that by § 9 of the above act of 1887 any person or persons alleged to have been damaged by a common carrier, embraced by the provisions of that act, may bring suit in his or their own behalf "in any district or circuit court of the United States of competent jurisdiction;" and, by the above act of 1890, any person injured in his business or property by any other person or corporation by reason of anything forbidden or declared to be unlawful by that act may sue therefor "in any circuit court of the United States in the district in which the defendant resides or is found."

Although by the statutes in force prior to the passage of the Interstate Commerce (1887) and anti-trust acts (1890), the territorial district courts of New Mexico were given the same jurisdiction in cases arising under the Constitution and laws of the United States as is vested in the circuit and district courts of the United States, are those acts to be construed as excepting from the general jurisdiction of the territorial district courts cases that may arise under them? In other words, can a suit for damages under either of those acts be brought in any court except, under the act of 1887, [444] in a circuit *or district court of the United States, and, under the act of 1890, in a circuit court of the United States? Did Congress intend that only courts of the United States, invested by the 3d article of the Constitution with the judicial power of the United States (McAllister v. United States, 141 U. S. 174, 35 L. ed. 693, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 949), should have original jurisdiction of suits of that character? The questions suggested by these inquiries were not much discussed by counsel, and we pass them as being, in our view of the case, not necessary to be now decided; for, if a controversy like that raised by the plaintiff is equally cognizable by a territorial district court, or by a circuit or district court of the United States, it would still remain to inquire whether the defendant company was brought before the court in which the suit was instituted in such a way that a personal judgment could be rendered against it?

It is firmly established that a court of justice cannot acquire jurisdiction over the person of a defendant, "except by actual service of notice within the jurisdiction upon him, or upon someone authorized to accept service in his behalf, or by his waiver, by general appearance or otherwise, of the want of due service." Goldey v. Morning News, 156 U. S. 521, 39 L. ed. 518, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 559; Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714, 24 L. ed. 565; Mexican C. R. Co. v. Pinkney, 149 U. S. 209, 37 L. ed. 705, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 859; United States v. American Bell Teleph. Co. 29 Fed. 17. This principle is applicable to all courts.

We are of opinion that the service of summons upon Ripley, as president, while he was passing through the territory on a railroad train was insufficient as a personal service on the company of which he was president. It is true that the company owned lands in the territory, but its office, at the which the meetings of its directors were held, was in the city of New York, while the office of its land commissioner was at Topeka, Kansas, and the office of its president was at Chicago, Illinois. The mere ownership of lands in New Mexico, or the bringing of suits there to protect its lands against trespasses, could not have had the effect to put the company into that territory for the purposes of a personal action against it, based on service *of sum-[445] mons upon one of its officers while passing through the territory on a railroad train. If by the laws of New Mexico a party having a cause of action against the company, based on the acts of 1889 and 1890, could have sued out an attachment and caused it to be levied upon its lands in the territory in order to secure the satisfaction of any judgment he might finally obtain in such action,—upon which point we express no opinion,—it would not follow that a personal judgment could have been rendered against the company. In such case the judgment of the court could not affect anything except the lands attached. No personal judgment could have been rendered against the company by reason merely of such attachment.

It is contended that the case is covered by § 450 of the Compiled Laws of New Mexico, 1897. That section provides that, "in suits against any corporation, summons shall be served in that county where the principal office of the corporation is kept, or its principal business carried on, by delivering a copy to the president thereof, if he may be found in said county, but, if he is absent therefrom, then the summons shall be served in like manner in the county, on either the vice president, secretary, treasurer, cashier, general agent, general superintendent or stockholder, or any agent of said corporation, within such time and under such rules as are provided by law for the service of such process in suits against real persons, and, if no such person can be found in the county where the principal office of the corporation is kept, or in the county where its principal business is carried on, to serve such process upon, a summons may issue from either one of such counties, directed to the sheriff of any county in this territory where any such person may be found and served with process. If such corporation keeps no principal office in any county, and there is no county in which the principal business of such corporation is carried on, then suit may be brought against it in any county where the above-mentioned officers, or any or either of them, may be found: Provided, That the plaintiff [446] may, *in all cases, bring his action in the county where the cause of action accrued."

Counsel for appellant substantially concedes that this statute applies only to domestic corporations,—that is, corporations created by, or organized under, territorial enactments. But, if it is to be assumed that these provisions could be made applicable to a corporation created by an act of Congress, and that, for the purposes of suit, such a corporation may be deemed a domestic corporation in any state or territory which it might lawfully enter, still, it is evident that the above section cannot avail the plaintiff. The Santa Fé Railroad Company, when sued in the territorial district court, was not an inhabitant of the district within the meaning of the local statute; it had no principal or other office in the territory; nor did it have an officer who could, in a legal sense, be "found" there; nor did it, in any just sense, carry on business in the territory. The company simply owned lands there, and that fact was not sufficient by itself to bring the case within the provisions of the territorial statute. This state of the law may sometimes operate injuriously upon those who may wish to sue the railroad company in the territorial courts. But the situation cannot be changed by the courts. That can only be done by legislation.

For the reasons stated the judgment of the Supreme Court of the Territory must be affirmed.

*EDMUND J. SMILEY, Plff. in Err., [447]
v.

STATE OF KANSAS.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 447-457.)

Error to state court—questions of fact—construction of state statute—constitutional law—freedom to contract—validity of Kansas anti-trust law.

1. The verdict of the jury settles all questions of fact on a writ of error from the United States Supreme Court to a state court.
2. The scope and meaning of a state statute as determined by the highest court of the state conclude the Federal Supreme Court in determining, on writ of error to the state court, whether or not such statute violates the Federal Constitution.
3. The freedom to contract protected by U. S. Const. 14th Amend. is not unduly abridged by so much of the Kansas anti-trust law of March 8, 1897, as is construed by the state courts to forbid inducing four competitive wheat buyers in a single town to enter into an agreement under which, if either should purchase more than one fourth of the wheat coming into the market, he should pay the others 3 cents a bushel for the excess.

[No. 13.]

Argued October 20, 21, 1904. Decided February 20, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Kansas to review a judgment which affirmed a conviction in the District

NOTE.—On the validity and effect of modern anti-trust laws—see note to Whitwell v. Continental Tobacco Co. 64 L. R. A. 689.

As to what questions generally the Federal Supreme Court will consider in reviewing the judgments of state courts—see note to Missouri ex rel. Hill v. Dockery, 63 L. R. A. 571.

Review of questions of fact on writ of error to a state court.

The decision of a state court upon a pure question of fact cannot be reviewed by the Federal Supreme Court on writ of error to the state court. Cornell University v. Flske, 136 U. S. 152, 34 L. ed. 427, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 775; Dower v. Richards, 151 U. S. 658, 30 L. ed. 305, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 452; Re Buchanan, 158 U. S. 31, 39 L. ed. 884, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 723; Bartlett v. Lockwood, 160 U. S. 357, 40 L. ed. 455, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 334; Central P. R. Co. v. California, 162 U. S. 91, 40 L. ed. 903, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 766; Noble v. Mitchell, 164 U. S. 367, 41 L. ed. 472, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 41 L. ed. 979, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; Hedrick v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 167 U. S. 673, 42 L. ed. 320, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 922; Turner v. New York, 168 U. S. 90, 42 L. ed. 392, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 38; Backus v. Fort Street Union Depot Co. 169 U. S. 557, 42 L. ed. 853, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 445; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Haber, 169 U. S. 613, 42 L. ed. 878, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 488; New York v. Roberts, 171 U. S. 658, 43 L. ed. 323, 19

Court of Rush County, in that State, of a violation of the anti-trust law. Affirmed.

See same case below, 65 Kan. 240, 69 Pac. 199.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brewer:

On March 8, 1897, the legislature of Kansas passed an act, the 1st section of which is as follows:

"Sec. 1. A trust is a combination of capital, skill, or acts, by two or more persons, firms, corporations, or associations of persons, or either two or more of them, for either, any, or all of the following purposes: First.—To create or carry out restrictions in trade or commerce or aids to commerce, or to *carry out restrictions in the full and [448] free pursuit of any business authorized or permitted by the laws of this state. Second.—To increase or reduce the price of merchandise, produce, or commodities, or to control the cost or rates of insurance. Third.—To prevent competition in the manufacture, making, transportation, sale, or purchase of merchandise, produce, or commodities, or to prevent competition in aids to commerce. Fourth.—To fix any standard or figure, whereby its price to the public shall be, in any manner, controlled or established, any article or commodity of merchandise, produce, or commerce intended for sale, use, or consumption in this state. Fifth.—

Sup. Ct. Rep. 58; Columbia Water Power Co. v. Columbia Electric Street R. Light & P. Co. 172 U. S. 475, 43 L. ed. 521, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 247; Kaokuk & H. Bridge Co. v. Illinois, 175 U. S. 626, 44 L. ed. 299, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 205; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Schmidt, 177 U. S. 230, 44 L. ed. 747, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 620; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Call Pub. Co. 181 U. S. 92, 45 L. ed. 765, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 561; Jenkins v. Neff, 186 U. S. 230, 46 L. ed. 1140, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 905; Thayer v. Spratt, 189 U. S. 346, 47 L. ed. 845, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 576; Kaufman v. Tredway, 195 U. S. 271, ante 190, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 33.

A finding of the court upon a question of fact, or upon a mixed question of law and fact, which would be concluded by the verdict of the jury, is as much within this rule as the verdict itself would be. Republican River Bridge Co. v. Kansas P. R. Co. 92 U. S. 315, 23 L. ed. 515.

Any doubt as to the application of this rule to equity cases, which might otherwise arise from the decisions in Lytle v. Arkansas, 22 How. 193, 16 L. ed. 306; Barton v. Geller, 108 U. S. 161, 27 L. ed. 687, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 387; Republican River Bridge Co. v. Kansas P. R. Co. 92 U. S. 315, 23 L. ed. 515; Lammers v. Nissen, 154 U. S. 650 Appx. and 25 L. ed. 562, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1189; Dower v. Richards, 151 U. S. 658, 38 L. ed. 305, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 452; Clipper Min. Co. v. Ell Min. & Land Co. 194 U. S. 220, 48 L. ed. 944, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 632,—must be deemed resolved by the refusal, on the ground of lack of power, in Egan v. Hart, 165 U. S. 188, 41 L. ed. 680, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 300, to review the findings of fact on which the decree of the state court in an injunction suit rested.

The affirmance by the highest state court of the judgment of the court below, although by a divided court, constitutes such an affirmance of the findings of fact of the lower court as to conclude the Federal Supreme Court in reviewing the judgment of the highest state court. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 193 U. S. 53, 48 L. ed. 614, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 396.

Whatever was a question of fact in the state court is a question of fact on writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court to that court. Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Wiggins Ferry Co. 119 U. S. 615, 30 L. ed. 519, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 398; Hanley v. Donoghue, 116 U. S. 1, 29 L. ed. 535, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 242; Eastern Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Ebaugh, 185 U. S. 114, 46 L. ed. 830, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 566.

The laws of one state being matters of fact to be proved in the courts of another state, a finding as to such laws, based upon the decisions of the courts of that state introduced in evidence, is binding on writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court. Eastern Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Ebaugh, 185 U. S. 114, 46 L. ed. 830, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 566.

It is somewhat difficult to reconcile with this decision the action taken in Laing v. Rigney, 160 U. S. 531, 40 L. ed. 525, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 366, where the court went behind the finding of a state court as to the law of another state, based upon the opinion of an attorney, as an expert, that a decree could not be rendered upon a supplemental bill without new process served upon the defendant within the state, and reversed the judgment under review because full faith and credit were not given to such decree. The court's answer to the objection that the finding was conclusive was that the contention that there was no evidence to support a finding of fact presented a question of law reviewable in a court on error. But its decision rests on the ground that the expert opinion was insufficient to show the law of the state, as against an actual rendition of such a decree by the chancellor, which would seem rather to be a question of preponderance of evidence than one respecting the entire absence of evidence to support the finding.

This distinction between questions respecting the preponderance of testimony and the entire absence of evidence in support of the finding is recognized in German Sav. & L. Soc. v. Dormitzer, 192 U. S. 125, 48 L. ed. 373, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 221, where the fact that there was some evidence warranting a finding of the Washington supreme court that plaintiff in a divorce proceeding in Kansas was not domiciled therein, so as to confer jurisdiction on the Kansas court, was regarded as sufficient to conclude the Federal Supreme Court. "It may very well be," said Mr. Justice Holmes, "that, if the supreme court of Washington had undertaken to deny the jurisdiction of the Kansas tribunal without evidence impeaching it, such an evasion of the Constitution would not be upheld. . . . There was evidence warranting the finding, and, that being so, we take the facts as they were found."

A finding by a state court that warrants issued under and by virtue of certain acts of the state legislature were issued with intent to have them circulate as money is not a finding of fact, but is in the nature of a legal conclusion reviewable on writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States. Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Texas, 177 U. S. 66, 44 L. ed. 673, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 545.

To make or enter into, or execute or carry out, any contract, obligation, or agreement of any kind or description by which they shall bind or have to bind themselves not to sell, manufacture, dispose of, or transport any article or commodity, or article of trade, use, merchandise, commerce, or consumption below a common standard figure, or by which they shall agree in any manner to keep the price of such article, commodity, or transportation at a fixed or graded figure, or by which they shall in any manner establish or settle the price of any article or commodity or transportation between them or themselves and others, to preclude a free and unrestricted competition among themselves or others in transportation, sale, or manufacture of any such article or commodity, or by which they shall agree to pool, combine, or unite any interest they may have in connection with the manufacture, sale, or transportation of any such article or commodity, that its price may in any manner be affected. And any such combinations are hereby declared to be against public policy, unlawful, and void." Laws of Kansas, 1897, p. 481. [2 Kan. Gen. Stat. 1897, p. 791.]

[449] Subsequent sections prescribe penalties, and provide procedure for enforcing the act. On September 27, 1901, the county attorney filed in the district court of Rush county, Kansas, an information charging that the defendant did, on November 20, 1900, "then and there unlawfully enter into an agreement, contract, and combination, in the county of Rush *and the state of Kansas, with divers and sundry persons, partnerships, companies, and corporations of grain dealers and grain buyers in the town of Bison, in the said county and state aforesaid, to wit, Humburg & Ahrens, the La Crosse Lumber & Grain Company, the Bison Milling Company, and George Weicken, who were at the said time and place competitive grain dealers and buyers, to pool and fix the price the said grain dealers and buyers should pay for grain at the said place, and to divide between them the net earnings of the said grain dealers and buyers, and to prevent competition in the purchase and sale of grain among the said dealers and buyers." A trial was had, the defendant was found guilty, and sentenced to pay a fine of $500, and to imprisonment in the county jail for three months. On appeal to the supreme court of the state the judgment was affirmed. 65 Kan. 240, 69 Pac. 199. Whereupon this writ of error was sued out.

Mr. H. Whiteside argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The statute in question is an unwarranted attempt upon the part of the legislature to limit the rights of the individual in the matter of contracting and dealing with his fellow men.

2 Eddy, Combinations, §§ 679, 681, 905; Niagara F. Ins. Co. v. Cornell, 110 Fed. 816; Re Grice, 79 Fed. 627.

The fact that the Federal anti-trust law has been held constitutional is no argument in favor of the constitutionality of the Kansas statute.

Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. v. United States, 175 U. S. 211-228, 44 L. ed. 136-142, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 96.

The mode of construing a state act clear on its face, adopted by the court below, is against the great weight of authority.

Central Branch Union P. R. Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 28 Kan. 457; Warren v. Charlestown, 2 Gray, 84; Slauson v. Racine, 13 Wis. 399; Meshmeier v. State, 11 Ind. 482; McCluskey v. Cromwell, 11 N. Y. 601; Waller v. Harris, 20 Wend. 562, 32 Am. Dec. 590; Newell v. People, 7 N. Y. 97; Hyatt v. Taylor, 42 N. Y. 258; Johnson v. Hudson River R. Co. 49 N. Y. 455; Alexander v. Worthington, 5 Md. 485; Sutherland, Stat. Constr. p. 237; United States v. Reese, 92 U. S. 214, 23 L. ed. 563; United States v. Harris, 106 U. S. 629, 27 L. ed. 290, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 601; Encking v. Simmons, 28 Wis. 272; State v. Lovell, 23 Iowa, 304; Woodbury v. Berry, 18 Ohio St. 456; Dudley v. Reynolds, 1 Kan. 285; Fitzpatrick v. Gebhart, 7 Kan. 35; Ayers v. Trego County, 37 Kan. 240, 15 Pac. 229; State v. Chapman, 33 Kan. 134, 5 Pac. 768.

The Federal courts will not always follow state court constructions.

Burgess v. Seligman, 107 U. S. 20, 27 L. ed. 359, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 44; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Baugh, 149 U. S. 368, 37 L. ed. 772, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 914; Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 30 L. ed. 220, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064; Railroad & Teleph. Cos. v. Board of Equalizers, 85 Fed. 302; Neal v. Delaware, 103 U. S. 370, 26 L. ed. 567; Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339, 25 L. ed. 676; Henderson v. New York (Henderson v. Wickham) 92 U. S. 259, 23 L. ed. 543; New York C. R. Co. v. Lockwood, 17 Wall. 357, 21 L. ed. 627; Myrick v. Michigan C. R. Co. 107 U. S. 102, 27 L. ed. 325, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 425; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Elliott, 184 U. S. 531, 46 L. ed. 673, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 446; Roller v. Holly, 176 U. S. 408, 44 L. ed. 524, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410.

They are disregarded in all matters of general law or of great importance.

See James v. Bowman, 190 U. S. 127, 47 L. ed. 979, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 678.

All agreements which may affect prices of commodities and the conduct of business are not unlawful, and cannot be made so by legislatures.

Jones v. Fell, 5 Fla. 510; State v. Loomis, 115 Mo. 307, 21 L. R. A. 789, 22 S. W. 350; Central Shade Roller Co. v. Cushman, 143 Mass. 353, 9 N. E. 629; Herriman v. Menzies, 115 Cal. 16, 35 L. R. A. 318, 56 Am. St. Rep. 82, 46 Pac. 730, 44 Pac. 660; Leslie v. Lorillard, 110 N. Y. 519, 1 L. R. A. 456, 18 N. E. 363; Matthews v. Associated Press, 136 N. Y. 333, 32 Am. St. Rep. 741, 32 N. E. 981; Eddy, Combinations, §§ 262, 288, 332; Macaulay v. Tierney, 19 R. I. 255, 37 L. R. A. 455, 61 Am. St. Rep. 770, 33 Atl. 1; Bohn Mfg. Co. v. Hollis (Bohn Mfg. Co. v. Northwestern Lumbermen's Asso.) 54 Minn. 223, 21 L. R. A. 337, 40 Am. St. Rep. 319, 55 N. W. 1119; Ritchie v. People, 155 Ill. 98, 29 L. R. A. 79, 46 Am. St. Rep. 315, 40 N. E. 454; Hopkins v. United States, 171 U. S. 578, 43 L. ed. 290, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40; Anderson v. United States, 171 U. S. 604, 43 L. ed. 300, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 50.

The conviction of plaintiff in error was not obtained and sustained by due process of law, in a constitutional sense.

10 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 293; Weimer v. Bunbury, 30 Mich. 201; Brown v. Levee Comrs. 50 Miss. 468; Re Ah Lee, 6 Sawy. 410, 5 Fed. 899; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 41 L. ed. 979, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 733, 24 L. ed. 572; Rees v. Watertown, 19 Wall. 107, 22 L. ed. 72; Burton v. Platter, 4 C. C. A. 95, 10 U. S. App. 657, 53 Fed. 901; Lowc v. Kansas, 163 U. S. 81, 41 L. ed. 78, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1031.

Mr. D. R. Hite argued the cause, and, with Messrs. H. J. Bone and C. C. Coleman, filed a brief for defendant in error:

This court may only inquire whether the trial court prescribed any rule of law for the guidance of the jury, that was in absolute disregard of the defendant's right to be tried by due process of law.

Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226-246, 41 L. ed. 979-988, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581.

Since the trial court had jurisdiction of the subject-matter and of the parties, the facts found by the jury are conclusive in this court.

Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Haber, 169 U. S. 639, 42 L. ed. 887, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 488.

Investigation must be confined to the grievance of the plaintiff in error.

Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 177 U. S. 28-43, 44 L. ed. 657-663, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 518; Clark v. Kansas City, 176 U. S. 114, 44 L. ed. 392, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 284.

In the police power of the state there is abundant authority for the enactment of regulations to protect the citizens against the unreasonable exactions of those who, by reason of their position in the community and their relation to the public, are not entitled to insist upon the unrestricted rights of contract which otherwise might be conceded to them.

Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113-126, 24 L. ed. 77-84.

When it is conceded that the state has power to control and regulate its domestic commerce by prohibiting the entering into or carrying out of combinations to restrict the full and free pursuit of a lawful calling, it is purely a matter of legislative discretion whether it shall exert this power by prohibiting such combinations in relation to all lawful business or trade irrespective of the magnitude of such business or trade, or confine it to combinations affecting large enterprises.

Brass v. North Dakota, 153 U. S. 391-402, 38 L. ed. 757-760, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 670, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 857; Northern Securities Co. v. United States, 193 U. S. 197, 48 L. ed. 679, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436.

The act of 1897, as interpreted by the Kansas supreme court, is not repugnant to the Federal Constitution.

Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 177 U. S. 28-43, 44 L. ed. 657-663, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 518; United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Asso. 166 U. S. 290, 41 L. ed. 1007, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 540; United States v. Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. 46 L. R. A. 122, 29 C. C. A. 141, 54 U. S. App. 723, 85 Fed. 271.

The ordinary lawful contract between natural persons for a legitimate purpose is not, in ordinary language, described by the word "combination."

Bouvier, Law Dict. Rawle's Revision, Combination; Spelling, Trusts & Monopolies, Trust, § 120; Century Dict. Combine, Trust; Standard Dict. Combination, Combine.

The Constitution nowhere assures to anyone the right to engage in such unlawful business transactions, or to enter into contracts injurious to the public. Sic utere tuo ut alienum non lædas is the limitation upon the right of contract, as well as upon every other conventional right.

Com. v. Alger, 7 Cush. 53.

The rule of interpretation applied by the state court to the statute here in question has been applied by this court, time and again, where the propriety of its use had much less excuse than to save a statute from the taint of unconstitutionality.

Church of Holy Trinity v. United States, 143 U. S. 457, 36 L. ed. 226, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 511; United States v. Laws, 163 U. S. 258, 41 L. ed. 151, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 998; Hawaii v. Mankichi, 190 U. S. 197, 47 L. ed. 1016, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 787.

The course of decision, by this court, of the great cases arising out of the government's efforts to enforce the Sherman anti-trust act, furnishes a valuable and instructive argument in support of our contention that the exclusion from the act in question, by interpretation, of contracts and agreements only incidentally or remotely operating as restrictions upon trade, is wholly justifiable, and has been advocated by the most eminent counsel and acquiesced in by all of the members of this court without a thought or suggestion that such judicial interpretation would render the statute obnoxious to the principle that no person shall be deprived of his property except by due process of law. On the contrary, it was strenuously argued by eminent lawyers that even a more generous interpretation was essential to preserve the act from the taint of unconstitutionality.

United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Asso. 166 U. S. 290, 41 L. ed. 1007, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 540; United States v. Joint Traffic Asso. 171 U. S. 505, 43 L. ed. 259, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25; Northern Securities Co. v. United States, 193 U. S. 197, 48 L. ed. 679, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436.

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

The verdict of the jury settles all questions of fact.

In Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Haber, 169 U. S. 613, 639, 42 L. ed. 878, 887, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 488, it is said: "Much was said at [454] the bar about the finding of *the jury being against the evidence. We cannot enter upon such an inquiry. The facts must be taken as found by the jury, and this court can only consider whether the statute, as interpreted to the jury, was in violation of the Federal Constitution. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 242, 246, 41 L. ed. 979, 986, 988, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581."

We pass, therefore, to a consideration of the questions of law. It is contended that the act of 1897 is in conflict with the 14th Amendment to the Federal Constitution, in that it unduly infringes the freedom of contract; that it is too broad, and not sufficiently definite, and that while some things are denounced which may be within the police power of the state, yet its language reaches to and includes matters clearly beyond the limits of that power, and that there is no such separation or distinction between those within and those beyond as will enable the courts to declare one part valid and another part void. We quote from the brief of counsel for plaintiff in error:

"Section one goes entirely too far, and is an unwarranted attempt upon the part of the legislature to limit the rights of the individual in the matter of contracting and dealing with his fellow men. The liberty to contract is as much protected by the constitutional provisions above referred to as is the liberty of person, and any attempt to abridge or limit that right will be held void, unless such abridgment or limitation is necessary to preserve the peace and order of the community, or the life, liberty, and morals of individuals, in which cases it is held to be the proper exercise of the police power of the state."

It may be conceded, for the purposes of this case, that the language of the 1st section is broad enough to include acts beyond the police power of the state, and the punishment of which would unduly infringe upon the freedom of contract. At any rate we shall not attempt to enter into any consideration of that question. The supreme court of the state held that the acts charged and proved against the defendant were *clearly within the terms of the statute, as [455] well as within the police power of the state; and that the statute could be sustained as a prohibition of those acts irrespective of the question whether its language was broad enough to include acts and conduct which the legislature could not rightfully restrain.

It is well settled that in cases of this kind the interpretation placed by the highest court of the state upon its statutes is conclusive here. We accept the construction given to a state statute by that court. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Paul, 173 U. S. 404, 408, 43 L. ed. 746, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 419; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. McCann, 174 U. S. 580, 586, 43 L. ed. 1093, 1096, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 755; Tullis v. Lake Erie & W. R. Co. 175 U. S. 348, 44 L. ed. 192, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 136. Nor is it material that the state court ascertains the meaning and scope of the statute as well as its validity by pursuing a different rule of construction from that we recognize. It may be that the views of the Kansas court in respect to this matter are not in harmony with those expressed by us in United States v. Recse, 92 U. S. 214, 23 L. ed. 563; Trade-Mark Cases (United States v. Steffens), 100 U. S. 82, 25 L. ed. 550; United States v. Harris, 106 U. S. 629, 27 L. ed. 219, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 601; and Baldwin v. Franks, 120 U. S. 678, 30 L. ed. 766, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 656, 763. We shall not stop to consider that question nor the reconciliation of the supposed conflicting views suggested by the chief justice of the state. The power to determine the meaning of a statute carries with it the power to prescribe its extent and limitations, as well as the method by which they shall be determined.

The transaction, as shown by the testimony, was practically this: There were four dealers in wheat in Bison, a small village in Rush county, situated on the Missouri Pacific Railroad. Three of them owned elevators and one a mill. They were competitors in the purchase of grain. The defendant was secretary of the State Grain Dealers' Association. He was not himself in the grain business, nor interested in that of either of the four dealers. He came to Bison for the purpose of investigating some claims of Bison firms against the Missouri Pacific Railroad. While there he induced these dealers to enter into an arrangement by which, if one bought and shipped more grain than the others, that excess purchaser would [456] pay *them a certain per cent. As security for such agreement the parties deposited their checks for $100 each with the defendant. They made to him weekly reports of the amount of grain purchased. If one had purchased more than his share, he paid the defendant three cents a bushel for the excess, and that amount was then divided among the other dealers. Upon these facts, under appropriate instructions, the jury found the defendant guilty.

That the transaction was within the letter of the statute, in that it tended to prevent competition in the purchase of merchandise, is not open to doubt. It is also within the spirit of the statute. It imposed an unreasonable restraint upon competition. It is stated by counsel for plaintiff in error in his brief that not far from Bison were a number of other small towns, at which the principal commercial business was the buying and selling of wheat. But where there were four buyers, as in Bison, apparently competing, farmers nearer to Bison than to other villages, if not farmers more remote, would naturally seek that place in order to benefit by the competition. They would find an apparent competition, and yet each buyer was restrained by this contract from seeking to purchase more than his fourth of the wheat coming to the market, or, if he purchased more, must necessarily, in order to make his profit, buy his wheat at least 3 cents a bushel less than what he might otherwise pay, that being the penalty for an excess purchase. It was not an open agreement in respect to price, nor one that enabled sellers to know in advance exactly what they could get for their wheat.

Undoubtedly there is a certain freedom of contract which cannot be destroyed by legislative enactment. In pursuance of that freedom parties may seek to further their business interests, and it may not be always easy to draw the line between those contracts which are beyond the reach of the police power and those which are subject to prohibition or restraint. But a secret arrangement, by which, under penalties, an apparently existing competition among all necessaries of life is substantially destroyed, without any merging of interests through partnership or incorporation, is one to which the police power extends. That is as far as we need to go in sustaining the judgment in this case. That is as far as the supreme court of the state went. If other transactions are presented, in which there is an absolute freedom of contract beyond the power of the legislature to restrain, which come within the letter of any of the clauses of this statute, the courts will undoubtedly exclude them from its operation. As said by the supreme court of the state concerning the defendant's criticism of the breadth of this statute (p. 247, Pac. p. 201):

[457] the dealers *in a community in one of the

"He cannot be heard to object to the statute merely because it operates oppressively upon others. The hurt must be to himself. The case, under appellant's contention as to this point, is not a case of favoritism in the law. It is not a case of exclusion of classes who ought to have been included, the leaving out of which constitutes a denial of the equal protection of the law, but it is the opposite of that. It is a case of the inclusion of those who ought to have been excluded. Hence, unless appellant can show that he himself has been wrongfully included in the terms of the law, he can have no just ground of complaint. This is fundamental and decisively settled. Kansas City v. Union P. R. Co. 59 Kan. 427, 52 L. R. A. 321, 53 Pac. 468, affirmed under the title Clark v. Kansas City, 176 U. S. 114, 44 L. ed. 392, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 284; Albany County v. Stanley, 105 U. S. 305, 311, 26 L. ed. 1044, 1049; Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Montgomery, 152 Ind. 1, 71 Am. St. Rep. 301, 49 N. E. 582."

We see no error in the judgment of the Supreme Court of Kansas, and it is affirmed.

*ISAAC N. E. ALLEN et al., Plffs. in Err., [458]
v.

ALLEGHANY COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 458-466.)

Error to state court—Federal question—full faith and credit—construction of statute of other state—sufficiency of pleadings—comity.

1. Whether or not a corporate contract entered

NOTE.—Review of decisions of state courts presenting the question of full faith and credit.

A Federal question which will sustain the exercise of the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court over state courts is presented by a contention in the state court that full faith and credit were not given to the judicial records and proceedings of a court of an-into in contravention of the statutes regulating foreign corporations was, under the proper construction of such statutes, ipso facto void, and therefore unenforceable in the courts of another state, does not present a question under the full faith and credit clause of the Federal Constitution which will sustain the exercise by the Federal Supreme Court of its appellate jurisdiction over state courts.

2. A decision of the highest state court that a plea, when construed most strongly against the pleader, does not disclose the defense that the note in suit was given to a foreign corporation in pursuance of business carried on in another state without compliance with the statutory conditions upon which its right to do business there depended, involves purely a local question, which will not sustain a writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court.
3. Whether or not the courts of one state should, on principles of comity, permit an action to be maintained on a contract entered into in contravention of the laws of another state, is not a Federal question which will sustain a writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court to a state court.

[No. 119.]

Argued January 11, 1905. Decided February 20, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of New Jersey to review a judgment affirmed by the Court of Errors and Appeals of that State, enforcing a contract made in contravention of the statutes of another state regulating the conduct of business by foreign corporations. Dismissed.

See same case below, 69 N. J. L. 270, 55 Atl. 724.

other state. Jacobs v. Marks, 182 U. S. 583, 45 L. ed. 1241, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 865.

Whether a judgment or decree of one state has received full faith and credit in courts of another state is a Federal question. Huntington v. Attrill, 146 U. S. 657, 36 L. ed. 1123, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224; Carpenter v. Strange, 141 U. S. 87, 35 L. ed. 640, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 960; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Southern P. R. Co. 137 U. S. 48, 34 L. ed. 614, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10; Green v. Van Buskirk, 5 Wall. 307, 18 L. ed. 599; Great Western Teleg. Co. v. Purdy, 162 U. S. 329, 40 L. ed. 986, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 810.

A question respecting full faith and credit is presented by a contention that a state court denied to the judgment of a circuit court of the United States, sitting in another state, the effect to which it is entitled by U. S. Const. art. 4, § 1, and U. S. Rev. Stat. § 905 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 677). Hancock Nat. Bank v. Farnum, 176 U. S. 640, 44 L. ed. 619, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 506.

Whether a state court gave the same effect to a judgment of a circuit court of the United States as would be accorded to a judgment and decree of a state tribunal of equal authority is a Federal question. Pendleton v. Russell, 144 U. S. 640, 36 L. ed. 574, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 743.

A Federal question is presented by a contention that due effect to a decree of a Federal court was denied by the action of the court below in sustaining a plea of res judicata predicated on a decree of such Federal court, where a determination whether the court correctly applied the plea necessitates deciding whether, by sustaining such plea, rights were denied which were vested under another decree of the Federal court. National Foundry & Pipe Works v. Oconto Water Supply Co. 183 U. S. 216, 46 L. ed. 157, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111.

The exercise of this jurisdiction, where the question is what effect shall be given by a state court to a judgment of a Federal court, might also be rested on the ground that the question is one respecting Federal authority. See, on this point, division IV. c, in note to Apex Trausp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L. R. A. 513, on What adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts.

The correctness of a decision of a circuit court of the United States in another case between other parties, as to the liability of a town on its bonds, is not a Federal question. Winona & St. P. R. Co. v. Plainview, 143 U. S. 371, 36 L. ed. 191, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 530.

A judicial state record must be authenticated as required by the act of Congress of May 26, 1790, or the Federal question whether the same effect has been given to it in another state as it has in its own cannot arise. Caperton v. Bailard, 14 Wall. 238, 20 L. ed. 885.

A claim that a state court did not give full faith and credit to the statute of another state, set out in the pleadings, and to the judicial decisions of that state thereon, does not raise a Federal question, where such statute and decisions were not proved. Lloyd v. Matthews, 155 U. S. 222, 39 L. ed. 128, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 70.

A question as to the full faith and credit which must, under the Federal Constitution, be accorded by the courts of one state to the statutes of another, is not raised by a contention respecting the proper construction of such statutes. Glenn v. Garth, 147 U. S. 360, 37 L. ed. 203, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350; Lloyd v. Matthews, 155 U. S. 222, 39 L. ed. 128, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 70; Banholzer v. New York L. Ins. Co. 178 U. S. 402, 44 L. ed. 1124, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 972.

The question of the applicability, to the cause before the state court, of the statute of another state, is not one respecting the full faith and credit to be given such statute. Johnson v. New York L. Ins. Co. 187 U. S. 491, 47 L. ed. 273, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 194.

A controversy respecting the authority of a foreign corporation to make the contract in suit, under the general principles of law which govern corporate charters, irrespective of anything peculiar to the jurisprudence of the state by which the charter was granted, involves no question of the full faith and credit to be given to the legislation of such state. Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Wiggins Ferry Co. 119 U. S. 615, 30 L. ed. 519, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 398.

The question as to the effect which a state court should give to one of its own judgments is not Federal. Phoenix F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Tennessee, 161 U. S. 174, 40 L. ed. 660, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 471.

The question as to the construction to be given by the highest court of a state to its own judgment, in proceedings to charge a party thereto with contempt, is not Federal. Newport Light Co. v. Newport, 151 U. S. 527, 38 L. ed. 259, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 429.

A decision of a state court cannot be reviewed

Statement by Mr. Justice Brown:

This was a suit begun in the supreme court of New Jersey by the Alleghany Company, to recover the amount due upon a promissory note dated at New York, July 16, 1900, given by the plaintiffs in error, under the firm name of I. N. E. Allen & Co., for $1,989.54, upon which payments amounting to $1,000 were indorsed. The declaration was upon the common counts, but annexed was a copy of the note, with a notice that the action was brought to recover the amount due thereon. The defendants pleaded four several pleas:

1. General issue.

2. That the note was executed and delivered in the state of New York to the plaintiff company, a business corporation created under the laws of North Carolina. That when said note was executed and delivered it was provided by the statute of the state of New York that—“No foreign corporation . . . shall do[459] business in this state without having first procured from the secretary of state a certificate that it has complied with all the requirements of law to authorize it to do business in this state, and that the business of the corporation to be carried on in this state is such as may be lawfully carried on by a corporation incorporated under the laws of this state. . . . No foreign stock corporation doing business in this state shall maintain any action in this state, upon any contract made by it in this state, in the Supreme Court of the United States as a denial of full faith and credit to an Hawaiian judgment, where the Federal right did not exist when the judgment of the trial court was rendered, because the Hawaiian Islands had not then been annexed to the United States, and such contention was not brought to the attention of the highest state court in any form. Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 188 U. S. 291, 47 L. ed. 480, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 375.

A decision of a state court which merely construes a statute of another state as inapplicable to the case before it, and does not deny the validity of such statute, does not amount to a decision against the full faith and credit claimed for such statute. Johnson v. New York L. Ins. Co. 187 U. S. 491, 47 L. ed. 273, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 194.

A decision by a state court that the notice required by a statute of another state in order to justify a forfeiture of a life insurance policy for nonpayment of the premium is not required on the maturity of a note given for an installment of the premium does not present any Federal question under the full faith and credit clause of the Federal Constitution, so as to give jurisdiction to the Supreme Court of the United States on writ of error, when such decision is based both on the authority of a decision of a court of such other state and upon an independent construction of the statute, even though the court erred in its construction both of the decision and of the statute. Banholzer v. New York L. Ins. Co. 178 U. S. 402, 44 L. ed. 1124, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 972.

The decision of the supreme court of South Carolina that a will probated in North Carolina was not a valid execution of a power of appointment given by a will executed in South Carolina by a citizen of that state rests upon the construction, alone, of the latter will, independent of any question with reference to the full faith and credit which should be accorded to the probate proceedings in North Carolina. Blount v. Walker, 134 U. S. 607, 33 L. ed. 1036, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 606.

But the fact that a state court, in addition to denying the effect claimed for a judgment of a sister state, decided the case upon a question of general law sufficiently broad to sustain the judgment, will not oust the Supreme Court of the United States of jurisdiction, where such question was not open to the state court to decide, if it gave full faith and credit to the judicial proceedings of the state court, but had already been passed upon and determined by the court whose judgment was put in evidence. Carpenter v. Strange, 141 U. S. 87, 35 L. ed. 640, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 960.

And see note to Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L. R. A. 33, on How and when questions must be raised and decided in a state court in order to make a case for a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States.

Where the Federal Supreme Court is reviewing a judgment of a state court on the ground that full faith and credit were not accorded the judicial proceedings of another state, it must judge for itself the true nature and effect of the order relied on. Great Western Teleg. Co. v. Purdy, 162 U. S. 329, 40 L. ed. 986, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 810.

Where a state court refused to enforce a judgment of a court of a sister state enforcing the statutory liability of a corporate director, because it was of the opinion that the statute was a penal one, the Federal Supreme Court is not bound by the construction given to such statute by the courts of the state in which it was enacted, but must determine for itself whether the original cause of action was penal in the international sense. Huntington v. Attrill, 146 U. S. 657, 36 L. ed. 1123, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224. “The case in this regard,” said Mr. Justice Gray, “is analogous to one arising under the clause of the Constitution which forbids a state to pass any law impairing the obligation of contracts. In which, if the highest court of a state decides nothing but the original construction and obligation of a contract, this court has no jurisdiction to review its decision; but if the state court gives effect to a subsequent law which is impugned as impairing the obligation of a contract this court has power, in order to determine whether any contract has been impaired, to decide for itself what the true construction of the contract is. New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Louisiana Sugar Ref. Co. 125 U. S. 18, 38, 31 L. ed. 607, 614, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 741. So, if the state court, in an action to enforce the original liability under the law of another state, passes upon the nature of that liability, and nothing else, this court cannot review its decision; but if the state court declines to give full faith and credit to a judg-unless, prior to the making of such contract, it shall have procured such certificate."

The plea further averred that at the time of the making of the note the plaintiff was a business stock corporation, foreign to the state of New York, and had not theretofore procured from the secretary of state a certificate that it had complied with all the requirements of the law to authorize it to do business within the state, and that the business of said plaintiff was such as might be lawfully carried on by a corporation incorporated under the laws of said state for such or similar business, according to the form of the statute of New York in such case made and provided.

3. The third plea sets out that the note was made and executed in the state of Pennsylvania to the plaintiff company, a foreign corporation created under the laws of North Carolina.

That when said note was executed and delivered it was provided by the state of Pennsylvania that—

"1. No foreign corporation shall do any business in this commonwealth until said corporation shall have established an office or offices and appointed an agent or agents for the transaction of its business therein. 2. It shall not be lawful for any such corporation to do any business in this commonwealth until it shall have filed in the office of the secretary of the commonwealth a statement, under the seal of said corporation, and signed by the president or secretary thereof, showing the title and object of said corporation, the location of its office or offices, and the name or names of its attorney, *agent, or agents therein, and the certificate of the secretary of the commonwealth, under the seal of the commonwealth, of the filing of such statement, shall be preserved for public inspection by each of [460]ment of another state, because of its opinion as to the nature of the cause of action on which the judgment was recovered, this court, in determining whether full faith and credit have been given to that judgment, must decide for itself the nature of the original liability."

The effect to be given by the courts of one state to provisions for bond, sequestration, receiver, and injunction, made in a decree for alimony of a court of another state, depends on local statutes and practice of that state, and cannot be inquired into by the Supreme Court of the United States in reviewing a judgment of a state court which is claimed to have denied full faith and credit to a judgment of a court of another state. Lynde v. Lynde, 181 U. S. 133, 45 L. ed. 810, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 555.

The interpretation of a state statute against usury, by a state court as applicable to a loan made by a foreign building and loan association to a resident of the state through a local agent, and as expressing the public policy of the state, which the parties could not by their contract contravene, is binding on the Supreme Court of the United States on a writ of error to review said agents in each and every of said offices. 3. Any person or persons, agents, officers, or employees of any such foreign corporation, who shall transact any business within this commonwealth for any such foreign corporation, without the provisions of this act being complied with, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by imprisonment, not exceeding thirty days, and by a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or either, at the discretion of the court trying the same."

The plea further averred that, at the making of the note, the plaintiff was a corporation foreign to the said commonwealth, and had not theretofore filed in the office of the secretary a statement showing the title and object of said plaintiff, the location of its office, and the name of its authorized agent therein, according to the form of said statute; yet, notwithstanding the premises, the plaintiff, at the time of the making of the said note, did business in the said commonwealth of Pennsylvania, contrary to the form of the said statute.

The plaintiff demurred to the second and third pleas, and, the demurrer being overruled, the cause was sent down to the Circuit Court of Hudson county for trial on an issue of fact raised by the fourth plea, which is not material here.

The trial judge there directed a verdict for the plaintiff, and upon appeal to the court of errors and appeals of New Jersey the judgment of the lower court was affirmed. 69 N. J. L. 270, 55 Atl. 724.

Mr. Alexander S. Bacon argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. James A. Gordon argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error.

a judgment of the state court, which is claimed to have denied full faith and credit to the public records and acts of the state where the association is domiciled. National Mut. Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Brahan, 193 U. S. 635, 48 L. ed. 823, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 532.

See also note to Missouri ex rel. Hill v. Dockery, 63 L. R. A. 571, on What questions the Federal Supreme Court will consider in reviewing the judgments of state courts.

In addition to the notes hereinbefore referred to, other notes involving questions respecting the appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of the United States over state courts are: What the record must show respecting the presentation and decision of a Federal question in order to confer jurisdiction on the Supreme Court of the United States of a writ of error to a state court, Hooker v. Los Angeles, 63 L. R. A. 471; The record for this purpose, Home for Incurables v. New York, 63 L. R. A. 329; Practice and procedure governing the transfer of causes to the Federal Supreme Court on writ of error or appeal, Wedding v. Meyler, 66 L. R. A. 833.

Mr. Justice Brown delivered the opinion of the court:

The defendants, plaintiffs in error here, pleaded that the note upon which suit was brought was executed in the state of New York, and that, under the laws of that state, no foreign corporation could do business there without a certificate of the secretary of state that it had complied with all the requirements of law to authorize it to do business there; and that no such corporation could maintain any action in that state unless, prior to the making of such contract, it had procured such certificate; that plaintiff was a foreign corporation within the meaning of the law, and had not procured a certificate.

The third plea was similar in terms, averring the note to have been made in Pennsylvania, whose statutes provided that foreign corporations should do no business in the state without filing a certain statement in the secretary's office and procuring the certificate of the secretary of the commonwealth, and further providing that the agent of any foreign corporation transacting business within the state, without complying with the provisions of the law, should be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor. The plea also averred noncompliance with those provisions.

Both the supreme court and the court of errors and appeals held that a contract made in contravention of these statutory regulations, though not enforceable in the [463] courts of New York and Pennsylvania, was not ipso facto void, and might be, notwithstanding such statutes, enforced in New Jersey.

Plaintiffs in error insist that by this ruling full faith and credit was denied by the courts of New Jersey to the statutes of New York and Pennsylvania, in contravention to § 1, article 4, of the Constitution.

By § 709 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575), authorizing writs of error to the state courts, it is declared that final judgments, where is drawn in question the validity of a statute of any state, or any authority exercised under any state, on the ground of their being repugnant to the Constitution, etc., and the decision is in favor of their validity, may be re-examined here.

But the validity of these statutes was not denied. The case turned upon their construction and the effect to be given to them in another state. The New York statute directly, and the Pennsylvania indirectly, forbade the maintenance of actions "in this state." The Pennsylvania statute made it a misdemeanor to transact business without complying with the law. Neither statute declared the contract so made to be void, 196 U. S.

and it was apparently upon this ground that the New Jersey courts held that the case did not fall within those decisions where-in it is declared that a contract void by the lex loci contractus is void everywhere.

In several cases we have held that the construction of a statute of another state, and its operation elsewhere, did not necessarily involve a Federal question. The case is practically governed by that of the Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Wiggins Ferry Co. 119 U. S. 615, 30 L. ed. 519, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 398. In that case suit was brought in a state court by the ferry company against the railroad to recover damages for not employing the ferry company for the transportation of persons and property across the river, as by its contract it was bound to do. The defendant pleaded that it had no power to make the contract; that the same was in violation of the laws of Illinois, contrary to the public policy* thereof, and was [464] void. The statutes were put in evidence, but their construction and operative effect were disputed. The supreme court of the state held that the contract was interpreted correctly by the court below, and that it was not ultra vires, contrary to public policy, or in restraint of trade. It was argued here by the railroad company that, by law and usage of Illinois, the charter of the company in that state made the contract ultra vires. We held that the law of Illinois to that effect should have been proved as a fact, either by decisions of its courts or by law or usage in that state; that state courts are not charged with a knowledge of the laws of another state; but they have to be proved, and that, while Federal courts exercising their original jurisdiction are bound to take notice of the laws of the several states, yet this court, when exercising its appellate jurisdiction from state courts, whatever was the matter of fact in that court is matter of fact here (citing Hanley v. Donoghue, 116 U. S. 1, 29 L. ed. 535, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 242). We said: "Whether the charter of this company, in its operation on the contract now in suit, had any different effect in Illinois from what it would have, according to the principles of general law which govern like charters and like contracts in Missouri and elsewhere throughout the country, was, under this rule, a question of fact in the Missouri court, as to which no testimony whatever was offered."

No proof having been offered to support the averment that the contract was in violation of the laws of Illinois, the defense relying on the general claim that the contract was illegal, it was held that no Federal question was involved, and the case was dismissed. It was said that it should have appeared on the face of the record that the facts presented for adjudication made it necessary for the court to consider the act of incorporation, in view of the peculiar jurisprudence in Illinois, rather than the general law of the land.

Since the above case we have repeatedly held that the mere construction by a state court of a statute of another state, without questioning its validity, does not, with possibly some *exceptions, deny to it the full faith and credit demanded by the statute in order to give this court jurisdiction. Glenn v. Garth, 147 U. S. 360, 37 L. ed. 203, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350; Lloyd v. Matthews, 155 U. S. 222, 39 L. ed. 128, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 70; Banholzer v. New York L. Ins. Co. 178 U. S. 402, 44 L. ed. 1124, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 972; Johnson v. New York L. Ins. Co. 187 U. S. 491, 47 L. ed. 273, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 194; Finney v. Guy, 189 U. S. 335, 47 L. ed. 839, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 558.

The court of errors and appeals, conceding the general rule both in New Jersey and New York to be that a contract, void by the law of the state where made, will not be enforced in the state of the forum (Columbia F. Ins. Co. v. Kinyon, 37 N. J. L. 33, and Hyde v. Goodnow, 3 N. Y. 266), held that the state statute of New York did not declare the contract void, and that there was no decision in that state holding it to be so. In fact, the only case in the court of appeals in New York (Neuchatel Asphalt Co. v. New York, 155 N. Y. 373, 49 N. E. 1043) is the other way. The court of appeals in that case held that the purpose of the act was not to avoid contracts, but to provide effective supervision and control of the business carried on by foreign corporations; that no penalty for noncompliance was provided, except the suspension of civil remedies in that state, and none others would be implied. This corresponds with our rulings upon similar questions. Fritts v. Palmer, 132 U. S. 282, 33 L. ed. 317, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 93.

With respect to the Pennsylvania statute, the court held that, although the Pennsylvania courts had held that a contract made in violation of the Pennsylvania statute was void, yet that the third plea did not contain allegations which showed that the note was given in pursuance of business carried on in Pennsylvania, and not in consummation of a single transaction; and although it was averred that plaintiff did business in that state, it was not averred that the note had any connection with the business carried on in Pennsylvania, or that it was given for goods sold in Pennsylvania. The admitted averments may be true, and yet the note may have been given for an obligation contracted out of the state of Pennsylvania, and consequently, not in violation of its laws. *Construing the third plea most strongly against the pleader, the conclusion was that it disclosed no defense in the action. This was purely a local question, and is not assignable as error here.

556

Whether, aside from the Federal question discussed, the courts of New Jersey should have sustained this action upon principles of comity between the states, was also a question within the exclusive jurisdiction of the state court. Finney v. Guy, 189 U. S. 335, 47 L. ed. 839, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 558.

The writ of error must, therefore, be dismissed.

JAMES C. CORRY, Plff. in Err.,
v.

MAYOR AND COUNCIL OF BALTIMORE
et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 466-480.)

Constitutional law—due process of law—taxation of nonresident stockholder.

1. Due process of law is not denied a nonresident stockholder in a domestic corporation by the imposition, under Md. Code Pub. Gen. Laws, art. 81, as a condition of such ownership, of a personal liability for the taxes upon his stock, to be enforced by a personal action brought against him by the corporation to recover the amount of the tax which it is compelled to pay on his behalf.
2. Lack of any provision for notice to a nonresident stockholder in a domestic corporation of the assessment of taxes on his stock, or for opportunity for contest by him as to the correctness of the valuation, does not render invalid, as denying due process of law, so much of Md. Code Pub. Gen. Laws, art. 81, as imposes upon him, as a condition of such ownership, a personal liability for the taxes upon his stock, to be enforced by a personal action brought against him by the corporation to recover the amount of the tax which it is compelled to pay on his behalf, since that statute is construed by the state courts as constituting the corporation in legal effect the agent of the stockholders, to receive no-

NOTE.—As to what constitutes due process of law—see Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L. R. A. 655, and note; Re Gannon, 5 L. R. A. 359, and note; Ulman v. Baltimore, 11 L. R. A. 224, and note; and Gilman v. Tucker, 13 L. R. A. 304, and note. And see notes to People v. O'Brien, 2 L. R. A. 255; Pearson v. Yewdall, 24 L. ed. U. S. 436; and Wilson v. North Carolina, 42 L. ed. U. S. 865.

On notice and hearing required to constitute due process of law—see notes to Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L. R. A. 657; Chauvin v. Vailton, 3 L. R. A. 194; and Ulman v. Baltimore, 11 L. R. A. 225.

On taxation of nonresident shareholders in domestic corporations—see notes to State Bd. of Equalization v. People, 58 L. R. A. 580; and Walker v. Jack, 31 C. C. A. 467.

196 U. S.

tice and to represent them in proceedings for the correction of the assessment.

[No. 86.]

Argued December 8, 9, 1904. Decided February 20, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Court of Appeals of the State of Maryland to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court of Baltimore City, in that State, sustaining demurrers to, and dismissing, a bill to enjoin the collection of a tax on a non-resident stockholder in a domestic corporation. Affirmed.

See same case below, 96 Md. 310, 53 Atl. 942.

Statement by Mr. Justice White:

[467] *The New York & Baltimore Transportation Line was chartered in 1847 by the general assembly of Maryland, and it still exists by virtue of an extension in 1876 of its charter. At all times the corporation has maintained its principal office in the city of Baltimore.

James C. Corry, a resident and citizen of Pennsylvania, acquired 150 shares of the stock of the transportation line, having a face value of $20 per share.

The 150 shares standing in Corry's name, as stated, were assessed for the years 1899 and 1900 for state and the municipal taxes of the city of Baltimore, the total taxes being $43.27 for the year 1899 and $36.49 for the year 1900. Conformably to the laws of Maryland, payment of said taxes was demanded of the transportation company. To restrain compliance with this demand, Corry commenced the present suit, making defendants to the bill of complaint the mayor and council of Baltimore, the treasurer of the city, the treasurer of the state, and the transportation company. The relief prayed was based on averments that the laws of Maryland under which the taxes were levied were repugnant to the state and Federal Constitutions, upon grounds specified in the bill. A decree was entered sustaining general demurrers, interposed by the various defendants, and dismissing the bill. This was affirmed by the court of appeals of Maryland. 96 Md. 310, 53 Atl. 942.

Messrs. William P. Maulsby and Edwin G. Baetjer argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The power of taxation, however vast in its character and searching in its extent, is necessarily limited to subjects within the jurisdiction of the state.

State Tax on Foreign Held Bonds (Cleveland, P. & A. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania) 15 Wall. 319, 21 L. ed. 186; Cooley, Taxn. 3d 196 U. S.

ed. p. 249, 2d ed. pp. 159, 555; Louisville & J. Ferry Co. v. Kentucky, 188 U. S. 385, 397, 47 L. ed. 513, 518, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 463; Dewey v. Des Moines, 173 U. S. 193, 204, 43 L. ed. 665, 668, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 379; M'Culloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 429, 4 L. ed. 579, 607; Fargo v. Hart, 193 U. S. 490, 500, 48 L. ed. 761, 765, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 498; Com. v. Standard Oil Co. 101 Pa. 119; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 196, 208, 29 L. ed. 158, 163, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 382, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826; St. Louis v. Wiggins Ferry Co. 11 Wall. 423, 20 L. ed. 192.

The state has no jurisdiction to assess a tax as a personal charge against a nonresident.

Cooley, Taxn. 3d ed. p. 24; Dewey v. Des Moines, 173 U. S. 193, 43 L. ed. 665, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 379; Louisville & J. Ferry Co. v. Kentucky, 188 U. S. 385, 47 L. ed. 513, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 463; Baltimore v. Hussey, 67 Md. 112, 9 Atl. 19.

Both the person and property may be within the state. The state has the full right of taxation in personam and in rem.

The person may be in the state and the property without.

(a) A tax may be levied in personam against the person on the basis of his worth, and the property included in ascertaining his worth.

Coe v. Errol, 116 U. S. 517, 524, 29 L. ed. 715, 717, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 475.

(b) The property so without the jurisdiction cannot be taxed in rem, either directly or indirectly.

Louisville & J. Ferry Co. v. Kentucky, 188 U. S. 385, 396, 397, 398, 47 L. ed. 513, 518, 519, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 463; Fargo v. Hart, 193 U. S. 490, 498, 48 L. ed. 761, 764, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 498.

The property may be within the state, but the person without.

(a) The property is subject to a tax in rem. This is directly within the power.

(b) The state has no power to tax the nonresident owner in personam.

Dewey v. Des Moines, 173 U. S. 193, 203, 204, 43 L. ed. 665, 668, 669, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 379; New York v. McLean, 170 N. Y. 374, 63 N. E. 380, 57 App. Div. 601, 68 N. Y. Supp. 606.

While a state may prescribe a variety of conditions under which such privileges may be enjoyed by a nonresident, and require him to submit to a number of conditions under which its own citizens enjoy the same privileges, there is one condition or duty of the citizen or resident to which the nonresident is not obliged to submit, i. e., his personal subjection to its sovereignty.

Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 733, 24 L. ed. 572; Paul v. Virginia, 8 Wall. 168, 180, 19

L. ed. 357, 360; Corfield v. Coryell, 4 Wash. C. C. 380, Fed. Cas. No. 3,230; Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall. 36, 76, 21 L. ed. 394, 408.

Even if it had the right, mere provisions for taxation in its Constitution and statutes, such as are here involved, would not indicate an intention to exercise such power.

Railroad Tax Case, 8 Sawy. 238, 13 Fed. 753.

The capital stock tax imposed by the revenue laws of the state of Maryland is a tax in personam on the stockholder, not a tax in rem on his shares.

Monticello Distilling Co. v. Baltimore, 90 Md. 416, 45 Atl. 210; Carstairs v. Cochran, 95 Md. 495, 52 Atl. 601; The Tax Cases, 12 Gill & J. 117; Appeal Tax Court v. Patterson, 50 Md. 354; United States Electric Power & Light Co. v. State, 79 Md. 63, 28 Atl. 768; Crown Cork & Seal Co. v. State, 87 Md. 696, 53 L. R. A. 417, 67 Am. St. Rep. 371, 40 Atl. 1074; James Clark Distilling Co. v. Cumberland, 95 Md. 468, 52 Atl. 661; Hull v. Southern Development Co. 89 Md. 8, 42 Atl. 943; Donovan v. Firemen's Ins. Co. 30 Md. 155; American Coal Co. v. Allegany County, 59 Md. 185.

The obligation to pay is imposed on the corporation. This, however, is not an obligation as taxpayer, but as tax collector; the primary tax obligation is on the shareholder.

Hull v. Southern Development Co. 89 Md. 8, 42 Atl. 943; United States Electric Power & Light Co. v. State, 79 Md. 63, 28 Atl. 768; American Casualty Ins. Co's Case (Boston & A. R. Co. v. Mercantile Trust & D. Co.) 82 Md. 535, 38 L. R. A. 97, 34 Atl. 778.

The obligations are in no way restricted in extent to dividends or to the stock.

New Orleans v. Houston, 119 U. S. 265, 276, 279, 30 L. ed. 411, 414, 415, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 198; American Casualty Ins. Co's Case (Boston & A. R. Co. v. Mercantile Trust & D. Co.) 82 Md. 535, 38 L. R. A. 97, 34 Atl. 778; Stapylton v. Thaggard, 33 C. C. A. 353, 62 U. S. App. 638, 91 Fed. 93.

The tax is, moreover, recoverable in assumption.

Dugan v. Baltimore, 1 Gill & J. 499; Baltimore v. Howard, 6 Harr. & J. 383; Hull v. Southern Development Co. 89 Md. 8, 42 Atl. 943; American Casualty Ins. Co's Case (Boston & A. R. Co. v. Mercantile Trust & D. Co.) 82 Md. 535, 38 L. R. A. 97, 34 Atl. 778; American Coal Co. v. Allegany County, 59 Md. 185.

This tax, it is to be noted, is not a tax on the corporation itself.

Donovan v. Firemen's Ins. Co. 30 Md. 155; Hull v. Southern Development Co. 89 Md. 8, 42 Atl. 943; United States Electric Power & Light Co. v. State, 79 Md. 63, 28 Atl. 768; Crown Cork & Seal Co. v. State, 87 Md.

696, 53 L. R. A. 417, 67 Am. St. Rep. 371, 40 Atl. 1074; James Clark Distilling Co. v. Cumberland, 95 Md. 468, 52 Atl. 661.

The tax is levied without due process of law, and is therefore in conflict with the 14th Amendment to the Constitution.

Cooley, Taxn. pp. 363, 364; Railroad Tax Case, 8 Sawy. 238, 13 Fed. 752.

Some opportunity must be afforded the owner to question the validity or amount of the assessment.

The notice need not be personal; it may be by publication, or a statute may give notice by fixing the time and place of hearing.

Winona & St. P. Land Co. v. Minnesota, 159 U. S. 526, 536, 40 L. ed. 247, 251, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 83; Merchants' & M. Nat. Bank v. Pennsylvania, 167 U. S. 461, 42 L. ed. 236, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 829; Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 154 U. S. 421, 425, 38 L. ed. 1031, 1036, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1114.

The time and place for hearing must be in some way prescribed.

State Railroad Tax Cases (Taylor v. Secor) 92 U. S. 575, 610, 23 L. ed. 663, 672; Palmer v. McMahon, 133 U. S. 669, 33 L. ed. 776, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 324; Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. 111 U. S. 701, 710, 28 L. ed. 569, 572, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663. See also Monticello Distilling Co. v. Baltimore, 90 Md. 416, 45 Atl. 210.

The assessment of shareholders is not embraced in the general assessment law. The provisions for hearing and notice, in the general assessment law of property, are not applicable to the assessment of the shareholders. This assessment is the subject of a special proceeding before the state tax commissioner. His decision (subject only to the appeal provided for, to the treasurer and comptroller) is final. It is not subject to control by the courts, even in a case of mistake.

Salisbury Permanent Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Wicomico County, 86 Md. 615, 39 Atl. 425; James Clark Distilling Co. v. Cumberland, 95 Md. 468, 52 Atl. 661.

No hearing before assessment, other than the corporate return, was contemplated.

Monticello Distilling Co. v. Baltimore, 90 Md. 416, 45 Atl. 210; Merchants' & M. Nat. Bank v. Pennsylvania, 167 U. S. 461, 42 L. ed. 236, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 829; Railroad Tax Case, 8 Sawy. 238, 13 Fed. 750.

If any notice or opportunity is provided by the statute to the stockholders, it can only be on the theory that notice to the corporation is notice to the stockholders.

James Clark Distilling Co. v. Cumberland, 95 Md. 468, 52 Atl. 661.

But the question what constitutes an opportunity to be heard, or the elements of such opportunity, are Federal questions on which the Supreme Court would not consider the decision of the state court conclusive.

Piqua Branch of State Bank v. Knoop, 16 How. 391, 14 L. ed. 986; Wright v. Nagle, 101 U. S. 793, 794, 25 L. ed. 922, 923; McCullough v. Virginia, 172 U. S. 109, 110, 43 L. ed. 384, 385, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 134.

We do not, of course, deny that the state may provide for notice of any assessment on the local agent of a nonresident owner. But there must be a real agency. The one relation which it has been uniformly held does not exist between the corporation and stockholders, or vice versa, or among the stockholders, is that of principal and agent,—especially with respect to the separate individual interests represented by the shares.

Cook, Corp. § 11.

In the state of Maryland, moreover, and for tax purposes, the corporation is the agent of the state, not of the stockholder.

Hull v. Southern Development Co. 89 Md. 8, 42 Atl. 943.

Mr. Albert C. Ritchie argued the cause, and, with Mr. W. Cabell Bruce, filed a brief for defendants in error:

The question before this court is one of the power and authority of the state of Maryland to declare that the situs, for purposes of taxation, of stock in Maryland corporations held by nonresidents of the state, shall be in Maryland, and that such stock shall be there taxed. Moreover, if the state possesses this power, its right to exercise it is in no way affected by the fact that the nonresident stockholder may or may not be taxed upon his stock in the state of his domicil.

Blackstone v. Miller, 188 U. S. 189, 205, 47 L. ed. 439, 444, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277.

Movable personal property is always subject to taxation in the state where it is situated.

Coe v. Errol, 116 U. S. 517, 29 L. ed. 715, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 475; American Refrigerator Transit Co. v. Hall, 174 U. S. 70, 43 L. ed. 899, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 599; Union Refrigerator Transit Co. v. Lynch, 177 U. S. 149, 44 L. ed. 708, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 631.

For the purposes of taxation, the situs of shares of stock may be separated from the person of the owner, and the stockholder, even though a nonresident, may be taxed on account of his stock at the place where its situs is thus established.

First Nat. Bank v. Kentucky, 9 Wall. 353, 19 L. ed. 701; Tappan v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 19 Wall. 490, 22 L. ed. 189; New Orleans v. Stempel, 175 U. S. 309, 320, 44 L. ed. 174, 180, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110; Bristol v. Washington County, 177 U. S. 133, 144, 44 L. ed. 701, 706, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585; Trav- ellers' Ins. Co. v. Connecticut, 185 U. S. 364, 46 L. ed. 949, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673.
196 U. S.

It has been held that a statute giving shares of stock a situs for taxation at the location of the corporation may be passed even after the incorporation.

St. Albans v. National Car Co. 57 Vt. 68.

For purposes of taxation, personal property may be separated from its owner, and he may be taxed on its account at the place where it is, although not the place of his own domicil, and even if he is not a citizen or a resident of the state which imposes the tax.

Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 18, 35 L. ed. 613, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 595, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 876.

In Adams Exp. Co. v. Ohio State Auditor, 166 U. S. 185, 224, 41 L. ed. 965, 978, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 604, this court said that the maxim Mobilia sequuntur personam was never of universal application, and seldom interfered with the right of taxation.

In Savings & Loan Soc. v. Multnomah County, 169 U. S. 421, 42 L. ed. 803, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 392, this court held that the Oregon statute taxing mortgages on land in Oregon to the mortgagees in the county where the land lies was not unconstitutional because it applied to mortgages owned by nonresidents of the state.

In Kirtland v. Hotchkiss, 100 U. S. 491, 25 L. ed. 558, it was held lawful for a state to tax its resident citizens on debts held by them against nonresidents, secured by mortgages upon real estate in other states.

In New Orleans v. Stempel, 175 U. S. 309, 44 L. ed. 174, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110, this court held that notes in the possession of an agent in New Orleans, who collected the interest and principal as they became due, and which notes were secured by mortgage on land in Louisiana, were taxable in Louisiana, although owned by a nonresident of the state.

Evidences of debts in the hands of an agent can be taxed in the state where they are so situated, although the creditor may be a citizen of another state.

Bristol v. Washington County, 177 U. S. 133, 44 L. ed. 701, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585; State Assessors v. Comptoir National D'Escompte, 191 U. S. 388, 48 L. ed. 232, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 109.

Although the laws of Maryland make no provision for notice to the individual stockholders of a Maryland corporation, or for any opportunity to be heard by them upon the question of the valuation of their stock for purposes of taxation, yet ample provision is made for notice to, and an opportunity to be heard by, the corporation itself; and inasmuch as the corporation, under the Maryland system of taxation, acts for and as the representative of the stockholders, the Maryland statute satisfies the requirement of due process of law.

James Clark Distilling Co. v. Cumberland, 95 Md. 468, 52 Atl. 661.

Mr. Justice White, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

The subjects and methods of taxation of property within the state of Maryland are regulated generally by article 81 of the Code of Public General Laws of that state.

A tax for state purposes and one for local purposes is laid upon all property. In each year the officers of domestic corporations are required to furnish information respecting the value of the shares of stock in such corporations to the state tax commissioner, who determines the aggregate value thereof, deducts therefrom the assessed value of the real estate owned by the corporation, and [472] the quotient, obtained by dividing *the remainder by the total number of shares of stock, is treated as the taxable value of each share, subject, however, to correction on appeal to the state comptroller and state treasurer after notice to the corporation or the valuation fixed by the tax commissioner. The rate of the state tax is determined by the general assembly, and that for municipal purposes in Baltimore is fixed by the mayor and council of that city. The levy on property in Baltimore, both for state and city purposes, is made by the municipal authorities. In case of stock in Maryland corporations owned by nonresidents the statutes declare that the situs of such stock, for the purpose of taxation, shall be at the principal office of the corporation in Maryland, and such shares are there assessed at their value to the owners. The statutes undoubtedly impose upon a Maryland corporation the duty of paying for and on account of the owners the taxes assessed in respect of the shares, and compel such payment without reference to the dividends, giving to the corporation a lien upon the shares of stock, and entitling the corporation, when it pays the taxes, to proceed by a personal action to recover the amount paid. Dugan v. Baltimore, 1 Gill & J. 499, 502; Baltimore v. Howard, 6 Harr. & J. 383, 394; American Coal Co. v. Allegany County, 59 Md. 197; Hull v. Southern Development Co. 89 Md. 8, 11, 42 Atl. 943.

The Maryland decisions have also settled that the tax is on the stockholder personally, because of his ownership of the stock, and is not on the stock in rem or on the corporation. The Maryland doctrine on the subject is shown by the opinion of the court of appeals of Maryland in United States Electric Power & Light. Co. v. State, 79

Md. 63, 28 Atl. 768, where the court said (p. 70, Atl. p. 768):

"But the tax is not a tax upon the stock or upon the corporation, but upon the owners of the shares of stock, though the officers of the corporation are made the agents of the state for the collection of the state tax. It is not material what assets or other property make up the value of the shares. *Those [473] shares are property, and, under existing laws, are taxable property. They belong to the stockholders respectively and individually, and when, for the sake of convenience in collecting the tax thereon, the corporation pays the state tax upon these shares into the state treasury, it pays the tax, not upon the company's own property, nor for the company, but upon the property of each stockholder, and for each stockholder respectively, by whom the company is entitled to be reimbursed. Hence, when the owner of the shares is taxed on account of his ownership, and the tax is paid for him by the company, the tax is not levied upon or collected from the corporation at all."

See, also, Hull v. Southern Development Co. 89 Md. 8, 11, 4 Atl. 943.

Substantially similar laws for the taxing of stock in Maryland corporations were in force in Maryland at the time of the incorporation of the transportation company, and have been in force ever since.

All the claims of Federal right here asserted are embraced in and will be disposed of by passing on two propositions, which we shall consider separately.

The first proposition is that, as the authority of the state of Maryland to tax is limited by the effect of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States to persons and property within the jurisdiction of the state, and as the tax in question was not in rem against the stock, but was in personam against the owner, the power attempted to be exercised, as it imposed a personal liability, was wanting in due process of law.

The court of appeals of Maryland disposed of this contention by deciding that it was in the power of the state of Maryland to fix, for the purposes of taxation, the situs of stock in domestic corporations held by a nonresident. It also held that, as such corporations were created by the state, and were subject to its regulating authority, it was within its power to impose, as a condition to the right to acquire stock in such corporations, the duty of paying the taxes assessed on the *stock, and, moreover, that the [474] state might compel the corporation to pay such taxes on behalf of the stockholder, and confer upon the corporation a right of action to obtain reimbursement from a stockholder when the payment was made. The court, in its opinion in this case, did not expressly elaborate the foregoing considerations, but contented itself by referring to previous decisions by it made. Among the cases so referred to was the case of American Coal Co. v. Allegany County, 59 Md. 185, 193, where it was said:

"The appellant is a Maryland corporation, deriving its existence and all its powers and franchises from this state. And such being the case, it is settled that the sovereign power of taxation extends to everything which exists by the authority of the state, or which is introduced by its permission, except where such power is expressly, or by necessary implication, excluded. The separate shares of the capital stock of the corporation are authorized to be issued by the charter derived from the state, and are subject to its control in respect to the right of taxation, and every person taking such shares, whether resident or nonresident of the state, must take them subject to such state power and jurisdiction over them. Hence, the state may give the shares of stock held by individual stockholders a special or particular situs for purposes of taxation, and may provide special modes for the collection of the tax levied thereon."

That it was rightly determined that it was within the power of the state to fix, for the purposes of taxation, the situs of stock in a domestic corporation, whether held by residents or nonresidents, is so conclusively settled by the prior adjudications of this court that the subject is not open for discussion. Indeed, it was conceded in the argument at bar that no question was made on this subject. The whole contention is that, albeit the situs of the stock was in the state of Maryland for the purposes of taxation, it was nevertheless beyond the power of the state to personally tax the nonresident owner for and on account of the ownership [475] of the stock, and to compel the *corporation to pay, and confer upon it the right to proceed by a personal action against the stockholder in case the corporation did pay. Reiterated in various forms of expression, the argument is this: that as the situs of the stock within the state was the sole source of the jurisdiction of the state to tax, the taxation must be confined to an assessment in rem against the stock, with a remedy for enforcement confined to the sale of the thing taxed, and hence without the right to compel the corporation to pay, or to give it, when it did pay, a personal action against the owner.

But these contentions are also in effect long since foreclosed by decisions of this court. First Nat. Bank v. Kentucky, 9 196 U. S.

Wall. 353, 19 L. ed. 701; Tappan v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 19 Wall. 490, 22 L. ed. 189. In First Nat. Bank v. Kentucky (pp. 361, 362, L. ed. p. 703,) it was said:

"If the state cannot require of the bank to pay the tax on the shares of its stock, it must be because the Constitution of the United States, or some act of Congress, forbids it.

"If the state of Kentucky had a claim against a stockholder of the bank who was a nonresident of the state, it could undoubtedly collect the claim by legal proceeding, in which the bank could be attached or garnisheed, and made to pay the debt out of the means of its shareholders under its control. This is, in effect, what the law of Kentucky does in regard to the tax of the state on the bank shares."

And it was further observed (p. 363, L. ed. p. 704):

"The mode under consideration is the one which Congress itself has adopted in collecting its tax on dividends, and on the income arising from bonds of corporations. It is the only mode which, certainly and without loss, secures the payment of the tax on all the shares, resident or nonresident; and, as we have already stated, it is the mode which experience has justified in the New England states as the most convenient and proper, in regard to the numerous wealthy corporations of those states."

*But it is insisted that these rulings concerned taxation by the states of the shares of stock in national banks, under the provisions of the national banking act, and are therefore not applicable. The contention is thus expressed:

"This act forms a part of the charter of the national banks, and provides for this liability. Charters can and frequently do undoubtedly provide for a personal liability of stockholders in various forms; the liability to creditors of the corporation is one of the common illustrations, and the liability may be thus imposed for a tax as well as for any other debt or obligation. The court therefore held [in the Tappan Case, page 500] that under the national banking act the shareholders were liable, because that act 'made it the law of the property.' The liability arose, not out of the taxing power of the sovereign, but from the subscription or charter contract of the subject."

In substance, the contention is that the conceded principle has no application to taxation by a state of shares of stock in a corporation created by it, because, by the Constitution of the United States, the states are limited as to taxation to persons and things within their jurisdiction, and may not, therefore, impose upon a nonresident, by reason of his property within the state, a personal obligation to pay a tax. By the operation, therefore, of the Constitution of the United States, it is argued the states are restrained from affixing, as a condition to the ownership of stock in their domestic corporations by nonresidents, a personal liability for taxes upon such stock, since the right of the nonresident to own property in the respective states is protected by the Constitution of the United States, and may not be impaired by subjecting such ownership to a personal liability for taxation. But the contention takes for granted the very issue involved. The principle upheld by the rulings of this court to which we have referred, concerning the taxation by the states of stock in national banks, is that the sovereignty which creates a corporation has the incidental right to impose reasonable regula-

[477]tions *concerning the ownership of stock therein, and that a regulation establishing the situs of stock for the purpose of taxation, and compelling the corporation to pay the tax on behalf of the shareholder, is not unreasonable regulation. Applying this principle, it follows that a regulation of that character, prescribed by a state, in creating a corporation, is not an exercise of the taxing power of the state over persons and things not subject to its jurisdiction. And we think, moreover, that the authority so possessed by the state carries with it the power to endow the corporation with a right of recovery against the stockholder for the tax which it may have paid on his behalf. Certainly, the exercise of such a power is no broader than the well-recognized right of a state to affix to the holding of stock in a domestic corporation a liability on a nonresident as well as a resident stockholder in personam, in favor of the ordinary creditors of the corporation. Flash v. Conn., 109 U. S. 371, 27 L. ed. 966, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 263; Whitman v. National Bank, 176 U. S. 559, 44 L. ed. 587, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 477; Nashua Sav. Bank v. Anglo-American Land Mortg. & A. Co. 189 U. S. 221, 230, 47 L. ed. 782, 786, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 517, and cases cited; Platt v. Wilmot, 193 U. S. 602, 612, 48 L. ed. 809, 813, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 542.

Whilst it is true that the liability of the nonresident stockholder in the case before us, as enforced by the laws of Maryland, was not directly expressed in the charter of the corporation, it nevertheless existed in the general laws of the state at the time the corporation was created, and, be this as it may, certainly existed at the time of the extension of the charter. This is particularly the case, since the Constitution of Maryland, for many years prior to the extension of the charter of the transportation company, contained the reserved right to alter, amend, and repeal. From all the foregoing it resulted that the provisions of the general laws and of the Constitution of Maryland were as much a part of the charter as if expressly embodied therein. Nor can this conclusion be escaped by the contention that, as the provisions of the statute imposing on nonresident stockholders in domestic corporations a liability for taxes on their stock violated the Constitution of the United States, therefore such unconstitutional re-[478]quirements cannot be treated as having been incorporated in the charter, for this argument amounts only to reasserting the erroneous proposition which we have already passed upon.

Having disposed of the first proposition we come to consider the second, which is that the legislation of the state of Maryland is repugnant to the Constitution of the United States, because of the omission to directly require the giving of notice to the nonresident stockholder of assessments on his stock, and opportunity for contest by him as to the correctness of the valuation fixed by the taxing officers. The highest court of the state of Maryland has construed the statutory provisions in question as, in legal effect, constituting the corporation the agent of the stockholders to receive notice and to represent them in proceedings for the correction of an assessment. Thus, in James Clark Distilling Co. v. Cumberland, 95 Md. 468, 52 Atl. 661, the court said (p. 475, Atl. p. 663):

"A notice to each shareholder is unnecessary, because the corporation represents the shareholders. The officers of the corporation are required by the Code to make an annual return to the state tax commissioner, and upon the information disclosed by that return the valuation of the capital stock is placed each year. If the valuation is not satisfactory, an appeal may be taken by the corporation for the shareholders. An opportunity is thus afforded for the shareholders to be heard through the corporation, and that gratifies all the requirements of law. If each and every shareholder in the great number of companies throughout the state had a right to insist upon a notice before an assessment of his shares could be made, and if each were given a separate right of appeal, it would be simply impossible to fix annually a valuation on shares of capital. The policy of the law is to treat the corporation not merely as tax collector after the tax has been levied, but to deal with it as the representative of the shareholders in respect to the assessment of the shares, and when notice has been given to the corporation, and it has the right to be heard *on appeal, notice is thereby given to the shareholders, and they are accorded a hearing. This is so in every instance where the assessment is made by the state tax commissioner, because the revenue laws throughout treat the corporation as the representative of the shareholders, and as no official other than the tax commissioner has power to assess capital stock, no notice other than the one given by him is necessary; and, as no notice other than the one given by him is necessary, a notice by the municipality to each shareholder is not requisite."

If a tax was expressly imposed upon the corporation, the stockholders, though interested in the preservation of the assets of the corporation, could not be heard to object that the statute did not provide for notice to them of the making of the assessment. The condition attached by the Maryland law to the acquisition of stock in its domestic corporations, that the stockholders, for the purpose of notice of the assessment of the stock and proceedings for the correction of the valuation thereof, shall be represented by the corporation, is not, in our opinion, an arbitrary and unreasonable one, when it is borne in mind that the corporation, through its officers, is, by the voluntary act of the stockholders, constituted their agent, and vested with the control and management of all the corporate property,—that which gives value to the shares of stock, and in respect to which the taxes are but mere incidents in the conduct of the business of the corporation. The possibility that the state taxing officials may abuse their power, and fix an arbitrary and unjust valuation of the shares, and that the officers of the corporation may be recreant in the performance of the duty to contest such assessments, does not militate against the existence of the power to require the numerous stockholders of a corporation chartered by the state, particularly those resident without the state, to be represented in proceedings before the taxing officials through the agency of the corporation.

As we conclude that the legislation of the [480] state of Maryland *in question does not contravene the due process clause of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, the judgment of the Court of Appeals of Maryland is affirmed.

196 U. S.

WILLIAM K. VANDERBILT et al., as Executors, etc.,

v.

FERDINAND EIDMAN, as United States
Collector of Internal Revenue.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 480-502.)

War revenue act—inheritance tax—interest not vested in possession or enjoyment.

1. The interest of a residuary legatee, conditioned on his attaining a certain age, cannot be deemed taxable under the war revenue act of June 13, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 464, chap. 448, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 2307, 2308), §§ 29, 30, before the happening of the contingency, in view of the express provisions of those sections as to "possession or enjoyment" and "beneficial interest" and "clear value," and of the absence of any express language exhibiting an intention to tax a mere technically vested interest in a case where the right to possession or enjoyment is subordinated to an uncertain contingency.
2. A legacy not capable of being immediately possessed or enjoyed, and therefore not taxable under the war revenue act of June 13, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 464, chap. 448, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 2307, 2308), §§ 29, 30, as construed by the administrative officers prior to the amendatory act of March 2, 1901 (31 Stat. at L. 946, chap. 806, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2307), cannot be deemed to have been subjected to such taxation by the provision of the later act making the inheritance tax due and payable one year after the death of the testator, and requiring the executor to make return of the estate in his control within thirty days after taking charge thereof,—especially in view of the legislative affirmance in the subsequent act of June 27, 1902 (32 Stat. at L. 406, chap. 1160, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1903, p. 281), of the construction given to the original statute before the amendment.

[No. 206.]

Argued October 13, 14, 1904. Decided February 20, 1905.

ON A CERTIFICATE from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, presenting questions as to the taxability, under the war revenue act, of the interest of a residuary legatee, conditioned on attaining a certain age. Answered in the negative.

Statement by Mr. Justice White:

Cornelius Vanderbilt died in the city of New York on September 12, 1899, leaving a will, which was admitted to probate, the seventeenth clause of which provides as follows:

NOTE.—As to taxes on succession and collateral inheritances—see Re Howe, 2 L. R. A. 825, and note; Wallace v. Myers, 4 L. R. A. 171, and note; Com. v. Ferguson, 10 L. R. A. 240; and Re Romaine, 12 L. R. A. 401. See also note to Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 42 L. ed. U. S. 1037.

"Seventeenth: All the rest, residue, and [481] remainder of all *the property and estate, real, personal, and mixed, of every description, and wheresoever situated, of which I may die seised or possessed, or to which I may be entitled at the time of my decease, including all lapsed legacies and the principal of any annuities which may terminate, and any part of my estate which may not have been effectually devised or bequeathed, or from any other source, I give, devise, and bequeath to my executors, hereinafter named, and the survivors and survivor of them, IN TRUST, to hold said estate, and invest and reinvest the same, and to collect the rents, issues, income, and profits therefrom for the use of my son Alfred G., and to apply so much of said net income as may be in their judgment advisable, to his support, maintenance, and education, and for the care and maintenance of his property during his minority, and to accumulate any surplus income, such accumulations to be paid to him when he arrives at the age of twenty-one years, and thereafter to pay the net income of said estate to him as received until he arrives at the age of thirty years, when he shall be put in full possession of one half the portion of said estate to be set apart for that purpose by my executors and survivors of them. And upon further trust thereafter to pay to my said son, Alfred G., the income from the balance remaining of said estate until he shall arrive at the age of thirty-five years, when he shall be put in possession of the balance of said trust estate, and the said trustees shall be discharged from any and all liability and responsibility in respect thereof. If my son Alfred G. should die before attaining the age of thirty-five years, leaving issue, such portion of the estate as shall not then have come into his possession shall be divided by my executors into as many equal shares as he may leave children surviving, and one share shall be held by my executors to the use of each such child or children until he or she shall attain the age of twenty-one years, when it shall be paid to such child; but if he shall die without child or children, or if none of his children shall attain majority, then it is my will that my son Reginald C. shall in all respects, as to [482] *said residuary estate stand in the place and stead of his brother Alfred G., and that if Alfred G. shall die without issue before he attains the age of thirty years, then Reginald C. shall receive the income from said estate until he attains the age of thirty years, when he shall be put in possession of one half of the residuary estate, and thereafter Reginald C. shall receive the net income of the remaining one half of my estate, and on arriving at the age of thirty-five years he shall be put in possession of the whole of said estate, and my said executors shall hold said estate upon such trust, and I give and devise the same accordingly. If Alfred G. and Reginald C. shall both die before being put into possession of said estate, and without issue, I give whatever then remains of my residuary estate to my daughters Gertrude and Gladys Moore, share and share alike; and if either of my said daughters be then dead leaving issue, her issue to take his or her mother's share, per stirpes and not per capita; and in default of issue, the survivor shall take the principal."

This clause contains the only provisions in the will relating to or in any manner affecting the disposition of the residuary estate of the testator, and determining the extent and character of the interests therein.

All of the children of Cornelius Vanderbilt, named in the seventeenth clause of his will, were living at the time this suit was brought. At the time of the death of Cornelius Vanderbilt his son Alfred G. Vanderbilt was between twenty-two and twenty-three years of age, and his son Reginald C. Vanderbilt was between nineteen and twenty years of age, and both were unmarried.

The appraised value of the residuary personal estate at the time of the testator's death was $18,972,117.46.

The right of Alfred G. Vanderbilt to the beneficial enjoyment, as provided in the will until he became thirty years of age, was appraised at $5,119,612.43, and upon this sum the executors paid a death duty under §§ 29 and 30 of the act of June 13, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 464, chap. 448, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 2307, 2308), at the rate of 2½ *per cent, [483] the tax amounting to $115,191.28. After payment of this amount, and subsequently to the passage, on March 2, 1901 (31 Stat. at L. 946, chap. 806, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2307), of an amendment to the war revenue act of 1898, the commissioner of internal revenue, considering that by that amendment Alfred G. Vanderbilt had become immediately liable for a tax on his right to succeed to the whole residue if he lived to the ages of thirty and thirty-five years respectively, assessed a death duty based upon that hypothesis. In making this assessment, as by the mortality tables it was shown that Alfred G. Vanderbilt had a life expectancy beyond the ages of thirty and thirty-five years, the commissioner assessed the interest as a vested estate equal in value to the sum of the entire residuary estate; viz., $18,972,117.46. Upon this valuation a tax was levied of 2½ per cent, producing $426,872.64. On this amount, however, credit was allowed for the sum of the tax previously paid, leaving the balance due $311,- 681.36. On September 3, 1901, this balance was paid by the executors under protest, "and upon compulsion of the collector's threat of distraint and sale." The executors thereupon made the statutory application to the commissioner of internal revenue for the refunding of the amount, and, it being refused, commenced in the circuit court of the United States for the southern district of New York this action to recover the payment.

The facts, as above stated, were averred and the right to recover was based upon the ground that, as Alfred G. Vanderbilt only had the enjoyment presently of the revenues of the residuary estate up to the period when he might attain the age of thirty years, he was only liable to be assessed upon that beneficial interest. For this reason it was charged that the assessment made of the bequest to Alfred G. Vanderbilt of the whole residuary estate, upon condition that he reached the ages of thirty and thirty-five years respectively, was unwarranted.

The circuit court, on the ground that the [484] complaint did not state a cause of action, sustained a demurrer to that effect filed by the government, and dismissed the action. 121 Fed. 590. The circuit court of appeals stated the facts as above recited, and certified certain questions.

Mr. Howard Taylor argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Henry B. Anderson and Chandler P. Anderson, filed a brief for Vanderbilt et al.:

Congress could not have intended to provide that a tax on the right of one legatee to receive property should be paid out of the property of any other legatee.

Fitzgerald v. Rhode Island Hospital Trust Co. 24 R. I. 59, 52 Atl. 814.

Contingent or defeasible interests, or future interests which may never vest in possession, are not taxable under laws imposing a tax upon successions, until all uncertainty as to their actual value and the ultimate right of succession has been removed.

Re Curtis, 142 N. Y. 219, 36 N. E. 887; Re Roosevelt, 143 N. Y. 120, 25 L. R. A. 695, 38 N. E. 281; Re Cager, 111 N. Y. 343, 18 N. E. 866; Re Hoffman, 143 N. Y. 327, 38 N. E. 311; Billings v. People, 189 Ill. 472, 59 L. R. A. 807, 59 N. E. 798; People v. McCormick, 208 Ill. 437, 64 L. R. A. 775, 70 N. E. 350; Howe v. Howe, 179 Mass. 546, 55 L. R. A. 626, 61 N. E. 225.

Assistant Attorney General Robb argued the cause and filed a brief for Eidman, Collector:

The law places a tax upon a legacy consisting of a vested interest, upon its passage from the decedent to the trustee, and 196 U. S. U. S., Book 49.

not at the time of payment by the trustee to the legatee.

Land Title & T. Co. v. McCoach, 127 Fed. 381; Philadelphia Trust, S. D. & Ins. Co. v. McCoach, 127 Fed. 386; Brown v. Kinney, 128 Fed. 310; Peck v. Kinney, 128 Fed. 313; Pennsylvania Co. for Ins. on Lives & G. A. v. McClain, 105 Fed. 367.

Such a tax results in no injustice.

United States v. Perkins, 163 U. S. 625, 41 L. ed. 287, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1073; Plummer v. Coler, 178 U. S. 115, 44 L. ed. 998, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 829; Snyder v. Bettman, 190 U. S. 249, 47 L. ed. 1035, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 803.

To construe the act as taxing vested remainders at the time of vesting, and not as awaiting the time the legatee comes into possession or enjoyment of the same, does not violate the constitutional requirement that the tax shall be uniform.

Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 41, 44 L. ed. 969, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747; United States v. Singer, 15 Wall. 111, 21 L. ed. 49; Head Money Cases (Edye v. Robertson) 112 U. S. 580, 28 L. ed. 798, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 247.

Mr. Justice White, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

The four questions certified are as follows:

"I. Is the tax imposed by §§ 29 and 30 of the act of Congress of June 13, 1898, entitled 'An Act to Provide Ways and Means to Meet War Expenditures, and for Other Purposes,' with respect to Alfred G. Vanderbilt's interest under the seventeenth clause of the will of Cornelius Vanderbilt, a tax upon the transmission to and receipt by the trustees of the property passing to them as trustees under the legacy out of which such interest arises?

"II. If the preceding question is answered in the negative, is the tax imposed under said act with respect to Alfred G. Vanderbilt's interest under said seventeenth clause a tax upon the transmission to and receipt by said Alfred G. Vanderbilt of his beneficial interest in the property passing under such legacy?

"III. Did §§ 29 and 30 of said act authorize the assessment and collection of a tax with respect to any of the rights or interests of Alfred G. Vanderbilt as a residuary legatee of the personal estate of Cornelius Vanderbilt under the seventeenth clause of the will, with the exception of his present right to receive the income of such estate until he attains the age of thirty years, prior to the time when, if ever, such rights or interests shall become absolutely vested in possession or enjoyment?

"IV. If the tax under §§ 29 and 30 of said act was presently assessable and collectible upon all the interests of *Alfred G. Vanderbilt in said legacy, was the clear value of all such interests, for the purposes of computing the tax, equal to the full value of the property comprised in the legacy out of which such interests arose?"

Whilst the questions, apparently, present distinct matters, yet underlying and involved in them all is the fundamental consideration whether the burden imposed by the war revenue act was confined to the interest of which Alfred G. Vanderbilt had the beneficial right of immediate enjoyment, or whether that burden also bore upon the right to the residue which Alfred G. Vanderbilt might possess or enjoy in the future, if he lived to the ages specified in the will, upon the theory that the right so to possess or enjoy in the future was technically vested. To avoid repetition we therefore come at once to the consideration of this subject in order that when we have disposed of it we may be able, in the light of the correct construction of the statute, to respond to the questions propounded, in so far as it may be found necessary to do so.

Before coming to the statute we put aside, as not directly decisive of the question here presented, a case referred to by both parties; that is, Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 41, 44 L. ed. 969, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747. Whilst that case involved the constitutionality of the act of Congress with whose meaning we are here concerned, it required a construction of that act only to the extent necessary to enable it to be decided what was the subject upon which the law levied the tax, and whether the statute required the tax levied to be progressively increased by reference to the whole amount of the estate of the decedent, or alone by reference to the particular legacy or distributive share upon the right to succeed to which the tax bore. The case did not, therefore, pass on the controversies here arising.

To state briefly the conflicting contentions of the parties as to the meaning of the statute may serve to accentuate and narrow the question for decision. The proposition of the government is thus stated in the argument:

"First, vested remainders are taxed by the [490] law of June 13, *1898, the tax attaching at the time of vesting; second, the tax is to be assessed and collected at the time of vesting; third, the interest of Alfred G. Vanderbilt in the principal of the residue, which the will provides he shall be put in full possession of, one half at the age of thirty, and the other half at the age of thirty-five, is a vested remainder."

The contrary contentions are as follows: First. That Congress, in the act in question, did not concern itself with the mere technical vesting of the title to possibly possess or enjoy in the future personal property; but, on the contrary, the act subjected to the death duties which it imposed only real and beneficial interests. In other words, the proposition is that the act did not make subject to taxation a gift, which, even if technically vested in title, was yet subject to be defeated in possession or enjoyment by the happening of a contingency stated in the will. The argument, therefore, is that where such a gift was made by will, no tax could be imposed until the time when, by the happening of the contingency stated, the right to possess or enjoy had accrued. Second. That, even if the statute imposed a tax upon vested remainders, the interest in question was a contingent, and not a vested, remainder.

The provisions of the act of 1898 which require elucidation for the purpose of disposing of these contentions are contained in §§ 29 and 30. They are reproduced in the margin.†

†Act of June 13, 1898, chap. 448.

Sec. 29. That any person or persons having in charge or trust, as administrators, executors, or trustees, any legacies or distributive shares arising from personal property, where the whole amount of such personal property as aforesaid shall exceed the sum of $10,000 in actual value, passing, after the passage of this act, from any person possessed of such property, either by will or by the intestate laws of any state or territory, or any personal property or interest therein, transferred by deed, grant, bargain, sale, or gift, made or intended to take effect in possession or enjoyment after the death of the grantor or bargainor, to any person or persons, or to any body or bodies, public or corporate, in trust or otherwise, shall be, and hereby are, made subject to a duty or tax, to be paid to the United States, as follows—that is to say: Where the whole amount of said personal property shall exceed in value $10,000, and shall not exceed in value the sum of $25,000, the tax shall be—

First. Where the person or persons entitled to any beneficial interest in such property shall be the lineal issue or lineal ancestor, brother, or sister to the person who died possessed of such property, as aforesaid, at the rate of seventy-five cents for each and every $100 of the clear value of such interest in such property.

Second. Where the person or persons entitled to any beneficial interest in such property shall be the descendant of a brother or sister of the person who died possessed, as aforesaid, at the rate of one dollar and fifty cents for each and every $100 of the clear value of such interest.

Third. Where the person or persons entitled to any beneficial interest in such property shall be the brother or sister of the father or mother, or a descendant of a brother or sister of the father or mother, of the person who died possessed as aforesaid, at the rate of three dollars for each and every one hundred dollars of the clear value of such interest.

Fourth. Where the person or persons entitled to any beneficial interest in such property shall

- [491] *It will be observed that the duties imposed in § 29 have relation to two classes; first, legacies or distributive shares passing by death and arising from personal property; and, second, any personal property
- [492] or interest therein transferred *by deed, grant, bargain, sale, or gift, to take effect in possession or enjoyment after the death of the grantor or bargainor, in favor of any person or persons, or to any body or bodies, politic or corporate, in trust or otherwise.
- [493] As to this *second class, the statute specifically makes the liability for taxation depend, not upon the mere vesting, in a technical sense, of title to the gift, but upon the actual possession or enjoyment thereof. By any fair construction the limitation as to possession or enjoyment expressed as to one - class must be applied to the other, unless it be found that the statute, whilst treating the two as one and the same for the purpose of the imposition of the death duty, has yet subjected them *to different rules. A con-[494] sideration of the subsequent provisions of the section leaves no room for such a contention, since immediately following the designation of the two classes there are five distinct paragraphs, subjecting the passing of the property taxed in both classes to a different rate of tax, dependent upon the degree of relationship of the beneficiary to the decedent, and in each it is specifically provided that a tax is to be levied in respect only of a beneficial interest having a clear value. Moreover, the meaning of the statute, fairly to be deduced from the reiteration in each of

be the brother or sister of the grandfather or grandmother, or a descendant of the brother or sister of the grandfather or grandmother, of the person who died possessed as aforesaid, at the rate of four dollars for each and every hundred dollars of the clear value of such interest.

Fifth. Where the person or persons entitled to any beneficial interest in such property shall be in any other degree of collateral consanguinity than as hereinbefore stated, or shall be a stranger in blood to the person who died possessed, as aforesaid, or shall be a body politic or corporate, at the rate of five dollars for each and every hundred dollars of the clear value of such interest: Provided, That all legacies or property passing by will, or by the laws of any state or territory, to husband or wife of the person who died possessed, as aforesaid, shall be exempt from tax or duty.

Where the amount or value of said property shall exceed the sum of $25,000, but shall not exceed the sum or value of $100,000, the rates of duty or tax above set forth shall be multiplied by one and one half; and where the amount or value of said property shall exceed the sum of $100,000, but shall not exceed the sum of $500,000, such rates of duty shall be multiplied by two; and where the amount or value of said property shall exceed the sum of $500,000, but shall not exceed the sum of $1,000,000, such rates of duty shall be multiplied by two and one half; and where the amount or value of said property shall exceed the sum of $1,000,000, such rates of duty shall be multiplied by three.

Sec. 30. That the tax or duty aforesaid shall be a lien and charge upon the property of every person who may die as aforesaid for twenty years, or until the same shall, within that period, be fully paid to and discharged by the United States; and every executor, administrator, or trustee, before payment and distribution to the legatees, or any parties entitled to beneficial interest therein, shall pay, to the collector or deputy collector of the district of which the deceased person was a resident, the amount of the duty or tax assessed upon such legacy or distributive share, and shall also make and render to the said collector or deputy collector a schedule, list, or statement, in duplicate, of the amount of such legacy or distributive share, together with the amount of duty which has accrued, or shall accrue thereon, verified by his oath or affirmation, to be administered and certified thereon by some magistrate or officer having lawful power to administer such oaths, in such form and manner as may be prescribed by the commissioner of internal revenue, which schedule, list, or statement shall contain the names of each and every person entitled to any beneficial interest therein, together with the clear value of such interest, the duplicate of which schedule, list, or statement shall be by him immediately delivered, and the tax thereon paid to such collector; and upon such payment and delivery of such schedule, list, or statement, said collector or deputy collector shall grant to such person paying such duty or tax a receipt or receipts for the same in duplicate, which shall be prepared as hereinafter provided. Such receipt or receipts, duly signed and delivered by such collector or deputy collector, shall be sufficient evidence to entitle such executor, administrator, or trustee to be credited and allowed such payment by every tribunal which, by the laws of any state or territory, is, or may be, empowered to decide upon and settle the accounts of executors and administrators. And in case such executor, administrator, or trustee shall refuse or neglect to pay the aforesaid duty or tax to the collector or deputy collector, as aforesaid, within the time hereinbefore provided, or shall neglect or refuse to deliver to said collector or deputy collector the duplicate of the schedule, list, or statement of such legacies, property, or personal estate under oath, as aforesaid, or shall neglect or refuse to deliver the schedule, list, or statement of such legacies, property, or personal estate, under oath as aforesaid, or shall deliver to said collector or deputy collector a false schedule or statement of such legacies, property, or personal estate, or give the names and relationship of the persons entitled to beneficial interest therein untruly or shall not truly and correctly set forth and state therein the clear value of such beneficial interest, or where no administration upon such property or personal estate shall have been granted or allowed under existing laws, the collector or deputy collector shall make such lists and valuation as in other cases of neglect or refusal, and shall assess the duty thereon; and the collector shall commence appropriate proceedings before any court of the United States, in the name of the United States, against such person or persons as may have the actual or construc-the five paragraphs of the beneficial interest and clear value as the subject of the tax, is greatly strengthened by the inference to be drawn from the fact that nowhere in the section is there contained language referring to technical estates in personalty, or treating them as subjects of taxation, despite the absence of the right to immediate possession or enjoyment. And coming to consider § 30, relating to the collection of the duty or tax imposed by § 29, the meaning of § 29, as just indicated, is made clearer. Thus, by § 30 it is provided that "every executor, administrator, or trustee, before payment and distribution [of a legacy or distributive share] to the legatees, or any parties entitled to beneficial interest therein, shall pay to the collector . . . of the district of which the deceased person was a resident the amount of the duty or tax assessed upon such legacy or distributive share." It also requires that the schedule, etc., to be furnished by an executor, administrator, or trustee to a collector or deputy collector shall contain the name of each person having a beneficial interest in the property in the charge or custody of the executor, etc., with a statement "of the clear value of such interest."

These provisions harmonize with the meaning which we have ascribed to § 29, since they clearly import that the tax is to be deducted from a beneficial interest which the beneficiary was entitled to enjoy, and from which, before payment or distribution, a deduction of the duty was to be made.

[495] *In view of the express provisions of the statute as to possession or enjoyment and beneficial interest and clear value, and of the absence of any express language exhibiting an intention to tax a mere technically vested interest in a case where the right to possession or enjoyment was subordinated to an uncertain contingency, it would, we think, be doing violence to the statute to construe it as taxing such an interest before the period when possession or enjoyment had attached. And such is the construction which has been affixed to some state statutes, the text of which lent themselves more strongly to the construction that it was the intention to subject to immediate taxation merely technical interests, without regard to a present right to possess or enjoy. Re Curtis, 142 N. Y. 219, 222, 36 N. E. 887; Re Roosevelt, 143 N. Y. 121, 25 L. R. A. 695, 38 N. E. 781.

In Re Hoffman, 143 N. Y. 327, 38 N. E. 311, the court was called upon to construe the meaning of a statute, enacted in 1892, providing that "all taxes imposed by this act shall be due and payable at the time of the transfer; provided, however, that taxes upon the transfer of any estate, property, or interest therein limited, conditioned, dependent, or determinable upon the happening of any contingency or future event, by reason of which the fair market value thereof cannot be ascertained at the time of the transfer as herein provided, shall accrue and become due and payable when the persons or corporations beneficially entitled thereto shall come into actual possession or enjoyment thereof (Laws 1892, chap. 399, § 3);" the court said:

"We are obliged to follow one of two lines of construction. We must open all the nice and difficult questions which arise under a will as to the vesting of technical legal estates, although future and contingent, and assess the tax upon what are in reality only possibilities and chances, and so complicate the statute with the endless brood of difficult questions which gather about the construction of wills; or, we must construe it in view of its aim and purpose and the object it seeks to accomplish, *and so sub-[496] ordinate technical phrases to the facts of active custody or possession of such property or personal estate, or any part thereof, and shall subject such property or personal estate, or any portion of the same, to be sold upon the judgment or decree of such court, and from the proceeds of such sale the amount of such tax or duty, together with all costs and expenses of every description to be allowed by such court, shall be first paid, and the balance, if any, deposited according to the order of such court, to be paid under its direction to such person or persons as shall establish title to the same. The deed or deeds, or any proper conveyance of such property or personal estate, or any portion thereof, so sold under such judgment or decree, executed by the officer lawfully charged with carrying the same into effect, shall vest in the purchaser thereof all the title of the delinquent to the property or personal estate sold under and by virtue of such judgment or decree, and shall release every other portion of such property or personal estate from the lien or charge thereon created by this act. And every person or persons who shall have in his possession, charge, or custody any record, file, or paper containing, or supposed to contain, any information concerning such property or personal estate, as aforesaid, passing from any person who may die, as aforesaid, shall exhibit the same at the request of the collector or deputy collector of the district, and to any law officer of the United States, in the performance of his duty under this act, his deputy or agent, who may desire to examine the same. And if any such person, having in his possession, charge, or custody any such records, files, or papers, shall refuse or neglect to exhibit the same on request, as aforesaid, he shall forfeit and pay the sum of $500: Provided, That in all legal controversies where such deed or title shall be the subject of judicial investigation, the recital in said deed shall be prima facie evidence of its truth, and that the requirements of the law had been complied with by the officers of the government.

tual and practical ownership. For taxation is a hard fact, and should attach only to such ownership, and may properly be compelled to wait until chances and possibilities develop into the truth of an actual estate possessed, or to which there exists an absolute right of future possession. I am not shutting my eyes to the statutory language, which is quite broad. The property taxed may be an estate 'for a term of years, or for life, or determinable upon any future or contingent estate,' or 'a remainder, reversion, or other expectancy,' and the tables of mortality may be resorted to for the ascertainment of values. And yet, it is the 'fair market value,' the 'fair and clear market value,' which is to be assessed, and with the proviso that if that value cannot be at once ascertained, the appraisal is to be adjourned. I can scarcely imagine a contingency depending upon lives which mathematics could not solve by the doctrine of chances and the average of mortality, and there could hardly be an adjournment unless upon some rare contingency having no averages, and the results in cases dependent upon lives might still leave the 'fair and clear market value' in doubt and yield sums which no sale in the market would produce."

So, also, the supreme court of Illinois, in construing an inheritance tax law of that state, containing language identical in some respects with that found in the act of Congress, observed (Billings v. People, 189 Ill. 472, 486, 59 L. R. A. 807, 59 N. E. 798):

"The tax imposed by § 1 of our statute is fixed upon the 'clear market value of the property received by each person' at the prescribed rate,—that is, as shown by the context, the clear market value of the beneficial interest so received. Surely, by such language it was not intended by the legislature that the courts should undertake to ascertain the clear market value of a mere possible interest which, from its very nature, could not have any market value, and which, for all practical purposes, such as taxation, is incapable of valuation. The courts, in order to enforce the immediate collection of [497] such *taxes, as the statute seems to contemplate shall be done, cannot change the tax from one on succession to one on property; nor can they classify such remote and contingent interests, and fix the tax or rate of tax upon the whole class, as possibly the lawmaking power might do or provide for. No other course is left open in the practical administration of the statute than to postpone, as was done in this case, the assessing and collecting of the tax upon such remote and contingent interests as are incapable of valuation, and as to which the rate and the exemptions cannot be determined."

196 U. S.

And see also Howe v. Howe, 179 Mass. 546, 550, 55 L. R. A. 626, 61 N. E. 225.

Indeed, in accord with its text, and in harmony with the principles of construction expounded in the cases just cited, the act of 1898 was primarily construed by the officers charged with its administration as taxing only beneficial interests where the right to possess or enjoy had accrued. The rulings of the Internal Revenue Department to this effect were without deviation for several years.

The practice followed in carrying out the statute was illustrated by the assessment which was made in the case considered in Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 41, 44 L. ed. 969, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747, as exhibited in the schedule on page 44 of the report of that case. It was also by this construction that the tax in this case was originally assessed only upon the beneficial interest which was being enjoyed by Alfred G. Vanderbilt.

The change of construction was made because the administrative officers deemed it was required by the amendment of March 2, 1901, to the act of 1898. 31 Stat. at L. 946, chap. 806, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2307. This is shown by a ruling made by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue on October 17, 1901, in which it was said (Treasury Decisions, Internal Revenue, vol. 4, p. 209):

"This office formerly held that the tax on reversionary interests was payable when the beneficiaries entered into the possession and enjoyment of their legacies.

"The amendment to § 30 of the war-revenue law, approved March 2, 1901, which went into effect July 1, 1901,*necessitated a[498] change in this ruling, and on July 20, 1901, this office ruled that reversionary interests which are vested are taxable on their present worth."

The case therefore reduces itself to this: Did the amendatory act of 1901 enlarge the act of 1898 so as to cause that act to embrace subjects of taxation which were not included prior to the amendment? The amendatory act, so far as necessary to be considered for the purposes of this question, reenacted §§ 29 and 30 of the original act. The amendments which the administrative officers decided made subject to taxation vested interests where the right of immediate possession or enjoyment had not accrued, and which had been treated as not taxable prior to the amendment, were that the tax or duty should be due and payable in one year after the death of the person from whom the estate had passed, and that the executor, administrator, or trustee should make return of the estate in his control within thirty days after taking charge thereof. Giving to these provisions their natural import, they imply only that a uniform period was fixed within which the obligation should arise of paying the tax authorized to be levied by the original act; that is, the obligation of paying the duty on each beneficial interest which in effect had vested in possession or enjoyment. The amendments, therefore, did not, in our opinion justify the construction that Congress intended, by adopting them, to cause death duties to become due within one year as to legacies and distributive shares which were not capable of being immediately possessed or enjoyed, and were therefore not subject to taxation under the original act. This conclusion irresistibly follows when it is observed that no word is found in the amendatory act importing an intention to change the administrative construction which had theretofore prevailed from the beginning. On the contrary, the amendatory act reiterated, without alteration, the provisions found in the original act as to possession or enjoyment and beneficial interest and clear value. Indeed, the amendatory act contained new provisions not expressly found [499] in the original act, *supporting and adding cogency to the prior administrative construction, such as the proviso at the close of § 30, as follows:

"Any tax paid under the provisions of sections twenty-nine and thirty shall be deducted from the particular legacy or distributive share on account of which the sum is charged;"

a provision plainly importing a practically contemporaneous right to receive the legacy or distributive share, and one which would be impracticable of execution if the tax was to be assessed and collected before the beneficiary and the rate of tax could certainly be ascertained.

Further elucidation as to the meaning of the amendatory act of 1901 is unnecessary in view of the subsequent legislation of Congress. By the act of April 12, 1902 (32 Stat. at L. 96, chap. 500), § 29 of the act of 1898, as amended on March 2, 1901, was repealed, to take effect on July 1, 1902. The repealing act, however, saved "all taxes or duties imposed by section 29 of the act of June 13, 1898, and the amendments thereto prior to the taking effect of this act." On June 27, 1902 (32 Stat. at L. 406, chap. 1160) an act was adopted, the 3d section of which reads as follows:

"Sec. 3. That in all cases where an executor, administrator, or trustee shall have paid, or shall hereafter pay, any tax upon any legacy or distributive share of personal property under the provisions of the act approved June thirteenth, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, entitled 'An Act to Provide Ways and Means to Meet War Expenditures, and for Other Purposes,' and amendments thereof, the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to refund, out of any money in the Treasury, not otherwise appropriated, upon proper application being made to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed, so much of said tax as may have been collected on contingent beneficial interests which shall not have become vested prior to July first, nineteen hundred and two. And no tax shall hereafter be assessed or imposed under said act, *approved June [500] thirteenth, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, upon or in respect of any contingent beneficial interest which shall not become absolutely vested in possession or enjoyment prior to said July first, nineteen hundred and two."

In view of the provision for refunding we see no escape from the conclusion that this statute was in a sense declaratory of what we hold was the true construction of the act of 1898, and which, as we have seen, had prevailed prior to the amendment of March 2, 1901, and which was only departed from by the administrative officers under a misconception of the import of that amendatory act. There is no suggestion that any prior practice prevailed in the enforcement of the act of 1898, calling for the enacting of the refunding clause, except the mistaken construction placed on the amendatory act of 1901. The act of 1902 was, therefore, a legislative affirmance of the construction given to the act of 1898, prior to the amendment of 1901. It follows that the act of 1902 was, moreover, a legislative repudiation of the construction of the act of 1898, now insisted on by the government. It is, we think, incontrovertible that the taxes which the 3d section of the act of 1902 directs to be refunded and those which it forbids the collection of in the future are one and the same in their nature. Any other view would destroy the unity of the section, and cause its provisions to produce inexplicable conflict. From this it results that the taxes which are directed in the first sentence to be refunded, because they had been wrongfully collected on contingent beneficial interests which had not become vested prior to July 1, 1902, where taxes levied on such beneficial interests as had not become vested in possession or enjoyment prior to the date named, within the intendment of the subsequent sentence. In other words, the statute provided for the refunding of taxes collected under the circumstances stated, and at the same time forbade like collections in the future.

In view of the text of the act of 1898 and the other considerations to which we have referred, we have not deemed it *necessary to advert to a contention made by the government in argument, that the true meaning of the act of 1898 is shown by the administrative construction placed upon the act of July 1, 1862, levying legacy taxes (12 Stat. at L. 485, chap. 119), of which, in effect the act of 1898 was a reproduction. It is undoubtedly true that both under the act of 1862 and the act of June 30, 1864 (13 Stat. at L. 285, chap. 173, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2268), there was an administrative construction by which vested interests, although unaccompanied with the right of immediate possession or enjoyment, were treated as at once taxable. Without entering into details on the subject, we content ourselves with saying that it is also true that the correctness of that construction was in effect repudiated by legislative action (act of July 13, 1866, 14 Stat. at L. 140, chap. 184), and was, moreover, in substance, treated as unsound by the reasoning of the opinion in Clapp v. Mason, 94 U. S. 591, 24 L. ed. 213.
196 U. S.

Thus, by legislative action and judicial interpretation, it came to pass that the acts of 1862 and 1864 signified exactly what we now construe the act of 1898 to mean. It was doubtless this concordance of legislative action and judicial interpretation concerning the earlier acts which caused the administrative department of the government, when the act of 1898 was adopted, to interpret that act, not as the acts of 1862 and 1864 had been originally erroneously interpreted in administration, but in accord with the subsequent legislative and judicial construction which had been placed upon the language of those acts, and which language in effect was repeated in the act of 1898.

Concluding, as we do, that there was no authority under the act of 1898 for taxing the interest of Alfred G. Vanderbilt, given him by the residuary clause of the will, conditioned on his attaining the ages of thirty and thirty-five years, respectively, it is unnecessary to determine whether such interest was technically a vested remainder, as claimed by counsel for the government. In passing, however, we remark that in a case recently decided by the court of appeals of New York (Re Tracy, 179 N. Y. 506, 72 [502] N. E. 519), it was declared *that such interest was a contingent, and not a vested, remainder.

Coming to apply the construction which we have given the statute to the solution of the questions propounded by the Court of Appeals, it follows that the first, second, and fourth questions are unnecessary to be answered, and the third question should be answered in the negative.

And it is so ordered.

196 U. S.

WESTERN TIE & TIMBER COMPANY,
Appt.,
v.

BEN A. BROWN, Trustee of the Estate of
S. F. Harrison, a Bankrupt.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 502-511.)

Appeal in bankruptcy cases—preference—set-off.

1. The assertion of a right of set-off in a proceeding in bankruptcy presents a claim of Federal right which will sustain an appeal from a decision of a circuit court of appeals, rejecting the claim, to the Supreme Court of the United States, under the bankrupt act of July 1, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 553, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3432), § 25, cl. (b) 1, authorizing such appeals when the question involved is one which might have been reviewed on writ of error from the latter court to a state court.
2. A sum retained by a corporate creditor with knowledge of the debtor's insolvency, and within four months of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, which sum was due and owing the bankrupt under an agreement by which the corporation, in paying its employees, was to deduct from their wages the amounts due from such employees to the bankrupt for supplies furnished them by him, and was to remit to him the amount so deducted, irrespective of any indebtedness otherwise due by him to the corporation, is not a voidable preference under the bankrupt act of July 1, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 553, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 3443, 3445), §§ 57g, 60b, which must be surrendered before the corporation can prove its claim against the bankrupt debtor's estate.
3. A corporate creditor is not entitled to set off, in proving its claim against the bankrupt debtor's estate, a sum retained by it with knowledge of the debtor's insolvency, and within four months of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, which sum was due and owing the bankrupt under an agreement by which, in paying its employees, the corporation was to deduct from their wages the amount due from such employees to the bankrupt for supplies sold them by him, and to remit to him the amount thus deducted, irrespective of any indebtedness otherwise due from him to the corporation.

[No. 232.]

Submitted January 5, 1905. Decided February 20, 1905.

A PPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit to review a decree which affirmed, as modified, an order of the District Court for the Eastern District of Arkansas, directing that the claim of a creditor against a bankrupt's estate be expunged unless the creditor pay to the trustee in bankruptcy a specified sum, found to have been transferred to the creditor by the bankrupt, and decided to have operated as a voidable preference. Decrees of both courts reversed, and the cause remanded to the District Court, with directions to allow the proof of claim, and to deny any right of set-off, and for further proceedings.

NOTE.—On appeal and review in bankruptcy cases—see note to Re Eggert, 43 C. C. A. 9.

As to set-off in bankruptcy cases—see note to Morgan v. Wordell, 55 L. R. A. 33.

See same case below, 129 Fed. 728.

Statement by Mr. Justice White:

This is an appeal from a decree of the circuit court of appeals for the eighth circuit, affirming, as modified, an order of the district court of the United States for the eastern district of Arkansas, directing that the claim of the Western Tie & Timber Company against the estate of S. F. Harrison, a bankrupt, be expunged unless the company paid to the trustee in bankruptcy a specified sum, found to have been transferred to the company by the bankrupt, and decided to have operated a voidable preference. 129 Fed. 728.

The facts were thus found by the circuit court of appeals:

"1. On February 24, 1903, a petition to procure an adjudication that S. Frank Harrison was a bankrupt was filed in the district court of the United States for the eastern district of Arkansas, and Harrison was then adjudged a bankrupt.

"2. The Western Tie & Timber Company was a corporation and a creditor of Harrison. It presented a claim against his estate in bankruptcy of $24,358. The trustee moved to expunge this claim on the ground that the tie company had secured a voidable preference. The district court ordered the claim expunged unless the tie company should pay to the trustee $2,210.73, and an appeal from this order was taken.

"3. For some years prior to February 24, 1903, the tie company and Harrison had been engaged in removing timber from land of the former, and converting it into ties, which the company received and sold. For many months prior to October, 1902, Harrison had owned and conducted stores in the vicinity of the places where the work of cutting and hauling the ties was carried on, and had furnished the laborers engaged in that work with groceries and other supplies. These laborers and Harrison were paid by the tie company in this way: Once in two or four weeks an inspector sent to the tie

[504] company a pay *roll, on which the name of each laborer, the amount he had earned, and the value of the supplies he had received from Harrison, appeared. The company deducted from the earnings of each laborer the value of the supplies the laborer had received, and sent him a check for the balance.

572

At the same time it sent to Harrison a check for the aggregate amount of the supplies which he had furnished to the laborers.

"4. Four months before the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, or October 24, 1902, Harrison owed the tie company more than $20,000.

"5. Between December 27, 1902, and February 24, 1903, the company refused to pay to Harrison, retained and credited on its claim against him $2,210.73, which was due him for supplies he had furnished to the laborers subsequent to November 30, 1902.

"6. At all times, when the amounts which aggregate $2,210.73 became due and were retained by the company, Harrison was insolvent, the tie company knew that fact, and it intended, by retaining these amounts, to secure to itself a preference over the other creditors of the insolvent, but Harrison had no such intention.

"7. After the company had retained several hundred dollars of the amount due Harrison for the supplies, it advanced to him $75 under a new and further credit."

An appeal to this court was allowed by the presiding circuit judge of the circuit court of appeals.

Mr. Joseph Wheless submitted the cause for appellant. Messrs. George M. Block, F. H. Sullivan, and Charles Erd were on his brief:

This court has jurisdiction of this appeal upon the finding of facts and conclusions of law below.

Pirie v. Chicago Title & T. Co. 182 U. S. 438, 45 L. ed. 1171, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 906; New York County Nat. Bank v. Massey, 192 U. S. 138, 48 L. ed. 380, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 199.

The bankrupt had no intention to prefer appellant, and without such intention on his part there could be no preference arising from his sale of goods to appellant's employees.

Buckingham v. McLean, 13 How. 169, 14 L. ed. 98; Wilson v. City Bank, 17 Wall. 487, 21 L. ed. 728; Clark v. Iselin, 21 Wall. 375, 22 L. ed. 573; Barbour v. Priest, 103 U. S. 293, 26 L. ed. 478; Rice v. Grafton Mills, 117 Mass. 228.

The sale of the supplies here in question by the bankrupt resulted in an indebtedness from appellant to him, was not payment of, nor security for, appellant's demand, and hence was not a preference, but a case of mutual debts to be set off, the one against the other.

Hendrick v. Lindsay, 93 U. S. 149, 23 L. ed. 857; Hecht v. Caughron, 46 Ark. 132; Century Digest, vol. II. title Contracts, § 798; New York County Nat. Bank v. Mas- sey, 192 U. S. 138, 48 L. ed. 380, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 199.

196 U. S.

Mr. John M. Moore submitted the cause for appellee. Messrs. C. F. Henderson, H. L. Ponder, M. M. Stuckey, and S. M. Stuckey were on his brief:

This court does not have jurisdiction of this appeal.

Hutchinson v. Otis, 59 C. C. A. 94, 123 Fed. 14; First Nat. Bank v. Klug, 186 U. S. 202, 46 L. ed. 1127, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 899; Holden v. Stratton, 191 U. S. 115, 48 L. ed. 116, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45.

An intention on the part of the bankrupt to give a preference by means of a transfer he makes is not indispensable to the existence of a voidable preference.

Collier, Bankr. 4th ed. pp. 387-389, 537; Swarts v. Fourth Nat. Bank, 54 C. C. A. 387, 117 Fed. 1.

The sale of supplies by the bankrupt to the laborers, and the appellant's deducting the amounts of them from the pay rolls and retaining the same, did not create an indebtedness from the appellant to the bankrupt, but was a voidable transfer of the bankrupt's property and a preference, and was not a case of mutual debts to be set off, the one against the other.

Re Christensen, 101 Fed. 802; Re Ryan, 105 Fed. 760; Libby v. Hopkins, 104 U. S. 303, 26 L. ed. 769; Re Tacoma Shoe & Leather Co. 3 N. B. N. & Rep. 9; Sawyer v. Hoag, 17 Wall. 610-622, 21 L. ed. 731-736.

Mr. Justice White, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

Before coming to the merits we dispose of an objection to the jurisdiction.

The appeal was prosecuted under clause (b) 1 of § 25 of the bankrupt act of July 1, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 553, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3432), providing that from any final decision of a court of appeals, allowing or rejecting a claim under the act, an appeal may be had "where the amount in controversy exceeds the sum of two thousand dollars, and the question involved is one which might have been taken on appeal or writ of error from the highest court of a state to the Supreme Court of the United States."

The provision of the Revised Statutes regulating the revision of judgments and decrees of state courts, which is relied upon, in conjunction with the portion of the bankruptcy act just quoted, is that portion of § 709 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575) which authorizes the re-examination of a final judgment or decree in any suit in the highest court of a state in which a decision in the suit can be had, "where any title, right, privilege, or immunity is claimed under . . . any . . . statute of . . . the United States, and the decision is against the title, right, privilege, or immunity specially set up or claimed, by either party, under such . . . statute, . . ."
196 U. S.

The appellee does not question that this appeal is from a decree rejecting a claim, within the meaning of the statute, and that the requisite jurisdictional amount is involved, but the particular objection urged is that a right was not claimed under an act of Congress, nor was a right of that nature denied by the lower courts.

The objection is not tenable. It clearly appears from the record that in the claim filed on behalf of the tie company there*was[507] embodied, as an integral part thereof, as a proper credit or set-off, the sum retained from the wages of employees for supplies furnished by the bankrupt, and the rejection of the claim was based upon the denial of the right to set-off. As the right of set-off is controlled by the provisions of § 68 of the bankrupt act, the assertion of such a right, in a proceeding in bankruptcy, as was the case here, is necessarily based upon those provisions of the act of Congress, and in this case the construction of such statutory provision was undoubtedly involved. That the circuit court of appeals understood that reliance was had by the tie company upon the set-off clauses of the act is shown by its opinion, where, after sustaining the claim of the trustees that the credits in question constituted a preference, it prefaced a particular discussion of the contention as to a right of set-off by the following statement:

"Finally, it is said that this $2,210.73 was a credit to Harrison, and that the company should be permitted to set it off against his debt to it, and should be allowed to prove its claim for the balance remaining without restriction, on the ground that these claims were mutual debts and credits under § 68 of the bankrupt law."

The record, we think, sufficiently presented a claim of Federal right (Home for Incurables v. New York, 187 U. S. 157, 47 L. ed. 117, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 84), and the objection to the jurisdiction is therefore overruled.

Passing to the merits of the controversy—

We must, at the outset, in the light of the facts found below, determine the exact relation existing between the bankrupt and the tie company, in order to fix the true import of the transactions by which the tie company, in making its claim against the bankrupt estate, asserted a right to retain and set off the sums which, in its proof of claim, it described as "deductions from pay rolls."

We think the findings establish that Harrison sold the goods, not to the tie company, but to the laborers, and therefore the result of the sale was to create an indebtedness [508] for the price *alone between Harrison and the employees. This is not only the necessary consequence of the facts stated, but likewise conclusively flows from the nature of the proof of claim made by the tie company, since that proof, so far as the items concerning the price of the goods sold to the employees are concerned, based the indebtedness by the tie company to Harrison, not upon any supposed original obligation on the part of the tie company towards Harrison to pay for the goods, but upon the "deductions from pay rolls," made by the tie company in paying its employees. The effect of this was to trace and limit the origin of the debt due by the tie company to Harrison solely to the fact that the tie company had deducted, in paying its employees, money due to Harrison by the employees, which, from the fact of the deduction, the tie company had become bound to pay to Harrison. We think, also, the facts found establish that the course of dealing between Harrison and the tie company concerning the deductions from pay rolls was that the tie company, when it made the deductions, was under an obligation to remit the money collected from the laborers for account of Harrison to him, irrespective of any debt which he might owe the tie company. This follows from the finding that, although there was a debt existing between Harrison and the tie company, the course of dealing between them was that when the tie company made deductions from the wages of the laborers of sums of money due by them to Harrison the tie company regularly remitted the proceeds of the deductions to Harrison. This conclusion, moreover, is the result of the finding that Harrison had no intention to give the tie company a preference, for if Harrison, being insolvent, to the knowledge of the company, within the prohibited period, gave to the tie company authority to collect the sums due to him by the laborers for goods sold them, with the right, or even the option to apply the money to a prior debt due by Harrison to the company, the necessary result of the transaction would have been to create a voidable preference. And if the inevitable result of the [509] transaction would have been to *create such a preference, then the law would conclusively impute to Harrison the intention to bring about the result necessarily arising from the nature of the act which he did. Wilson v. City Bank, 17 Wall. 486, 21 L. ed. 727. To give effect, therefore, to the finding that there was no intention on the part of Harrison to prefer, we must consider that the authority given by him to the tie company to collect from the laborers did not give that company the right, or endow it with the option, when it had collected, to retain the money for its exclusive benefit, and to the detriment of the other creditors of Harrison.

The result of the facts found, then, is this: Harrison sold his goods to the laborers, and agreed with the tie company that that company, when it paid the laborers, should deduct the amount due by the laborers from the wages which the tie company owed them, and, after making the deduction, should remit to Harrison the amount thus deducted, irrespective of any indebtedness otherwise due by Harrison to the tie company. Did this give rise to a voidable preference within the intendment of §§ 57*g* and 60*b* of the bankrupt act?

In view of the necessary result of the findings which we have previously pointed out, it is, we think, beyond doubt that the agreement was not a voidable preference within the meaning of the statute, since, considering the agreement alone, it brought about no preference whatever. This leaves only for consideration the question whether the tie company was entitled to prove its claim, as it sought to do, for the balance owing, after crediting as a set-off the "deductions from pay rolls," to which we have referred. Now, as we have seen, from the facts found, it must be that the agreement between Harrison and the tie company obligated the latter, when it made the deductions from pay rolls, to remit to Harrison the amount of such deductions, irrespective of the account between itself and Harrison. It follows that as to such deductions the tie company stood towards Harrison in the relation of a trustee; and, therefore, the case was not one of mutual credits and debts, within the meaning of the set-off clause of the bankrupt law. Libby v. Hopkins*, 104 U. S. 303, [510] 26 L. ed. 769. And, irrespective of the trust relation which the findings establish, it is equally clear from the general considerations that the right to set-off did not exist. To allow the set-off under the circumstances disclosed would violate the plain intendment of the inhibition contained in clause b (2) of § 68 of the bankrupt act, which forbids the allowance to any debtor of a bankrupt of a set-off or counter-claim which "was purchased by or transferred to him after the filing of the petition, or within four months before such filing, with a view to such use, and with knowledge or notice that such bankrupt was insolvent, or had committed an act of bankruptcy." That is to say, whether or not the trust relation was engendered, the result would still be that the tie company, within the prohibited period, and with knowledge of the insolvency of Harrison, acquired the claims of the latter against the laborers, with a view to using the same by way of payment or set-off, so as to obtain an advantage over the other creditors, which it was not lawfully entitled to do.

As we have concluded that, under the findings, there was no voidable preference, we think the court below erred in refusing to allow the tie company to prove its claim, unless it surrendered the sums which it owed Harrison and his bankrupt estate. Section 57g of the bankrupt act, as amended by the act of February 5, 1903 (32 Stat. at L. 799, chap. 487), empowering the court to compel creditors to surrender preferences as a prerequisite to the proof of claims against the estate of the bankrupt, relates only to those creditors "who have received preferences voidable under section sixty, subdivision b." But it also is demonstrated, from what we have said, that the tie company was not entitled to prove its claim as it sought to do, embracing, as it did, the assertion of a right to set-off, and thus extinguish the sum which it owed to the bankrupt estate, resulting from the deductions from pay rolls. Whilst, therefore, because of the error in imposing the condition of prerequisite surrender of the alleged preference, the judgment below was erroneous, nevertheless the court was correct in refusing *to allow the alleged set-off, and in refusing to permit proof to be made which embraced and asserted such set-off. It follows that although the judgment below must be reversed for the reasons stated, the case should be remanded with directions to disregard the alleged claim of set-off, to reject any proof of claim asserting the same, and to permit a claim to be filed for the gross indebtedness to the tie company, with the alleged set-off eliminated. The result will be that the tie company will be a creditor of the estate for the whole amount of its claim, and will be, at the same time, a debtor to the estate for the amount of the deductions from the pay rolls collected by it, the court below, of course, having power to take such steps as may be lawful to protect the estate in respect to the payment of dividends to the tie company, in the event that company does not discharge its obligations to the bankrupt estate.

The decrees of both courts are reversed and the case is remanded to the District Court with directions to allow the proof of claim, rejecting the alleged set-off, and for further proceedings in conformity with this opinion.

196 U. S.

UNITED STATES, Appt.,

v.

ALBERT C. ENGARD.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 511-516.)

Navy—sea pay for shore duty—presumption of temporary character of shore duty.

Shore duty performed by a naval officer in obedience to an order of the Navy Département which expressly imposed upon him the continued discharge of his sea duty, and qualified the shore duty as merely temporary and ancillary to such sea duty, will be presumed not to be so incompatible with his permanent sea assignment as to cause the latter to terminate and defeat his right to sea pay while engaged on such shore duty.

[No. 136.]

Argued January 18, 1905. Decided February 20, 1905.

APPEAL from the Court of Claims to review an award of sea pay to a naval officer while engaged on shore duty. Affirmed. See same case below, 38 Ct. Cl. 712.

Statement by Mr. Justice White:

Somewhat condensing the facts below found, they are as follows: In February, 1897, Chief Engineer Albert C. Engard was performing duty as the chief engineer of the United States receiving ship Richmond, at League Island, Pennsylvania. On the 11th of February he received the following order from the Navy Department:

Navy Department,
Washington, February 11, 1897.

Sir:—

Report by letter, to the president of the steel inspection board, Navy Yard, Washington, D. C., for temporary duty in connection with the inspection of steel tubes for the boilers of torpedo boat No. 11, at Findlay, Ohio, and at Shelby, Ohio.

You are authorized to perform such travel between League Island, Pa., and Findlay, Ohio, and between League Island, Pa., and Shelby, Ohio, as may be necessary in the performance of this duty.

Keep a memorandum of the travel so performed by you, certifying to its necessity, and submit the same to the Department, from time to time, for its approval.

This duty is in addition to your present duties.

Very respectfully,

W. McAdoo, Acting Secretary.

Chief Engineer Albert C. Engard, U. S. Navy, U. S. R. S. Richmond, Navy Yard, League Island, Pa.

Complying with this order, Chief Engineer Engard made two round trips between

575

League Island and Ohio, in order to discharge the additional duty referred to in the order. The total number of days in which he was engaged in this work between February 24, 1897, and August 14, 1897, was 122. On the application to be allowed mileage for the trips amounting to $172.80, the auditor of the Navy Department deducted from the claim $133.70, and allowed only [513] $39.10. The sum *disallowed was deducted on the theory that the chief engineer was only entitled to be paid for shore duty instead of for sea service during the time referred to. This suit was brought to recover the amount of the deduction, and the right to so recover was sustained by the court of claims. 38 Ct. Cl. 712.

Mr. John Q. Thompson argued the cause, and, with Assistant Attorney General Pradt, filed a brief for appellant:

Pay is not determined by the order.

Symonds v. United States, 21 Ct. Cl. 148; United States v. Bishop, 120 U. S. 51, 30 L. ed. 558, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 413; United States v. Strong, 125 U. S. 656, 31 L. ed. 823, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1021; United States v. Barnette, 165 U. S. 174, 41 L. ed. 675, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 286; McRitchie v. United States, 23 Ct. Cl. 23; Aulick v. United States, 27 Ct. Cl. 109; Pierce v. United States, 33 Ct. Cl. 294; Wyckoff v. United States, 34 Ct. Cl. 288; McGowan v. United States, 36 Ct. Cl. 69; Hannum v. United States, 36 Ct. Cl. 99; Taussig v. United States, 38 Ct. Cl. 112.

Paramount duty should determine pay.

McGowan v. United States, 36 Ct. Cl. 69; Taussig v. United States, 38 Ct. Cl. 104; Schoonmaker v. United States, 19 Ct. Cl. 170.

Mr. William B. King argued the cause, and, with Messrs. George A. King and Joseph C. Stebbins, filed a brief for appellee:

An officer sent temporarily to hospital, without detachment from his vessel, is held, even by the Treasury Department, entitled to sea pay.

2 Comp. Dec. 299.

That decision in its application to temporary absence on account of illness has been followed by the court of claims.

Collins v. United States, 37 Ct. Cl. 222.

Mr. Justice White, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

A higher rate of pay is allowed to a chief engineer as well as to other naval officers when performing sea duty than when engaged on shore duty. Rev. Stat. 1556, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1067. And Rev. Stat. 1571, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1079, provides as follows:

"No service shall be regarded as sea service except such as shall be performed at sea, under the orders of a department, and in vessels employed by authority of law."

The government did not dispute at bar, however, that where an officer assigned to sea duty within the purview of the foregoing provision is called upon, without a change in his sea assignment, to perform merely temporary service ashore, he is entitled to sea pay. And this is in accord with the naval regulations, wherein it is provided:

Paragraph 1154:

"(1) Officers shall be entitled to sea pay while attached to, and serving on board of, any ship in commission under control of the Navy Department, the Coast Survey, or the Fish Commission. . . ."

*"(3) Any officer temporarily absent from [515] a ship in commission to which he is attached shall continue to receive sea pay. . . ."

Paragraph 1168:

"A temporary leave of absence does not detach an officer from duty nor affect his rate of pay."

It is settled that the Navy Department has no power to disregard the statute, and to deprive an officer of sea pay by assigning him to a duty mistakenly qualified as shore duty, but which is, in law, sea duty. United States v. Symonds, 120 U. S. 46, 30 L. ed. 557, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 411; United States v. Barnette, 165 U. S. 174, 41 L. ed. 675, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 286. And, of course, the converse is also true, that the Navy Department has no power to entitle an officer to receive sea pay by assigning him to duty which is essentially shore duty, and mistakenly qualifying it as sea duty. But there is no conflict between these rulings, and the conceded principle that, where an officer is assigned to a duty which is essentially a sea service, that he does not lose his right to sea pay whenever he is called upon to perform a mere temporary service ashore. In the present case it cannot be denied that the officer was assigned to sea duty, and that the order of the Department, instead of detaching him therefrom, simply ordered him to discharge a temporary service ashore in addition to his sea service. The whole contention of the government is that this temporary shore service was necessarily incompatible with the continued performance of the officer's duty on the ship to which he continued to be attached, and therefore that the shore duty was paramount to the sea service, and necessarily, by operation of law, affected the detachment of the officer so as to permanently relieve him from the sea duty to which he continued to be regularly assigned.

There is no finding in the record, however, which justifies this argument, and as urged at bar it rests upon the mere assumption of the incompatibility between the sea duty to which the officer was regularly assigned and the temporary shore duty which he was [516] called upon by the Department to *discharge. In effect, the proposition is that it must be assumed as a matter of law, in the absence of a finding to that effect, that the temporary shore duty was of such a permanent character as to render it impossible for the officer to continue to perform duty under his permanent sea assignment, and, therefore, as a matter of law, caused such assignment to terminate. We think the converse is true; and that where the assignment of an officer to duty by the Navy Department expressly imposed upon him the continued discharge of his sea duties, and qualified his shore duty as merely temporary and ancillary to the regular sea duty, that the presumption is that the shore duty was temporary, and did not operate to interfere with or discharge the officer from the responsibilities of his sea duty, to which he was regularly assigned.

Affirmed.

FRANK D. THOMPSON, Trustee in Bankruptcy of Herbert E. Moore, Bankrupt, Plff. in Err.,

v.

HENRY FAIRBANKS.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 516-528.)

Courts—when Federal courts will follow decisions of state courts—bankruptcy—preference—enforcement of mortgage lien on after-acquired property.

1. Whether and to what extent a chattel mortgage covering after-acquired property is valid is a local question on which the decisions of

NOTE.—On mortgage lien on after-acquired property—see notes to Pennock v. Coe, 16 L. ed. U. S. 436; and Deeley v. Dwight, 18 L. R. A. 298.

Review of decisions of state courts in cases involving questions of bankruptcy.

For the purpose of defining the appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of the United States over state courts, the question whether an assignee in bankruptcy is entitled to certain property of a bankrupt is a Federal one. Dushane v. Beall, 161 U. S. 513, 40 L. ed. 791, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 637; Williams v. Heard, 140 U. S. 529, 35 L. ed. 550, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 885.

But where the question is not whether, if a bankrupt has title, it will pass to his assignee by the operation of the bankrupt act, but whether he has title at all, a decision thereon by the state court is not reviewable in the Federal Supreme Court. Scott v. Kelly, 22 Wall. 57, 22 L. ed. 729.

A decision in a state court against a party who sets up title to the property in controversy in assignees in bankruptcy, not to protect his own title, but to defeat that of the receiver of the bankrupt, appointed by the state court, is 196 U. S.

the state courts will be followed by the Federal Supreme Court in determining whether the taking possession of the mortgaged chattels after condition broken amounted to a preference voidable by the mortgagor's trustee in bankruptcy.

2. The decision of a state court as to whether a conveyance by a bankrupt was made with intent to defraud creditors does not present a Federal question which can be considered by the Federal Supreme Court on writ of error to a state court.
3. The enforcement in Vermont of the inchoate lien of a valid recorded chattel mortgage covering after-acquired property, by taking possession of such property with the mortgagor's consent after condition broken, as authorized by the mortgage, without fraud, but with knowledge of the mortgagor's insolvency and contemplated bankruptcy, and with the intent to make the lien available for the payment of the mortgage debt before other complications by way of attachment or bankruptcy should arise, does not amount to a preference voidable by the trustee in bankruptcy, although such action was taken within four months of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, where the mortgage was executed long before that time.
4. The trustee in bankruptcy has no greater rights as against the bankrupt's chattel mortgagee, who has taken possession of after-acquired property under the mortgage, than he otherwise would have, because of the existence, at the time of taking such possession, of an attachment and second chattel mortgage which were both dissolved by the bankruptcy proceedings, being respectively levied and given within four months of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy.

[No. 117.]

Submitted January 6, 1905. Decided February 20, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Vermont to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the County not reviewable in the Supreme Court of the United States. Long v. Converse, 91 U. S. 105, 23 L. ed. 233.

A decision of a state court that a discharge in bankruptcy was not a bar to the action is reviewable in the Supreme Court of the United States as a denial of a right claimed under the laws of the United States. Dimock v. Revcre Copper Co., 117 U. S. 559, 29 L. ed. 994, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 855.

And the effect of a discharge in bankruptcy upon a right to enforce a lien upon property in existence when the proceedings in bankruptcy were commenced is a Federal question. Long v. Bullard, 117 U. S. 617, 29 L. ed. 1004, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 917.

A Federal question is presented by the claim of immunity, under U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5117, from the operation of a discharge in bankruptcy because of the fraudulent and fiduciary character of the debt. Palmer v. Hussey, 119 U. S. 96, 30 L. ed. 362, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 158.

In an earlier case where a bankrupt had pleaded his discharge in bankruptcy as a defense to a suit in a state court upon a debt, and the judgment was rendered in his favor,

Court of Caledonia County, in that State, in favor of defendant in an action by the trustee in bankruptcy to recover from the bankrupt's mortgagee the proceeds of a sale of the mortgaged property. Affirmed.

See same case below, 75 Vt. 361, 56 Atl. 11.

Statement by Mr. Justice Peckham:

The plaintiff in error, by this writ, seeks to review a judgment of the supreme court of the state of Vermont in favor of the defendant in error. 75 Vt. 361, 56 Atl. 11.

[517] The facts upon which the judgment rests are as follows: On the 30th day of June, 1900, Herbert E. Moore, of St. Johnsbury, in the state of Vermont, filed his voluntary petition in bankruptcy in the United States district court for the district of Vermont, and on the 3d day of July, 1900, Moore was by the court duly adjudged a bankrupt, and on the 15th of September, 1900, the plaintiff in error was appointed a trustee in bankruptcy of Moore's estate, and duly qualified. He commenced this action in the county court of Caledonia county, in the state of Vermont, on the first Tuesday of June, 1901, against the defendant Fairbanks, to recover from him the value of certain personal property alleged to have belonged to the bankrupt Moore on the 16th day of May, 1900, and which was, as alleged, sold and converted by Fairbanks, on that day, to his own use, the value of the property being $1,500, as averred in the declaration. The defendant filed his plea and gave notice that upon the trial of the case he would give in evi-

the Supreme Court of the United States, without noticing that the decision was also against a right or immunity set up by the plaintiff under the clause excepting fiduciary debts from the effect of the discharge, dismissed a writ of error to the state court because the decision was in favor of the right set up under that statute. Strader v. Baldwin, 9 How. 261, 13 L. ed. 130. But this case, though not referred to in Palmer v. Hussey, 119 U. S. 96, 30 L. ed. 362, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 158, supra, is obviously, in view of that decision, no longer an authority for dismissing a writ of error on a similar record, and is declared in McCormick v. Market Nat. Bank, 165 U. S. 538, 41 L. ed. 817, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 433, to have been overruled by Palmer v. Hussey and Hennequin v. Clews, 111 U. S. 676, 28 L. ed. 565, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 576, in which latter case the court, on a similar state of facts, assumed jurisdiction without discussing that question.

And a denial by a state court of a claim of immunity, under U. S. Rev. Stat. § 711, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 577, from the operation of a decree of a state court because that statute made the jurisdiction of the courts of the United States over bankruptcy proceedings exclusive, gives the Supreme Court of the United States jurisdiction to review the decision of the state court. Winchester v. Heiskell, 119 U. S. 450, 30 L. ed. 462, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 281.

A writ of error lies from the Supreme Court of the United States to review the decision of the highest court of a state against the validity of a title claimed under a sale in bankruptcy. Such a decision is against a right, title, privilege, or immunity specially set up and claimed under Federal law. New Orleans, S. F. & L. R. Co. v. Delamore, 114 U. S. 501, 29 L. ed. 244, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1009.

The question as to the validity of a transfer by a trustee in bankruptcy appointed under and deriving his authority from the bankrupt act is a Federal one. Traer v. Clews, 115 U. S. 528, 29 L. ed. 467, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155.

A contention that a sale under an order of a Federal court in bankruptcy proceedings to sell mortgaged property free from an encumbrance extinguished the lien of a mortgagor not made a party to the proceedings is a claim of a right under Federal authority. Factors' & T. Ins. Co. v. Murphy, 111 U. S. 738, 28 L. ed. 582, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 679.

A sheriff's claim to protection against suit in a state court to recover moneys arising out of a sale under an execution because he had paid over such moneys to the clerk of a Federal court under an order made by it in a proceeding in bankruptcy involves a question respecting the authority of the Federal court to make the order. O'Brien v. Weld, 92 U. S. 81, 23 L. ed. 675.

The Supreme Court of the United States has no jurisdiction to review the decision of a state court in an action to set aside a conveyance as fraudulent against creditors, merely because the suit was brought by an assignee in bankruptcy. McKenna v. Simpson, 129 U. S. 506, 32 L. ed. 771, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 365.

And the decision of a state court in such suit, as to what shall be deemed a fraudulent conveyance, does not present a Federal question; nor does the application by the state court of the evidence in reaching that decision raise such a question, when no question was raised as to the assignee's power under the acts of Congress, or the rights vested in him as assignee. McKenna v. Simpson, 129 U. S. 506, 32 L. ed. 771, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 365.

The contention that a conveyance was either in fraud of creditors under the state law, or that a residuary estate remained in the grantor which would pass under an assignee's sale in proceedings in bankruptcy, presents a local, and not a Federal, question, and cannot, therefore, be considered by the Federal Supreme Court on writ of error to a state court. Cramer v. Wilson, 195 U. S. 408, ante, 258, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 94.

A decision of a state court against a party who claims that the title to his demand comes through a bankrupt assignee cannot be reviewed by the Supreme Court of the United States where no construction of such bankrupt act was called in question. Calcote v. Stanton, 18 How. 243, 15 L. ed. 348.

A decision of a state court that the presentation of a check drawn on a bank by a depositor transferred to the holder so much of the debt due the drawer as was sufficient to pay the check presents no Federal question which will give the Supreme Court of the United States jurisdiction, notwithstanding the subsequent bankruptcy of the drawer, and a claim by the bank to a set-off under the bankruptcy act, against the obligation of the bankrupt arising out of an acceptance of an unpaid draft; as, the only dispute being over the amount of the credit dence and rely upon, in defense of the action, certain special matters set up in the plea. The case was, by order of the county court, and by the consent of the parties, referred to a referee to hear the cause and report to the court. It was subsequently heard before the referee, who filed his report, finding the facts upon which the decision of the case must rest. He found that before June, 1886, the bankrupt Moore bought a livery stock and business in St. Johnsbury village, in the state of Vermont. At the time of this purchase the defendant was the lessor of the buildings in which the business was conducted, and it continued to be carried on in those buildings. Moore, in making the purchase, had assumed a mortgage then outstanding on the property, and a short time before March 1, 1888, the defendant assisted him to pay this mortgage by signing a note with him for $1,425, payable to the Passumpsic Savings Bank of St. Johnsbury. Subsequently defendant signed notes, which, with accrued interest, were merged in one, dated March 1, 1900, for $2,510.75, due on demand to said savings bank, signed by the bankrupt *and by the defendant as his sure-^[518]ty. This note had not been paid when the case was referred to the referee. The defendant also signed other notes payable to the First National Bank of St. Johnsbury, which were merged into one, and, by various payments made by Moore, it was reduced to $525, and on June 4, 1900, it was paid by the defendant. All these notes had been signed by the defendant to assist Moore in which the bank was entitled to set off against the amount due on the draft, the bankruptcy law is not involved. Boatmen's Sav. Bank v. State Sav. Asso. 114 U. S. 265, 29 L. ed. 174, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 878.

The decision of a state court upon the legal effect of promises alleged to have been made by a banker after his discharge under the bankrupt law of the United States cannot be reviewed by the Supreme Court of the United States, as the legal obligation as to promises depends upon the law of the state in which they were made. Linton v. Stanton, 12 How. 423, 13 L. ed. 1050.

The refusal of the highest court of a state to permit the defense of a discharge in bankruptcy to be set up in that court as a new defense raises no Federal question. Wolf v. Stix, 96 U. S. 541, 24 L. ed. 640.

Where a stockholder and creditor of a corporation commenced proceedings in bankruptcy, and two others, to stop such proceedings, purchased his stock and assumed his debt, these facts, set up as a defense to their obligation, present no Federal question under the bankrupt law which will give the Supreme Court of the United States jurisdiction to review a judgment for plaintiff in the state court. Van Norden v. Benner, 131 U. S. cxlv. Appx., and 24 L. ed. 247.

The question whether a suit brought by the assignee of a trustee in bankruptcy against a prior purchaser was barred by the limitation prescribed by the bankrupt act is a Federal one. Traer v. Clews, 115 U. S. 528, 29 L. ed. 467, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155.

The decision of a state court that a writ of error from one state court to another is the beginning of a new suit within the meaning of the limitation clause of the Federal bankrupt law would seem not to be reviewable in the Supreme Court of the United States, or, if reviewable, should be followed by that court. Jenkins v. International Bank, 106 U. S. 571, 27 L. ed. 304, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1.

Whether a bankrupt was insolvent at the time of giving an alleged preference, and whether the creditor had reasonable cause to believe that it was intended thereby to give a preference, are questions of fact, as to which the Supreme Court of the United States is concluded by the verdict of the jury in a suit by the trustee to recover the amount of such preference. Kaufman v. Treadway, 195 U. S. 271, ante, 190, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 33.

196 U. S.

The action of the court in Barton v. Geiler, 108 U. S. 161, 27 L. ed. 687, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 387, in examining the testimony, in a suit in equity to set aside a conveyance by a bankrupt, to see whether the state court should have found that the conveyance was in fraud of the bankrupt law, is not in accord with the later decisions; c. g., Egan v. Hart, 165 U. S. 188, 41 L. ed. 680, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 300, which applies to an equity cause the principle that questions of fact cannot be reviewed on writ of error to a state court. See also, on this point, div. II., e., in note to Missouri ex rel. Hill v. Dockery, 63 L. R. A. 571, on What questions the Federal Supreme Court will consider in reviewing the judgments of state courts.

Where a state court reverses a judgment in favor of one defendant on the ground that he was not entitled to the exemption which he claimed under the bankrupt act, and affirms a judgment against his codefendants as his sureties on the ground that they were not entitled to the benefit of his discharge, both judgments are final, and may be brought to the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error. O'Dowd v. Russell, 14 Wall. 402, 20 L. ed. 857.

See also, on this point, div. III., a., in note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L. R. A. 513, on What adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States on writ of error to those courts.

An assignee in bankruptcy may be substituted as plaintiff in error for the original plaintiffs in error, who had sued out the writ to the state court after receiving their discharge in bankruptcy. Gates v. Goodloe, 101 U. S. 612, 25 L. ed. 895.

And where a writ of error to the state court, which had been sued out by the judgment debtor, who had obtained a discharge in bankruptcy after the suit was instituted, was dismissed because of his lack of interest in the suit, the court said the assignee in bankruptcy might be substituted on an application to reinstate the cause, made during the term, were it not for the fact that no jurisdictional fact was contained in the record. Knox v. Exchange Bank, 12 Wall. 379, 20 L. ed. 414.

But an assignee in bankruptcy will not be substituted as a party to a writ of error to review a judgment rendered against a person after his adjudication in bankruptcy, since the bankrupt may prosecute such writ in his own name, carrying on, building up, and equipping his livery stable and livery business, and as between them the notes belonged to Moore to pay. On April 15, 1891, Moore gave the defendant a chattel mortgage on the livery property to secure him for these and other debts and liabilities. The property was described in the mortgage as follows: "All my livery property, consisting of horses, wagons, sleighs, vehicles, harnesses, robes, blankets, etc., also all horses and other livery property that I may purchase in my business or acquire by exchange."

The condition contained in the mortgage was, that if Moore should "well and truly pay, or cause to be paid, to the said Henry Fairbanks all that I now owe him, or may owe him hereafter by note, book account, or in any other manner, and shall well and truly save the said Henry Fairbanks harmless, and indemnify him from paying any commercial paper on which he has become or may hereafter become holden in any manner for my benefit as surety, indorser, or otherwise, then this deed shall be void; otherwise of force."

This mortgage was acknowledged, and the affidavit, as provided by the Vermont statute, was appended, showing the justice of the debt and the liability contemplated to be secured by the mortgage, and the mortgage was duly recorded on the 18th day of April, 1891, in the St. Johnsbury clerk's office, by the town clerk thereof. On March 5, 1900, Moore gave the defendant another chattel mortgage on this livery stock, which, on March 23, 1900, defendant assigned to the Passumpsic Savings Bank, and that bank has ever since been its holder and owner. This mortgage was given to secure defendant against all his liabilities for Moore.

[519] *On the 7th of May, one John Ryan sued out a writ in assumpsit against Moore to recover some $500, and an attachment on the livery stock was levied in that suit by the deputy sheriff. This attachment remained in force until dissolved by the bankruptcy proceedings, and the suit is still pending in the state court of Vermont.

Under the agreement contained in the chattel mortgage of April, 1891, Moore made sales, purchases, and exchanges of livery stock to such an extent that on March 5, 1900, there only remained of the livery property on hand April 15, 1891, two horses. These sales, exchanges, and purchases were sometimes made by Moore without communication with or advice from the defendant, and frequently after consultation with him. The livery stock, as it existed on May 16, 1900, was all acquired by exchange of the original stock, or with the avails of the old stock, or from the money derived from the business. Some years after the execution of the chattel mortgage of April 15, 1891, Moore became embarrassed, and finally, shortly prior to March 5, 1900, he became and continued wholly insolvent. On May 16, 1900, the defendant, acting under the advice of counsel, and with the consent of Moore, took possession, under the mortgage of April 15, 1891, of all the livery property then on hand, and on June 11, 1900, caused the same to be sold at public auction by the sheriff. It is for the net avails of this sale, amounting to $922.08, which the sheriff paid over to the defendant, that this suit is brought. The Passumpsic Savings Bank on September 15, 1900, proved its note of $2,510.75 as an unsecured claim against the bankrupt estate of Moore, as the mortgage held by the bank as security had been given by Moore in March, 1900, to defendant, and by him assigned to the bank within four months of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy.

For the purpose of defeating the effect of the defendant taking possession of the livery property under his chattel mortgage of April, 1891, the trustee in bankruptcy presented a petition to the United States district court of Vermont for *leave to inter-[520] vene as plaintiff in the Ryan attachment suit, and to have the lien of Ryan's attachment preserved for the benefit of the general creditors. This petition was dismissed by that court. The referee found that the defendant and his counsel knew, when he took possession of the livery property, under his mortgage, that Moore was insolvent, and was considering going into bankruptcy. The referee also found that he did not intend to perpetrate any actual fraud on the other creditors, or any of them, but he did intend thereby to perfect his lien on the livery and the assignee, if any of the questions involved may affect the bankrupt's estate, will be heard on such questions by his counsel when the case comes up for argument. Hill v. Harding, 121 U. S. cc., Appx., and 26 L. ed. 310.

See also div. VIII. c, in note to Wedding v. Meyler, 66 L. R. A. 833, on Practice and procedure governing the transfer of causes to the Federal Supreme Court on writ of error or appeal.

Other notes involving questions respecting the appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of the United States over state courts, not here-inbefore referred to, are: How and when questions must be raised and decided in a state court in order to make a case for a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States,—Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L. R. A. 33; What the record must show respecting the presentation and decision of a Federal question in order to confer jurisdiction on the Supreme Court of the United States of a writ of error to a state court,—Hooker v. Los Angeles, 63 L. R. A. 471; The record for this purpose,—Home for Incurables v. New York, 63 L. R. A. 329.

property, and make it available for the payment of his debt before other complications by way of attachment or bankruptcy arose, and he understood at that time that it was probable that the Ryan attachment would hold good as against his mortgage. All the property of which defendant took possession was acquired by Moore with the full understanding and intent that it should be covered by the defendant's mortgage of April 15, 1891.

Mr. Edward H. Deavitt submitted the cause for plaintiff in error:

At the time the petition was filed the avails of the sale were in the hands of the officer awaiting whoever was entitled to them, which person was the plaintiff, as at that time those avails could have been levied upon under judicial process against the bankrupt.

Re Allen, 65 Vt. 392, 26 Atl. 591.

The Ryan attachment was superior to the title the defendant secured by taking possession of the property under his mortgage; and, as the attachment was not dissolved until the bankrupt was adjudicated a bankrupt, at the time the bankrupt filed his petition in bankruptcy, and prior thereto, this property could have been taken and sold under judicial process against him. The plaintiff, therefore, took title to the property under the bankrupt act, § 70a, subd. 5, and can recover the value of the same from the defendant.

Page v. Edmunds, 187 U. S. 596, 47 L. ed. 318, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 200; Re Butterwick, 131 Fed. 371; Desany v. Thorp, 70 Vt. 31, 39 Atl. 309; Collender Co. v. Marshall, 57 Vt. 232; Stafford v. Adair, 57 Vt. 63.

The mortgage of April 15, 1891, was invalid as against the creditors of the bankrupt until possession was taken by the defendant. So long as Ryan's attachment remained in force Ryan could have avoided any transfer of the property by the bankrupt, and especially the attempt to perfect the defendant's mortgage of 1891, and no sale of the property by the defendant could make it valid as against Ryan.

Thorp v. Robbins, 68 Vt. 53, 33 Atl. 896.

Therefore, since Ryan, a creditor of the bankrupt, could have avoided the taking possession and sale of the bankrupt's livery property by the defendant, and could have recovered the proceeds of the sale from the defendant, at least to the amount of the attachment, the plaintiff, as the bankrupt's trustee, has the same right under § 70e of the bankruptcy law.

Re Howland, 109 Fed. 869; Skillen v. Endelmen, 39 Misc. 261, 79 N. Y. Supp. 413.

The defendant's mortgage of April 15, 1891, was not a valid claim as against the claim of Ryan, because of want of possession before Ryan sued out his attachment.

Rice v. Courtis, 32 Vt. 460, 78 Am. Dec. 597.

As Ryan's attachment was valid and binding until the bankrupt was adjudicated a bankrupt, at the time the petition in bankruptcy was filed the defendant's mortgage of April 15, 1891, was not a valid lien as against the claim of Ryan, a creditor of the bankrupt, and it therefore is not a valid lien against the estate of the bankrupt, and the plaintiff can recover the proceeds of the sale of the property from the defendant.

Re H. G. Andrae Co. 117 Fed. 561; Re Frazier, 117 Fed. 746; Torrance v. Winfield Nat. Bank, 66 Kan. 177, 71 Pac. 235; Re Pekin Plow Co. 50 C. C. A. 257, 112 Fed. 308; Re Thorp, 130 Fed. 371.

One cannot convey by mortgage, or absolutely, personal property which has no express or potential existence as his property at the time of the conveyance.

Peabody v. Landon, 61 Vt. 318, 15 Am. St. Rep. 903, 17 Atl. 781.

But a stipulation in a mortgage that future-acquired property shall be covered by the mortgage is an executory agreement of such a character that the creditor with whom it is made may, under it, take the property into his possession when it comes into existence and is the subject of transfer by his debtor, and hold it for his security. Whenever he does so take it into his possession before any attachment has been made of the same, or any alienation thereof, such creditor, under his executory agreement, may hold the same; but, until such an act done by him, he has no title to the same. Such act being done, and the possession thus acquired, the executory agreement of the debtor authorizing it, it will then become holden by virtue of a valid lien or pledge.

Moody v. Wright, 13 Met. 17, 46 Am. Dec. 706; Griffith v. Douglass, 73 Me. 532, 40 Am. Rep. 395; Cook v. Corthell, 11 R. I. 482, 23 Am. Rep. 518; Looker v. Peckwell, 38 N. J. L. 253.

As between the defendant and the bank, the bank was the owner of all the livery property; and, after the defendant took possession of and sold the property under his mortgage of April 15, 1891, as aforesaid, the bank could have maintained a suit against him to recover the value of the property.

Longey v. Leach, 57 Vt. 377.

The plaintiff, as trustee of the bankrupt's estate, by the provisions of § 67b was subrogated to the rights of the Passumpsic Savings Bank and Ryan, and in this action is entitled to recover the proceeds of the sale.

Re Howland, 109 Fed. 869; Re New York Economical Printing Co. 49 C. C. A. 133, 110 Fed. 514; Patten v. Carley, 69 App. Div.

425, 74 N. Y. Supp. 994; Skillen v. Endelman, 39 Misc. 261, 79 N. Y. Supp. 413; Gove v. Morton Trust Co. 96 App. Div. 177, 89 N. Y. Supp. 247.

The attachment of the livery property on Ryan's writ by the officer by copy lodged in the town clerk's office had the effect to vest the possession of the property in the officer so as to hold it against all subsequent sales or interference, as though it had been actually removed and taken into the officer's actual possession.

Thorp v. Robbins, 68 Vt. 53, 33 Atl. 896; Barron v. Smith, 63 Vt. 121, 21 Atl. 269; West River Bank v. Gorham, 38 Vt. 649; Angell v. Keith, 24 Vt. 371.

As the mortgage of 1891 was a common-law chattel mortgage, and as the property in existence in May, 1900, was after-acquired property, so long as the Ryan attachment was in force it was impossible for the defendant to perfect his lien by taking possession, as the rights of third parties had intervened, and the possession of the property was already in another person.

Peabody v. Landon, 61 Vt. 318, 15 Am. St. Rep. 903, 17 Atl. 781; Moody v. Wright, 13 Met. 17, 46 Am. Dec. 706; Re Allen, 65 Vt. 392, 26 Atl. 591.

The taking possession of the livery property by the defendant, and the sale of the same under his mortgage of April 15, 1891, was, therefore, an unlawful act, a trespass, and the attaching officer could have maintained trespass, trover, or replevin against him for the property.

National Bank v. Miller, 67 Vt. 66, 30 Atl. 700; Barron v. Smith, 63 Vt. 121, 21 Atl. 269; Arnold v. Maroney, 17 R. I. 579, 23 Atl. 1101; Drake, Attachm. § 291.

The main purpose which the bankruptcy law of 1898 seeks to accomplish is the equal distribution of the bankrupt's property pro rata among his creditors, and, to further that equal distribution, certain liens obtained within four months of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy are declared null and void upon the debtor being adjudicated a bankrupt.

Swarts v. Fourth Nat. Bank, 54 C. C. A. 387, 117 Fed. 1; Buchanan v. Smith, 16 Wall. 277, 21 L. ed. 280.

And the rights of all claimants to the estate of the bankrupt are fixed by the status of their claims at the time of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy.

Swarts v. Fourth Nat. Bank, 54 C. C. A. 387, 117 Fed. 1; Re Bingham, 94 Fed. 796.

To hold, as the supreme court of Vermont did, that Moore's being adjudicated a bankrupt gave vitality to the defendant's taking possession of the livery property, an act which when made was a trespass, and was ineffectual for any purpose of priority over the bank's mortgage or Ryan's attachment, and to then employ that act, thus vitalized, to defeat the primary object of the adjudication, which was the distribution of the bankrupt's effects for the equal benefit of all his creditors, is placing a construction upon the bankruptcy act which is demanded neither by its letter nor its spirit.

Reed v. McIntyre, 98 U. S. 507, 25 L. ed. 171; Re Badenheim, 15 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 370, Fed. Cas. No. 716; Re Beisenthal, 14 Blatchf. 146, Fed. Cas. No. 1,236; Re Steele, 7 Biss. 504, Fed. Cas. No. 13,345; Re H. G. Andrae Co. 117 Fed. 561; Beamer v. Freeman, 84 Cal. 554, 24 Pac. 169.

At the time the defendant took possession of the bankrupt's livery property the bankrupt was insolvent, and the evident effect of such possession will be to give to the defendant, a creditor, a greater percentage of his debt than to any other creditor of the same class.

Mathews v. Hardt, 79 App. Div. 570, 80 N. Y. Supp. 462.

In deciding the case at bar the supreme court of Vermont, in construing §§ 60a and 60b, followed the rule established by the United States bankruptcy law of 1867, and the state insolvency law, which we think was error. Under the law of 1898 the trustee in bankruptcy stands more in the shoes of the creditors of the bankrupt, and any transfer of property, though perfectly good as between the parties thereto, if not good as against the creditors of the transferor for want of recording or change of possession, is not good as against the trustee in bankruptcy of the transferor. So in the case at bar, if the defendant had failed to take possession of the livery property until after the bankrupt had filed his petition in bankruptcy, the plaintiff, as trustee, would have taken all the property in dispute.

Re Allen, 65 Vt. 392, 26 Atl. 591; Page v. Edmunds, 187 U. S. 596, 47 L. ed. 318, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 200; Re Pekin Plow Co. 50 C. C. A. 257, 112 Fed. 308; Haskell v. Merrill, 179 Mass. 120, 60 N. E. 485.

Under the law of 1898 the intent of the parties to the transfer is not material. It is the result obtained by the transferee as against the creditors of the transferor that is controlling.

Wilson Bros. v. Nelson, 183 U. S. 191, 46 L. ed. 147, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 74; Re Ed. W. Wright Lumber Co. 114 Fed. 1011.

One of the great objects of the bankruptcy law is the equal distribution of the debtor's property among his creditors.

Buckingham v. McLean, 13 How. 151, 14 L. ed. 91; Whitley Grocery Co. v. Roach, 115 Ga. 918, 42 S. E. 282.

The four months within which a voidable preference can be given begin to run from the date of the recording or registering of the transfer, or from the date when the beneficiary takes notorious, exclusive, or continuous possession of the transferred property.

Wilson Bros. v. Nelson, 183 U. S. 191, 46 L. ed. 147, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 74; Re Sheridan, 98 Fed. 406; Re Klingaman, 101 Fed. 691; Re Ronk, 111 Fed. 154; Babbitt v. Kelley, 96 Mo. App. 529, 70 S. W. 384; Landis v. McDonald, 88 Mo. App. 335; Mathews v. Hardt, 79 App. Div. 570, 80 N. Y. Supp. 462; Re Ball, 123 Fed. 164; Re Mandel, 127 Fed. 863; Anniston Iron & Supply Co. v. Anniston Rolling Mill Co. 125 Fed. 974; Tatman v. Humphrey, 184 Mass. 361, 63 L. R. A. 738, 100 Am. St. Rep. 562, 68 N. E. 844.

In the case at bar the defendant knew that his own intention and purpose were to secure a preference by making his debtor's property available for the payment of his debt before the debtor went into bankruptcy. He clearly had reasonable cause to know that a preference was intended, because he must have known and intended the consequences of his own acts.

Western Tie & Timber Co. v. Brown, 64 C. C. A. 256, 129 Fed. 728.

At the time the bankrupt delivered the livery property to the defendant he was insolvent and contemplating bankruptcy, and the defendant knew this. The necessary and logical consequence of that act was to prefer the defendant over the bankrupt's other creditors, and such a transfer is conclusive evidence of an intent to prefer, as every man is presumed to intend the necessary consequences of his acts.

Toof v. Martin, 13 Wall. 40, 20 L. ed. 481; Wager v. Hall, 16 Wall. 584, 21 L. ed. 504; Goldman v. Smith, 93 Fed. 182; Re Rome Planing Mill, 96 Fed. 812; Johnson v. Wald, 35 C. C. A. 522, 93 Fed. 640; Re McLam, 97 Fed. 922; Re McGee, 105 Fed. 895; Re Bloch, 48 C. C. A. 650, 109 Fed. 790; Re Ed. W. Wright Lumber Co. 114 Fed. 1011; Read v. Moody, 60 Vt. 668, 15 Atl. 345.

He cannot now be heard to say that he did not have reasonable cause to believe that by such transfer of property a preference was intended.

Re Ed. W. Wright Lumber Co. 114 Fed. 1011.

Furthermore, the facts that at the time the bankrupt delivered his livery property to the defendant he was insolvent, that he delivered his entire stock, that he was at that time contemplating bankruptcy, that the defendant knew all this, and, by taking possession of the property, intended to make it available for the payment of his debt before the proceedings in bankruptcy were begun, necessarily include the further fact that at that time the defendant had reasonable cause to believe that by the change of possession of the livery property a preference was intended.

Lewis v. Burlington Sav. Bank, 64 Vt. 626, 25 Atl. 835; Read v. Moody, 60 Vt. 668, 15 Atl. 345; Buchanan v. Smith, 16 Wall. 277, 21 L. ed. 280; Wager v. Hall, 16 Wall. 584, 21 L. ed. 504; Toof v. Martin, 13 Wall. 40, 20 L. ed. 481; Sebring v. Wellington, 63 App. Div. 498, 71 N. Y. Supp. 788.

The bankrupt delivered the livery property to the defendant with the intent on his part to hinder, delay, and defraud his other creditors, for that was the logical and legal consequence of his act.

Toof v. Martin, 13 Wall. 40, 20 L. ed. 481; Wager v. Hall, 16 Wall. 584, 21 L. ed. 504; Goldman v. Smith, 93 Fed. 182; Re Rome Planing Mill, 96 Fed. 812; Re McLam, 97 Fed. 922; Johnson v. Wald, 35 C. C. A. 522, 93 Fed. 640; Re McGee, 105 Fed. 895; Re Bloch, 48 C. C. A. 650, 109 Fed. 790; Re Ed. W. Wright Lumber Co. 114 Fed. 1011.

Mr. C. A. Prouty submitted the cause for defendant in error. Messrs. Harry Blodgett and Jonathan Ross were on his brief:

The after-produced articles coming from the proper handling and management of the property originally mortgaged were potentially in the original when mortgaged, and not property, in the eye of the law, which did not exist when the mortgage was executed.

Smith v. Atkins, 13 Vt. 461; Bellows v. Wells, 36 Vt. 599; Brainard v. Peck, 34 Vt. 496; Paris v. Vail, 18 Vt. 277; Baxter v. Bush, 29 Vt. 465, 70 Am. Dec. 429; Re Allen, 65 Vt. 395, 26 Atl. 591; Moody v. Wright, 13 Met. 17, 46 Am. Dec. 706, and note; Mitchell v. Winslow, 2 Story, 630, Fed. Cas. No. 9,673; Gregg v. Sanford, 24 Ill. 17, 76 Am. Dec. 719, and note; Peabody v. Landon, 61 Vt. 318, 15 Am. St. Rep. 803, 17 Atl. 781; Francisco v. Ryan, 54 Ohio St. 307, 56 Am. St. Rep. 711, and note, 43 N. E. 1045.

The mortgage of April 15, 1891, gave the defendant the right to take possession of the after-acquired livery property at any time, whether the debt and liability secured were under or over due, without the consent of the bankrupt.

Peabody v. Landon, 61 Vt. 318, 15 Am. St. Rep. 903, 17 Atl. 781; Longey v. Leach, 57 Vt. 377; McLoud v. Wakefield, 70 Vt. 558, 43 Atl. 179.

A transfer of property to a creditor by a debtor within four months prior to his adjudication as a bankrupt does not constitute a preference under the bankrupt law in the absence of fraud, where the transfer was made pursuant to the terms of a prior contract under which the transferee advanced money with which property was acquired, reserving a lien thereon and an option, in case of default in payment, to purchase the property at a fixed price, deducting therefrom his advances.

Sabin v. Camp, 98 Fed. 974.

To the same effect are Re Chapman, 99 Fed. 395; Chattanooga Nat. Bank v. Rome Iron Co. 102 Fed. 755; 3 Pom. Eq. Jur. §§ 1236, 1283, 1288, note 3; Walker v. Brown, 165 U. S. 654, 41 L. ed. 865, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 453; Ketchum v. St. Louis, 101 U. S. 306, 25 L. ed. 999; Paris v. Vail, 18 Vt. 277; Coty v. Barnes, 20 Vt. 78.

The plaintiff in error having first elected to make his application to the court of bankruptcy for an order from that court that the attachment lien be preserved for the benefit of the estate, and that application having been denied, the court of Vermont was correct in holding that, unless the attachment lien is preserved by an order of the court, the property, as in the case at bar, may be held upon some other lien, and not passed to the trustee.

Re Sentenne & G. Co. 120 Fed. 436.

There was no finding of fact that the bankrupt's parting with possession of the mortgaged property was with the purpose on his part to hinder, delay, or defraud his creditors, or either of them; and, without a finding to that effect, it cannot be said that there was any invalid transfer of the property within the provisions of § 67e of the bankrupt law.

Sabin v. Camp, 98 Fed. 974; Mays v. Fritton, 20 Wall. 414, 22 L. ed. 389.

Mr. Justice Peckham, after making the foregoing statement of facts, delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a contest between a trustee in bankruptcy representing the creditors of the bankrupt, and the defendant, the mortgagee in a chattel mortgage dated and executed April 15, 1891, and duly recorded April 18 of that year. The defendant has paid some $500 of the indebtedness of the bankrupt for which defendant was liable as indorser on a note, and he remains liable to pay the note of $2,510.75, held by the Passumpsic Savings Bank, which was signed by him as surety.

The property taken possession of by the defendant under the chattel mortgage was [521] sold by a deputy sheriff on the 11th of June, 1900, and the net avails of the sale, amounting to $922.08, have been paid over by the officer who made the sale, to the defendant.

This suit is brought by the trustee to recover from the defendant those net avails on the theory that the action of the defendant in taking possession and making the sale of the property was unlawful under the provisions of the bankrupt act.

The defendant had assisted the bankrupt in the purchase of the property and had indorsed notes for him in order to enable him to carry on the business of conducting a livery stable. This mortgage, to secure him for these payments and liabilities, was given some seven years before the passage of the bankrupt act, and at the time it was given it was agreed by the parties to it that the bankrupt might sell or exchange any of the livery stock covered by it, as he might desire, and should, by purchase or exchange, keep the stock good, so that the defendant's security should not be impaired, and it was also agreed that all after-acquired livery property should be covered by the mortgage as security for the debts specified therein.

Under this agreement the bankrupt made sales, purchases, and exchanges of livery stock to such an extent that on May 16, 1900, there remained but two horses of the property originally on hand. The stock as it existed on the above date was all acquired by exchange of the original stock, or with the avails of the old stock sold, or the money derived from the business.

There is no pretense of any actual fraud being committed or contemplated by either party to the mortgage. Instead of taking possession at the time of the execution of the mortgage, the defendant had it recorded in the proper clerk's office, and the record stood as notice to all the world of the existence of the lien as it stood when the mortgage was executed, and that the defendant would have the right to take possession of property subsequently acquired, as provided for in the mortgage. The bankrupt was, therefore, not holding himself out *as un-[522] conditional owner of the property, and there was no securing of credit by reason of his apparent unconditional ownership. The record gave notice that he was not such unconditional owner. There was no secret lien, and if defendant cannot secure the benefit of this mortgage, which he obtained in 1891, as a lien upon the after-acquired property, yet prior to the title of the trustee for the benefit of creditors, it must be because of some provision of the bankruptcy law, which we think the court ought not to construe or endeavor to enforce beyond its fair meaning.

In Vermont it is held that a mortgage such as the one in question is good. The supreme court of that state has so held in this case, and the authorities to that effect are also cited in the opinion of that court. And it is also there held that when the mortgagee takes possession of after-acquired property, as provided for in this mortgage, the lien is good and valid as against every one but attaching or judgment creditors prior to the taking of such possession.

At the time when the defendant took possession of this after-acquired property, covered by the mortgage, there had been a breach of the condition specified therein, and the title to the property was thereby vested in the mortgagee, subject to the mortgagor's right in equity to redeem. This has been held to be the law in Vermont (aside from any question as to the effect of the bankrupt law), both in this case and in the cases also cited in the opinion of the supreme court of Vermont. The taking of possession of the after-acquired property, under a mortgage such as this, is held good, and to relate back to the date of the mortgage, even as against an assignee in insolvency. Peabody v. London, 61 Vt. 318, 15 Am. St. Rep. 903, 17 Atl. 781, and other cases cited in the opinion of the supreme court.

Whether and to what extent a mortgage of this kind is valid is a local question, and the decisions of the state court will be followed by this court in such case. Dooley v. Pease, 180 U. S. 126, 45 L. ed. 457, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 308.

[523] The question that remains is whether the taking of possession, *after condition broken, of these mortgaged chattels before although within four months of filing the petition in bankruptcy, was a violation of any of the provisions of the bankrupt act.

The trustee insists that such taking possession of the after-acquired property, under the mortgage of 1891, constituted a preference under that act. He contends that the defendant did not have a valid lien against creditors, under that act; that his lien might, under other circumstances, have been consummated by the taking of possession, but, as that was done within four months of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, the lien was not valid.

Did this taking of possession constitute a preference within the meaning of the act?

It was found by the referee that when the defendant took possession of the property he knew that the mortgagor was insolvent and was considering going into bankruptcy, but that he did not intend to perpetrate any actual fraud on the other creditors, or any of them, but did intend thereby to perfect his lien on the property, and make it available for the payment of his debts before other complications, by way of attachment or bankruptcy, arose. He then understood that Ryan's attachment would probably hold good against his mortgage. The question whether any conveyance, etc., was in fact made with intent to defraud creditors, when passed upon in the state court, is not one of a Federal nature. McKenna v. Simpson, 129 U. S. 506, 32 L. ed. 771, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 365; Cramer v. Wilson, 195 U. S. 408, ante, 256, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 95. It can scarcely be said that the enforcement of a lien by the taking possession, with the consent of the mortgagor, of after-acquired property covered by a valid mortgage, is a conveyance or transfer within the bankrupt act. There is no finding that, in parting with the possession of the property, the mortgagor had any purpose of hindering, delaying, or defrauding his creditors, or any of them. Without a finding to the effect that there was an intent to defraud, there was no invalid transfer of the property within the provisions of § *67e of the bankruptcy law. Sabin v. Camp, 98 Fed. 974.

In the case last cited the court, upon the subject of a preference, held that though the transaction was consummated within the four months, yet it originated in October, 1897, and there was no preference under the facts of that case. "What was done was in pursuance of the pre-existing contract, to which no objection is made. Camp furnished the money out of which the property, which is the subject of the sale to him, was created. He had good right, in equity and in law, to make provisions for the security of the money so advanced, and the property purchased by his money is a legitimate security, and one frequently employed. There is always a strong equity in favor of a lien by one who advances money upon the property which is the product of the money so advanced. This was what the parties intended at the time, and to this, as already stated, there is, and can be, no objection in law or in morals. And so when, at a later date, but still prior to the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, Camp exercised his rights, under this valid and equitable arrangement, to possess himself of the property, and make sale of it in pursuance of his contract, he was not guilty of securing a preference under the bankruptcy law."

The principle that the taking possession may sometimes be held to relate back to the time when the right so to do was created is recognized in the above case. So in this case, although there was no actual existing lien upon this after-acquired property until the taking of possession, yet there was a positive agreement, as contained in the mortgage and existing of record, under which the inchoate lien might be asserted and enforced, and when enforced by the taking of possession, that possession under the facts of this case, related back to the time of the execution of the mortgage of April, 1891, as it was only by virtue of that mortgage that possession could be taken. The supreme court of Vermont has held that such a mortgage gives an existing lien by contract, which may *be enforced by the actual tak-[525] ing of possession, and such lien can only be avoided by an execution or attachment creditor whose lien actually attaches before the taking of possession by the mortgagee. Although this after-acquired property was subject to the lien of an attaching or an execution creditor, if perfected before the mortgagee took possession under his mortgage, yet, if there were no such creditor, the enforcement of the lien by taking possession would be legal, even if within the four months provided in the act. There is a distinction between the bald creation of a lien within the four months, and the enforcement of one provided for in a mortgage executed years before the passage of the act, by virtue of which mortgage, and because of the condition broken, the title to the property becomes vested in the mortgagee, and the subsequent taking possession becomes valid, except as above stated. A trustee in bankruptcy does not, in such circumstances, occupy the same position as a creditor levying under an execution, or by attachment, and his rights, in this exceptional case, and for the reasons just indicated, are somewhat different from what they are generally stated. Mueller v. Nugent, 184 U. S. 1, 46 L. ed. 405, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269.

It is admitted on the part of the counsel for the plaintiff in error that the rule in Vermont, in cases of chattel mortgages of after-acquired property (where possession by the mortgagee is necessary to perfect his title as against attaching or execution creditors), is that, although such possession be not taken until long after the execution of the mortgage, yet the possession, when taken (if it be before the lien of the attaching or execution creditor), brings the property under the cover and operation of the mortgage as of its date,—the time when the right of possession was first acquired. It was also admitted that the supreme court of Vermont has held that when a chattel mortgage requiring possession of the mortgaged property to perfect it as to third persons was executed more than four months before the commencement of insolvency proceedings, the taking of actual possession of the mortgaged property within the four months' [526] period brought that property *under the mortgage as of its date, and so did not constitute a preference voidable by the trustee, although the other elements constituting a preference were present. Many decisions of the supreme court of Vermont are cited to this effect. It will be observed, also, that the provisions of the state insolvency law in regard to void and voidable preferences and transfers were identical with similar provisions of the bankruptcy act of 1867. Gilbert v. Vail, 60 Vt. 261, 14 Atl. 542.

Under that law it was held that the assignee in bankruptcy stood in the shoes of the bankrupt, and that "except where, within a prescribed period before the commencement of proceedings in bankruptcy, an attachment has been sued out against the property of the bankrupt, or where his disposition of his property was, under the statute, fraudulent and void, his assignees take his real and personal estate, subject to all equities, liens, and encumbrances thereon, whether created by act or by operation of law." Yeatman v. New Orleans Sav. Inst. 95 U. S. 764, 24 L. ed. 589. See also Stewart v. Platt, 101 U. S. 731, 25 L. ed. 816; Hauselt v. Harrison, 105 U. S. 401, 26 L. ed. 1075. Under the present bankrupt act, the trustee takes the property of the bankrupt, in cases unaffected by fraud, in the same plight and condition that the bankrupt himself held it, and subject to all the equities impressed upon it in the hands of the bankrupt, except in cases where there has been a conveyance or encumbrance of the property which is void as against the trustee by some positive provision of the act. Re Garcewich, 53 C. C. A. 510, 115 Fed. 87, 89, and cases cited.

It is true that in the case in 95 U. S. 764, 24 L. ed. 589, the savings institution had a special property in the certificates which were the subject of dispute, and had possession of them at the time of the bankruptcy proceedings, and it was held that the institution was not bound to return them, either to the bankrupt, the receiver, or the assignee in bankruptcy, prior to the time of the payment of the debt for which the certificate was held. So the state court held in this case, where the defendant took possession under the circumstances detailed, by virtue of his mortgage, *and where he had [527] the legal title to the property mortgaged, after condition broken, that the possession thus taken related back to the date of the giving of the mortgage, and in thus enforcing his lien there was not a violation of any of the provisions of the bankruptcy act.

In Wilson Bros. v. Nelson, 183 U. S. 191, 46 L. ed. 147, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 74, it was held that the bankrupt had committed an act of bankruptcy, within the meaning of the bankrupt law, by failing, for at least five days before a sale on the execution issued upon the judgment recovered, to vacate or discharge the judgment, or to file a voluntary petition in bankruptcy. The judgment and execution were held to have been such a preference, "suffered or permitted" by the bankrupt, as to amount to a violation of the bankrupt act. Although the judgment was entered upon the power of attorney given years before the passage of the bankrupt act, it was nevertheless regarded as "suffering or permitting" a preference, within that act. This is not such a case. As we have said, there is no finding that the defendant had reasonable cause to believe that by the change of possession it was intended to give a preference. As the state court has said, it was rather a recognition of what was regarded as a right under the previous agreement contained in the mortgage.

Nor does the existence of the Ryan attachment, or the chattel mortgage of March 5, 1900, executed by the bankrupt, and delivered to the defendant, and by him assigned, on the 23d of March, 1900, to the bank, create any greater right or title in the trustee than he otherwise would have. The trustee moved under § 67f, [30 Stat. at L. 565, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3450], on notice to the defendant, for an order that the right or lien under the Ryan attachment should be preserved, so that the same might pass to the trustee for the benefit of the estate, as provided for in that section. This was denied. And unless such permission had been granted, the lien of the attachment was not preserved by the act, but, on the contrary, it was dissolved under § 67c.

[528] The mortgage assigned to the bank, and the attachment *obtained by Ryan, having been dissolved by the bankrupt proceedings, the defendant's rights under his mortgage of April 15, 1891, stood the same as though there had been no subsequent mortgage given, or attachment levied. This is the view taken by the state court of the effect of the dissolution of the mortgage and attachment liens under the bankrupt act, and we think it is the correct one. It is stated in the opinion of the state court as follows:

"It is urged that with the annulment of the attachment, the property affected by it passed to the trustee as a part of the estate of the bankrupt under the express provisions of § 67j. There would be more force in this contention were it not for the provision that, by order of the court, an attachment lien may be preserved for the benefit of the estate. If there is no other lien on the property, there can be no occasion for such order; for, on the dissolution of the attachment, the property, unless exempt, would pass to the trustee anyway. It is only when the property for some reason may not otherwise pass to the trustee as a part of the estate that such order is necessary. We think such is the purpose of that provision, and that unless the lien is preserved, the property, as in the case at bar, may be held upon some other lien, and not pass to the trustee. Re Sentenne & G. Co. 120 Fed. 436."

We think the judgment of the Supreme Court of Vermont was right, and it is affirmed.

196 U. S.

*CITY OF OKLAHOMA CITY, Plff. in Err., [529]

v.

FRANK McMASTER.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 529-538.)

Appeal—distinction between appeal and writs of error—res judicata—evidence of former judgment—public lands—rights of occupant of projected town site.

1. The fact that an action of ejectment was tried by the court, upon waiver of a jury, does not make appeal the proper method of obtaining a review in the Federal Supreme Court of the final judgment of the Oklahoma supreme court, under the act of May 2, 1890 (26 Stat. at L. 81, 85, chap. 182), § 9, authorizing such review in the same manner and under the same regulations as though the judgment were that of a Federal circuit court.
2. Findings of fact by the judge trying the cause, and an order directing a conveyance "as decreed by this court," filed in different county clerks' offices, do not amount to a judgment, and are not admissible in evidence in support of a plea of res judicata.
3. The selection of a lot in a projected town site in Oklahoma, in accordance with a plat agreed upon by a portion of the occupants at or near the date of the opening to settlement, did not vest such an unconditional title in the selector as will prevail against the rights of Oklahoma City to the use and occupation of the lot as a public street under a subsequent survey, made or approved pursuant to the act of May 14, 1890 (26 Stat. at L. 109, chap. 207, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1463), by trustees appointed under that act to make town-site entries for the several use and benefit of the occupants, the selector not being an occupant thereof when the trustees made entry of the land, nor when the conveyance to them was made by the government.

[No. 137.]

Argued January 18, 19, 1905. Decided February 20, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the Territory of Oklahoma to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District Court of the Third Judicial District of that Territory, in favor of plaintiff, in an action of ejectment to recover land situated in a public street in Oklahoma City. Reversed and remanded for a new trial.

See same case below, 12 Okla. 570, 73 Pac. 1012.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Frank Dale argued the cause, and, with Messrs. S. A. McGinnis, C. Porter Johnson, and A. G. C. Bierer, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The findings of a court as to the facts of a case upon which no judgment has been rendered do not constitute evidence in another action of the facts so found.

NOTE.—On distinction between appeal and writ of error—see note to Miners' Bank v. Iowa, 13 L. ed. U. S. 867.

Child v. Morgan, 51 Minn. 116, 52 N. W. 1127; Auld v. Smith, 23 Kan. 65; Massing v. Ames, 36 Wis. 409; Taylor v. Runyan, 3 Iowa, 474; Whitwell v. Emory, 3 Mich. 84, 59 Am. Dec. 220; Lincoln v. Cross, 11 Wis. 94.

McMaster did not acquire a vested right in this ground in the street of Oklahoma City.

Guthrie v. Beamer, 3 Okla. 652, 41 Pac. 647.

Mr. Chester Howe argued the cause, and, with Mr. Francis J. Kearful, filed a brief for defendant in error:

The writ of error was improper, and should be dismissed, and the case considered as depending upon the appeal alone.

Stringfellow v. Cain, 99 U. S. 610, 612, 25 L. ed. 421, 422; Hecht v. Boughton, 105 U. S. 235, 236, 26 L. ed. 1018; Story v. Black, 119 U. S. 235-237, 30 L. ed. 341, 342, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 176; Idaho & O. Land Improv. Co. v. Bradbury, 132 U. S. 509, 514, 515, 33 L. ed. 433, 436, 437, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 177.

Mr. Francis J. Kearful also filed a separate brief for defendant in error:

The so-called case-made cannot be permitted to serve as a bill of exceptions, or proper transcript of the record.

Shumaker v. O'Brien, 19 Kan. 476; Herron v. Merrilees, 7 Okla. 261, 54 Pac. 467.

This is fatal to every claim of error.

Metropolitan R. Co. v. District of Columbia, 195 U. S. 322, 329, ante, 219, 222, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28. See also Armijo v. Armijo, 181 U. S. 558, 45 L. ed. 1000, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 707; Cohn v. Daley, 174 U. S. 539, 544, 43 L. ed. 1077, 1079, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 802; Hecht v. Boughton, 105 U. S. 235, 236, 26 L. ed. 1018; Comstock v. Eagleton, 196 U. S. 99, ante, 402, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 210.

Mr. Justice Peckham delivered the opinion of the court:

On the 22d day of September, 1899, this action of ejectment was commenced by defendant in error in the district court of the third judicial district of Oklahoma territory, in Oklahoma county. It was brought to recover lands situated in a public street in the city of Oklahoma City. Judgment was entered for the defendant in error for the recovery of the land, and that judgment was affirmed by the supreme court of the territory, and the plaintiff in error has brought the case here, both by writ of error and appeal, taking both courses as a precaution, in order to bring the case before us. It was tried by the court, a jury having been waived by the parties, and the defendant in error contends that where a case is thus tried in a territorial court, an appeal to this court is the only proper proceeding to obtain a review. Act of Congress, 1874, 18 Stat. at L. 27, 28, chap. 80. The contention of defendant is not correct in this case. The manner of reviewing judgments, in civil cases, of the supreme court of the territory of Oklahoma, is specially provided for by the 9th section of the act of May 2, 1890 (26 Stat. at L. 81, 85, chap. 182), providing a territorial government for Oklahoma, and is not governed by the act of Congress of 1874. Comstock v. Eagleton, 196 U. S. 99, ante, 402, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 210. The 9th section of the act of 1890 provides that writs of error and appeal from the final decision of the supreme court of the territory will be allowed and may be taken to the Supreme *Court of the United[532] States "in the same manner, and under the same regulations, as from the circuit courts of the United States," and it was held in the above case that final judgment in an action at law in the circuit court of the United States can only be reviewed by writ of error. The assumption that because this case was tried before the court, a jury having been waived by consent, that therefore it ought to go up by appeal, is a mistaken one. In Deland v. Platte County, 155 U. S. 221, 39 L. ed. 128, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 82, the case was an action at law where a jury had been waived and trial had before the court. Nevertheless, it was held that, as it was an action at law, and the case came from a circuit court of the United States, it could only be reviewed by this court on writ of error. This case must, therefore, be reviewed by writ of error because it is an action at law, although tried by the court upon a waiver of a jury. The record shows a sufficient bill of exceptions, however, and the case is to be reviewed upon the record as thus presented.

Upon the trial, for the purpose of proving the issue upon his part, by means of evidence of a former adjudication, the plaintiff introduced in evidence what he contended was a judgment in his favor for the recovery of the same land in an action in which he was plaintiff and Edgar N. Sweet et al., town-site trustees, defendants, and which was entered in the district court of the second judicial district, county of Canadian, territory of Oklahoma, on or before May 11, 1892, and recorded on the 14th day of May, 1892, in the county of Oklahoma. The plaintiff argued that the defendant (plaintiff in error) in the case at bar was bound as a privy by the adjudication in the former action. The paper was received in evidence by the court, and it is set forth at length in the record. It is evidently nothing but a finding of facts by the judge trying the cause. There was also a paper offerred and received in evidence, signed by the trial judge in the same case, and dated the 13th day of October, 1893. This was an order made in the case by him at Kingfisher, in Kingfisher county, and was entered in that county on the 13th day of October, [533] 1893,—*the day of its date. The order directs the defendant to make, execute, and deliver to Frank McMaster, the plaintiff, a trustee's deed, "as decreed by this court on the 14th day of November, 1892, of the following described premises and real estate." It is attempted to piece these two documents together, the finding of facts filed in Canadian county and thereafter recorded in the county of Oklahoma, and the order made in Kingfisher county, and filed therein October 13, 1893, and to regard the whole as a judgment. It is plain that there has been no formal judgment entered in the case, and that these two separate documents, filed in different clerks' offices, cannot be pieced together and made a formal and complete judgment. Without a judgment the plea of res judicata has no foundation; and neither the verdict of a jury nor the findings of a court, even though in a prior action, upon the precise point involved in a subsequent action and between the same parties, constitute a bar. In other words, the thing adjudged must be by a judgment. A verdict or finding of the court alone is not sufficient. The reason stated is that the judgment is the bar, and not the preliminary determination of the court or jury. It may be that the verdict was set aside, or the finding of facts amended, reconsidered, or themselves set aside, or a new trial granted. The judgment alone is the foundation for the bar. Springer v. Bien, 128 N. Y. 99, 27 N. E. 1076.

Without resort to this (asserted) judgment in the action against the town-site trustees, it is not urged that the defendant in error made out his case upon the trial. There was no judgment, and the "finding of facts" should not have been held to be such. For the error in the admission of the so-called judgment the case must be reversed.

We do not decide, even if there had been a technical and formal judgment entered, that such a judgment would be conclusive in favor of the plaintiff upon the trial of this action against the city of Oklahoma City. Whether the plaintiff in error would be regarded as a privy to such judgment, and therefore bound by it, it is not now necessary to decide.

[534] *The court is, however, indisposed to let the case rest upon the error pointed out. The question will arise upon another trial, as to the right of the plaintiff to recover upon the facts stated in the finding of facts in the action against the town-site trustees. 196 U. S.

We think it proper to now look into those findings simply for the purpose of determining whether, assuming them to be facts, the plaintiff below made out a case which would entitle him to recover the land in suit. The supreme court of the territory is of opinion that he did. Among the facts found on the trial of the case against the trustees are the following:

The trustees, appointed under the act of 1890, May 14 (26 Stat. at L. 109, chap. 207, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1463), entered the land in the local land office at Oklahoma City, September 3, 1890, covering, among other lots, the premises in question, "in trust, for the use and benefit of the occupants thereof." A patent from the United States was, on the 1st of October, 1890, issued to the trustees for the land (covering over 160 acres), which patent was, by its terms, in trust for the occupants of the town site, according to their respective interests. At neither date was the plaintiff below an occupant of the land in suit.

Prior to this time, and on the 22d day of April, 1889, the land had been opened for settlement under the proclamation of the President, pursuant to the act of Congress approved March 2, 1889. 25 Stat. at L. 980, chap. 412, page 1005, § 13. The land in question, together with other lots, was settled upon and occupied as a town site shortly after noon of April 22, 1889, and has continued to be and is still so held and occupied.

A portion of the occupants of the tract, on the 22d day of April, 1889, tacitly agreed to a plat of the land into lots, blocks, streets, and alleys, and the plaintiff on that day legally entered upon and occupied the piece or parcel of land particularly described in the plat as his lots, and being the land recovered by him in this action. Subsequently to such occupancy, and prior to the entry of the land by the trustees, and to the conveyance by the government to the trustees, a different plat, making a different arrangement of *streets, etc., was adopted and enforced by the parties occupying the town site. By the latter plat the parcel of land claimed by the plaintiff was thrown into the street called Grand avenue. The plaintiff did not consent, but objected to the second plat, and has never consented thereto or acquiesced therein. He was, by the city authorities, forcibly removed from the parcel of ground selected by him, and has since that time been forcibly kept from the occupancy thereof. [535]

On the 21st day of April, 1891, he applied to the trustees of the city for a deed to the lot, but they declined to award it. The city of Oklahoma City has appropriated the land as a street, and did so appropriate the same long prior to the conveyance of the land by the United States to the trustees. The plaintiff was not an occupant of the tract at the time the United States conveyed the same to the trustees, but it was at the time used and occupied as a street by the city.

On these facts the plaintiff below did not make out his case. There was no unconditional vesting of title to the particular lot chosen by him on the 22d of April, by tacit agreement of some of the settlers, even though a map were made of the land showing the plaintiff in possession of a lot not in any public street of the city. Subsequently to the agreement upon a plat by some of the settlers, and prior to the conveyance to the trustees by the patent from the United States (October 1, 1890), the plat was altered and another plat adopted, by which the lot selected by the defendant in error became a part of a public street in the city. The defendant in error, in common with all others, chose lots upon a site which was intended as a town site, and took his lot subject to the conditions which might thereafter obtain. There was no portion of the territory of Oklahoma open to settlement prior to the date fixed by the proclamation of the President under the act of March 2, 1889. That date was April 22, 1889. 26 Stat. at L. 1544. It was provided by the act that after the proclamation, and not before, the Secretary of the Interior might permit the entry of land for town sites under Rev. [536] Stat. §§ 2387, 2388 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 1457, 1458). The Secretary of the Interior gave no permit for entry of lands for town sites under the act of 1889. Again, the sections of the Revised Statutes plainly refer to an organized state or territory, and Oklahoma was neither on the 22d day of April, 1889. It was organized as a territory May 2, 1890 (26 Stat. at L. 81, chap. 182), and the special act to provide for town-site entries in Oklahoma was not passed until May 14, 1890. 26 Stat. at L. 109, chap. 207, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1463. Regulations for carrying out that act were promulgated by the Secretary of the Interior June 18 and July 10, 1890. 10 Land Dec. 666; 11 Land Dec. 24. It may be assumed that on April 22, 1889, it was supposed that the land now embraced in the city of Oklahoma City would be a town site, as it was stated on the argument at bar, and not disputed, that there was at that date a railroad station there, and there was every probability that a town would exist at that site. But there was no law for a present selection of land or lots for town sites on the 22d day of April, 1889. There was but a supposition that land actually selected on that day for a town site would eventually be approved. On May 14, 1890, more than a year after the lands were open to entry, and just twelve days after the act was passed providing for the temporary government of the territory, an act providing for town-site entries was passed. 26 Stat. at L. 109, chap. 207, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1463. That act provided for trustees, to be appointed by the Secretary of the Interior, who were authorized to make entry for town sites on so much of the public lands situate in the territory of Oklahoma, and then open to settlement, as might be necessary to embrace all the legal subdivisions covered by actual occupancy, for the purpose of trade and business, not exceeding 1280 acres in each case, for the several use and benefit of the occupants thereof, and the entry was to be made under the provisions of § 2387 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1457), as near as might be, and when such entry was made the Secretary of the Interior was to provide regulations for the proper execution of the trust by such trustees, including the survey of the land into streets, alleys, squares, blocks, and lots when necessary, or [537] the approval of such survey as may already have been made by the inhabitants thereof, the assessment upon the lots of such sum as may be necessary to pay for the land embraced in such town site, the costs of the survey, the conveyances of lots, and other necessary expenses, including the compensation of the trustees. The maps and plats of streets, etc., to be surveyed were to be approved by the trustees, or they might approve the survey already made by the inhabitants thereof.

It seems, therefore, plain that a mere agreement among a portion of the people selecting lots for or in a projected town site, on April 22, 1889, did not and could not vest an absolute and unconditional title in the persons who thus selected such lots. The persons going on the land on that date, and under the circumstances then existing, did not have any law for the vesting of title to a lot as within a town site, by the mere selection of land at that time. There was general confusion, and there were thousands of people entering the territory embraced within the proclamation, on that date. In Guthrie v. Territory, 1 Okla. 188-194, 21 L. R. A. 841, 31 Pac. 190, the supreme court of the territory, in speaking of these crowds, said:

"They were aggregations of people, associated together for purposes of mutual benefit and protection. Without any statute law, they became a law unto themselves, and adopted the forms of law and government common among civilized people, and enforced their authority by the power of public sentiment. They had no legal existence; they were nonentities; they could not bind themselves by contracts, or bind any one else."

The whole thing was experimental and conditional.

[538] The selection of the lots in a proposed town site, made on the 22d day of April, 1889, not being final, neither was the plat or map of the proposed town site, as then, or soon after, agreed upon by some of the people, final or conclusive. The agreement upon the plat or map was liable to alteration; there was no absolute right to any particular lot, as it was *subject to future survey. It was all in the air. When, thereafter, the trustees, under the statute, made a survey of the land into the streets, etc., or approved a survey already made, by which the plaintiff's lot was placed in the public street of the city, it was his misfortune, where all had taken their chances, that he should draw a blank. The approval of a survey by the trustees, which placed this lot in a public street of the city, gives to the city the right to the possession of it, and to keep it open as such public street. The plaintiff, not being an occupant of the lot at the time that the trustees made entry of the land, nor when the conveyance was made to the trustees by the government, was not one of the parties included in the statute, which directed the entry for the town sites to be made by the trustees "for the several use and benefit of the occupants thereof."

The supreme court in Guthrie v. Beamer, 3 Okla. 652, 41 Pac. 647, has held substantially the same views which we now state in the case at bar. We are unable to see any real difference in the principle governing the two cases, and we think the Beamer Case was rightly decided.

The judgment of the Supreme Court of Oklahoma must be reversed, and the case remanded with directions for a new trial.

Reversed.

[539]*CITY OF WORCESTER, Plff. in Err.,
v.

WORCESTER CONSOLIDATED STREET
RAILWAY COMPANY. (Nos. 144, 145.)

CITY OF WORCESTER and the Board of Aldermen of the City of Worcester, Plffs. in Err.,

v.

WORCESTER CONSOLIDATED STREET
RAILWAY COMPANY. (Nos. 146, 148.)

NOTE.—As to what laws are void as impairing obligation of contracts—see notes to Franklin County Grammar School v. Bailey, 10 L. R. A. 405; Fletcher v. Peck, 3 L. ed. U. S. 162; McCanna & F. Co. v. Citizens' Trust & S. Co. 24 C. C. A. 20; and Montana Ore-Purchasing Co. v. Boston & M. Consol. Copper & S. Min. Co. 35 C. C. A. 12.

196 U. S.

CITY OF WORCESTER, Plff. in Err.,
v.

WORCESTER CONSOLIDATED STREET
RAILWAY COMPANY. (No. 147.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 539-553.)

Contracts—impairment of obligation—legislative power over municipal contracts.

A municipal corporation cannot invoke the protection of the contract clause of the Federal Constitution against the abrogation by Mass. Laws 1898, chap. 578, with the consent of the street railway company, of the provisions of a contract between that company and the municipality with reference to paving the streets through which the company was thereby granted the right to extend its tracks, and the substitution which that statute makes of another and different method for paving and repairing such streets.

[Nos. 144, 145, 146, 147, 148.]

Argued January 23, 24, 1905. Decided February 20, 1905.

TWO WRITS OF ERROR to the Supreme Judicial Court of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts to review judgments sustaining demurrers to petitions for writs of mandamus to compel a street railway company to repair and maintain the surface of the streets through which its tracks extend. Affirmed. Also

TWO WRITS OF ERROR to the Superior Court of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts for the County of Worcester to review judgments sustaining demurrers to bills in equity to compel a street railway company to repair and maintain the surface of the streets through which its tracks extend, which judgments were affirmed on appeal by the Supreme Judicial Court of that State. Affirmed. Also

IN ERROR to the Superior Court of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts for the County of Worcester to review a judgment affirmed by the Supreme Judicial Court of that State in favor of defendant in an action on a contract under which a street railway company agreed to pave and repair the streets through which its tracks extended. Affirmed.

See same cases below, 182 Mass. 49, 64 N. E. 581.

Statement by Mr. Justice Peckham:

These five cases were brought here by writs of error, sued out by the city of Worcester, for the purpose of reviewing the several judgments of the supreme and superior courts of the commonwealth of Massachusetts, respectively, affirming the judgments of the trial courts in favor of the railroad company, the defendant in error. The five cases involve the same questions, and were brought for the purpose of answering any possible objection to the particular mode adopted in any one case for the purpose of obtaining the relief sought by the plaintiff in error. 182 Mass. 49, 64 N. E. 581. The first two cases were petitions for writs of [540] mandamus against the railroad *company, which petitions were demurred to, and the demurrers sustained. Of the three other cases, two were suits in equity, and were brought by the city against the railroad company, and were heard upon the bills and demurrers thereto, the court sustaining the demurrers; the fifth case was an action on contract originally brought by the city against the railroad company, in the superior court, and heard upon demurrer to the complaint, which was sustained and judgment ordered for defendant, from which judgment plaintiff appealed to the supreme judicial court of the commonwealth.

The defendant in error is a street railroad corporation, organized and doing business under the laws of the state of Massachusetts, and it owned and operated in the city of Worcester and in numerous outlying cities and towns a street railway system parts of which had previously belonged to other similar corporations, and had been acquired by the consolidated company in 1901, by the purchase of the franchises and properties of such other companies under the general provisions of the street railway laws of the commonwealth. Under the general laws of the commonwealth, as they existed from 1891 to 1893, it was provided that a street railway company might apply to the board of aldermen of a city, or the selectmen of a town, for the location of the tracks of the railway company in the streets of the city or town, and, after hearing, it was provided that the board might grant the petition "under such restrictions as they deem the interests of the public may require; and the location thus granted shall be deemed and taken to be the true location of the tracks of the railway, if an acceptance thereof by said directors in writing is filed with said mayor and aldermen or selectmen within thirty days after receiving notice thereof." Mass. Pub. Stat. chap. 113, § 7.

The law also provided (§ 21 of above act) that the board of aldermen or the selectmen might, from time to time, "under such restrictions as they deem the interests of the public may require, upon petition, authorize [541] a street railway *company whose charter has been duly accepted, and whose tracks have been located and constructed, or its lessees and assigns, to extend the location of its tracks within their city or town without entering upon or using the tracks of another street railway company; and such extended location shall be deemed to be the true location of the tracks of the company, if its acceptance thereof in writing is filed in the office of the clerk of the city or town within thirty days after receiving notice thereof."

Section 32 of the act made it the duty of every street railway company to keep in repair, to the satisfaction of the superintendent of streets, "the paving, upper planking, or other surface material of the portions of streets, roads, and bridges occupied by its tracks, and if such tracks occupy unpaved streets or roads (the company) shall, in addition, so keep in repair 18 inches on each side of the portion occupied by its tracks," etc.

As the law then stood, the railroad company, on several different occasions, between 1891 and 1893, made applications for and was granted the privilege of extending the location of its tracks. On the 11th day of May, 1891, the defendant in error, upon application, was duly granted an extension of its location for its tracks in certain streets in the city of Worcester, which extension of location was stated in the order or decree of the board of aldermen to be granted "upon the following conditions;" eight different conditions then follow, among which is—

"Second. That block paving shall be laid and 'maintained between the rails of its track, and for a distance of 18 inches outside of said rails, for the entire distance covered by this location.'"

This order or decree was duly accepted in writing by the defendant in error, and its acceptance filed with the clerk of the city of Worcester. Other extensions of locations were applied for and granted during this time, some of which were upon the condition or restriction that the paving should be *be- [542] tween the rails and outside thereof to the street curb, and these conditions were accepted and the acceptance duly filed in the city clerk's office.

Subsequently, and in 1898 (chap. 578 of the Massachusetts Laws of that year), provision was made for a somewhat different system of taxation than that which prevailed at the time these several extensions of locations were granted and accepted by the railroad company. It was provided by § 11 of that act as follows:

"Sec. 11. Street railway companies shall not be required to keep any portion of the surface material of streets, roads, and bridges in repair, but they shall remain subject to all legal obligations imposed in original grants of locations, and may, as an incident to their corporate franchise, and without being subject to the payment of any fee or other condition precedent, open any street, road, or bridge, in which any part of their railway is located, for the purpose of making repairs or renewals of the railway, or any part thereof, the superintendent of streets or other officer exercising like authority, or the board of aldermen or selectmen, in any city or town where such are required, issuing the necessary permits therefor."

After the passage of this act of 1898 the railroad company consented and conformed to its requirements, and thereafter omitted to make the repairs in the streets which had been required of it at the time when its extended locations were granted, during the period from 1891 to 1893. The city thereafter sought by these various actions or proceedings to compel the street railway company to repair and maintain the surface of the streets as provided for by the law in force when the extended locations were given and accepted. During the time that the railroad company had, since the passage of the act of 1898, omitted to make the repairs provided for as a condition for the granting of its application for extended locations, the city had incurred expenses in renewing and repairing various portions of the pavements, [543] because of the omission and refusal *of the railroad company to do so, and one of these actions was brought to recover the expenses thus incurred by the city in making such repairs and renewing such pavement.

Mr. Arthur P. Rugg argued the cause, and, with Mr. John R. Thayer, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

A municipal corporation can make contracts with reference to the laying out and widening of streets, which are recognized as legal and enforceable.

Arlington v. Cutter, 114 Mass. 344; Atkinson v. Newton, 169 Mass. 242, 47 N. E. 1029; Townsend v. Hoyle, 20 Conn. 1.

It can make contracts with reference to the perpetual repair of streets and highways.

Brookfield v. Reed, 152 Mass. 568, 26 N. E. 138.

It can also so contract with reference to the repair of highways as to become personally responsible, and thereby relieve itself of the immunity which otherwise would attach to public work.

Butman v. Newton, 179 Mass. 1, 88 Am. St. Rep. 349, 60 N. E. 401.

It could also unquestionably receive legacies and gifts for the purpose of repairing its highways.

2 Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. § 596.

These rights which it has acquired with reference to its duty, the city holds, not in its public capacity as a branch of the sovereign power and subject to the unrestricted control of the legislative power, but as a corporate individual, having rights of its own respecting the duties which it is required to perform, and which it is at liberty to enjoy, undisturbed by any agency of the state itself, and in the enjoyment of which it is entitled to the protection of the Federal Constitution.

Thompson v. Moran, 44 Mich. 602, 7 N. W. 180.

There may be, in such corporations, rights under contracts and grants which are beyond destruction by the legislature.

1 Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. § 68; Richland County v. Lawrence County, 12 Ill. 1; Montpelier v. East Montpelier, 29 Vt. 12, 67 Am. Dec. 748, 27 Vt. 704; Pawlet v. Clark, 9 Cranch, 292, 336, 3 L. ed. 735, 750; Terrett v. Taylor, 9 Cranch, 43, 52, 3 L. ed. 650, 653; Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 663, 4 L. ed. 629, 665; Grogan v. San Francisco, 18 Cal. 590; People v. O'Brien, 111 N. Y. 1, 18 N. E. 692; Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. p. 344; People ex rel. Dunkirk, W. & P. R. Co. v. Batchellor, 53 N. Y. 128, 13 Am. Rep. 480; People ex rel. McCagg v. Chicago, 51 Ill. 17, 2 Am. Rep. 278; State ex rel. McCurdy v. Tappan, 29 Wis. 664, 9 Am. Rep. 622; People ex rel. Le Roy v. Hurlbut, 24 Mich. 44, 9 Am. Rep. 103; Hewison v. New Haven, 37 Conn. 475, 9 Am. Rep. 342; New Orleans, M. & C. R. Co. v. New Orleans, 26 La. Ann. 517.

Contract rights stand at least upon as strong ground as would money raised by general taxation. Even in the exercise of the taxing power, the legislature has no right to issue its mandate to a municipality that it shall contribute its moneys raised from taxation toward the construction of a railroad or other public-service corporation.

People ex rel. Dunkirk, W. & P. R. Co. v. Batchellor, 53 N. Y. 128, 13 Am. Rep. 480.

As it is one of the principles of every free government that it is not in the power of the legislature to create a debt from one person to another, or from one corporation to another, without the consent, expressed or implied, of the party charged, so, also, it is beyond the legislative power to wipe out a valid debt subsisting from one person or corporation to another person or corporation without the assent of the creditor.

Hampshire County v. Franklin County, 16 Mass. 76; People ex rel. Park Comrs. v. Detroit, 28 Mich. 228, 13 Am. Rep. 202.

Restrictions constitute valuable property rights.

Soulard v. United States, 4 Pet. 511, 512, 8 L. ed. 938; Metropolitan City R. Co. v. Chicago West Div. R. Co. 87 Ill. 317.

The city of Worcester, under the Massachusetts law, had a pecuniary private interest in the repairs of its streets, provided it undertook to act respecting its statutory liabilities through strictly municipal agencies, or through any other instrumentality than those provided by general law, acting solely under the authority conferred by general law.

Butman v. Newton, 179 Mass. 1, 88 Am. St. Rep. 349, 60 N. E. 401; Perry v. Worcester, 6 Gray, 544, 66 Am. Dec. 431; Deane v. Randolph, 132 Mass. 475; Hill v. Boston, 122 Mass. 344, 23 Am. Rep. 332; Pratt v. Weymouth, 147 Mass. 245, 9 Am. St. Rep. 691, 17 N. E. 538; Brookfield v. Reed, 152 Mass. 568, 26 N. E. 138; Collins v. Greenfield, 172 Mass. 78, 51 N. E. 454; Tindley v. Salem, 137 Mass. 171, 50 Am. Rep. 289.

Legislative power over municipalities is not universal and absolute, and does not extend to property or property rights acquired by a city for special purposes, nor to rights of immunity, in respect to both of which the municipality is recognized as having a right of private ownership, of which it cannot be deprived in any other way than can other private owners of property be deprived.

Mt. Hope Cemetery v. Boston, 158 Mass. 509, 35 Am. St. Rep. 515, 33 N. E. 695; Tippecanoe County v. Lucas, 93 U. S. 108, 114, 23 L. ed. 822, 824; Mt. Pleasant v. Beckwith, 100 U. S. 514, 533, 25 L. ed. 699, 704; Broughton v. Pensacola, 93 U. S. 266, 269, 23 L. ed. 896, 897; New Orleans, M. & T. R. Co. v. Ellerman, 105 U. S. 166, 172, 26 L. ed. 1015, 1017; Richmond v. Southern Bell Teleph. & Teleg. Co. 174 U. S. 761, 777, 43 L. ed. 1162, 1168, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 778.

The cases before cited, showing the property interest and pecuniary rights of a municipality as to a public way, when taken in conjunction with the contract power of the municipality with reference to the repair of streets, established in Brookfield v. Reed, 152 Mass. 568, 26 N. E. 138, place the property rights of the city in respect of highways upon the same basis as its property rights in sewer systems and waterworks.

Property rights of municipalities in sewers are recognized in a multitude of cases.

Johnston v. District of Columbia, 118 U. S. 19, 30 L. ed. 75, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 923; Maximilian v. New York, 62 N. Y. 164, 20 Am. Rep. 468; Coan v. Marlborough, 164 Mass. 206, 41 N. E. 238; Child v. Boston, 4 Allen, 41, 81 Am. Dec. 680.

Waterworks owned by a city are also treated, with reference to liability, as private property, and the municipality is held to the same degree of liability as it would be if it were a private corporation.

Hand v. Brookline, 126 Mass. 324; Johnson v. Worcester, 172 Mass. 122, 51 N. E. 519; Lynch v. Springfield, 174 Mass. 430, 54 N. E. 871; Esberg Cigar Co. v. Portland, 34 Or. 282, 43 L. R. A. 435, 75 Am. St. Rep. 651, 55 Pac. 961; Walla Walla v. Walla Walla Water Co. 172 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 341, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77.

Wharves owned by a municipality which receives and charges wharfage for their use are the property of the municipality, which has, with reference to it, the ordinary incidents of private ownership.

Mersey Docks v. Gibbs, 11 H. L. Cas. 686; Petersburg v. Applegarth, 28 Gratt. 321, 26 Am. Rep. 357; Pittsburgh v. Grier, 22 Pa. 54, 60 Am. Dec. 65.

So, also, gasworks owned by the city are maintained as much for the private emolument and advantage of the city as for the public good; and the whole investment is the private property of the city, which cannot be confiscated or taken from the city by eminent domain.

Western Sav. Fund Soc. v. Philadelphia, 31 Pa. 183, 72 Am. Dec. 730; San Francisco Gas Co. v. San Francisco, 9 Cal. 453.

In Middleborough v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 179 Mass. 520, 61 N. E. 107, the supreme judicial court of Massachusetts strongly intimates that an electric-light plant of a municipality cannot be taken without compensation.

To deprive the city of Worcester of the right to have the defendant in error furnish its paving blocks year by year as required is as much confiscation of private property as for the legislature to convert the city hall into a station for the street railway company, or to compel the city to turn over its electric-light plant, if it owns one, to furnish power for the company.

Mr. Bentley W. Warren argued the cause, and, with Mr. Clement R. Lamson, filed a brief for defendant in error:

If the city became the obligee in any contract to which the street railway company was obligor, the rights of the city under the contract were held, not as its private property, but in trust as a governmental agency for the public in general, and were, therefore, subject at all times to the control of the legislature.

South Dakota v. North Carolina, 192 U. S. 286, 318, 48 L. ed. 448, 460, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269; 2 Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. §§ 656, 683; Brimmer v. Boston, 102 Mass. 19; Agawam v. Hampden County, 130 Mass. 528; Freeland v. Hastings, 10 Allen, 570; Rawson v. Spenceer, 113 Mass. 40; Stone v. Charlestown, 114 Mass. 214; Coolidge v. Brookline, 114 Mass. 592; Hill v. Boston, 122 Mass. 344, 23 Am. Rep. 332; Laramie County v. Albany County, 92 U. S. 307, 23 L. ed. 552; Tippecanoe County v. Lucas, 93 U. S. 108, 114, 23 L. ed. 822, 824; New Orleans v. Clark, 95 U. S. 644, 654, 24 L. ed. 521, 522; Meriwether v. Garrett, 102 U. S. 472, 26 L. ed. 197; Prince v. Crocker, 166 Mass. 347, 32 L. R. A. 610, 44 N. E. 446; Browne v. Turner, 176 Mass. 9, 56 N. E. 969; Mt. Hope Cemetery v. Boston, 158

Mass. 509, 35 Am. St. Rep. 515, 33 N. E. 695; East Hartford v. Hartford Bridge Co. 10 How. 511, 13 L. ed. 518; People v. Kerr, 27 N. Y. 188; Clinton v. Cedar Rapids & M. River R. Co. 24 Iowa, 455.

Mr. Justice Peckham, after making the foregoing statement of facts, delivered the opinion of the court:

The defendant in error makes no objection [548] to the form in *which the question to be decided comes before us. Whether one or the other action or proceeding is proper and appropriate need not, therefore, be considered.

The contention on the part of the plaintiff in error is that, by virtue of the restrictions or conditions placed by it upon granting the various extensions of locations of the tracks of the railroad company, and by the acceptance of the same by the company, a contract was entered into between the city and the railroad company, which could not be altered without the consent of both parties; and that as the city had never consented to any alteration of the obligation of the railroad company to make the repairs in the streets, as provided for in those restrictions or conditions, the subsequent legislation contained in the act of 1898 impaired the obligation of that contract, and was therefore void, as a violation of the Constitution of the United States.

In the view we take of this subject it may be assumed, for the purpose of argument, that the city of Worcester had power, under the legislation of the state, to grant the right to extend the location of the railroad company's tracks upon the restrictions or conditions already mentioned. It may also be assumed, but only for the purpose of the argument, that the restrictions or conditions contained in the orders or decrees of the board of aldermen, upon their acceptance by the company, became contracts between the city and the company.

The question then arising is whether the legislature, in the exercise of its general legislative power, could abrogate the provisions of the contract between the city and the railroad company with the assent of the latter, and provide another and a different method for the paving and repairing of the streets through which the tracks of the railroad company were laid under the permit of their extended location. We have no doubt that the legislature of the commonwealth had that power. A municipal corporation is simply a political subdivision of the state, and exists by virtue of the exercise of the power of the state through its legislative department. [549] The *legislature could at any time terminate the existence of the corporation itself, and provide other and different means for the government of the district comprised within the limits of the former city. The city is the creature of the state. East Hartford v. Hartford Bridge Co. 10 How. 511, 533, 534, 13 L. ed. 518, 528.
196 U. S.

As is stated in United States v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 17 Wall. 322, 329, 21 L. ed. 597, 600, a municipal corporation is not only a part of the state, but is a portion of its governmental power. "It is one of its creatures, made for a specific purpose, to exercise within a limited sphere the powers of the state. The state may withdraw these local powers of government at pleasure, and may, through its legislature or other appointed channels, govern the local territory, as it governs the state at large. It may enlarge or contract its powers, or destroy its existence. As a portion of the state, in the exercise of a limited portion of the powers of the state, its revenues, like those of the state, are not subject to taxation."

In New Orleans v. Clark, 95 U. S. 644, 654, 24 L. ed. 521, 522, it was stated by Mr. Justice Field, in delivering the opinion of the court, that—

"A city is only a political subdivision of the state, made for the convenient administration of the government. It is an instrumentality, with powers more or less enlarged, according to the requirements of the public, and which may be increased or repealed at the will of the legislature. In directing, therefore, a particular tax by such corporation, and the appropriation of the proceeds to some special municipal purpose, the legislature only exercises a power through its subordinate agent, which it could exercise directly; and it does this, only in another way, when it directs such corporation to assume and pay a particular claim not legally binding for want of some formality in its creation, but for which the corporation has received an equivalent."

In Laramie County v. Albany County, 92 U. S. 307, 23 L. ed. 552, it was held that public or municipal corporations were but parts of the machinery employed in carrying on the affairs of the state, and that the *charters under which such corporations are [550] created may be changed, modified, or repealed as the exigencies of the public service or the public welfare may demand; that such corporations were composed of all the inhabitants of the territory included in the political organization; and the attribute of individuality is conferred on the entire mass of such residents, and it may be modified or taken away at the mere will of the legislature, according to its own views of public convenience, and without any necessity for the consent of those composing the body politic.

It was said in that case that "public duties are required of counties as well as of towns, as a part of the machinery of the state; and, in order that they may be able to perform those duties, they are vested with certain corporate powers; but their functions are wholly of a public nature, and they are at all times as much subject to the will of the legislature as incorporated towns, as appears by the best text writers upon the subject, and the great weight of judicial authority."

In Tippecanoe County v. Lucas, 93 U. S. 108-114, 23 L. ed. 822-824, the question of the validity of an act of the legislature was presented, and Mr. Justice Field, in delivering the opinion of the court, said:

"Were the transaction one between the state and a private individual, the invalidity of the act would not be a matter of serious doubt. Private property cannot be taken from individuals by the state except for public purposes, and then only upon compensation or by way of taxation; and any enactments to that end would be regarded as an illegitimate and unwarranted exercise of legislative power. . . . But between the state and municipal corporations, such as cities, counties, and towns, the relation is different from that between the state and the individual. Municipal corporations are mere instrumentalities of the state, for the convenient administration of government; and their powers may be qualified, enlarged, or withdrawn at the pleasure of the legislature."

[551] In Mt. Pleasant v. Beekwith, 100 U. S. 514, 25 L. ed. 699, it was held *that, where no constitutional restriction is imposed, the corporate existence and powers of counties, cities, and towns are subject to the legislative control of the state creating them.

In New Orleans v. New Orleans Waterworks Co. 142 U. S. 79, 35 L. ed. 943, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 142, it was also held that a municipal corporation was the mere agent of the state in its governmental character, and was in no contract relations with its sovereign, at whose pleasure its charter may be amended, changed, or revoked without the impairment of any constitutional obligation. It was also therein held that such a corporation, in respect of its private or proprietary rights and interests, might be entitled to constitutional protection. The Massachusetts courts take the same view of such a corporation. Browne v. Turner, 176 Mass. 9, 56 N. E. 969.

Enough cases have been cited to show the nature of a municipal corporation as stated by this court. In general it may be conceded that it can own private property, not of a public or governmental nature, and that such property may be entitled, as is said, "to constitutional protection." Property which is held by these corporations upon conditions or terms contained in a grant, and for a special use, may not be diverted by the legislature. This is asserted in Tippecanoe County v. Lucas, 93 U. S. 115, 23 L. ed. 824, and in Mt. Hope Cemetery v. Boston, 158 Mass. 509, 35 Am. St. Rep. 515, 33 N. E. 695, the supreme court of Massachusetts held that cities might have a private ownership of property which could not be wholly controlled by the state government.

It seems, however, plain to us that the asserted right to demand the continuance of the obligation to pave and repair the streets, as contained in the orders or decrees of the board of aldermen granting to the defendant the right to extend the locations of its tracks on the conditions named, does not amount to property held by the corporation, which the legislature is unable to touch, either by way of limitation or extinguishment. If these restrictions or conditions are to be regarded as a contract, we think the legislature would have the same right to *terminate it, with the consent of the rail-[552] road company, that the city itself would have. These restrictions and conditions were of a public nature, imposed as a means of collecting from the railroad company part, or possibly the whole, of the expenses of paving or repaving the streets in which the tracks were laid, and that method of collection did not become an absolute property right in favor of the city, as against the right of the legislature to alter or abolish it, or substitute some other method with the consent of the company, even though as to the company itself there might be a contract not alterable except with its consent. If this contention of the city were held valid, it would very largely diminish the right of the legislature to deal with its creature in public matters, in a manner which the legislature might regard as for the public welfare. In Springfield v. Springfield Street R. Co. 182 Mass. 41, 64 N. E. 577, this question was before the supreme judicial court of Massachusetts, and the contention of the city, to the same effect as the plaintiff in error contends in this case, was overruled. It was therein held that the city acted in behalf of the public in regard to these extensions of locations, and that the legislature had the right to modify or abrogate the conditions on which the locations in the streets and public ways had been granted, after such conditions had been originally imposed by it. The case at bar was decided at the same time as the Springfield Case (182 Mass. 49, 64 N. E. 581), and the proposition that the legislature had the power to free the company from obligations imposed upon it by the conditions in the grant of the extended locations was adhered to, and the Springfield Case cited as authority for the same. We concur in that view.

There is no force in the contention that the city of Worcester has a proprietary right in the property of the defendant in error, reserved to it under the original statute incorporating the Worcester Horse Railroad Company. Mass. Laws, 1861, chap. 148. These sections simply give the city of Worcester the right, during the continuance of the charter of the corporation, and after the expiration of ten years from the opening of *any part of said road for use, to purchase all its franchises, property, rights, etc. That right is not affected by the legislation in question, even assuming (which we do not for a moment intimate) that the act of 1898 affected the right of the city to make the purchase under the sections above cited.

We see no reason to doubt the validity of the act of 1898, and the judgments of the Supreme Judicial Court and the Superior Court of Massachusetts are, respectively, affirmed.

P. J. FLANIGAN, Petitioner,
v.

COUNTY OF SIERRA.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 553-562.)

Courts—when Federal courts will follow decisions of state courts.

1. The validity, under the state laws, of an ordinance adopted by a board of county supervisors, is settled, so far as the Federal courts are concerned, by a decision of the highest court of that state upholding a similar ordinance.
2. The decisions of the California supreme court that the repeal by Cal. act March 23, 1901, of the authority conferred on county and municipal legislative bodies to license for revenue abates a suit previously brought to recover a license fee imposed under an ordinance which, under the decisions of that court, must be deemed a revenue measure, will be followed by the Federal courts.

[No. 121.]

Argued January 12, 1905. Decided February 20, 1905.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court for the Northern District of California, enforcing a license fee imposed by the board of supervisors of Sierra County, in that State, on the business of raising, grazing, herding, and pasturing sheep. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

See same case below, 58 C. C. A. 340, 122 Fed. 24.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. C. C. Cole argued the cause, and Messrs. Joseph C. Campbell and Thomas H. Breeze filed a brief for petitioner.

Mr. Frank R. Wehe argued the cause, and, with Messrs. C. N. Post and W. J. Redding, filed a brief for respondent.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

This action was brought by respondent against petitioner in the superior court of the county of Sierra, state of California, and removed on his motion to the United States circuit court.

The action was brought to recover the amount of license ordained under an ordinance passed May 31, 1900, by the supervisors of the respondent county, under what is known as "the county government act." Cal. Stat. 1897, chap. 277. The act gave power to the boards of supervisors of counties as follows:

"To license for regulation and revenue, all and every kind of business not prohibited by law, and transacted and carried on in such county, and all shows, exhibitions, and lawful games carried on therein, to fix the rates of license tax upon the same, and to provide for the collection of the same, by suit or otherwise." § 25, subd. 25.

In pursuance of the power conferred the ordinance in controversy was enacted, § 1 of which is as follows:

"Each and every person, copartnership, firm, or corporation engaged in the business of raising, grazing, herding, or pasturing sheep in the county of Sierra, state of California, must annually procure a license therefor from the license collector, and must pay therefor the sum of ten (10) cents for each sheep or lamb owned by, in the possession of, or under the control of such person, copartnership, firm, or corporation, and used in such business in said county."

*Application for a license is required to be made by affidavit, stating the number of sheep owned by and in possession of the applicant. "The license tax," it is provided, "shall be deemed a debt due to the county," which the district attorney of the county is directed to sue for; and a judgment is authorized. In case of recovery by the county, $50 damages and costs must be added to the judgment. All money collected for license, less a fee of 10 per cent for collection, "shall be paid over to the county treasurer, as other moneys are, and be placed to the credit of the general funds of the county." Years, within the meaning of the ordinance, shall commence on the 1st day of January and end on the 31st day of December.

NOTE.—As to state decisions and laws as rules of decision in Federal courts—see notes to Wilson v. Perrin, 11 C. C. A. 71; Hill v. Hite, 29 C. C. A. 553; Griffin v. Overman Wheel Co. 9 C. C. A. 548; Elmendorf v. Taylor, 6 L. ed. 196 U. S. U. S., Book 49.

U. S. 290; Jackson ex dem. St. John v. Chew, 6 L. ed. U. S. 583; United States ex rel. Butz v. Muscatine, 19 L. ed. U. S. 490; Clark v. Graham, 5 L. ed. U. S. 334, and Forepaugh v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 5 L. R. A. 508.

The petitioner, between the 1st of May and the 25th of June, 1900, engaged in the business described in the ordinance, and had in his possession and under his control 25,000 sheep. He failed to apply for a license, and became, it is alleged, indebted to the county for the sum of $2,500, and became further indebted to the sum of $50 by way of damages for his neglect. Payment of both sums was demanded.

Petitioner demurred to the complaint, which, being overruled, and he having declined to answer, judgment was taken against him. It was affirmed by the circuit court of appeals. 58 C. C. A. 340, 122 Fed. 24.

The ordinance was passed on the 31st day of May, 1900, and suit was brought on the 25th day of June of that year. On March 23, 1901, by an amendment to the Political Code of the state of California (Cal. Stat. 1900, 1901, p. 635, § 3366), the authority of the board of supervisors to license for revenue was repealed. The repealing provision is as follows:

"Boards of supervisors of the counties of the state, and the legislative bodies of the incorporated cities and towns therein, shall, in the exercise of their police powers, and for the purpose of regulation, as herein provided, and not otherwise, have power to license all and every kind of business not prohibited by law, and transacted and carried on within the limits of their respective jurisdictions, and all shows, exhibitions, and lawful games carried on therein, to fix the rates of license tax upon the same, and to provide for the collection of the same by suit or otherwise."

It is contended that the ordinance imposing the license was a revenue measure, not a police regulation, and that the law under which it was enacted, having been repealed, the suit abated. And it is also contended that there was no power to pass the ordinance. The latter contention is certainly untenable. Ex parte Mirande, 73 Cal. 365, 14 Pac. 888. The former requires some discussion. There are two parts to it,—the character of the ordinance, as being for revenue or regulation, and the effect of the repeal of the ordinance. Under the authority of the California cases, it must be regarded as a revenue measure. 72 Cal. 387, 14

Pac. 100; 73 Cal. 365, 14 Pac. 888; 119 Cal. 119, 51 Pac. 32; Santa Monica v. Guidinger, 137 Cal. 658, 70 Pac. 732; Sonora v. Curtin, 137 Cal. 583, 70 Pac. 674.

In Merced County v. Helm, 102 Cal. 159, 36 Pac. 399, the court said, distinguishing between the taxing power and the police power, that the latter "is exercised in the enforcement of a penalty prescribed for the noncompliance with the law, or for the doing of some prohibited act." It was provided by the ordinance passed on that the license should be a "debt," payable in advance, and to be collected, in case of nonpayment, by suit. The absence of regulatory provisions has also been held to be an element in determining the character of an ordinance. Santa Monica v. Guidinger, 137 Cal. 658, 70 Pac. 732. The ordinance in controversy in the case at bar was, at least, assumed by the circuit court of appeals to be a revenue measure. This being its character, what was the effect of its repeal? It withdraws the power of collecting the tax, petitioner contends. The court of appeals did not take this view. The court regarded the right of the county as vesting at the date of the imposition of the license, and that the liability of petitioner was so far contractual as to be unaffected by the repeal of the statute giving power to the county to enact the ordinance. We are unable to assent to this view. It is disputable under the authorities, and it is opposed to the decisions of the supreme court of the state of California.

The general rule is that powers derived wholly from a statute are extinguished by its repeal. Sutherland, Stat. Const. § 165. And it follows that no proceedings can be pursued under the repealed statute, though begun before the repeal, unless such proceedings be authorized under a special clause in the repealing act. 9 Bacon, Abr. 226. This doctrine is oftenest illustrated in the repeal of penal provisions of statutes. It has, however, been applied by the supreme court of the state of California to the repeal of the power of counties to enact ordinances for revenue.

Santa Monica v. Guidinger, 137 Cal. 658, 70 Pac. 732, was an action for the recovery of $50 for license imposed under an ordinance of the town "for the license of business carried on in the town . . . for the purpose of regulation and revenue." The defendant was charged with two license taxes for $25 each for the year following the date of the ordinance, that being the annual date established by the ordinance, "for each person acting as agent or solicitor for any laundry without the corporate limits of the town." It was held that the license tax was repealed, and the right of action therefore extinguished, by § 3366 of the Political Code, added thereto by the act of March 23, 1901. This is the same section relied upon in the case at bar. The court said it was clear that the license tax in question was imposed for the purpose of raising revenue, and that the case was therefore substantially similar to that of Sonora v. Curtin, 137 Cal. 583, 70 Pac. 674. The ordinance involved in the latter case contained penal provisions, but they manifestly did not determine the decision. The court observed:

"The right is given by the ordinance to bring a civil suit to recover the amount so made a license tax. The civil remedy was created by the ordinance, and the remedy is repealed by the repeal of the ordinance as [561] to revenue. *In speaking of the rule as to enforcements of rights under repealed statutes, Endlich on the Interpretation of Statutes, § 480, says: 'The same rule applies to rights and remedies founded solely upon statute, and to suits pending to enforce such remedies. If, at the time the statute is repealed, the remedy has not been perfected or the right has not become vested, but still remains executory, they are gone.'"

It is clear that the decision was not based alone on the penal character of the ordinance, but on the broader principle that, the power to enact it having been taken away, the power to enforce it was also taken away. The cases cited by the court illustrate this. Among others, Napa State Hospital v. Flaherty, 134 Cal. 315, 66 Pac. 322, was cited. In that case the right given by a statute of the state to maintain an action against the father of an insane adult son was held to be taken away by the repeal of the statute conferring the right.

But if the ordinance passed on in Sonora v. Curtin was penal, the ordinance involved in the case at bar may be so characterized within the limits of the principle we are now discussing, as applied by the supreme court of the state of California. What it might be under broader considerations, see Huntington v. Attrill, 146 U. S. 657, 36 L. ed. 1123, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224.

That there is a conflict between the supreme court of the state and the circuit court of appeals respondent does not deny. Counsel, however, say the conflict "does not arise out of a construction of a statute of the state," but (we quote the language of counsel) "as to the effect of the new statute, construed by each court to be a repeal of a prior statute, upon the rights of the litigant granted under the prior statute, the circuit court of appeals first assuming, but not deciding, that the ordinance may have been a revenue measure, and the supreme court of California deciding that, in its cases, 196 U. S.

the ordinance was a revenue measure. This question did not involve the construction of the statute; it was merely the determination of a question that depended upon the principle of general law, and not upon a positive statute of the state." The counsel further *say: "In such cases the courts of the United States are not required to follow the decision of state courts." The distinction made by counsel we cannot adopt. Whether a statute of a state is or is not a revenue measure certainly depends upon the construction of that statute. Besides, if in any case we should lean to an agreement with the state court, this is such a case. There is no Federal right involved. The question is one strictly of the state law, and the power of one of the municipalities of the state under that law. If we should yield to the contention of counsel, we should give greater power to one of the municipalities of the state than the law of the state, as construed by the supreme court of the state, would give it. We should enforce against petitioner a tax which the supreme court of the state, construing a state law, would not enforce. The result of the contention indicates its error.

Judgment reversed and cause remanded for further proceedings in conformity with this opinion.

D. E. WHEELER and D. W. Ridenour,
Partners, Doing Business under the Firm
Name and Style of Wheeler & Ridenour, Petitioners,

v.

COUNTY OF PLUMAS.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 562, 563.)

Courts—when Federal courts will follow decisions of state courts.

This case is governed by the decision in Flanagan v. Sierra County, ante, 597.

[No. 122.]

Submitted January 12, 1905. Decided February 20, 1905.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court for the Northern District of California, enforcing a license fee imposed by the board of supervisors of Plumas County, in that State, on the business of raising, grazing, herding, and pasturing sheep. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

See same case below, 58 C. C. A. 683, 122 Fed. 1022.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. J. C. Campbell and C. C. Cole submitted the cause for petitioners. Mr. Thomas H. Breeze was on the brief.

Messrs. U. S. Webb and C. N. Post submitted the cause for respondent. Mr. L. N. Peter was on their brief.

[563] *Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

This case was submitted with Flanigan v. Sierra County, 196 U. S. 553, ante, 597, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 314. It is also an action for the recovery of a sum of $2,100, alleged to be due for license tax, and $50 damages. The taxes were imposed under an ordinance of the county of Plumas, substantially similar to the ordinance passed on in Flanigan v. Sierra County. The action was brought in the superior court of Plumas county, and removed, upon the petition of the petitioners herein, to the circuit court for the northern district of California. In that court petitioners demurred to the complaint, which, being overruled, and they declining to answer, judgment was taken against them by default. It was affirmed by the circuit court of appeals.

The questions are identical with those passed on in Flanigan v. Sierra County, and on the authority of that case the judgment is reversed, and cause remanded for further proceedings.

WILLIAM H. McCaffrey, Edward Quigley, et al., Appts.,
v.

LIZZIE C. MANOGUE, George W. Manogue, and Frank Foley.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 563-573.)

Wills—construction—intention of testator governs—indefinite devise of lands.

The evident intention of a testator to dispose of his whole estate by a will making all his heirs at law devisees, with a special aim at equality among them, particularly evidenced by charging the funeral expenses and the testator's debts upon that devisee who was given a greater quantity of realty than the others, prevents the application of the rule that devises of land without words of limitation or description pass nothing but a life estate.

[No. 131.]

Argued January 17, 18, 1905. Decided February 20, 1905.

A PPEAL from the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Supreme Court of that District, construing a will as devising life estates only. Reversed and remanded with directions to reverse the decree of the Supreme Court, and to remand the cause to that court for the entry of a decree in accordance with this opinion.

See same case below, 22 App. D. C. 385.

Statement by Mr. Justice McKenna:

*The question involved in this case is the [564] construction of the will of Hugh McCaffrey, deceased. It was duly admitted to probate, and recorded in the supreme court of the District. It is as follows:

Washington, District of Columbia,
April Thirtieth, 1896.

In the name of God, being now in good health and sound in mind and body I hereby certify and declare this to be my last will and testament, hereby annulling and revoking any and all wills previously made.

I give and bequeath to my daughter Mary A. Quigley house number 301 at southwest corner of 11th and C streets southeast, being in lot number 5 in square 970, with the store and dwelling, stock and fixtures, and lot on which it stands, also houses numbers 13 and 15 6th street southeast with lots on which they stand, being parts of lots 19 and 20 in square 841, also any money in bank to my account at the time of my death, also any money due to me, also any building association stock. She is to pay funeral expencies and any other legal debts I may owe, also to care for my lot in Mount Olivet cemetery.

I give and bequeath to my son, James B. McCaffrey, house number six hundred and two (602) East Capitol street and lot on which it stands, being in lot number ten (10) in square number eight hundred and sixty-eight (868).

To my son, William H. McCaffrey, I give and bequeath house 604 East Capitol street, being in lot number ten (10), in square number eight hundred and sixty-eight (868) and lot on which it stands.

To my daughter, Lizzie Manogue, I give and bequeath house number fourteen hundred and twenty-three (1423) Corcoran street, N. W., and lot on which it stands, being lot number fifty-four (54) in square number two hundred and eight (208).

2. To my son, Francis T. McCaffrey, I give and bequeath house five hundred and nineteen (519) East Capitol street, and *lot on [565] which it stands, being part of lot number NOTE.—On the effect of an indefinite devise of lands—see note to King v. Ackerman, 17 L. ed. U. S. 292.

As to how far the intention of a testator is to govern in the construction of a will—see 600

notes to Pray v. Belt, 7 L. ed. U. S. 309; Dougherty v. Rogers, 3 L. R. A. 847; Boston Safe Deposit & T. Co. v. Coffin, 8 L. R. A. 740; Davidson v. Coon, 9 L. R. A. 587; and Masterson v. Townshend, 10 L. R. A. 816.

(20) in square eight hundred and forty-one (841), also my horse and buggy.

And to my grandson, Frank Foley, I give and bequeath house number one hundred and twenty-one (121) Eleventh street, S. E., being in lot number fourteen (14), square number nine hundred and sixty-eight (968), and lot on which it stands.

To my grandson Joseph Quigley, I give and bequeath my watch and chain.

I hereby name and appoint as executors of this my last will and testament, John E. Herrell and Patrick Maloney.

All the real estate herein described is located in the city of Washington, District of Columbia.

Hugh McCaffrey. [Seal.]

The devisees in the will were the only heirs of the testator.

On the 10th of July, 1897, Mary A. Quigley died, leaving surviving four children, the appellants Catherine L., Margaret, Mary, and Joseph Quigley. Edward Quigley, her husband, also an appellant, survived her. She left a will, which was duly admitted to record, by which she devised all her estate to Catherine L. and Edward Quigley, in trust for her children. Francis T. McCaffrey, son of Hugh, and one of the devisees in the latter's will, died October 20, 1898, leaving as heirs at law his brothers and sisters, the children of his deceased sister, Mary A. Quigley, and his nephew, Frank Foley. He left a will, by which he devised and bequeathed all of the property to his sister, Lizzie C. Manogue, and his brothers William A. and James B. McCaffrey, "absolutely and in fee simple, according to the nature of the property, as tenants in common, but not as joint tenants." At the time of his death he was seised and possessed of the real estate devised to him by his father.

James B. McCaffrey has sold and conveyed the lot devised to him to the respondent George W. Manogue. Upon an attempt to sell the property devised by Francis T. McCaffrey, a doubt was raised as to the extent [566] of the interest devised to him *and the other devisees by the will of H. McCaffrey,—whether an estate for life or in fee simple. This suit was brought "to have it determined what estate each of the said devisees took thereby, and to have their title quieted as against any person or persons who may claim adversely to the same as heirs of said Hugh McCaffrey, or under such heirs."

It was decreed by the trial court that only life estates were devised by the will, and the decree was affirmed by the court of appeals. 22 App. D. C. 385.

Messrs. Arthur A. Birney and O. B. Hallam argued the cause, and, with Mr. 196 U. S.

Henry F. Woodard, filed a brief for appellants:

A devisee who takes a piece of land subject to any payment, however small, gets a fee simple notwithstanding the omission of words of inheritance.

Collier's Case, 6 Coke, 16; King v. Ackerman, 2 Black, 408, 17 L. ed. 292; Doe ex dem. Willey v. Holmes, 8 T. R. 1; Goodtitle v. Maddern, 4 East, 500; Doe v. Clarke, 8 New Rep. 349; Roe v. Daw, 3 Maule & S. 522; Baddeley v. Leppingwell, Wilmot's Notes, 235; Barber v. Pittsburgh, Ft. W. & C. R. Co. 166 U. S. 109, 41 L. ed. 936, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 488; Wilkins v. Allen, 18 How. 385, 15 L. ed. 396; West v. Fitz, 109 Ill. 438; 3 Powell, Devises, 379; 3 Jarman, Wills, 23.

Every testator in the making of his will is supposed to intend to dispose of his entire estate, and the presumption is against his intention to die intestate as to any part of it, unless such intention is plainly expressed or necessarily implied.

Kennedy v. Alexander, 21 App. D. C. 424; Hardenbergh v. Ray, 151 U. S. 112, 38 L. ed. 93, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 305.

In case of a mixed devise and bequest in the same clause, the condition or charge shall be held to relate to the realty as well as to the personalty, regardless of the order in which they are enumerated, and regardless of the value of the personalty.

Doe ex dem. Willey v. Holmes, 8 T. R. 1; Abbott v. Essex Co. 18 How. 202, 15 L. ed. 352.

Where, from the fact of such condition in one of several devises, it is manifest that the testator intended to pass a fee in such devise, the fact that in the others he has used similar terms (although without attaching conditions) will, in the absence of words of contrary import, establish a like intent in those other devises, and the beneficiaries will take in fee.

Cook v. Holmes, 11 Mass. 529; Butler v. Butler, 2 Mackey, 96; White v. Crenshaw, 5 Mackey, 113, 60 Am. Rep. 370; King v. Ackerman, 2 Black, 408, 17 L. ed. 292.

Messrs. Edwin Forrest and A. A. Hoehling, Jr., argued the cause and filed a brief for appellees:

A devise without words of limitation or inheritance passes only a life estate. And this is so notwithstanding the testator, in the will, may have declared an intention to dispose of his whole estate.

2 Jarman, Wills, p. 267; Wright v. Denn, 10 Wheat. 204, 236, 237; 6 L. ed. 303, 311.

The devise to Mary A. Quigley cannot be enlarged, by legal implication, to a fee.

Wright v. Denn, 10 Wheat. 204, 236, 237, 6 L. ed. 303, 311; Jackson ex dem. Harris v. Harris, 8 Johns. 142; Burlingham v. Beld- ing, 21 Wend. 463; Den ex dem. Moor v. Mellor, 5 T. R. 284.

Even if the Quigley devise is so enlarged, the other devises in the will are not aided thereby.

Mr. Justice McKenna, after stating the case, delivered the opinion of the court:

It will be observed that the devises are expressed in exactly the same way. To Mary A. Quigley, however, there are given several pieces of real estate, the money of the testator in bank, and his building association stock. She is charged with the payment of the testator's funeral expenses and debts; also with the care of his cemetery lot. Nevertheless, neither of the lower courts distinguished between the devisees,—to all was applied the rule of law that a devise of land, without words of limitation or description, gives a life estate only. The court of appeals held that the charge or burden upon Mary A. Quigley to pay the funeral expenses and debts of the testator was offset by the gift to her of personal property. It is insisted that the ruling is contrary to the decision in King v. Ackerman, 2 Black, 408, 17 L. ed. 292. It is there said: "The rule of law which gives a fee where the devisee is charged with a sum of money is a technical dominant rule, and intended to defeat the effect" of the artificial rule established in favor of the heir at law, that an indefinite devise of land passes nothing but a life estate. It was, however, apparent to the court of appeals that to follow King v. Ackerman would not execute the intention of the testator by opposing one technical rule by another, but would discriminate between his heirs, and destroy the equality between them which it was the purpose of the will to create. To effect this equality the court selected not the "dominant rule," whose virtue this court pointed out, but the other, regarding it the most commanding. It is altogether a strange tangle of technicalities. Apply either of them or [569] both *of them, and we defeat the intention of the testator. Are we reduced to this dilemma? We think not; nor need we dispute the full strength of the rule in favor of the heir at law. It is not an unyielding declaration of law. It cannot be applied when the intention of the testator is made plain. It cannot be applied when the purpose of the testator, as seen in the will, cannot be carried out by a devise of a less estate than the fee. Bell County v. Alexander, 22 Tex. 350, 73 Am. Dec. 268. The policy of the law in favor of the heir yields, we repeat, to the intention of a testator if clearly expressed or manifested. That policy, the reason for it and the elements of it, is expressed strongly by

602

Mr. Justice Story in Wright v. Denn, 10 Wheat. 204, 227, 228, 6 L. ed. 303, 309:

"Where there are no words of limitation to a devise, the general rule of law is that the devisee takes an estate for life only, unless, from the language there used or from other parts of the will, there is a plain intention; because if it be doubtful or conjectural upon the terms of the will, or if full legal effect can be given to the language without such an estate, the general rule prevails. It is not sufficient that the court may entertain a private belief that the testator intended a fee; it must see that he has expressed that intention with reasonable certainty on the face of his will. For the law will not suffer the heir to be disinherited upon conjecture. He is favored by its policy; and though the testator may disinherit him, yet the law will execute that intention only when it is put in a clear and unambiguous shape." (Italics ours.)

We think the intention of McCaffrey is "put in a clear and unambiguous shape." He intended to dispose of his whole estate. It is true there is no introductory clause expressing such intention, but there is no residuary clause indicating that he intended to pass less than all of his estate. And all of his heirs at law were his devisees. In other words, the very heirs for whom the rule is invoked are those among whom he distributed his property, and surely he intended a *com-[570] plete distribution,—to vest in each the largest interest he could give, not assigning life estates with residuary fees to the very persons to whom such life estates were devised. In other words, making each heir the successor of the other and of himself. It was evident to the court of appeals—it is evident to us—that he intended to make his heirs equal. Of this purpose the charge upon his daughter, Mary A. Quigley, is dominantly significant, not only in effect, but in its expression. She is given a greater quantity of real estate than the other devisees. She is given personal property besides; "But," declared the testator, "she is to pay funeral expenses and other legal debts I may owe, also to care for my lot in Mount Olivet Cemetery." That charge was not intended to enlarge the quantity of interest in the real estate devised in the sense contended for, but to make an equality between her and the other heirs and devisees, and, we repeat, that was his especial purpose. In other words, he gave her more property, not a larger interest in it. The devise to his grandson, Frank Foley, shows how carefully the testator regarded his heirs. Surely, as he regarded that grandchild as inheriting the rights which his mother might have inherited, he did not intend a disposition of his property which precluded his other grandchildren of inheriting through their parents. And this will be the result if the appellees are right. No devisee possesses an estate which can be devised to or inherited by his or her children.

Against the effect of the heirs at law of the testator being also his devisees, it may be said that it has been held that, though a testator has given a nominal legacy to his heir, or declared an intention to wholly disinherit him, the inflexibility of the rule in favor of the heir has been enforced. Frogmorton ex dem. Wright v. Wright, 2 W. Bl. 889; Roe ex dem. Callow v. Bolton, 2 W. Bl. 1045; Right v. Sidebotham, 2 Dougl. K. B. 59; Roe ex dem. Peter v. Daw, 3 Maule & S. 518.

In Right v. Sidebotham, Lord Mansfield felt himself constrained to enforce the rule, [571] but he observed in protest: "I *verily believe that, in almost every case where by law a general devise of lands is reduced to an estate for life, the intent of the testator is thwarted; for ordinary people do not distinguish between real and personal property. The rule of law, however, is established and certain, that express words of limitation or words tantamount are necessary to pass an estate of inheritance." And he hence concluded that words tending to disinherit the heir at law, unless the estate is given to someone else, were not sufficient to prevent the heir from taking.

Lord Ellenborough, in Roe ex dem. Peter v. Daw, followed the rule, and declared also that he thereby probably defeated the intention of the testator. It is a strange conclusion from the facts, and needs the sanction of those great names to rescue it from even stronger characterization. Lord Mansfield spoke in 1781, Lord Ellenborough in 1815. We cannot believe, if called upon to interpret a will made in 1896, when the rights of heirs are not so insistent, and the rule in their favor lingers, where it lingers at all, almost an anachronism,—when ownership of real property is usually in fee, and when men's thoughts and speech and dealings are with the fee,—they would hold that the purpose of a testator to disinherit his heirs could be translated into a remainder in fee after a devise of a life estate to another.

But, perhaps, even the severe technicality of those cases need not be questioned. In the construction of wills we are not required to adhere rigidly to precedents. We said in Abbott v. Essex Co. 18 How. 202, 213, 15 L. ed. 352, 355:

"If wills were always drawn by counsel learned in the law, it would be highly proper that courts should rigidly adhere to precedents, because every such instrument might justly be presumed to have been drawn with reference to them. But in a country where, from necessity or choice, every man acts as his own scrivener, his will is subject to be perverted by the application of rules of construction of which he was wholly ignorant."

To like effect is Cook v. Holmes, 11 Mass. 528, where the will passed on contained the following devise: *"Item. To his grandson [572] Gregory C., only child of his son Daniel C., deceased, a certain piece of land in Watertown, containing about 6 acres." The will contained devises to other sons of pieces of real estate, charging them with payment of certain legacies. The will concluded as follows: "The above-described legacies, together with what I have heretofore done for my children and grandchildren, make them nearly equal, and are their full portions of my estate."

The will, therefore, is similar to the will in the case at bar. Equality between the devisees is as much the purpose of one as the other, though it is expressed in one and deduced as an implication in the other. Chief Justice Parker, in delivering the opinion of the court said: "The quality of the estate which Gregory C. took by the devise must be determined by the words of the will, taken together, and receiving a liberal construction, to effectuate the intention of the testator as manifested in the will."

Further: "The words of the particular devise to Gregory, considered by themselves, certainly give no inheritance." And stating the rule of law to be, as contrasted with the popular understanding, "that such a devise, standing alone, without any aid in the construction from other parts of the will, would amount only to an estate for life in the devisee," added:

"But it is too well established and known to require argument or authorities now to support the position that devises and legacies in a will may receive a character, by construction and comparison with other legacies and devises in the same will, different from the literal and direct effect of the words made use of in such devise; [cases were cited in note] and this because the sole duty of the court in giving a construction is to ascertain the real intent and meaning of the testator, which can better be gathered by adverting to the whole scope of the provisions made by him for the objects of his bounty than by confining their attention to one isolated paragraph, probably drawn up without a knowledge of technical words, or without recollecting the advantage of using them."

*The devise to Gregory C. was held to be [573] of the fee.

From these views it follows that the decree of the Court of Appeals must be, and it is, reversed, and the case is remanded to that court with directions to reverse the decree of the Supreme Court, and remand the case to that court, with directions to enter a decree in accordance with this opinion.

Mr. Justice Peckham dissents.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

v.

MONTANA LUMBER & MANUFACTURING COMPANY, The Northern Pacific Railway Company, et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 573-578.)

Public lands—railroad land grants—removal of timber from unsurveyed land—evidence—private survey inadmissible to identify odd-numbered sections.

1. Until identification by government survey of the even and odd-numbered sections of the land within the limits of the grant of the odd-numbered sections on each side of the line of the Northern Pacific Railroad, made by the act of July 2, 1864 (13 Stat. at L. 367, chap. 217), the United States has such a property in the timber growing thereon as enables it to recover the value of the timber cut and removed by the railroad company or its grantees.
2. A private survey is inadmissible in evidence in an action by the United States to recover the value of timber cut from unsurveyed lands, to show that, when surveyed, the land will be an odd-numbered section, and therefore included in the grant to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, by the act of July 2, 1864 (13 Stat. at L. 367, chap. 217), of the odd-numbered sections on each side of the line of the railroad.

[No. 125.]

Argued January 12, 13, 1905. Decided February 20, 1905.

ON A CERTIFICATE from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit, presenting questions respecting the right of the United States to recover the value of timber cut from unsurveyed land which appeared, by a private survey, to be an odd-numbered section within the limits of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company's land grant. Answered by holding that, until identification by government survey, the United States has a sufficient property right to support the action, and that a private survey was inadmissible in evidence to identify the land as an odd-numbered section.

Statement by Mr. Justice McKenna:
Action by the United States against the

NOTE.—As to land grants to railroads—see note to Kansas P. R. Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 28 L. ed. U. S. 794.

Montana Lumber Company and the other defendants for the recovery of $15,000, for the value of 2,000,000 feet of lumber which had been cut by the lumber company on unsurveyed lands within the district of Montana, and converted by the defendants to their own use. It is alleged that the land from which the lumber was cut when surveyed will be in township 26 N., of range 34 W., of the Montana meridian. The railway company answered separately, denying the allegations of the complaint. The other defendants also denied the allegations of the complaint. Further answering, they admitted the cutting of the lumber, but alleged it was cut from land which, when surveyed, would be section 5 of said township, and that said section was within the limits of the grant made by Congress to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, and that the lumber company was, at the time of the cutting, the owner of the lands by conveyances from the railway company.

The case was tried to a jury. A nonsuit was granted as to the railway company. Under instructions of the court a verdict was returned for the other defendants.

On the trial of the case the lumber company was permitted to introduce in evidence, over the objection of the plaintiff, a private survey of a portion of the township, made by one John J. Ashley, a civil engineer and surveyor, in the year 1886, for the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, for the purpose of ascertaining the location of the railroad sections contained in said township, in connection with other evidence that the timber sued for was taken from what Ashley had designated as section 5.

In rebuttal of this evidence the plaintiff offered to prove by George F. Rigby, a surveyor and engineer, that he had made a survey of the same lands, and that the Ashley survey was incorrect, and that section 5, as located by Ashley, had been placed three fourths of a mile too far east. The court ruled out the testimony. From the judgment entered upon the verdict for the defendants the case was taken by writ of error to the circuit court of appeals. Whereupon the latter court stated the facts substantially as above, and recited that there were two other cases pending involving the same questions, and that the court was divided in opinion, and certified to this court the following questions:

*"First. Did the district court for the district of Montana err in admitting in evidence the proof of the survey made by Ashley and the proof tending to show that the timber cut by the Montana Lumber & Manufacturing Company had been cut on what will be, when surveyed by the United States, section 5 of township 26 north, of range 34 west, Montana meridian?

"Second. Did the court err in excluding the evidence offered on behalf of the plaintiff in error, tending to show that the Ashley survey was erroneous?

"Third. Did the court err in instructing the jury to return a verdict for the defendants in error on the ground that the United States had failed to prove its ownership of the land from which the timber was cut?"

Mr. Marsden C. Burch argued the cause, and, with Solicitor General Hoyt, filed a brief for the United States.

No counsel opposed.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

In the view we take of the case the answer to the second question becomes unnecessary. The answer to the first and third depends upon the effect of the grant to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company by the act of July 2, 1864 [13 Stat. at L. 367, chap. 217].

[577] *The 3d section of that act contains the usual granting words: "That there be, and hereby is, granted to the 'Northern Pacific Railroad Company,' its successors and assigns," every alternate section of public land, not mineral, designated by odd numbers, on each side of the line of the railroad when definitely fixed.

It has been decided many times that such grants are in præsentia, and take effect upon the sections of the land when the road is definitely located, by relation as to the date of the grant. But the survey of the land is reserved to the government (§ 6); in other words, the identification of the sections—whether odd or even—is reserved to the government; and by the act of July 15, 1870 [16 Stat. at L. 291, chap. 292], making appropriations for the sundry civil expenses of the government for the year ending June 30, 1871, it was provided, in regard to the grant to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, that the cost of surveying must be paid by the company, and no conveyance should be made of the lands until such cost be paid. On account of that provision it was held in Northern P. R. Co. v. Traill County (Northern P. R. Co. v. Rockne), 115 U. S. 600, 29 L. ed. 477, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 201, that the land of a railroad company was not subject to taxation. It was said, "to secure the payment of those expenses, it (the government) decided to retain the legal title in its own hands until they were paid." See also New Orleans P. R. Co. v. United States, 124 U. S. 124, 31 L. ed. 383, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 417. The equitable title becomes a legal title only upon the identification of the granted sections. Deseret Salt Co. v. Tar- pey, 142 U. S. 241, 35 L. ed. 999, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 158. As expressed in Leavenworth, L. & G. R. Co. v. United States, 92 U. S. 733-741, 23 L. ed. 634-637, "they" (the words "there be and is hereby granted") "vest a present title, . . . though a survey of the lands and a location of the road are necessary to give precision to it, and attach it to any particular tract." The right of survey is in the United States. It was error, therefore, in the trial court to admit the survey made by Ashley. It was also error to instruct the jury to return a verdict for the defendants. Until the identification of the even and odd-numbered sections the *United States retained a special [578] property, at least, in the timber growing in the township; and this was sufficient to enable it to recover the value of the timber cut and removed by the defendants. A contrary conclusion would impair the government's right of survey, and force it into controversies over surveys made by the railroad or its grantees. It would enable the railroad company or its grantees to despoil the lands of their timber, and leave them denuded, and, maybe, worthless, to the government. Indeed, it would reverse the statutory grant of powers, and transfer the location of the sections from the government to the railroad company. The extent and the effect of the power of the government to make its own surveys is expressed and illustrated in the following cases. Maguire v. Tyler, 8 Wall. 650, 19 L. ed. 320; Cragin v. Powell, 128 U. S. 691, 32 L. ed. 566, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 203; United States v. McLaughlin, 127 U. S. 428, 32 L. ed. 213, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1177; Blake v. Doherty, 5 Wheat. 359, 5 L. ed. 109; Central P. R. Co. v. Nevada, 162 U. S. 525, 40 L. ed. 1061, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 885; United States v. Hanson, 16 Pct. Rep. 196, 10 L. ed. 935; Les Bois v. Bramell, 4 How. 449, 11 L. ed. 1051; Mackay v. Dillon, 4 How. 448, 11 L. ed. 1050; Glenn v. United States, 13 How. 256, 14 L. ed. 135; Smith v. United States, 10 Pet. 326, 9 L. ed. 442.

There is nothing in Northern P. R. Co. v. Hussey, 9 C. C. A. 463, 15 U. S. App. 391, 61 Fed. 231, which militates with these views. In that case relief was granted by injunction against a trespasser upon unsurveyed land at the suit of the railway company, its contingent interest being held sufficient for that purpose. The paramount control and property in the United States was not in question.

We, therefore, answer the first and the third question certified by the Circuit Court of Appeals in the affirmative.

Mr. Justice Brewer concurs in the result.

[579] *BERTHA DOCTOR and Katherine Sayles, Appts.,
v.

JOHN J. HARRINGTON, Dennis A. Harrington, Sol Sayles Company, and Sayles, Zahn Company.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 579-589.)

Courts — jurisdiction of Federal circuit court—diversity of citizenship.

1. The presumption that the stockholders of a corporation are citizens of the state which created it does not preclude them from asserting their actual citizenship to sustain the jurisdiction of a Federal circuit court of a suit brought by them as such stockholders.
2. The fact that the ultimate interest of a corporate defendant may be the same as that of the complaining stockholders does not require, in arranging the parties to a cause, for the purpose of determining the jurisdiction of a Federal circuit court, invoked on the ground of diversity of citizenship, that such corporation be grouped on the side of complainants, where the bill alleges that the corporation is under a control antagonistic to complainants, and is made to act in a way detrimental to their rights.

[No. 477.]

Submitted January 25, 1905. Decided February 20, 1905.

A PPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York to review the dismissal, for lack of the requisite diversity of citizenship, of a suit brought by some of the stockholders of a corporation, in which the corporation is made a party defendant. Reversed.

Statement by Mr. Justice McKenna:

The bill in this case was dismissed by the circuit court on the ground that it had no jurisdiction upon the fact alleged, and certified to this court the question of jurisdiction. The following is the question certified.

"Whether or not the complainants' bill of complaint showed that there was such diversity of citizenship between the parties complainant and parties defendant in this cause as would be sufficient, under the provisions of the United States Revised Statutes, to confer jurisdiction upon the United States circuit court for the southern district of New York, of this cause."

The court further certified that it entered a decree dismissing the bill, "holding that it appeared from the said bill of complaint that there was no such diversity of citizenship between the parties complainant and defendant as would confer *jurisdiction up-[580] on the United States circuit court for the southern district of New York in the cause within the meaning of the United States Revised Statutes, and that, in arranging the parties to this cause relatively to the controversy, the Sol Sayles Company must be grouped on the side of the complainants, with the result that citizens of the same state would thus be parties on both sides of the litigation, and thus deprive this court of jurisdiction."

The bill is very voluminous, and, as it is agreed by appellees that the statement of appellants substantially states its allegation, we quote from appellants' brief as follows:

"This action was brought by the appellants, as stockholders of the Sol Sayles Company, a corporation organized under the laws of the state of New York, for the purpose of vacating and setting aside a judgment obtained by the appellees Harrington against the Sol Sayles Company in the supreme court of the state of New York, on October 28, 1902, and the levy and sale under an execution issued thereunder, and of requiring the appellees Harrington to deliver to the Sol Sayles Company certain shares of stock in the Sayles, Zahn Company, and certain bonds, belonging to the Sol Sayles Company, which had been sold under such execution, and for other equitable relief.

"In substance, the complainants allege in their bill of complaint that they are citizens of Morris county, New Jersey; that the defendants Harrington are citizens of the state of New York, and that the defendants Sol Sayles Company and Sayles, Zahn Company are likewise citizens of said state, both being incorporated under the laws of that state; that the Sol Sayles Company was organized with a capital stock of $100,000, divided into 1,000 shares of the par value of $100 per share, of which the complainants owned 500 shares and the defendants Harrington 500 shares; that, by an arrangement made between the owners of the stock, the voting power on a majority thereof was given to the defendant John J. Harrington, who directed the management of the affairs of the corporation, dictated its *policy, and[581]

NOTE.—As to the residence or citizenship of corporations for the purpose of Federal jurisdiction in a state other than that of incorporation—see note to Stephens v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. 14 L. R. A. 184.

As to diverse citizenship as ground of Federal jurisdiction—see Shipp v. Williams, 10 C. C. A.

247, and note; Mason v. Duliagh, 27 C. C. A. 296, and note; Seddon v. Virginia T. & C. Steel & I. Co. 1 L. R. A. 108, and note; and Myers v. Murray, N. & Co. 11 L. R. A. 216, and note. And see note to Roberts v. Lewis, 36 L. ed. U. S. 579.

selected its directors; that on January 26, 1898, the defendant John J. Harrington caused the defendant Sayles, Zahn Company to be organized, for the purpose of taking over the business of the defendant Sol Sayles Company and of one Henry Zahn, and thereupon the property of the Sol Sayles Company and of Zahn were transferred to the Sayles, Zahn Company, which likewise was controlled by the defendant John J. Harrington; that the Sol Sayles Company received, in consideration of the transfer of its property, $50,000 of the capital stock of the Sayles, Zahn Company, and subsequently subscribed for $50,000 additional stock.

"It is further alleged that about February 1, 1899, the defendants Harrington, for the purpose of cheating and defrauding the Sol Sayles Company and the complainants of their interest in the assets of the Sayles, Zahn Company, fraudulently caused the Sol Sayles Company to execute and deliver to them, without any consideration whatsoever, its promissory notes, aggregating $23,700, which were utterly fictitious, and thereafter, and on October 3, 1902, the defendants Harrington, in furtherance of their fraudulent scheme, caused an action to be instituted, and a judgment to be recovered against the Sol Sayles Company, for the amount of the said promissory notes and interest which was alleged to have accrued thereon, the Sol Sayles Company being in utter ignorance of the nature of the action, and omitting to interpose any defense thereto.

"This scheme resulted in the recovery of a judgment against the defendant Sol Sayles Company on October 28, 1902, for $27,357 28, in favor of the defendants Harrington, who thereupon caused an execution to be issued to the sheriff of the county of New York, against the property and assets of the Sol Sayles Company, under which execution the said sheriff levied on the shares of stock in the Sayles, Zahn Company, and also two bonds of the New Jersey Steamboat Company, which belonged to the Sol Sayles Company, and sold all of the right, title, and interest of the Sol Sayles Company in the said certificates of stock and in the said [582] bonds, the said defendants *Harrington causing them to be purchased for their own benefit; said shares of stock being then, as the defendants Harrington well knew, and have ever since continued to be, worth upwards of $200,000.

"It further alleged that the complainants caused a demand to be made upon the defendants Harrington, that they transfer the said shares of stock and the said bonds to the Sol Sayles Company, but that they have refused to do so, and have insisted that these shares of stock and bonds are their personal and individual property, and that neither the Sol Sayles Company nor their complainants have any right, title, or interest in either the said shares of stock or the said bonds, or any part thereof.

"The twentieth paragraph of the bill of complaint is as follows:

"The complainants were and each of them was a shareholder of the defendant Sol Sayles Company at the time of the transactions herein complained of. This suit is not a collusive one to confer upon a court of the United States jurisdiction of a case of which it would not otherwise have cognizance. The complainants are unable to secure any corporate action on the part of the defendant Sol Sayles Company to redress the wrongs hereinbefore set forth, nor are they able to obtain any redress at the hands of the stockholders of the said defendant Sol Sayles Company. The board of directors of said corporation is under the absolute control and domination of the defendant John J. Harrington, and the said Harrington, by reason of having possession of a majority of the capital stock of the said corporation likewise controls the action of the stockholders. Although requested for information with regard to the facts hereinbefore set forth, he has refused to give any information with regard thereto, and has declined to redress the wrongs of which complaint is herein made, or to give to the complainants any opportunity to lay before the board of directors or the stockholders of the defendant Sol Sayles Company the facts herein set forth."

Mr. Charles A. Hess submitted the cause for appellants:

This court has entertained jurisdiction in numerous instances where precisely the same state of facts existed as in the present case.

Dodge v. Woolsey, 18 How. 331, 15 L. ed. 401; Hawes v. Oakland (Hawes v. Contra Costa Water Co.) 104 U. S. 450, 26 L. ed. 827; Quincy v. Steel, 120 U. S. 241, 30 L. ed. 624, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 520; Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 157 U. S. 429, 39 L. ed. 759, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673; Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. (Cotting v. Godard) 183 U. S. 79, 46 L. ed. 92, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30. See also Utah-Nevada Co. v. De Lamar, 133 Fed. 113.

Even though the complainants are seeking to maintain this action in the right of the Sol Sayles Company, in view of the trend of authority that fact is not entitled to weight as against the circumstance that the Sol Sayles Company is in fact a defendant.

De Neufville v. New York & N. R. Co. 26 C. C. A. 306, 51 U. S. App. 374, 81 Fed. 10.

Mr. Philip J. Britt submitted the cause for appellees. Mr. John J. Adams was on his brief:

The action is brought in the right of the corporation.

Davenport v. Dows, 18 Wall. 626, 21 L. ed. 938; Dewing v. Perdicaries, 96 U. S. 197, 34 L. ed. 656; Porter v. Sabin, 149 U. S. 473, 37 L. ed. 815, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1008; Dickerman v. Northern Trust Co. 176 U. S. 188, 44 L. ed. 423, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 311; Alexander v. Donohoe, 143 N. Y. 203, 38 N. E. 263; Flynn v. Brooklyn City R. Co. 158 N. Y. 493, 53 N. E. 520.

There are two classes of stockholders' actions. In the one class we find those actions in which the injury has been done to the stockholder directly, and he sues in his own right for the damages sustained by him; in the other class of cases the injury is done to the corporation, and the stockholder, if he can sue at all, must sue, not in his own behalf, but in behalf of the corporation.

Niles v. New York, C. & H. R. R. Co. 176 N. Y. 119, 68 N. E. 142; Smith v. Hurd, 12 Met. 371, 46 Am. Dec. 690; Allen v. Curtis, 26 Conn. 456.

Jurisdiction in the Federal courts over a corporation depends upon its status, which in turn is dependent upon the state of its original incorporation, and upon the conclusive, irrebuttable presumption of law that all of the members of the corporation—that is, all of its stockholders—are citizens of the state in which the corporation was organized.

Bank of United States v. Deveaux, 5 Cranch, 61, 3 L. ed. 38; Hopc Ins. Co. v. Boardman, 5 Cranch, 57, 3 L. ed. 36; Sullivan v. Fulton S. B. Co. 6 Wheat. 450, 5 L. ed. 302; Breithaupt v. Bank of Georgia, 1 Pet. 238, 7 L. ed. 127; Commercial & R. Bank v. Slocomb, 14 Pet. 60, 10 L. ed. 354; Marshall v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 16 How. 314, 14 L. ed. 953; Covington Drawbridge Co. v. Shepherd, 20 How. 227, 233, 15 L. ed. 896, 898; Ohio & M. R. Co. v. Wheeler, 1 Black, 286, 296, 17 L. ed. 130, 133; Muller v. Dows, 94 U. S. 444, 24 L. ed. 207; National S. S. Co. v. Tugman, 106 U. S. 118, 121, 27 L. ed. 87, 88, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 58; Memphis & C. R. Co. v. Alabama, 107 U. S. 581, 27 L. ed. 518, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 432; Shaw v. Quincy Min. Co. 145 U. S. 444, 451, 36 L. ed. 768, 772, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 935; St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. James, 161 U. S. 545, 562, 40 L. ed. 802, 808, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 621; Barrow S. S. Co. v. Kane, 170 U. S. 100, 42 L. ed. 964, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 526; Great Southern Fire Proof Hotel Co. v. Jones, 177 U. S. 456, 44 L. ed. 845, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 690; Taylor v. Illinois C. R. Co. 89 Fed. 119; Thomas v. Ohio State University, 195 U. S. 207, ante, 160, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 24;

Louisville, C. & C. R. Co. v. Letson, 2 How. 497, 558, 11 L. ed. 353, 378.

This suit being a derivative one in which the complainants are suing solely for the benefit of the Sol Sayles Company, a New York corporation, that corporation, although in form a defendant, is, in legal effect, on the same side of the controversy as the complainants; and, since it is a citizen of the same state as the remaining defendants, the Federal courts have no jurisdiction, as the suit does not involve a controversy between citizens of different states.

Arapahoe County v. Kansas P. R. Co. 4 Dill. 277, Fed. Cas. No. 502; Walden v. Skinner, 101 U. S. 589, 25 L. ed. 967; Removal Cases (Meyer v. Delaware R. Constr. Co.) 100 U. S. 457, 25 L. ed. 593; Pacific R. Co. v. Ketchum, 101 U. S. 289, 25 L. ed. 932; Harter Twp. v. Kernochan, 103 U. S. 562, 26 L. ed. 411; Evers v. Watson, 156 U. S. 532, 39 L. ed. 522, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 430; Brown v. Trousdale, 138 U. S. 389, 395, 34 L. ed. 987, 990, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 308; Merchants' Cotton Press & Storage Co. v. Insurance Co. of N. A. 151 U. S. 385, 38 L. ed. 204, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 499, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 367; Wilson v. Oswego Twp. 151 U. S. 63, 38 L. ed. 74, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 259; Covert v. Waldron, 33 Fed. 311; Cilley v. Patten, 62 Fed. 498; Oberlin College v. Blair, 70 Fed. 414; Consolidated Water Co. v. Babcock, 76 Fed. 246; Shipp v. Williams, 10 C. C. A. 247, 22 U. S. App. 380, 62 Fed. 4; Gardner v. Brown, 21 Wall. 36, 22 L. ed. 527; Pittsburgh, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 10 C. C. A. 20, 22 U. S. App. 359, 61 Fed. 705; Boston Safe Deposit & T. Co. v. Racine, 97 Fed. 817; Old Colony Trust Co. v. Atlanta R. Co. 100 Fed. 798; 1 Foster, Fed. Pr. p. 64.

Mr. George H. Yeaman filed a brief as amicus curiæ:

Stockholders, members of a corporation, are conclusively presumed to be citizens of the state which created the corporation, called it into life, gave to it its being as an artificial, legal entity.

Thomas v. Ohio State University, 195 U. S. 207, ante, 160, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 24; Louisville, C. & C. R. Co. v. Letson, 2 How. 497, 558, 11 L. ed. 353, 377; St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. James, 161 U. S. 545, 40 L. ed. 802, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 621; Barrow S. S. Co. v. Kane, 170 U. S. 100, 42 L. ed. 964, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 526; Southern R. Co. v. Allison, 190 U. S. 326, 47 L. ed. 1078, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 713; Carter, Jurisdiction of Federal Courts, p. 197; Covington Drawbridge Co. v. Shepherd, 20 How. 232, 15 L. ed. 898; Muller v. Dows, 94 U. S. 444, 24 L. ed. 207; 1 Foster, Fed. Pr. § 19.

The act of March 3, 1887, as corrected by act of March 13, 1888, was intended to contract the jurisdiction of the national courts, and all doubts as to jurisdiction must be resolved against it.

St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Davis, 132 Fed. 629.

The United States courts have firmly established the policy of looking at the facts to see how the parties are interested, and will align them as plaintiffs or defendants according to that interest, or according to the substance of the controversy.

Groel v. United Electric Co. 132 Fed. 252; Elkins v. Chicago, 119 Fed. 957; Hawes v. Oakland (Hawes v. Contra Costa Water Co.) 104 U. S. 450, 26 L. ed. 827; Quincy v. Steel, 120 U. S. 241, 30 L. ed. 624, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 520; Central R. Co. v. Mills, 113 U. S. 249, 28 L. ed. 949, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 456; East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Grayson, 119 U. S. 240, 30 L. ed. 382, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190; Arapahoe County v. Kansas P. R. Co. 4 Dill. 277, Fed. Cas. No. 502.

A court of equity will not take cognizance of a bill brought to settle a question in which a corporation is the essential party in interest, unless it is made a party to the litigation.

Davenport v. Dows, 18 Wall. 626, 21 L. ed. 938.

Mr. Justice McKenna, after stating the case, delivered the opinion of the court:

To sustain the action of the circuit court in dismissing the bill the argument is as follows: (1) By a conclusive presumption of law the stockholders of a corporation are deemed to be citizens of the state of the corporation's domicile. (2) Granting that the complainants are citizens of New Jersey, yet, as they are suing for the Sol Sayles Company, a New York corporation, that corporation, although in form a defendant, is, in legal effect, on the same side of the controversy as the complainants, and since it is a citizen of the same state as the other defendants, the circuit court had no jurisdiction, as the suit *does not involve a controversy between citizens of different states.

1. This is based on the assumption adopted by this court, that stockholders of a corporation are citizens of the state which created the corporation,—an assumption physically possible, but hardly true in a single instance; and appellants here contend that it should be classed with the fictions of the law, and subject to one of their fundamental maxims, and cannot be carried beyond the reasons which caused its adoption necessarily require. It is, however, more of a presumption than a fiction, but whether we regard it as either, it cannot be pushed to the end contended for by appellees.

The reason of the presumption (we will so denominate it) was to establish the citizenship of the legal entity for the purpose of jurisdiction in the Federal courts. Before its adoption difficulties had been encountered on account of the conditions under which jurisdiction was given to those courts. A corporation is constituted, it is true, of all its stockholders; but it has a legal existence separate from them,—rights and obligations separate from them; and may have obligations to them. It can sue and be sued. At first this could be done in the circuit court of the United States only when the corporation was composed of citizens of the state which created it. Bank of United States v. Deveaux, 5 Cranch, 61, 3 L. ed. 38; Hope Ins. Co. v. Boardman, 5 Cranch, 57, 3 L. ed. 36. But the limitation came to be seen as almost a denial of jurisdiction to or against corporations in the Federal courts, and in Louisville, C. & O. R. Co. v. Letson, 2 How. 497, 11 L. ed. 353, prior cases were reviewed, and this doctrine laid down:

"That a corporation created by and doing business in a particular state is to be deemed, to all intents and purposes, as a person, although an artificial person, . . . capable of being treated as a citizen of that state, as much as a natural person." And "when the corporation exercises its powers in the state which chartered it, that is its residence, and such an averment is sufficient to give the circuit courts jurisdiction."

*The presumption that the citizenship of [587] the incorporators should be that of the domicile of the corporation was not then formulated. That came afterwards, and overcame the difficulty and objection that the legal creation, the corporation, could not be a citizen within the meaning of the Constitution. Marshall v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 16 How. 314, 14 L. ed. 953. This, then, was its purpose, and to stretch beyond this is to stretch it to wrong. It is one thing to give to a corporation a status, and another thing to take from a citizen the right given him by the Constitution of the United States. Disregarding the purpose of the presumption, it is easy to represent it, as counsel does, as illogical if not extended to every stockholder; but as easy it would be to show its falseness if so applied. But such charges and countercharges are aside from the question. To the fact and place of incorporation the law attaches its presumption for a special purpose. Perhaps, as intimated in St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. James, 161 U. S. 545, 563, 40 L. ed. 802, 808, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 621, this "went to the verge of judicial power." Against the further step urged by appellees we encounter the Constitution of the United States.

2. The ninety-fourth rule in equity contemplates that there may be, and provides for, a suit brought by a stockholder in a corporation, founded on rights which may properly be asserted by the corporation. And the decisions of this court establish that such a suit, when between citizens of different states, involves a controversy cognizable in a circuit court of the United States. The ultimate interest of the corporation made defendant may be the same as that of the stockholder made plaintiff; but the corporation may be under a control antagonistic to him, and made to act in a way detrimental to his rights. In other words, his interests and the interests of the corporation may be made subservient to some illegal purpose. If a controversy hence arise, and the other conditions of jurisdiction exist, it can be litigated in a Federal court.

In Detroit v. Dean, 106 U. S. 537, 27 L. ed. 300, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 500, Dean, who was [588] a citizen *of New York and a stockholder in the Mutual Gaslight Company, a Michigan corporation, in order to protect its right and property against the threatened action of a third party, brought suit against the latter and the corporation in the circuit court of the United States for the eastern district of Michigan. This court ordered the bill dismissed, not because Dean and the corporation had identical interests, but because the refusal of the directors of the corporation to sue was collusive. The right of a stockholder to sue a corporation for the protection of his rights was recognized, the condition only being the refusal of the directors to act, which refusal, it is said, must be real, not feigned. Hawes v. Oakland (Hawes v. Contra Costa Water Co.) 104 U. S. 450, 26 L. ed. 827, was cited, where a like right was decided to exist. See also Dodge v. Woolsey, 18 How. 331, 15 L. ed. 401; Davenport v. Dows, 18 Wall. 626, 21 L. ed. 938; Memphis v. Dean, 8 Wall. 73, 19 L. ed. 328; Greenwood v. Union Freight R. Co. 105 U. S. 16, 26 L. ed. 963; Quincy v. Steel, 120 U. S. 241, 30 L. ed. 624, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 520. It was said that in Dodge v. Woolsey, that the refusal of the directors to sue caused them and Woolsey, who was a stockholder in a corporation of which they were directors, "to occupy antagonistic grounds in respect to the controversy, which their refusal to sue forced him to take in defense of his rights." Dodge v. Woolsey was modified by Hawes v. Oakland, as to what circumstances would justify a suit by a stockholder if the directors refuse to sue. See also Quincy v. Steel, 120 U. S. 241, 30 L. ed. 624, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 520.

The case at bar is brought within the doctrine of those cases by the allegations of the bill. The defendant corporations are alleged to be under the control of John J. and Dennis A. Harrington, and that complainants are unable to secure any corporate action on the part of the defendant, the Sol Sayles Company, to redress the wrongs complained of. It is also alleged that the Harringtons control the action of the stockholders, and have declined to redress the wrongs complained of or give complainants any opportunity to lay before the board of directors or the stockholders of the Sol Sayles Company the facts alleged. It is also alleged the suit is not collusive. It is manifest that if the matter alleged be true, complainants *will suffer irremediable loss [589] if not permitted to sue, and as they had a cause of action they rightly brought it in the circuit court of the United States.

Decree reversed.

OCEANIC STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY (Limited), Claimant of the Steamship "Germanic," etc., Petitioner,

v.

JOHN W. AITKEN et al. and The Insurance Company of North America et al.†

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 589-599.)

Certiorari—adoption of concurrent findings of lower courts—negligence—standard of conduct of expert—carriers—damage to cargo while unloading—Harter act.

1. The concurrent findings of the two lower courts that water damage to cargo was caused by hurried and imprudent unloading will be accepted by the Federal Supreme Court, on certiorari, unless clearly incorrect.
2. Even an expert may be guilty of negligence in doing what, at the time, his judgment approves.
3. Damage to cargo from the sinking of a ship after arriving in port, due to hurried and imprudent unloading, which brought the center of gravity of the ship too high for safety, does not result from "faults or errors in navigation or in the management of said vessel," within the meaning of the Harter act of February 13, 1893 (27 Stat. at L. 445, chap. 105, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2946), § 3, exempting the owner of the vessel from liability, but arises from "negligence, fault, or failure in proper loading, storage, custody, care, or proper delivery" of merchandise, under § 1 of that act, so as to preclude any stipulation of exemption.

[No. 128.]

Argued January 13, 16, 1905. Decided February 20, 1905.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the

†This case is reported by the Official Reporter under the title of "The Germanic."

NOTE.—On statutory exemptions of ship owners from liability—see note to Nord-Deutscher Lloyd v. Insurance Co. of N. A. 49 C. C. A. 11.

Second Circuit to review two decrees affirming decrees of the District Court for the Southern District of New York in favor of libellants upon libels filed by cargo owners and underwriters to recover for water damage done to goods on board a vessel while unloading in port. Affirmed.

See same case below, 59 C. C. A. 521, 124 Fed. 1.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Everett P. Wheeler argued the cause and filed a brief for petitioner:

The handling of the ship in the port of discharge in any respect which will affect her safety to carry cargo is an error in management.

The Glenochil [1896] P. 10; The Silvia, 171 U. S. 462, 466, 43 L. ed. 241, 243, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 7; Knott v. Botany Worsted Mills, 179 U. S. 69, 45 L. ed. 90, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; The Wilderoft, 130 Fed. 521; The Rotherfield, 8 Revue Internationale du Droit Maritime, 103.

The object of the Harter act is to regulate the relation between the carrier and the shipper.

The Delaware, 161 U. S. 459, 40 L. ed. 771, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516; The Viola, 59 Fed. 632; The Berkshire, 59 Fed. 1007.

When the management affects the fitness of the ship to carry her cargo there is no liability for faults or errors therein. In other words, that is the management of the vessel. But, if the conduct of the captain or other employees of the shipowner does not affect the fitness of the ship to carry the cargo, the question is whether or not there was negligence in the proper loading or stowage of the cargo with reference to the relation of its different parts to each other.

The Silvia, 171 U. S. 462, 43 L. ed. 241, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 7.

If it be claimed that the fault was in stowing coal in the side pockets the answer is the same. Coal is not cargo. It is one of the appliances of the ship. Fault in handling it is fault in management of the ship.

The Rotherfield, 8 Revue Internationale du Droit Maritime, 103, 104.

Knott v. Botany Worsted Mills, 179 U. S. 69, 45 L. ed. 90, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30, is one of many cases in which injury is done to one lot of cargo by leakage from another lot, and the carrier is held liable for bad stowage.

See also The Mississippi, 113 Fed. 985.

But when the injury is done to cargo by mismanagement of part of the ship the carrier is exempt.

The Carron Park, L. R. 15 Prob. Div. 203; The Southgate [1893] P. 329.

Management of the vessel includes management of any part of the vessel as a cargo carrier, although not connected with her navigation.
196 U. S.

Rowson v. Atlantic Transp. Co. [1903] 1 K. B. 114, 9 Asp. Mar. Law Cas. 347, Affirmed in [1903] 2 K. B. 666, 19 Times L. R. 668; The Rodney [1900] P. 112.

Four recent decisions of the circuit court of appeals are opposed, on principle, to the doctrine of the prevailing opinions in the case at bar.

The Sandfield, 79 Fed. 371, Affirmed in 34 C. C. A. 612, 61 U. S. App. 385, 92 Fed. 663; American Sugar Ref. Co. v. Rickinson Sons, 59 C. C. A. 604, 124 Fed. 188; The Mexican Prince, 82 Fed. 484, Affirmed in 34 C. C. A. 168, 63 U. S. App. 782, 91 Fed. 1003; The Wilderoft, 130 Fed. 521.

The history of the Harter act shows that carriers have been endeavoring to limit their liability, not only for the faults of the captain, but for faults of stevedores and other persons employed by the carrier.

The Delaware, 161 U. S. 459, 471, 472, 40 L. ed. 771, 776, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516.

If there had been any intention to limit the general language of the 3d section certainly this limitation would have been expressed.

Demarest v. Wynkoop, 3 Johns. Ch. 142, 8 Am. Dec. 467; United States v. Coombs, 12 Pet. 72, 9 L. ed. 1004; Chamberlain v. Western Transp. Co. 44 N. Y. 305, 4 Am. Rep. 681; Southern L. Ins. & T. Co. v. Packer, 17 N. Y. 51.

The decisions that the Harter act applies to foreign vessels are really an application of this rule of construction. There is nothing in the act itself that states that it is applicable to foreign vessels. On the other hand, there is nothing in the act that excepts them. This court, therefore, has held that it applies to foreign, as well as to domestic, vessels.

The Chattahoochee, 173 U. S. 540, 43 L. ed. 801, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 491; The Silvia, 171 U. S. 462, 43 L. ed. 241, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 7.

To say that error of judgment is negligence when the error is that of a competent officer who is diligent to observe and to act upon the result of his observation is a contradiction in terms. Negligence is an omission to judge, or the neglect of some means reasonably adapted to guard against a danger which is reasonably to be expected.

The Adriatic, 17 Blatchf. 176, Fed. Cas. No. 91; Farr & B. Mfg. Co. v. International Nav. Co. 39 C. C. A. 197, 98 Fed. 636, Affirmed in 181 U. S. 218, 227, 45 L. ed. 830, 834, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 591; Brown v. French, 104 Pa. 604; The Tom Lysle, 48 Fed. 690; Mason v. Irvine, 27 Fed. 459; Wilson v. Charleston Pilots' Asso. 57 Fed. 227; Williams v. Le Bar, 141 Pa. 149, 21 Atl. 525;

The E. Luckenback, 109 Fed. 487; Lawrence v. Minturn, 17 How. 100, 110, 15 L. ed. 58, 62; Boyd v. Moses, 7 Wall. 316, 19 L. ed. 192.

Negligence is not measured by what is subsequently learned.

The Newfoundland, 176 U. S. 97, 44 L. ed. 386, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 274; The Styria v. Morgan, 186 U. S. 1, 9, 46 L. ed. 1027, 1033, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 731; McClain v. Brooklyn City R. Co. 116 N. Y. 459, 22 N. E. 1062; The Maria Luigia, 28 Fed. 244.

This is illustrated by the rule of evidence which forbids the introduction of proof of subsequent precautions as evidence of past negligence.

The Columbia & P. S. R. Co. v. Hawthorne, 144 U. S. 202, 36 L. ed. 405, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 591; Hart v. Lancashire & Y. R. Co. 21 L. T. N. S. 261.

The court below failed to give proper effect to the undisputed evidence, that the discharge and loading of the Germanie was carried on in the usual manner, that no inconvenience had ever resulted from it, and that it was the only practicable way consistent with despatch.

1 Shearm. & Redf. Neg. 4th ed. § 11; Wharton, Neg. § 46; The Nitro-glycerine Case (Parrott v. Wells) 15 Wall. 524, 537, 21 L. ed. 206, 211; The Timor, 14 C. C. A. 412, 35 U. S. App. 278, 67 Fed. 356; Carver, Carr. by Sea, 3d ed. § 181.

The sinking of the Germanie was unlike anything that had ever occurred before in the history of the port. It could not have been expected. Even if the claimant, with the experience derived from this accident, could now in a similar case prevent such a disaster, it is not necessarily liable here. The question is one of due care with the knowledge it then had. The captain did all that reasonable, prudent men would have done under the circumstances.

The Etona, 64 Fed. 880; Hibernia Ins. Co. v. St. Louis & N. O. Transp. Co. 120 U. S. 166, 30 L. ed. 621, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 550; Sloror v. Erie R. Car Float No. 4, 37 C. C. A. 154, 95 Fed. 495.

Mr. Wilhelmus Mynderse argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Butler, Notman, & Mynderse, filed a brief for respondents:

The facts have been established finally by the concurrent decisions of the district court and the United States circuit court of appeals.

Compania de Navigacion La Flecha v. Brauer, 168 U. S. 104, 42 L. ed. 398, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 12; Morewood v. Enequist, 23 How. 491, 16 L. ed. 516; The Richmond (The Sabine v. The Richmond) 103 U. S. 540, 26 L. ed. 313; The Conqueror, 166 U. S. 110, 135, 41 L. ed. 937, 948, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 510; The Carib Prince (Wuppermann v. The Carib Prince) 170 U. S. 655, 42 L. ed. 1181, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 753; The Iroquois, 194 U. S. 240, 247, 48 L. ed. 955, 959, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 640.

So far as perils of the sea are concerned, the Harter act leaves the law just as it found it. The statute merely declares that the owners and master of a vessel shall not be held liable for losses resulting from dangers of the sea or other navigable waters, or from the acts of God. The statute goes no further.

The Carib Prince (Wuppermann v. The Carib Prince) 170 U. S. 655, 42 L. ed. 1181, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 753.

The damage to the cargo was "loss or damage arising from neglect, fault, or failure in proper loading, stowage, custody, care, or proper delivery" of the cargo. The responsibility of the shipowner for such damage is recognized in the 1st section of the Harter act.

Knott v. Botany Worsted Mills, 179 U. S. 69, 45 L. ed. 90, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30.

The damages did not result "from faults or errors in navigation or in management" of the steamer within the 3d section of the Harter act.

Ibid.

The disaster at New York was due, not so much to a condition of unseaworthiness, in the usual acceptance of that term, as to negligence by the petitioner and its representatives in the care and custody of the cargo which had been committed to the steamer for transportation and delivery; and the 1st section of the Harter act forbids exemption in such case.

The Manitoba, 104 Fed. 145.

Mr. Walter F. Taylor also argued the cause, and, with Mr. Edmund L. Baylies, filed a brief for respondents:

The character of a fault, as a fault in the management of the ship, or as one for which the owner is responsible, is not to be determined by the fact that it affects the ship, or the nature or degree of the effect produced, but by reference to the nature of the operation which is negligently performed.

Knott v. Botany Worsted Mills, 179 U. S. 69, 45 L. ed. 90, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; The Silvia, 171 U. S. 462, 43 L. ed. 241, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 7; The Glenochil [1896] P. 10; The Wildcroft, 130 Fed. 521; The Rodney [1900] P. 112; The Mexican Prince, 82 Fed. 484; The Sandfield, 34 C. C. A. 612, 61 U. S. App. 385, 92 Fed. 663; Rowson v. Atlantic Transp. Co. [1903] 2 K. B. 666.

The tendency of the decisions construing the Harter act has been to limit, rather than to extend, the exemption given by the Harter act for faults and errors in the management and navigation of the ship.

The Delaware, 161 U. S. 459, 40 L. ed. 771,

16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516; The Irrawaddy (Flint v. Christall) 171 U. S. 187, 43 L. ed. 130, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 831; The Chattahoochee, 173 U. S. 540, 43 L. ed. 801, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 491; The Carib Prince (Wuppermann v. The Carib Prince), 170 U. S. 655, 42 L. ed. 1181, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 753.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This writ of certiorari brings up the record of two cases which were tried together upon libels filed by cargo owners and underwriters to recover for water damage done to goods on board the steamship Germanic. 107 Fed. 294, 59 C. C. A. 521, 124 Fed. 1. The steamer reached her pier in New York at about noon, Saturday, February 11, 1899. She was heavily coated with ice, estimated by the courts below at not less than 213 tons, and this weight was increased by a heavy fall of snow after her arrival. She was thirty-six hours late, and, in order to sail at her regular time on the following Wednesday, began to discharge cargo from all of her five hatches at once. At the same time she was taking in coal from coal barges on both sides, to that end being breasted off from the dock 25 or 30 feet on her port side. At about 4 p. m. on Monday, February 13, she had discharged about 1,370 out of her 1,650 tons of cargo, including all but about 155 tons in the lower hold, the other 125 tons being on the orlop and steerage decks. She then had a starboard list of about 8°. At that moment she suddenly rolled over from starboard to port and kept a port list of 9° or more. As she rolled over, the open cover of an aft coal port, about 33 inches by 22, was knocked off, leaving the bottom of the coal port about a foot above the water line.

[595] *Thereupon the master, who previously had given no attention to the discharge of cargo and loading of coal, ordered that coaling should be stopped on the port side, but continued on the starboard, that no more cargo should be taken from the lower hold, and that some sugar in bags should be shifted to the starboard side.

When 10 tons of sugar had been shifted, at 4.45 p. m., the steamer rolled back to starboard with a list of 8°, as before. Coal-ing was resumed on the port side, but at 6 was stopped on the starboard side. Between 6 and 9 p. m. all her side pockets were filled with coal up to the main deck, except one on the starboard, which lacked about 30 tons of being full. Some 20 or 25 tons were run into her cross bunkers in the lower part of the ship, which previously were about half full. About 50 tons of goods were discharged from the orlop and steerage decks, and about 60 tons of bacon were put on board and distributed evenly in the bottom of the hold. From 4.45 to 9 the starboard list was increasing constantly. At a little after 9 the steamer suddenly rolled over again to port, carrying the lower part of the open coal port below the water line. The pumps could not control the inflowing water and the ship sank before relief could be got. The damage to the goods was caused in this way.

The petitioner argues that the danger could not have been foreseen, and that there was no negligence, attributing the loss to an unusual gale and special circumstances. But the district court and the circuit court of appeals agree that the loss was due to hurried and imprudent unloading, which brought the center of gravity of the ship 5 or 6 inches above the metacenter. As usual, we accept their finding. The Iroquois, 194 U. S. 240, 247, 48 L. ed. 955, 959, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 640; The Carib Prince (Wuppermann v. The Carib Prince) 170 U. S. 655, 658, 42 L. ed. 1181, 1182, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 753. We see no sufficient reason to doubt that it was correct. With reference to a part of the argument, we think it proper to say a word. It is quite true that negligence must be determined upon the facts as they appeared at the time, and not by a judgment from actual consequences which then were not *to be apprehended by a prudent [596] and competent man. This principle nowhere has been more fully recognized than by this court. Lawrence v. Minturn, 17 How. 190, 110, 15 L. ed. 58, 62; The Star of Hope (The Star of Hope v. Annan) 9 Wall. 203, 19 L. ed. 638. But it is a mistake to say, as the petitioner does, that if the man on the spot, even an expert, does what his judgment approves, he cannot be found negligent. The standard of conduct, whether left to the jury or laid down by the court, is an external standard, and takes no account of the personal equation of the man concerned. The notion that it "should be coextensive with the judgment of each individual," was exploded, if it needed exploding, by Chief Justice Tindal, in Vaughan v. Menlove, 3 Bing. N. C. 468, 475. And since then, at least, there should have been no doubt about the law. Com. v. Pierce, 138 Mass. 165, 176, 52 Am. Rep. 264; Pollock, Torts, 7th ed. 432.

The foregoing statement, abridged from that of the district court, which was accepted by the circuit court of appeals, is sufficient to present the question which we have to discuss, if we add the finding of the latter court, that, after the Germanic was made fast, she was given in charge of the shore agents of the owners, and that they alone assumed direction of the discharging and loading of cargo, and prepared her for the return voyage. The question is whether the damage to the cargo was "damage or loss resulting from faults or errors in navigation or in the management of said vessel," as was set up in the answers, in which case the owner was exempted from liability by § 3 of the Harter act, or whether it was "loss or damage arising from negligence, fault, or failure in proper loading, storage, custody, care, or proper delivery" of merchandise under § 1 of the same, in which case he could not stipulate to be exempt. The second section also recognizes and affirms the "obligations" "to carefully handle and store her cargo, and to care for and properly deliver the same." Act of February 13, 1893 (27 Stat. at L. 445, chap. 105, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2946).

[597] The petitioner contends that any dealing with the ship or cargo which affects the fitness of the ship to carry her cargo is "management of the vessel," within the meaning of § 3. To support this contention the case of The Glenochil [1895] P. 10, is cited. There, after the arrival of the vessel in port, and while she was unloading, the engineer, in order to stiffen the ship, let water into a ballast tank, and did it so negligently that the water got to and injured the cargo. The damage was held to result from fault in the management of the vessel, within § 3, and the shipowner was held exempt. See The Silvia, 171 U. S. 462, 43 L. ed. 241, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 7. We see no reason to criticize this decision, and therefore lay on one side at once the fact that the vessel had come to the end of her voyage, and was in dock. We assume further that the captain retained authority over his ship, so that it was his power and perhaps his duty to intervene in any case that needed his control. On these assumptions the argument is that cargo has also a function as ballast; that if, for instance, the loss is caused by the improper shifting of pigs of lead, it does not matter whether they are called ballast or cargo, but in either case, so far as the change affects the fitness of the ship as a carrier, it is management of the vessel, within the act. The thing done is the same, and the name of the object cannot affect the result.

Nevertheless, in a practical sense, the ship was not under management at the time, but was the inert ground or floor of activities that looked not to her, but to getting the cargo ashore. And this consideration brings to light the limitation of the section, adopted by the court in The Glenochil, and sanctioned by this court in Knott v. Botany Worsted Mills, 179 U. S. 69, 73, 74, 45 L. ed. 90, 94, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30, to faults "primarily connected with the navigation or the management of the vessel, and not with the cargo." [1895] P. 15, 19. In the case supposed the name given to the pigs of lead is not important in itself, to be sure, but may indicate a difference in the purpose and character of the change of place. If the primary purpose is to affect the ballast of the ship, the change is management of the vessel; but if, as in view of the findings we must take to have been the case here, the primary purpose is to get the cargo ashore, *the fact that it also affects the trim of the [598] vessel does not make it the less a fault of the class which the first section removes from the operation of the third. We think it plain that a case may occur which, in different aspects, falls within both sections; and if this be true, the question which section is to govern must be determined by the primary nature and object of the acts which cause the loss.

A distinction was hinted at in argument, based on the fact that the damage was not to the cargo removed, but to that left behind in the ship. If the damage was attributable to negligence in unloading, it does not matter what part of the cargo is injured. The fact referred to does bring out, however, that the negligence in removing the cargo was negligence only because of its probable effect on the ship, and was negligence towards the remaining cargo only through its effect on the ship. But, although this may be conceded, the criterion which we have given is undisturbed. That "in" which, as the statute puts it, the fault was shown, was not management of the vessel, but unloading cargo; and, although it was fault only by reason of its secondary bearing, the primary object determines the class to which it belongs.

It is settled by repeated decisions that the Harter act will be applied to foreign vessels in suits brought in the United States. The Scotland (National Steam Nav. Co. v. Dyer) 105 U. S. 24, 26 L. ed. 1001; The Chattahoochee, 173 U. S. 540, 43 L. ed. 801, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 491. The claimant sets up the act and relies upon it. Under the cases it must take the burdens with the benefits, and no discussion of the terms of the bills of lading, if they might lead to a greater limitation of liability, is necessary. Knott v. Botany Worsted Mills, 179 U. S. 69, 45 L. ed. 90, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; The Kensington, 183 U. S. 263, 269, 46 L. ed. 190, 193, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 102. Some of the bills of lading in evidence contain a clause to the further effect that the shipowners, if liable for a loss capable of being covered by insurance, shall have the benefit of any insurance on the goods. But these bills of lading were for transport to Liverpool, and while they provided for forwarding the goods at ship's expense to New York, the forwarding was to be on bills of lading issued by *the steam- [599] er sailing to that port, and subject to the stipulations, exceptions, and conditions in those bills. We see no occasion to consider the questions which might be raised if the same stipulations were contained in the bills of lading to New York. See Liverpool & G. W. Steam Co. v. Phoenix Ins. Co. 129 U. S. 397, 463, 33 L. ed. 788, 799, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 469; Inman v. South Carolina R. Co. 129 U. S. 128, 32 L. ed. 612, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249; Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Erie & W. Transp. Co. 117 U. S. 312, 29 L. ed. 873, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 750, 1176.

Decree affirmed.

GUS G. COULTER, S. W. Hager, and C. B. Hill, Appts.,
v.
LOUISVILLE & NASHVILLE RAILROAD COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 599-610.)

Courts—jurisdiction of Federal courts to enjoin collection of state tax—taxation of corporate franchise—inequality in valuation.

1. A Federal court cannot enjoin the collection of a franchise tax assessed under the authority of a state because of inequality in valuation as compared with other taxable property, nor can it order the state treasurer to issue a receipt in full to the complainant, which has paid so much of the tax as it thinks was justly due.
2. The Federal Constitution does not forbid state taxation of the franchise of a domestic corporation at a different rate than is assessed upon the tangible property in the state.
3. Inequality in valuation for taxation of a franchise, as compared with other taxable property, must be systematic and intentional in order to justify a Federal court in enjoining the apportionment and certification of the tax to the several counties, where the assessment does not appear to have been made on such a different scale of values from that adopted elsewhere as to deny the equal protection of the laws guaranteed by U. S. Const. 14th Amend., which was the only ground invoked to sustain the Federal jurisdiction.

[No. 244.]

Argued November 29, 30, 1904. Decided February 20, 1905.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Kentucky to review a decree which re-

NOTE.—On taxation of corporate franchises in the United States—see note to Louisville Tobacco Warehouse Co. v. Com. 57 L. R. A. 33.

As to constitutional equality in the United States in relation to corporate taxation—see note to Bacon v. State Tax Comrs. 60 L. R. A. 321.

196 U. S.

strained, for inequality in valuation for taxation, the apportionment and certification to the several counties of a tax imposed on the franchise of a domestic corporation, and enjoined the collection of such tax, and required the state treasurer to execute a receipt in full to the complainant, which had paid the amount of the tax which it regarded as justly due. Reversed.

See same case below, 131 Fed. 282.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. William O. Davis and Henry L. Stone argued the cause, and, with Mr. Napoleon B. Hays, filed a brief for appellants:

Appellee's suit was against the state without its consent, and in violation of the 11th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, and the demurrer to the bill for want of jurisdiction should have been sustained and the bill dismissed without regard to the merits, so far as state taxes were concerned.

Louisiana v. Jumel, 107 U. S. 711, 27 L. ed. 448, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 128; Re Ayers, 123 U. S. 443, 31 L. ed. 216, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 164; Hans v. Louisiana, 134 U. S. 1, 33 L. ed. 842, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 504; Coulter v. Weir, 62 C. C. A. 429, 127 Fed. 897; Fitts v. McGhee, 172 U. S. 516, 43 L. ed. 535, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269; Arbuckle v. Blackburn, 65 L. R. A. 864, 51 C. C. A. 122, 113 Fed. 616.

There being no diverse citizenship between the parties, the bill does not show jurisdiction in the circuit court on account of the alleged denial of the equal protection of the laws, within the meaning of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Taylor, 86 Fed. 168; Railroad & Teleph. Cos. v. Board of Equalizers, 85 Fed. 302; Taylor v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 31 C. C. A. 537, 60 U. S. App. 166, 88 Fed. 350; Louisville Trust Co. v. Stone, 46 C. C. A. 299, 107 Fed. 305; Cummings v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 101 U. S. 153, 25 L. ed. 903; Albuquerque Nat. Bank v. Perea, 147 U. S. 87, 37 L. ed. 91, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 194.

The allegation in the amended bill that the assessors "uniformly" assessed such property below its value for the year 1902 is not sufficient to bring this case within the rule announced in this class of cases by the Federal courts.

Cummings v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 101 U. S. 153, 25 L. ed. 903; Taylor v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 31 C. C. A. 537, 60 U. S. App. 166, 88 Fed. 350; German Nat. Bank v. Kimball, 103 U. S. 732, 26 L. ed. 469; Pelton v. Commercial Nat. Bank, 101 U. S. 143, 25 L. ed. 901; Albuquerque Nat. Bank v. Perea, 147 U. S. 87, 37 L. ed. 91, 13 Sup. Ct.

Rep. 194; New York v. Barker, 179 U. S. 279, 45 L. ed. 190, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 121; State ex rel. Gottlieb v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 165 Mo. 504, 65 S. W. 775; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Missouri, 190 U. S. 412-417, 47 L. ed. 1116, 1117, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 730; Exchange Nat. Bank v. Miller, 19 Fed. 372.

If the court shall conclude that the allegations of the bill are sufficient to give jurisdiction to the circuit court, and to constitute a cause of action, then the proof falls short of what is required by the decisions of the Federal courts in this class of cases before an injunction will be granted interfering with the collection of the public revenues of a state.

Cincinnati S. R. Co. v. Guenther, 19 Fed. 398; Taylor v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 31 C. C. A. 537, 60 U. S. 166, 88 Fed. 373; New York v. Barker, 179 U. S. 286, 45 L. ed. 194, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 121; Louisville Trust Co. v. Stone, 46 C. C. A. 299, 107 Fed. 305.

The court cannot take judicial notice of undervaluations of any species of property, if any there be, by assessing officers.

New York v. Barker, 179 U. S. 286, 45 L. ed. 194, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 121.

The complainant, by reason of the action of the county assessors and board of equalization, or the board of valuation and assessment, has not been discriminated against or denied the equal protection of the laws, within the meaning of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

King v. Mullins, 171 U. S. 436, 43 L. ed. 226, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 925; Judson, Taxn. § 437, p. 562; Head Money Cases (Edye v. Robertson) 112 U. S. 595, 28 L. ed. 798, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 247; National Bank v. Baltimore, 40 C. C. A. 254, 100 Fed. 27; Bell's Gap R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 134 U. S. 233, 33 L. ed. 892, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533; Merchants' & M. Nat. Bank v. Pennsylvania, 167 U. S. 464, 42 L. ed. 237, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 829; Columbus S. R. Co. v. Wright, 151 U. S. 478, 38 L. ed. 242, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 396; Florida, C. & P. R. Co. v. Reynolds, 183 U. S. 476, 46 L. ed. 286, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 176; Kentucky Railroad Cases (Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. v. Kentucky) 115 U. S. 321, 29 L. ed. 414, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 57; Charlotte, C. & A. R. Co. v. Gibbes, 142 U. S. 386, 35 L. ed. 1051, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Wagoner v. Loomis, 37 Ohio St. 571; Lowell v. Middlesex County, 152 Mass. 375, 9 L. R. A. 356, 25 N. E. 469; State, Central R. Co., Prosecutor, v. State Assessors, 48 N. J. L. 7, 57 Am. Rep. 516, 2 Atl. 789; Louisville R. Co. v. Com. 105 Ky. 710, 49 S. W. 486.

Mr. James P. Helm argued the cause, and, with Mr. Helm Bruce, filed a brief for appellee:

Can a state, through its administrative officers, intentionally, uniformly, and systematically make some of its citizens bear, proportionately to their wealth, one fifth more of the burdens of state government than it requires of all the rest of its citizens?

Taylor v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 31 C. C. A. 537, 60 U. S. App. 166, 88 Fed. 364.

As to the effect of practical construction by those whose duty it is to execute a statute, see—

Harrison v. Com. 83 Ky. 163; Barbour v. Louisville, 83 Ky. 95; Clark's Run & S. River Turnp. Road Co. v. Com. 96 Ky. 532, 29 S. W. 360; Louisville v. Garr, 97 Ky. 588, 31 S. W. 281, 32 S. W. 748.

Whenever a question of fact is submitted to the determination of a special tribunal, its decision creates something more than a mere presumption of fact; and, if such determination comes into inquiry before the courts it cannot be overthrown by evidence going only to show that the fact was otherwise than was found and determined.

Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Baekus, 154 U. S. 434, 38 L. ed. 1039, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1114; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Taggart, 163 U. S. 1, 41 L. ed. 49, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1054; Adams Exp. Co. v. Ohio State Auditor, 165 U. S. 229, 41 L. ed. 698, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 305.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a bill brought by the railroad company, appellee, a *Kentucky corporation, [605] against citizens of Kentucky, the members of the state board of valuation and assessment, and, respectively, auditor of public accounts, treasurer, and secretary of state. The only ground of jurisdiction alleged is that, under the tax laws of the state of Kentucky, as administered by its executive officers, the railroad company is deprived of the equal protection of the laws, contrary to the 14th Amendment. The Constitution of the state requires all property not exempted from taxation to be assessed at its fair cash value; but the bill alleges that the county assessors uniformly assess the property assessed by them, which is the great body of tangible property in the state, below its cash value. It alleges that, in like manner, the board of equalization equalizes the county assessments at a percentage not above 80 per cent of the fair cash value of the property taxed. On the other hand the defendants, who assess the franchise tax on the railroad company, are alleged to have assessed the company's property in Kentucky at its full value, viz., $33,788,724.50, for the year 1902, and then, deducting the tangible property locally taxed, $23,103,825, to have made the taxable franchise $10,774,899.50.

Whereas, if 80 per cent of the value of the company's property had been taken, then, deducting as before, the taxable franchise would be only a little over $4,000,000.

The railroad company contends that when there is a uniform and general undervaluation of other property, then the only way in which the company can be put on an equality with other taxpayers is by a similar undervaluation in its case. The railroad company contends further that although this contravenes the letter of the statute, the requirement of equality so far outweighs the requirement of a tax on the full value of property, that if, by misconduct elsewhere, both cannot be observed, the rule of equality must prevail. It should be mentioned that the franchise tax is both state and local, and that after the same has been laid and apportioned between the state and [606] county, etc., by the defendants, the *state auditor, who is one of them, certifies to the county clerks their proportion of the tax. The bill prays for an injunction against such an apportionment and certification, and also against collection by the officers of the state. There was a general demurrer to the bill, and an answer and replication. The demurrer was overruled. Much evidence was taken, and at the final hearing a decree was entered by the circuit court enjoining the defendants as prayed, and requiring the defendant Hager, treasurer of the state, to execute a receipt in full of the state taxes on the franchise for 1902, the plaintiff having paid the sum which was due on its view of the case. 131 Fed. 282. The defendants appealed to this court. It may be assumed from an affidavit filed, if not from the pleadings, that the amount in controversy is over $2,000. See United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Asso. 166 U. S. 290, 310, 41 L. ed. 1007, 1017, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 540.

From a consideration of different kinds of evidence the circuit court reached the conclusion that the county assessors had systematically and intentionally undervalued the property assessed by them. In the first place it found a settled habit of undervaluing, recognized by the legislature and the state court, before the adoption of the Constitution of 1891, which required the fair cash value to be assessed. It found that while the value of land had increased or, at least, had not diminished since 1891, the assessments had varied very little, while those of 1891 were not more than 70 per cent of the value at any time. It considered testimony that from 1893 to 1896 the assessments were equalized at 70 per cent, following earlier statutes, notwithstanding the Constitution of 1891. It then compared tabulated statements of sales in the different counties, which were required by statute to be furnished to the board of equalization, with the local assessments and with the results reached by the last-named board. It thus found an additional and independent reason for believing that there was systematic undervaluation in the counties, and it inferred from comparisons and from testimony to that effect *that the board paid lit- [607] tle attention to the tabulated statements, even on a basis of 80 per cent, but really was governed by the assessment of the previous year. Finally, it confirmed its conclusions by direct testimony as to the practice in certain counties and the rules practically adopted by the board. The reasoning is careful and elaborate, and cannot be read without an impression that probably it is correct to the extent of establishing a general undervaluation of land.

On the other hand, there was testimony that the statements of sales did not afford satisfactory evidence of average values, or at least, for various reasons, were not regarded by the board of equalization as affording it. Most of the members of the board testified that they tried in good faith to reach fair cash values, and there were many affidavits to a like effect as to the past and present conduct of the county assessors. It was sworn that, so far as percentages of the reported sales were used, they were used on an estimate of what proportion actual values would bear to the sums named in the deeds. The circuit court, while regarding it as the condition of equitable relief that the property other than that of the plaintiff should have been undervalued systematically and intentionally, hardly dealt with this evidence in its bearing on the question of intent. Yet, of course, no court would venture to intervene merely on the ground of a mistake of judgment on the part of the officer to whom the duty of assessment was intrusted by the law.

The other half of the plaintiff's case is that its franchise was valued at its full cash value. It might even require consideration, if necessary, whether it ought not to be shown further that the appellants, in valuing the franchise, consciously adopted a different standard from that which they understood to be adopted in the counties. On the foregoing questions one of the three appellants testified that he had dissented from the majority on several occasions, believing that the assessments were higher than those for other kinds of property, and that he understood that the majority assessed *the franchise at its full value. One [608] testified that he thought at the time, and still thought, that the franchise was valued lower than it ought to be. The third was not explicit, but showed that the valuation was reduced after hearing. Different well-known modes were used in approaching the valuation, but probably there was an element of arbitrary judgment at the end. This certainly was the case in regard to the proportion of mileage in the state, which, by the statutes, was to "be considered" in fixing the value of the franchise, and which the appellants contend was underestimated so much as to compensate for any other mistake, if there was any, which is denied.

We need not stop to show that so much of the bill as seeks an injunction against collecting the state tax, and the portion of the decree which orders a receipt to be executed on the part of the state, cannot be maintained. See Coulter v. Weir, 62 C. C. A. 429, 127 Fed. 897, 906, 912. On the other hand, in a proper case, a bill may be brought to restrain apportionment and certification to the counties. Fargo v. Hart, 193 U. S. 490, 495, 503, 48 L. ed. 761, 764, 767, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 498. The question is whether such a case has been made out, and we may assume, for purposes of decision, without deciding, that, if we otherwise agreed with the railroad company's contention, the injunction might be granted, although the franchise was valued as the law requires in every respect except in the proportion which the assessment bore to the other valuations. The decisions are not agreed upon this point.

We have stated as much as we deem necessary to the answering of the question just put. It must be obvious on even that short statement how uncertain are the elements of the evidence, and in what unusual paths it moves. On the face of their records the proceedings of the defendants, of the county assessors, and of the equalizing board all are regular. If it be a fact that the franchise of a Kentucky corporation is taxed at a different rate from the tangible property in the state, there can be no question that the state had power to tax it at a different rate, so far as the Constitution of the United States *is concerned. Bell's Gap R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 134 U. S. 232, 33 L. ed. 892, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533; Merchants' & M. Nat. Bank v. Pennsylvania, 167 U. S. 461, 464, 42 L. ed. 236, 237, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 829; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 295, 42 L. ed. 1037, 1043, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594. It is doubtful, at least, if any further question should have been asked in this case. Missouri v. Dockery, 191 U. S. 165, 48 L. ed. 133, 63 L. R. A. 571, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 53. But as the claim of right under the United States Constitution was not merely colorable (Penn Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Austin, 168 U. S. 685, 695, 42 L. ed. 626, 618 630, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 223), and as the evidence is here, we have considered the evidence also, and our conclusion from that, as well as from the law, is that the bill must be dismissed.

Looking first at the assessment of the franchise, there is no such certainty that it was made on a different scale of values from that adopted elsewhere as would warrant an attack upon it under the 14th Amendment, even if otherwise that attack could be maintained. But the supposed infringement of the 14th Amendment is the only ground on which the railroad company could come into the circuit court, and if that ground fails, and obviously fails, the court should be very cautious, at least, in interfering with the state's administration of its taxes upon other considerations which would not have given it jurisdiction.

The undervaluation in the counties, looked at from the point of view just indicated, also does not appear to have been such as to warrant the action of the court. It is not contended that a mere undervaluation would be enough. It is admitted that it must have been systematic and intentional. There is, no doubt, a natural inclination to think such an undervaluation probable when it is suggested. But what is the proof? The state Constitution, whatever the statutes may have said, seems popularly to have been understood to have made a great change in the law. Practice before its adoption, therefore, hardly can raise a presumption as to practice afterwards, even on the liberal assumption that it properly could be considered in evidence. It is obvious that the accidental sales in a given year may be a misleading guide to average values, *apart from [610] the testimony that some, at least, of the conveyances did not report true prices, yet they furnish the chief weapon of attack. The testimony as to the board of equalization taking 80 per cent of the reported sales was explained by the members of the board. It would be going very far to assume that they were committing perjury because, to another mind, the sales seemed more significant and the explanations not very good. Inequality, we repeat, is nothing, unless it was in pursuance of a scheme. To make out that scheme the anomalous course was followed of putting members of a tribunal established by law upon the witness stand to testify to the operations of their minds in doing the work intrusted to them. Fayerweather v. Ritch, 195 U. S. 276, 306, 307, ante, 193, 213, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 58. But the prevailing testimony was that no such scheme was entertained.

Whatever we may surmise or apprehend, making allowance for a certain vagueness of ideas to be expected in the lay mind, for the reasonable differences of opinion among the most instructed and competent men, and for the uncertainty of the elements from which a judgment was to be formed in the first instance, considering the still greater uncertainty of those from which the local judgment must be controlled, if at all, by persons having only the printed record before them, considering further that to maintain the bill imputes perjury to many witnesses whose character is not impeached, and, finally, recalling once more that we are dealing with a case that properly was not cognizable in the circuit court, we are of opinion that the bill must be dismissed.
196 U. S.

Decree reversed.

[611]*SCOTTISH UNION & NATIONAL INSURANCE COMPANY, Appt.,

v.

WILLIS G. BOWLAND, as Treasurer, and L. Ewing Jones, as Auditor of Franklin County, Ohio; Arthur I. Vorys, as Superintendent of Insurance, and William S. McKinnon, as Treasurer of the State of Ohio. (No. 360.)

WILLIS G. BOWLAND, as Treasurer, and L. Ewing Jones, as Auditor of Franklin County, Ohio, et al., Appts.,

v.

SCOTTISH UNION & NATIONAL INSURANCE COMPANY. (No. 361.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 611-633.)

State taxation of foreign corporation—bonds deposited with state official—exemptions—due process of law in collection of taxes — distraint — equity — adequate remedy at law.

1. Bonds in which a foreign insurance company is required by Ohio Rev. Stat. § 3660, as a condition of doing business in Ohio, to invest a portion of its capital stock, to be deposited with the superintendent of insurance, for the protection of the local policy holders, are "personal property" within the meaning of § 2744, requiring insurance companies to list for taxation all their personal property, which, by the terms of that section, is to include moneys and credits within the state, and is also defined in § 2730 as including the capital stock, although the taxation of "investments in bonds" provided for in §§ 2730, 2731, extends only to such securities as are in the hands of individual residents, owned by themselves or held by them for others, since these last sections were not intended to limit other sections of the tax law, but were enacted to carry out a general purpose to tax all personal property within the state.

2. The imposition of a privilege tax on foreign insurance companies by Ohio Rev. Stat. § 2745, does not bring such companies within the exception from the operation of § 2744 which that section makes in favor of corporations whose taxation elsewhere is specifically provided for, and hence does not relieve them from the duty, under that section, to return for taxation bonds deposited by them with the superintendent of insurance for the protection of the local policy holders, as a condition of doing business in Ohio.
3. Due process of law is not denied a foreign insurance company by distraining its personal property under the authority of Ohio Rev. Stat. § 1095, to satisfy personal taxes lawfully levied.
4. The exemption of United States bonds from state taxation does not prevent their distraint, under Ohio Rev. Stat. § 1095, to satisfy taxes lawfully levied on unexempt personal property of the owner of such bonds.
5. The lawful substitution by a foreign insurance company of United States bonds in place of municipal bonds deposited by it with the superintendent of insurance for the protection of local policy holders, as a condition of doing business in the state, when made before the day on which the company is required to list its property for taxation for a certain year, prevents the levy of any tax thereon for that year.
6. Equity will not interfere by injunction with the prosecution of civil suits against a foreign corporation to recover taxes levied on its personal property within the state, on the ground that the corporation is not personally liable therefor, since this objection may be set up as a defense by answer in the actions at law.

[Nos. 360, 361.]

Argued January 4, 5, 1905. Decided February 20, 1905.

CROSS APPEALS from the United States Circuit Court for the Southern District of Ohio to review a decree holding liable to taxation municipal bonds deposited by a foreign insurance company with the superintendent of insurance as a condition of doing business in Ohio, except so far as such taxes were levied when United States bonds had been substituted before the time for returning property for taxation, and refusing to restrain the execution of a distress warrant, though enjoining the collection of the taxes by civil actions. Reversed for error in enjoining the prosecution of the civil actions to collect the taxes, and remanded for further proceedings.

Statement by Mr. Justice Day:

These cases are cross appeals from a decree rendered in the circuit court upon bill and demurrer. The Scottish Union & Na-[612]

NOTE.—On taxation of capital stock of corporations in the United States—see note to State Board v. People, 58 L. R. A. 513.

tional Insurance Company, a corporation of Great Britain, filed its bill to enjoin the defendants, Willis G. Bowland, treasurer, and L. Ewing Jones, auditor, of Franklin county, Ohio; Arthur I. Vorys, superintendent of insurance, and William S. McKinnon, treasurer, of the state of Ohio, from the collection of taxes levied on certain bonds deposited by the complainant under the laws of Ohio regulating the right of foreign insurance companies to do business in that state. It appears from the averments of the bill that the bonds were deposited under § 3660 of the Revised Statutes of Ohio, as amended in 1894. 91 Ohio Laws, 40. They were municipal bonds of the county of Lucas and state of Ohio. Fifty thousand dollars thereof was deposited on September 14, 1894, and $50,000 on November 7, 1894. The bonds were registered in the name of the superintendent of insurance, in trust, for the benefit and security of the policy holders of the insurance company, residing in Ohio, and were delivered by him to the state treasurer for safe keeping, and remained in the office of the treasurer of the state at Columbus, Franklin county, Ohio, until withdrawn on April 2, 1903, when United States bonds were substituted therefor.

The insurance company is transacting the business of insurance in Ohio, but it avers that its home office is in the city of Edinburgh, Scotland, and its chief office and managing agency for this country is at Hartford, Connecticut, from which office it conducts its business in Ohio.

Acting under the Ohio statute, § 2781a (94 Ohio Laws, 62), the auditor of Franklin county, by notice served on one of the local agents of the Scottish Union & National Insurance Company, notified it to appear and show cause why the said bonds should not be taxed against it on the duplicate of Franklin county, Ohio, and taxes collected thereon for the years 1895 to 1900, inclusive. The auditor entered upon the tax duplicate taxes against the insurance company for $2,700 each for the years 1895 to 1897, inclusive, and $2,750 each for the years [613] 1898 to 1900, inclusive; and 5 per cent *penalty thereon. On November 15, 1900, the treasurer of Franklin county brought a civil action against the company for taxes so assessed. This action, at the time of the filing of the bill, was still pending in the court of common pleas of Franklin county, Ohio.

On December 4, 1903, another notice was served upon the company, through its local agent, and the auditor entered taxes against such company for the years 1901, 1902, and 1903, in all, the sum of $8,935.50. On April 2, 1904, the treasurer of Franklin county procured a warrant of distraint, and upon such warrant demanded of the superintendent of insurance and the state treasurer the United States bonds so substituted on April 2, 1903, for such municipal bonds, for the purpose of seizing and selling the same to satisfy the taxes which had been assessed against the company with respect to the municipal bonds for the years 1895 to 1900, inclusive. It is averred that to permit the collection of these taxes by suit for personal judgment or distraint will be violative of complainant's treaty rights as a subject of Great Britain, and will be taking complainant's property without due process of law, in violation of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

The prayer of the bill is that the defendant the treasurer of Franklin county be restrained from collecting or attempting to collect any of the taxes against the complainant personally; that the said treasurer be restrained from collecting or attempting to collect said taxes or any portion of them by distraint against either such bonds of the United States so deposited or any personal property of complainant which may now or hereafter be situated in the county of Franklin or in the state of Ohio; that the defendants the superintendent of insurance and treasurer of the state of Ohio be enjoined from delivering or attempting to deliver said United States bonds or any part thereof to the said county treasurer, and for such other relief as equity and good conscience may require.

The respondents having interposed demurrers to the bill, *the court held that the [614] municipal bonds on deposit in Ohio were subject to taxation under the laws of the state; that there was no personal liability of the complainant on account of said taxes, and therefore a civil action to recover the taxes should be enjoined; that for the year 1903 the collection of taxes could not be enforced, as the United States bonds were substituted before the time for returning property for that year; that the bonds might be seized by distraint to satisfy the taxes levied upon the municipal securities for the years they were on deposit, and the court therefore refused to enjoin the execution of the distress warrant except for the taxes and penalty for the year 1903, and rendered a decree enjoining the collection of the taxes by civil action.

Both parties appealed; the company from so much of the decree as permitted distraint of the United States securities for the collection of taxes levied with respect to the municipal bonds, the treasurer and auditor of Franklin county from so much of the decree as denies the right of the state to prosecute a civil action against the company to recover the taxes aforesaid, and from so much thereof as restrained the officials from attempting to collect the taxes assessed against the municipal bonds for the year 1903.

Messrs. Judson Harmon and Hartwell Cabell argued the cause, and, with Mr. W. O. Henderson, filed a brief for the Scottish Union & National Insurance Company:

The constitutional provision bearing upon the question of taxation is not self-executing.

Lamb v. Lane, 4 Ohio St. 167; Chisholm v. Shields, 67 Ohio St. 374, 66 N. E. 93.

Classes of personal property enumerated in the Constitution and statutes are mutually exclusive.

Exchange Bank v. Hines, 3 Ohio St. 1; Worthington v. Sebastian, 25 Ohio St. 1; Myers v. Seaberger, 45 Ohio St. 232, 12 N. E. 396.

Investments in bonds for the purposes of taxation are incapable of a situs apart from their owner or holder.

Brown v. Noble, 42 Ohio St. 405; Somers v. Boyd, 48 Ohio St. 648, 29 N. E. 497; Payne v. Watterson, 37 Ohio St. 121; Sims v. Best, 25 Ohio C. C. 149.

Even granting that the words "personal property" in Ohio Rev. Stat., § 2744, taken alone, are broad enough to include investments in bonds, and to require their return by officers of corporations if the instruments themselves are in the state, we have still, under the authority of Lander v. Burke, 65 Ohio St. 532, 63 N. E. 69, to look to §§ 2730 and 2731 to find when they are in the state for the purposes of taxation, viz., whether they are owned or held by persons residing in this state.

These bonds are not held by some person in the state in some such capacity as would bring him within the law requiring from him their return for taxation.

Myers v. Seaberger, 45 Ohio St. 232, 12 N. E. 396; Jaek v. Walker, 79 Fed. 138; Sims v. Best, 25 Ohio C. C. 149; McNeill v. Hagerty, 51 Ohio St. 255, 23 L. R. A. 628, 37 N. E. 526; French v. Bobe, 64 Ohio St. 323, 60 N. E. 292.

Taxes are not a lien, in Ohio, upon the personal property of the person against whom they are assessed until actually seized and distrained by the treasurer.

Spence v. Frye, 3 Ohio Dec. Reprint, 11; Citizens' Bank Assignment, 2 Ohio Dec. Reprint, 230; Chisholm v. Shields, 67 Ohio St. 374, 66 N. E. 93.

Since the municipal bonds were not taxed, or charged with the payment of taxes, by any step or proceeding, they left the state free of all liability for taxes, and there was no lien or encumbrance thereon to be transferred to the United States bonds substituted for them.

New Orleans v. Stempel, 175 U. S. 309, 312, 44 L. ed. 174, 177, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110.

Mr. Augustus T. Seymour argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Edward L. Taylor, Jr., Karl T. Webber, Thomas N. Ross, and Wade H. Ellis, filed a brief for Bowland et al.:

Under the Constitution and statute law of Ohio, investments in bonds held in that state and owned by nonresidents of the state are taxable within the state.

Lee v. Sturges, 46 Ohio St. 153, 2 L. R. A. 556, 19 N. E. 560; Hubbard v. Brush, 61 Ohio St. 252, 55 N. E. 829; Western Assur. Co. v. Halliday, 61 C. C. A. 271, 126 Fed. 257; Sims v. Best, 25 Ohio C. C. 149.

The nature of the deposit is not such as to exempt bonds so deposited from taxation within the state.

British Commercial L. Ins. Co. v. Tax Comrs. 18 Abb. Pr. 118; International L. Assur. Soc. v. Tax Comrs. 28 Barb. 318; People v. Home Ins. Co. 29 Cal. 533; Sims v. Best, 25 Ohio C. C. 149, Affirmed in Heintz v. Cameron, 70 Ohio St. 491, 72 N. E. 1159.

The requirement in the Constitution, that laws shall be passed taxing by uniform rule all property, made it impossible for the legislature to substitute the provisions of Ohio Rev. Stat., § 2745, for those of § 2744. It is a well-settled rule of construction that statutes which strip a government of any portion of its prerogative, or give exemption from the general burden, should receive a strict interpretation.

Western Assur. Co. v. Halliday, 61 C. C. A. 271, 126 Fed. 266; 1 Desty, Taxn. 180; Yazoo & M. Valley R. Co. v. Thomas, 132 U. S. 174, 33 L. ed. 302, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 68; New Orleans City & Lake R. Co. v. New Orleans, 143 U. S. 192, 36 L. ed. 121, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 406; Chicago, B. & K. C. R. Co. v. Guffey (Chicago, B. & K. C. R. Co. v. Missouri), 120 U. S. 569, 30 L. ed. 732, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 693; Phoenix F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Tennessee, 161 U. S. 174-177, 40 L. ed. 660, 661, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 471; Erie R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 21 Wall. 492, 22 L. ed. 595; Delaware Railroad Tax (Minot v. Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co.) 18 Wall. 206, 21 L. ed. 888.

The power of the state to impose conditions upon a nonresident seeking to engage in business within its borders is beyond question.

Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 177 U. S. 28, 44 L. ed. 657, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 518; Hooper v. California, 155 U. S. 648, 652, 39 L. ed. 297, 298, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 610, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 207; Judson, Taxn. § 158.

The right of a sovereign government to proceed summarily in the method of collecting dues owing to itself is as old as the common law, and statutes authorizing the distraint of property to satisfy tax charges which are past due and unpaid are a part of the taxing machinery of every state in the Union and of every civilized government.

2 Desty, Taxn. pp. 750, 776; Judson, Taxn. § 331; Palmer v. McMahon, 133 U. S. 660, 33 L. ed. 772, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 324; Den ex dem. Murray v. Hoboken Land & Improv. Co. 18 How. 272, 15 L. ed. 372; Springer v. United States, 102 U. S. 586, 26 L. ed. 253; Cooley, Taxn. p. 302.

The theory of the laws of Ohio taxing personal property is that such taxes are obligations created by legislative authority, and assessed against the owner of property as the measure of his duty to contribute to the support of public burdens in exchange for the protection afforded his property by the government. Although the property is resorted to for the purpose of ascertaining the amount of the tax, the individual, and not the property, must pay the tax.

Desty, Taxn. p. 7.

The power of a state to tax property of a nonresident is by virtue of jurisdiction over such property. But the meaning of the word "property" indicates the right of a person to own and control things external to such person.

Black, Law Dict. Property, 253; 1 Bl. Com. p. 138; 2 Bl. Com. pp. 2-15.

Under the scheme of taxation adopted in every state in the Union, taxes on account of the ownership of personal property are assessed in the name of and against the owner thereof.

27 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, pp. 648, 672, 673.

The right to subject property to the payment of a state tax can only be carried to the extent of such property, owned by such nonresident, as is within its limits; but, so long as no other property than that located within its jurisdiction is authorized by statute to be taken, such statute can be said to have no extraterritorial effect.

Desty, Taxn. pp. 7, 11, § 6; Green v. Craft, 28 Miss. 70; Rundell v. Lakey, 40 N. Y. 517.

The obligation to pay a tax is a much higher obligation than the duty of one citizen to discharge an obligation arising out of a contract with another citizen.

Florida, C. & P. R. Co. v. Reynolds, 183 U. S. 475, 46 L. ed. 285, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 176; Allen v. Armstrong, 10 Iowa, 512; Buck v. Miller, 147 Ind. 586, 37 L. R. A. 384, 62 Am. St. Rep. 436, 45 N. E. 647, 47 N. E. 8; Geren v. Gruber, 26 La. Ann. 694; Catlin v. Hull, 21 Vt. 152.

The legislature has just as much power to provide for the enforcement and collection of taxes which may be due from a nonresident as it has to provide for the collection of debts which may be due to a resident of the state from debtors residing beyond its jurisdiction. A taxpayer is just as essential to a valid tax levy as an obligor is to the creation of a valid debt.

Reno, Non-Residents, §§ 25, 136; Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714, 24 L. ed. 565; Picquet v. Swan, 5 Mason, 35, Fed. Cas. No. 11,134; McGoon v. Seales, 9 Wall. 23, 19 L. ed. 545; Drake, Attachm. § 57; Waples, Attachm. § 32.

There is no constitutional objection to the right of the state to subject the property of a nonresident, when found within its limits, to the discharge of a valid tax which has been levied, which could not be urged with the same force against an attempt on the part of the state to attach the property of a nonresident to pay the claim of one of its citizens.

State v. Meyer, 41 La. Ann. 439, 6 So. 590; 27 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 791; Hall v. American Refrigerator Transit Co. 24 Colo. 291, 56 L. R. A. 89, 65 Am. St. Rep. 223, 51 Pac. 421.

Taxes levied on account of personal property belonging to a resident of New York, having a situs for taxation in the state of Minnesota, were held, by virtue of a statute of Minnesota, to be a debt which might be proved against the estate of a nonresident owner, and collectible out of other property within the state than the very property taxed.

Bristol v. Washington County, 177 U. S. 133, 44 L. ed. 701, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585.

The right to collect taxes assessed on account of property belonging to a nonresident having a taxing situs within a state, by any means, including that of distraint, is not objectionable so far as the means used do not extend the operation of a state statute beyond the territorial limits of the state.

Bristol v. Washington County, 177 U. S. 133, 44 L. ed. 701, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585.

The right of appellant, as treasurer of Franklin county, to proceed against either the bonds of the United States deposited by the Scottish Union & National Insurance Company, with the superintendent of insurance of the state of Ohio, or any other personal property belonging to the company found within his county, to pay taxes charged on the tax duplicate of the county in the name of such company, is consistent with the decisions of this court in Bristol v. Washington County, 177 U. S. 133, 44 L. ed. 701, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585, and Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 18, 35 L. ed. 613, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 595, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 876.

Marye v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 127 U. S. 117, 32 L. ed. 94, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1037.

The bonds of the United States owned by a nonresident are subject to distraint or attachment to satisfy a charge against the owner thereof.

Plummer v. Coler, 178 U. S. 115, 44 L. ed. 998, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 829; 27 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 791.

It was not material whether the property omitted, or not returned for taxation, was or was not in the county at the time the county auditor was making his inquiries and corrections.

Sturges v. Carter, 114 U. S. 511-518, 29 L. ed. 240-242, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1014; Winnona & St. P. Land Co. v. Minnesota, 159 U. S. 526, 40 L. ed. 247, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 83; Weyerhaeuser v. Minnesota, 176 U. S. 550, 44 L. ed. 583, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485; Gager v. Prout, 48 Ohio St. 89, 26 N. E. 1013.

Messrs. Augustus T. Seymour, Edward L. Taylor, Jr., and Karl T. Webber also filed a supplemental brief for Bowland et al.:

The taxation provided for foreign insurance companies by Ohio Rev. Stat., § 2745, is not a tax upon property, but a tax upon the privilege of doing business within the state.

State ex rel. New England Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Reinmund, 45 Ohio St. 214, 13 N. E. 30; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Mayer, 28 Ohio St. 522.

A state can impose an obligation upon a nonresident to pay a tax on account of property belonging to such nonresident having a situs for taxation, and being taxed, within such state.

Bristol v. Washington County, 177 U. S. 133, 44 L. ed. 701, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585; Marye v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 127 U. S. 117, 32 L. ed. 94, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1037; Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 18, 35 L. ed. 613, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 595, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 876; American Refrigerator Transit Co. v. Hall, 174 U. S. 70, 43 L. ed. 899, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 599; Union Refrigerator Transit Co. v. Lynch, 177 U. S. 149, 44 L. ed. 708, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 631; Florida, C. & P. R. Co. v. Reynolds, 183 U. S. 475, 46 L. ed. 285, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 176.

The definition of taxes, that they are obligations created by legislative authority, is based upon the theory that the owner of property is charged by law with the duty of contributing to the support of that government which affords protection to his property.

Desty, Taxn. § 6; Florida, C. & P. R. Co. v. Reynolds, 183 U. S. 475, 46 L. ed. 285, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 176; Bristol v. Washington County, 177 U. S. 133, 145, 44 L. ed. 701, 707, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585.

196 U. S.

Mr. Justice Day, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

These cases may be considered together, as they are appeals from a single decree, and involve the right to assess and collect taxes upon the municipal bonds deposited by the insurance company under the laws of Ohio.

A considerable part of the opinion of the court below and the discussion in the briefs of counsel goes to the question of the *pow- [620] er of the state to tax bonds, held as these were, within its jurisdiction. At the oral argument, however, the learned counsel representing the insurance company conceded that there was legislative power to impose the taxes in question. A reference to the decisions of this court makes it perfectly plain that such taxation is within the power of the state. New Orleans v. Stemple, 175 U. S. 309, 44 L. ed. 174, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110; Bristol v. Washington County, 177 U. S. 133, 44 L. ed. 701, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585; Blackstone v. Miller, 188 U. S. 189, 47 L. ed. 439, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277; State Assessors v. Comptoir National D'Escompte, 191 U. S. 388, 403, 48 L. ed. 232, 238, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 109; Carstairs v. Cochran, 193 U. S. 10, 48 L. ed. 596, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 318.

The contention for the company is, that conceding the power of the state, it has never been exercised in the only way to make it effectual, which is by statutory enactment, and that the policy and statutes of Ohio have never authorized taxation of bonds deposited under the conditions shown in this case.

The question therefore, is, Have the statutes of Ohio, read in the light of the construction placed upon them by the supreme court of the state, conferred the right to tax these municipal bonds?

Before entering upon a consideration of the statutes we may say, in general terms, that we agree with the learned counsel for the insurance company, that the scheme of taxation of personal property in Ohio involves the requirement that it shall be returned or listed by some person or corporation whose duty it is by law to return or list such property. Provision is not made for assessing or taxing personal property by proceedings in rem, but before a recovery for taxes can be justified, either by action or distraint, it must appear that it was required to be returned for the purpose of taxation under some law of the state.

The proceedings under which the taxes for the years included in this case were charged against the insurance company by the auditor of Franklin county are under a statute (Ohio Rev. Stat. § 2781a) having for its purpose the correction of returns by those whose duty it was to return *property for [621] taxation, and making correction of returns so as to include property which should have been returned, but had been omitted, by some person charged by law with that duty.

623

Was it the duty of the insurance company or any one acting for it to return these municipal bonds for taxation? They were required to be deposited under § 3660, Ohio Rev. Stat. as amended, which reads as follows:

"Sec. 3660. [Certain companies must make deposit.].—A company incorporated by, or organized under, the laws of a foreign government, shall deposit with the superintendent of insurance, for the benefit and security of its policy holders residing in this state, a sum not less than one hundred thousand dollars in stocks or bonds of the United States, or the state of Ohio, or any municipality or county thereof, which shall not be received by the superintendent at a rate above their par value; the stocks and securities so deposited may be exchanged from time to time for other like securities; so long as the company so depositing continues solvent and complies with the laws of this state, it shall be permitted by the superintendent to collect the interest or dividends on such deposits; and for the purpose of this chapter the capital of any foreign company doing fire insurance business in this state shall be deemed to be the aggregate value of its deposits with the insurance or other departments of this state and of the other states of the United States, for the benefit of policy holders in this state, or in the United States, and its assets and investments in the United States, certified according to the provisions of this chapter; but such assets and investments must be held within the United States and invested in and held by trustees, who must be citizens of the United States, appointed by the board of directors of the company, and approved by the insurance commissioner of the state where invested, for the benefit of the policy holders and creditors in the United States; and the trustees so chosen may take, hold, and convey real and personal property for the purpose of the trust, [622] subject *to the same restrictions as companies of this state." [91 v. 40; 70 v. 147, § 21; (S. & S. 212).]

This section is part of the chapter of the Ohio statutes regulating insurance companies other than life. In the same chapter may be found other sections regulating the manner of doing business in Ohio by insurance companies, and in § 3637 we find a provision as to how the capital of domestic insurance companies shall be invested, and such companies are required to invest their capital in certain United States, state, county, and municipal bonds, etc. These domestic companies are in like manner required to deposit such securities with the commissioner for the benefit of their policy holders (Ohio Rev. Stat. §§ 3593, 3595), and without such deposit are not authorized to do business within the state. As a condition of doing business in Ohio, companies organized under the laws of foreign governments are, by § 3660, required to invest a portion of their capital in the stock or bonds of the United States or of the state of Ohio, or some municipality or county thereof, and make deposit of such bonds with the superintendent of insurance for the benefit of local policy holders. Subsequent provisions of the section further show that this deposit is to be regarded as a part of the capital of such foreign insurance company, which may be considered in determining the aggregate capital of the company required by law. The companies are permitted to collect the interest or dividends on the securities. These deposits constitute a fund primarily for the benefit of such policy holders, and after their claims are satisfied may be turned over to an assignee or devoted to other purposes. Falkenbach v. Patterson, 43 Ohio St. 359, 1 N. E. 757; State v. Matthews, 64 Ohio St. 419, 60 N. E. 605.

624

This statute, therefore, provides for the manner of investment of a portion of the capital stock of a foreign insurance company within the state of Ohio for the protection of the policy holders within the state. It is more than a mere "investment in bonds." It is also a part of the capital stock required to be deposited as a condition of doing business *within the state, and de-[623] voted to the benefit of local stockholders.

The authority to enact laws for the imposition of taxes is found in the Constitution of the state, article 12, § 2, which provides: "Laws shall be passed, taxing by a uniform rule all moneys, credits, investments in bonds, stocks, joint stock companies, or otherwise; and also all real and personal property, according to its true value in money."

Section 2731 provides, in language similar to that used in the Constitution, for the taxation of all property, real and personal, in the state, and all moneys, credits, investments in bonds, stock, or otherwise, of persons residing in the state. This section is found in the first chapter of Title 13, "Taxation," of the Ohio Statutes, and is in part in the following language:

"Sec. 2731. All property, whether real or personal, in this state, and whether belonging to individuals or corporations; and all moneys, credits, investments in bonds, stocks, or otherwise, of persons residing in this state, shall be subject to taxation, except only such as may be expressly exempted therefrom; and such property, moneys, credits, and investments shall be entered on the list of taxable property as prescribed in this title."

The argument for the insurance company is, that this preliminary section, read with the other sections of the Ohio law upon the subject, excludes "investment in bonds" from being embraced in a general description of personal property, and limits their taxation to persons residing in the state, or (under § 2730) where they are held within the state for others by persons residing therein.

Section 2730 of the same chapter is a section giving definitions of terms used in the title. So far as it is pertinent in this connection, that section is as follows:

"Sec. 2730. The terms 'investments in bonds' shall be held to mean and include all moneys in bonds or certificates of indebtedness, or other evidences of indebtedness, *of whatever kind, whether issued by incorporated or unincorporated companies, towns, cities, villages, townships, counties, states, or other incorporations, or by the United States, held by persons residing in this state, whether for themselves or others."

If these sections embraced all the statutory law of the state, together, they tax investments in bonds held by residents, because of jurisdiction over the person of the owner, and those held by residents for other owners, and if such reside out of the state, because of jurisdiction over the property held within the state.

Section 2744 undertakes to make provision for the taxation of corporations generally, and is as follows:

"Sec. 2744. [Corporations generally; their returns.].—The president, secretary, and principal accounting officer of every canal or slackwater navigation company, turnpike company, plank-road company, bridge company, insurance company, telegraph company, or other joint stock company, except banking or other corporations whose taxation is specifically provided for, for whatever purpose they may have been created, whether incorporated by any law of this state or not, shall list for taxation, verified by the oath of the person so listing, all the personal property, which shall be held to include all such real estate as is necessary to the daily operations of the company, moneys and credits of such company or corporation within the state, at the actual value in money, in manner following: In all cases return shall be made to the several auditors of the respective counties where such property may be situated, together with a statement of the amount of said property which is situated in each township, village, city, or ward therein. The value of all movable property shall be added to the stationary and fixed property and real estate, and apportioned to such wards, cities, villages, or townships, pro rata, in proportion to the value of the real estate and fixed property in said ward, city, village, or township, and all property so listed shall be subject to and pay the same taxes as other property *listed in such ward, city, village, or township. It shall be the duty of the accounting officer aforesaid to make return to the auditor of state during the month of May of each year of the aggregate amount of all property by him returned to the several auditors of the respective counties in which the same may be located. It shall be the duty of the auditor of each county, on or before the first Monday of May, annually, to furnish the aforesaid president, secretary, principal accounting officer, or agent the necessary blanks for the purpose of making aforesaid returns; but no neglect or failure on the part of the county auditor to furnish such blanks shall excuse any such president, secretary, principal accountant, or agent from making the returns within the time specified herein. If the county auditor to whom returns are made is of the opinion that false or incorrect valuations have been made, or that the property of the corporation or association has not been listed at its full value, or that it has not been listed in the location where it properly belongs, or in cases where no return has been made to the county auditor, he is hereby required to proceed to have the same valued and assessed: Provided, That nothing in this section shall be so construed as to tax any stock or interest in any joint stock company held by the state." [73 v. 139, § 16; (S. & C. 1446).]

This section is broad in its terms, and requires the return of the property, among others, of insurance companies, whether incorporated by the laws of Ohio or not, and such companies are required to list for taxation "all the personal property, which shall be held to include all such real estate as is necessary to the daily operations of the company, moneys and credits of such company or corporation within the state, at its actual value in money."

The supreme court of Ohio has expressly held that this section applies to foreign as well as domestic corporations. Hubbard v. Brush, 61 Ohio St. 252, 55 N. E. 829; Lander v. Burke, 65 Ohio St. 532-542, 63 N. E. 69.

This section, therefore, requires of both foreign and domestic *insurance companies that they return the personal property mentioned which is within the state. What is meant by "personal property," in this connection? Referring to § 2730 we find it provided that the terms "personal property," when used in the title, shall be held to mean and include, among other things, the capital stock, undivided profits, and all other means not forming a part of the capital stock of every company.

In the case of domestic corporations, and assuming that this statute applies, as has been held by the supreme court of Ohio, with equal force to foreign corporations, this definition of personal property must be held to include not only the paid-in capital stock of the company, but as well the bonds or securities in which it may be invested.

This question was before the supreme court of Ohio in Jones v. Davis, 35 Ohio St. 474.

In that case the act of May 11, 1878, was before the court. It contained provisions similar to those of the Revised Statutes, requiring personal property of every description, moneys and credits, investments in bonds, stock, joint-stock companies, or otherwise, to be listed in the name of the person who is the owner thereof on the day preceding the second Monday of April in each year.

Section 11 of that act made provisions similar to those found in § 2744, requiring incorporated companies to list for taxation all their personal property which, by the terms of the statute, was made to include all such real estate as was necessary to the daily operation of the company, and all its moneys and credits within the state at their actual value in money. After citing Bank Tax Case, 2 Wall. 208, 17 L. ed. 795, and Farrington v. Tennessee, 95 U. S. 686, 24 L. ed. 560, Judge Boynton, delivering the opinion of the court, said:

"For the purposes of taxation, the capital stock is represented by whatever it is invested in. Personal property, by the express wording of the statute, is made to include the capital stock of a corporation; and [627] the provision above referred* to requires all corporations doing business in this state, except banking and others whose taxation is specifically provided for, to list all their personal property, including in the return thereof all such real estate as is necessary to the daily operation of their business, together with their moneys and credits of every description within the state. That the legislature intended, by this description of property, to embrace the capital stock of the company, is too obvious to be misunderstood. No other meaning can be drawn from the language employed, and no other construction is better calculated to do justice."

In Lee v. Sturges, 46 Ohio St. 153, 160, 2 L. R. A. 556, 558, 19 N. E. 560, 564, Judge Spear, speaking for the court, said:

"It may be assumed that 'capital stock' and 'capital and property' mean practically the same thing. Primarily the 'capital stock' is the money paid in by the stockholders, in compliance with the terms of their subscriptions. It soon, however, takes the form of real estate or personal property, or both, including machinery, buildings, credits, rights in action, etc. So that it may here be taken to mean personal property, and such real estate as may be necessary to the daily operations of the company, and its moneys and credits. The capital is thus represented by the property in which it has been invested."

We think this language pertinent in the consideration of the case before us. While technically the bonds deposited with the insurance commissioner are investments in bonds, they are also a part of the capital stock of the company invested in Ohio, and required to be so invested for the security of domestic policy holders, and, for the purposes of taxation, to be considered a part of the capital stock of the company, and included within the definition of "personal property," as given in § 2730.

This conclusion is reinforced by the decision in Hubbard v. Brush, 61 Ohio St. 252, 55 N. E. 829. In that case the supreme court of Ohio held that a foreign corporation transacting business in Ohio was required to return its property within the state where *it was carrying on business, al-[628] though the corporation was organized under the laws of West Virginia.

The court admitted that the situs of intangible property is ordinarily at the local residence of the corporation, within the state where it was incorporated. Nevertheless, as the promissory notes and book accounts and other evidence of indebtedness must be presumed to have been in the company's office in this state, they were taxable as personal property under § 2744.

In the course of the opinion Judge Bradbury said:

"Where foreign corporations voluntarily bring their property and business into this state to avail themselves of advantages found here, which they believe will enhance the probabilities that the business they intend to pursue will be profitable, they should not be heard to complain of laws which tax them as domestic corporations are taxed by the state. We hold, therefore, that the provisions of § 2744, which make it the duty of foreign corporations to list for taxation in this state their choses in action, where they are held within this state and grow out of the business they conduct herein, is a valid exercise of the taxing powers vested in the state."

Under § 2744, corporations, foreign and domestic, are required to return all personal property for taxation, which, among other things, the statute expressly declares shall include moneys and credits of such company or corporation within the state. If the construction contended for shall prevail, a corporation, with capital invested in bonds, would escape taxation, while one holding its investments in notes or certificates of deposit in bank will be compelled to return them for taxation,—a condition of things so manifestly unjust that we cannot hold it to have been within the intent of the legislature in framing taxing laws unless the statutes clearly admit of no other construction. The purpose of the Ohio Constitution and statutes passed in pursuance thereof, as has been frequently declared by the supreme court of Ohio, is to tax, by a uniform rule, all property owned or held [629] within the state. *A narrow construction, which will defeat this purpose, should not be adopted.

The statutes, specifically mentioning "investments in bonds," were intended to reach and tax, and not to exempt, that class of personal property. The purpose to tax all real and personal property, declared in the statute, was further emphasized by express mention of certain classes of property, such as investments in bonds, so that, by no process of exclusion, could such securities escape the burdens imposed upon all property owned or held within the state.

The sections taxing individuals holding such securities were not intended to put limitations upon other sections of the law taxing the property of corporations held within the state, and enjoying the protection of its laws, and affording a basis for credit in the transacting of business. There is no reason why the law should tax such securities in the hands of individual residents, whether owned or held by them for others, and permit them to escape taxation when they represent invested capital of incorporated companies, sharing the protection of the government and equally bound, in morals, at least, to help bear the burdens of the state.

That such securities might justly be taxed was freely admitted in the argument at bar, and the sole contention was that the lack of statutory power to tax these securities is a casus omissus in legislation which the courts cannot supply.

It may be conceded that no tax can be levied without express authority of law, but the statutes are to receive a reasonable construction with a view to carrying out their purpose and intent.

We have examined the decisions of the supreme court of Ohio, cited by counsel, construing the statutes of the state, and believe none of them to be inconsistent with the conclusions we have reached, and those above cited, in our opinion, are direct authority for the construction given. All the sections must be construed together to attain the object and intent of the law. Section 2731, standing alone, might limit the *right to tax investments in bonds to resi-[630]dents of the state. It is certainly enlarged by § 2730 to include such investments when held for others by residents within the state. Read with §§ 2734, 2735, 2744, and 2746, we think the purpose is manifest to require the return and taxation of all personal property, except the small exemptions allowed, within the jurisdiction of the state.

But it is urged if § 2744 could otherwise be held to require a return of these bonds by the insurance company, that the company comes within the exception of the statute excluding banking or other corporations whose taxation is specifically provided for in other parts of the title. And it is argued that § 2745 of the Revised Statutes of Ohio makes express provision for the taxation of foreign insurance companies.

Examination of this section shows that it imposes a tax upon the business of the company in Ohio, and is not a property but a privilege tax. Insurance companies are required to return in each county the amount of the gross premium receipts of its agency for the previous calendar year, and, under certain regulations, the company is taxed upon the amount of business done.

This section does not levy a tax upon property. There are subsequent statutory provisions of a special character, upon which the exception of § 2744 may operate, taxing the property of railroad companies, banks, express, telegraph, and telephone companies, etc., but there is no other provision imposing a property tax upon foreign insurance companies within the state.

The requirement that these bonds should be deposited for the security of the local policy holders brought a part of the capital of such company into the state of Ohio, upon the strength of which it transacts its business and obtains credit within the state. Clearly, such property is not intended to be taxed within the provisions reaching the business done in the state of Ohio under § 2745.

*But it is said that there is no person [631] within the state required to return this property. We think it is the duty of the officers of the insurance company, under § 2744, to return the property, and that the place to return it is where the property is situated. This is clearly required by the terms of this section, and § 2735, making provision for the place of listing personal property, provides:

"And all other personal property, moneys, credits, and investments, except as otherwise specially provided, shall be listed in the township, city, or village in which the person to be charged with taxes thereon may reside at the time of the listing thereof, if such person reside within the county where the same are listed, and if not, then in the township, city, or village where the property is when listed."

These bonds were the property of the corporation, taxable under the statutes, and, at the time when they should have been listed, were held in the city of Columbus, Franklin county, Ohio, and should have been there returned.

It is further argued that to distrain the property of the company for the collection of these taxes would be a violation of the constitutional rights of the insurance company, and the taking of its property without due process of law. Section 1095 provides:

"Sec. 1095. [Overdue taxes may be collected by distress.].—When taxes are past due and unpaid, as stated in the preceding section, the county treasurer, or his deputy, may distrain sufficient goods and chattels belonging to the person or persons charged with such taxes, if found within his county, to pay the taxes so remaining due and the costs that have accrued; and shall immediately proceed to advertise the same in three public places in the township where such property was taken, stating the time when, and the place where, such property will be sold; and if the taxes and costs which have accrued thereon are not paid before the day appointed for such sale, which shall be not less than ten days after the taking of such property, such treasurer, or his deputy, shall [632] proceed to sell such property *at public vendue, or so much thereof as will be sufficient to pay said taxes and the costs of such distress and sale. [29 v. 281, § 19; S. & C. 1586.]"

This section authorizes the distraint of goods to satisfy taxes lawfully levied against property within the county and state. This method of collecting taxes is one of the most ancient known to the law, and has frequently received the sanction of the courts. Den ex dem. Murray v. Hoboken Land & Improv. Co. 18 How. 272, 276, 15 L. ed. 372, 374; Springer v. United States, 102 U. S. 586, 26 L. ed. 253; Cooley, Taxn. 302; Palmer v. McMahon, 133 U. S. 660, 33 L. ed. 772, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 324.

There is nothing in the exemption of government bonds from taxation which prevents them from being seized for taxes due upon unexempt property. We have held that the taxes were lawfully assessed. The statute authorizing a distraint gave the right to proceed against personal property within the jurisdiction of the state. The taxes were lawful, and the property belonging to a foreign corporation which could be seized within the authority of the state might be taken under this statute, and we do not perceive that any constitutional right of the company is violated by seizing its property under such circumstances. Bristol v. Washington County, 177 U. S. 133, 44 L. ed. 701, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585; Marye v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 127 U. S. 117, 32 L. ed. 94, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1037.

As to the right to assess taxes for the year 1903, it appears that these municipal bonds were withdrawn from the state some time before the return day, which is the day preceding the second Monday in April, and such withdrawal was in the exercise of a lawful right of the company so to do, and other securities were substituted, as provided by law. We do not think that the fact that it had bonds in the state for a time which were taxable justified the imposition of this tax, where the nontaxable securities were substituted before the return day.

As to the question of personal liability of the insurance company to judgment in an action brought to recover the amount of the taxes, we think the court should not have issued an injunction, as was done, against the prosecution of civil suits *for this purpose. [633] If there is no personal liability for these taxes,—a point which we do not feel called upon to decide,—it is perfectly clear that, if service could be had which would make a personal judgment proper, the company could set up its defense by answer in the action at law, and there is no necessity to resort to a court of equity for relief. It will be presumed, if the claim of the company is right, no personal judgment will be rendered against it, and, if its theory of the controversy is correct, no such judgment can be lawfully rendered. In such case the authorities are uniform that equity will not interfere by injunction, but leave the party to his defense at law. U. S. Rev. Stat. § 723, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 583; Phoenix Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Bailey, 13 Wall. 616-623, 20 L. ed. 501-503; Grand Chute v. Winegar, 15 Wall. 373, 21 L. ed. 174; Deweese v. Reinhard, 165 U. S. 386, 41 L. ed. 757, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 340.

Upon the whole case we reach the conclusion that the circuit court was right in sustaining the demurrer so far as the bill averred the nontaxability of these bonds, or the right of the treasurer to proceed by distraint, and in overruling the demurrer as to the taxes for the year 1903; but, for the reasons stated, erred in enjoining the prosecution of a civil action seeking a personal judgment.

In this view, the decree below will be reversed and the cause remanded for further proceedings in conformity to this opinion.

MEMORANDA

OF

CASES DISPOSED OF WITHOUT OPINIONS.

[635]*SAMUEL A. V. HARTWELL, Appellant, v. JOHN H. HAVIGHORST. [No. 106.]

Appeal from the Supreme Court of the Territory of Oklahoma.

See same case below, 11 Okla. 189, 66 Pac. 337, and see Paine v. Foster, 9 Okla. 213, 257, 53 Pac. 109, 59 Pac. 252; Acers v. Snyder, 8 Okla. 659, 58 Pac. 780.

Messrs. William C. Prentiss and James R. Keaton for appellant.

Mr. A. G. C. Bierer for appellee.

December 19, 1904. Decree affirmed with costs. Johnson v. Towsley, 13 Wall. 72, 20 L. ed. 485; Marquez v. Frisbie, 101 U. S. 473, 25 L. ed. 800; Quinby v. Conlan, 104 U. S. 420, 26 L. ed. 800; Gardner v. Bonestell, 180 U. S. 362, 45 L. ed. 574, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399; Potter v. Hall, 189 U. S. 292, 47 L. ed. 817, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 545; Payne v. Robertson, 169 U. S. 323, 42 L. ed. 764, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337.

EX PARTE: IN THE MATTER OF EDWARD E. BESSETTE, Petitioner. [No. —, Original.]

Motion for Leave to File Petition for a Writ of Mandamus.

Mr. William Velpeau Rooker for petitioner.

December 19, 1904. Denied.

UNITED STATES, Appellant, v. JOCK COE [No. 314]; UNITED STATES, Appellant, v. BONG MENG [No. 315]; UNITED STATES, Appellant, v. WOO JOE [No. 316].

Appeals from the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of Ohio.

See same case below, 128 Fed. 199.

The Attorney General and Assistant Attorney General McReynolds for appellant.

Mr. J. P. Dawley for appellees.

January 9, 1905. Final orders and decrees reversed, and causes remanded for further proceedings in conformity to law. Re United States, 194 U. S. 194, 48 L. ed. 931, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 629; Pong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U. S. 698, 37 L. ed. 905, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1016; *Chin Bak Kan v. United States, 186 U. S. 193, 46 L. ed. 1121, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 891; Ah How v. United States, 193 U. S. 65, 48 L. ed. 619, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; United States v. Sing Tuck, 194 U. S. 161, 48 L. ed. 917, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 621.

196 U. S. U. S., Book 49.

EX PARTE: IN THE MATTER OF THOMAS E. BARRETT, Petitioner [No. —, Original];

EX PARTE: IN THE MATTER OF JOHN P. DOLAN, Petitioner [No. —, Original];

EX PARTE: IN THE MATTER OF FRANK GARRETT, Petitioner [No. —, Original].

Motions for Leave to File Petitions for Writs of Habeas Corpus.

Messrs. Chester H. Krum and James L. Minnis for petitioners.

January 9, 1905. Denied.

NG HONG LI, Appellant, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 140.]

Appeal from the District Court of the United States for the Eastern District of New York.

Messrs. Max J. Kohler and Jas. A. Donegan for appellant.

The Attorney General and Assistant Attorney General Robb for appellee.

January 23, 1905. Judgment affirmed, on the authority of Ah How v. United States, 193 U. S. 65, 48 L. ed. 619, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357, and cases cited.

F. M. WIRGMAN et al., Appellants, v. H. H. PERSONS et al., Receivers, etc. [No. 189.]

Appeal from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit.

See same case below, 62 C. C. A. 63, 126 Fed. 449-454.

Mr. F. H. Busbee for appellants.

Mr. Norris Morey for appellees.

January 23, 1905. Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. United States v. Jahn, 155 U. S. 110, 39 L. ed. 88, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 39; McLish v. Roff, 141 U. S. 661, 35 L. ed. 893, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 118; Robinson v. Caldwell, 165 U. S. 359, 41 L. ed. 745, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 343; *American Sugar Ref. Co. v. New Orleans, 181 U. S. 277, 45 L. ed. 859, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 646; Ayres v. Poldersfer, 187 U. S. 585, 47 L. ed. 314, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 196; Colorado Central Consol. Min. Co. v. Turek, 150 U. S. 138, 37 L. ed. 1030, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 35; Ex parte Jones, 164 U. S. 691, 41 L. ed. 601, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 222.

Petition for a writ of certiorari denied.

BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF RIVERSIDE COUNTY, CAL., et al., Plaintiffs in Error, v. ROBERT H. THOMPSON. [No. 156.]

In Error to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

See same case below, 122 Fed. 860, 54 C. A. 336, 116 Fed. 832.

Mr. John D. Works for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. C. C. Wright for defendant in error.

January 30, 1905. Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. Press Pub. Co. v. Monroe, 164 U. S. 105, 41 L. ed. 367, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40; Ex parte Jones, 164 U. S. 691, 41 L. ed. 601, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 222; Benjamin v. New Orleans, 139 U. S. 161, 42 L. ed. 700, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 298; Rouse v. Letcher, 156 U. S. 47, 39 L. ed. 341, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 266; Gregory v. Van Ee, 160 U. S. 643, 40 L. ed. 566, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431.

THOMAS DENNISON, Plaintiff in Error, v. GEORGE M. CHRISTIAN. [No. 510.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Nebraska.

See same case below (Neb.) 101 N. W. 1045.

Messrs. W. J. Connell, C. J. Smyth, and E. P. Smith for plaintiff in error.

Mr. H. C. Brome for defendant in error.

January 30, 1905. Judgment affirmed, with costs. Munsey v. Clough, 196 U. S. 364, ante, 515, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 282; Hyatt v. New York, 188 U. S. 691, 47 L. ed. 657, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 456; Roberts v. Reilly, 116 U. S. 80, 29 L. ed. 544, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 291; Dower v. Richards, 151 U. S. 658, 38 L. ed. 305, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 452; Egan v. Hart, 165 U. S. 188, 41 L. ed. 680, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 300; Blythe v. Hinckley, 180 U. S. 333, 45 L. ed. 557, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 390.

EMMA THOMAS et al., Plaintiffs in Error, v. [638] *JOSEPH P. BLAIR et al., Executors. [No. 388.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Louisiana.

See same case below, 111 La. 678, 35 So. 811.

Messrs. Henry L. Lazarus, Henry Denis, Elihu Root, and John G. Johnson for plaintiffs in error.

Messrs. George Denegre and Chas. Payne Fenner for defendants in error.

February 20, 1905. Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. Marrow v. Brinkley, 129 U. S. 178, 32 L. ed. 654, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 267; Israel v. Arthur, 152 U. S. 355, 362, 38 L. ed. 474, 478, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 583; Central Land Co. v. Laidley, 159 U. S. 103, 112, 48 L. ed. 91, 95, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80; Harrison v. Morton, 171 U. S. 38, 43 L. ed. 63, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 742; Pierce v. Somerset R. Co. 171 U. S. 641, 43 L. ed. 316, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 64.

630

JAMES L. LOMBARD, Petitioner, v. ANGLO-AMERICAN LAND MORTGAGE & AGENCY COMPANY, LIMITED [No. 454]; B. LOMBARD, JR., Petitioner, v. ANGLO-AMERICAN LAND MORTGAGE & AGENCY COMPANY, LIMITED [No. 455]; CHESHIRE PROVIDENT INSTITUTION, Petitioner, v. FREDERICK HERBERT RAMSDEN [No. 456]; KEENE FIVE CENT SAVINGS BANK, Petitioner, v. FREDERICK HERBERT RAMSDEN [No. 457].

Petition for Writs of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

See same case below, 132 Fed. 721.

Mr. Frank Hagerman for petitioners.

Mr. John A. Eaton for respondents.

December 19, 1904. Denied.

EDWARD E. BESSETTE, Petitioner, v. W. B. CONKEY COMPANY. [No. 470.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

See same case below, 133 Fed. 165.

Mr. Wm. Velpeau Rooker for petitioner.

Messrs. Jacob Newman, Benj. V. Becker, and Solomon O. Levinson for respondent.

January 3, 1905. Denied.

*SHEWAN TOMES & Co., Petitioner, v. MER- [639] CHANTS' BANKING COMPANY, LIMITED. [No. 475.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 134 Fed. 727.

Messrs. Harrington Putnam and Appleton L. Clark for petitioner.

Mr. Frederick M. Brown for respondent.

January 9, 1905. Denied.

CITY OF DAVENPORT, Petitioner, v. WILLIAM RUSSELL ALLEN et al. [No. 471.]

Petition for Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

See same case below, 132 Fed. 209.

Mr. Joe R. Lane for petitioner.

Mr. Frederick N. Judson for respondents.

January 16, 1905. Denied.

CHARLES W. MORSE et al., Petitioners, v. READING COMPANY, Claimant, etc. [No. 465.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the First Circuit.

See same case below, 64 C. C. A. 228, 129 Fed. 700.

Mr. Eugene P. Carver and Edward E. Blodgett for petitioners.

Messrs. Robert M. Morse and Wm. M. Richardson for respondent.

January 23, 1905. Denied.

196 U. S.

AUGUSTUS L. SHAFFER, Petitioner, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 488.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

See same case below, 33 Wash. L. Rep. 4.

Messrs. Henry E. Davis, D. W. Baker, and Wilton J. Lambert for petitioner.

The Attorney General and Solicitor General Hoyt for respondent.

January 23, 1905. Denied.

[640] THOMAS F. HOLDEN, Petitioner, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 474.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

See same case below, 33 Wash. L. Rep. 34.

Messrs. R. Ross Perry and R. Ross Perry, Jr., for petitioner.

The Attorney General and Solicitor General Hoyt for respondent.

January 30, 1905. Denied.

GEORGE E. LORENZ et al., Petitioners, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 490.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

See same case below, 32 Wash. L. Rep. 822.

Messrs. Conrad H. Syme, Samuel Maddox, and Charles A. Douglass for petitioners.

The Attorney General, Solicitor General Hoyt, and Assistant Attorney General Purdy for respondent.

January 30, 1905. Denied.

MINERAL DEVELOPMENT COMPANY, Petitioner, v. WINFIELD SCOTT et al. [No. 506.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

See same case below, 64 C. C. A. 659, 130 Fed. 497.

Mr. S. B. Dishman for petitioner.

No appearance for respondents.

January 30, 1905. Denied.

RUSSIA CEMENT COMPANY, Petitioner, v. ABRAHAM B. FRAUENHAR et al. [No. 508.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 133 Fed. 518.

Messrs. John F. Dillon and John Dane, Jr., for petitioner.

Mr. Ralph Nathan for respondents.

January 30, 1905. Denied.

ALBERT R. MOULTON, Petitioner, v. GEORGE M. COBURN et al. [No. 511.]

[641] Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the First Circuit.

See same case below, 131 Fed. 201.

196 U. S.

Messrs. Charles P. Searle and Lee M. Friedman for petitioner.

Mr. Frederic D. McKenney for respondents.

January 30, 1905. Denied.

EDWARD H. HARRIMAN et al., Petitioners, v. NORTHERN SECURITIES COMPANY. [No. 512.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.

Messrs. William D. Guthrie, R. S. Lovett, D. T. Watson, John F. Dillon, and Maxwell Evarts for petitioners.

Messrs. John G. Johnson, Elihu Root, Francis Lynde Stetson, and John W. Griggs for respondent.

January 30, 1905. Granted.

WILLIAM E. BROWN, Petitioner, v. FIRST NATIONAL BANK OF NEWTON, KAN. [No. 467.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

See same case below, 132 Fed. 450.

Mr. Wm. Eugene Brown for petitioner.

Mr. David Overmyer for respondent.

February 20, 1905. Denied.

I. B. KLEINERT RUBBER COMPANY et al., Petitioners, v. ALBERT STEIN et al. [No. 502.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

See same case below, 133 Fed. 228.

Mr. Louis C. Raegener for petitioners.

Messrs. James H. Peirce, George P. Fisher, Jr., and Wm. Henry Dennis for respondents.

February 20, 1905. Denied.

AMERICAN ALKALI COMPANY, by ARTHUR K. BROWN, Surviving Receiver, Petitioner, v. PEDRO G. SALOM. [No. 507.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.

See same case below, 65 C. C. A. 284, 131 Fed. 46.

Mr. Reynolds D. Brown for petitioner.

Mr. Joseph C. Fraley for respondent.

February 20, 1905. Denied.

J. CAMPBELL THOMPSON, Petitioner, v. AUGUSTUS H. SKILLIN, Trustee, etc. [No. 518.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit or Other Writs.

See same case below, 134 Fed. 51.

Mr. Roger Foster for petitioner.

Mr. Wm. John Barr for respondent.

February 20, 1905. Denied.

BAQUERO & GANDARA et al., Appellants, v. A. RAUSCHENPLAT. [No. 300.]

Appeal from the District Court of the United States for the District of Porto Rico. Messrs. Frederic D. McKenney and J. Spalding Flannery for appellants.

No appearance for appellee.

December 19, 1904. Dismissed, with costs, on motion of Mr. J. Spalding Flannery for the appellants.

CHARLES H. BROOKS, Appellant, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 485.]

Appeal from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of California.

The Attorney General and Solicitor General Hoyt for appellee.

No counsel opposed.

January 3, 1905. Docketed and dismissed, on motion of Mr. Solicitor General Hoyt for the appellee.

CARL C. L. WULFF, Appellant, v. L. LINDSAY et al. [No. 486.]

Appeal from the Supreme Court of the Territory of Arizona.

Mr. Charles L. Frailey for appellees.

No counsel opposed.

January 3, 1905. Docketed and dismissed, with costs, on motion of Mr. Charles L. Frailey for the appellees.

[643]*WILLIAM R. LYTLE, Appellant, v. ADOLPHUS GERALD, Chief of Police of the City of Montgomery, Ala. [No. 124.]

Appeal from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Middle District of Alabama.

Mr. W. S. Reese, Jr., for appellant.

No appearance for appellee.

January 9, 1905. Dismissed, with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

TERRITORY OF OKLAHOMA ex rel. OKLAHOMA GAS & ELECTRIC COMPANY, Appellant, v. J. E. DE WOLFE et al. [No. 132.]

Appeal from the Supreme Court of the Territory of Oklahoma.

See same case below, 13 Okla. 454, 74 Pac. 98.

Mr. Charles B. Ames for appellant.

No appearance for appellees.

January 16, 1905. Dismissed, with costs, on authority of counsel for the appellant.

HARTFORD FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY OF CONNECTICUT et al., Appellants, v. JOHN C. PERKINS, Commissioner of Insurance. [No. 190.]

Appeal from the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of South Dakota.

See same case below, 125 Fed. 502.

Messrs. Abner E. Hitchcock and F. W. McReynolds for appellants.

No appearance for appellee.

January 17, 1905. Dismissed, with costs, on motion of Mr. F. W. McReynolds for the appellants.

ROBERT PHILPOT, Appellant, v. FULTON O'BRIEN et al. [No. 155.]

Appeal from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the First Circuit.

Mr. Edmund A. Whitman for appellant.

Mr. Frank H. Stewart for appellees.

January 20, 1905. Dismissed, with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

SOTIRIOS S. LONTOS CHARALAMBIS, Appellant, v. *WILLIAM WILLIAMS, Commissioner of Immigration, etc. [No. 127.]

Appeal from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York.

See same case below, 124 Fed. 637.

Mr. Alfred Hayes, Jr., for appellant.

No appearance for appellee.

January 23, 1905. Dismissed, with costs, on authority of counsel for appellant.

FRED SANDERS, Plaintiff in Error, v. COMMONWEALTH OF KENTUCKY. [No. 181.]

In Error to the Court of Appeals of the State of Kentucky.

Mr. Charles H. Gibson for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Napoleon B. Hays for defendant in error.

January 30, 1905. Dismissed, with costs, per stipulation.

MAX SCHUBACH, Plaintiff in Error, v. WARWICK HOUGH, Judge, etc., et al. [No. 187.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Missouri.

See same case below, 179 Mo. 133, 65 L. R. A. 136, 101 Am. St. Rep. 452, 78 S. W. 1020.

Messrs. Henry W. Bond and Frederick N. Judson for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. John F. Dillon and Martin L. Clardy for defendants in error.

February 20, 1905. Dismissed, with costs, on authority of counsel for the plaintiff in error.

RICHARD DILLON, Plaintiff in Error, v. FRANK MARES. [No. 252.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Montana.

See same case below (Mont.) 75 Pac. 969.

Mr. Thomas J. Walsh for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Henry G. McIntire for defendant in error.

February 20, 1905. Dismissed, with costs, on authority of counsel for the plaintiff in error.

CASES

ARGUED AND DECIDED

IN THE

SUPREME COURT

OF THE

UNITED STATES,

AT

OCTOBER TERM, 1904.

Vol. 197.

REFERENCE TABLE
 OF SUCH CASES
 DECIDED IN U. S. SUPREME COURT,
 OCTOBER TERM, 1904,
 AND REPORTED HEREIN,

VOLUME 197,

 AS ALSO APPEAR IN OFFICIAL REPORTER'S EDITION.

Off. Rep. 197 U. S.	Title.	Here in.	Off. Rep. 197 U. S.	Title.	Here in.
1	Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Ely	639	98-100	San Francisco Nat. Bank v.
2-5	"	640		Dodge	682
5-7	"	641	100-103	"	683
7-9	"	642	103-105	"	684
9-10	Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Hasse	642	105-108	"	685
10	"	643	108-110	"	686
11	Jacobson v. Massachusetts	643	110-112	"	687
12-14	"	647	112-115	"	688
14	"	648	115-117	National Cotton Oil Co. v.
22-23	"	648		Texas	689
23-26	"	649	117-118	"	690
26-28	"	650	127-128	"	693
28-31	"	651	128-130	"	694
31-34	"	652	130-133	"	695
34-35	"	653	133	"	696
35-38	"	654	134-135	Southern Cotton Oil Co. v.
38-39	"	655		Texas	696
40	Utermehle v. Norment	655	135	United States v. Whitridge	696
40-42	"	656	140-141	"	697
42-45	"	657	141-144	"	698
45-47	"	658	144-146	"	699
52-53	"	660	146	District of Columbia v. Barnes	699
53-56	"	661	147	"	700
56-58	"	662	149-150	"	700
58-60	"	663	150-153	"	701
60	Kehrer v. Stewart	663	153-154	"	702
61	"	664	154-155	McClaine v. Rankin	702
64-66	"	666	155-157	"	703
66-68	"	667	158	"	704
68-70	"	668	158-161	"	705
70	San Francisco Nat. Bank v.		161-163	"	706
	Dodge	669	163-166	"	707
75	"	672	166-168	"	708
75-78	"	673	168-169	"	709
78-80	"	674	169	Dallemagne v. Moisan	709
80-82	"	675	170-171	"	710
82-85	"	676	173-175	"	711
85-88	"	677	175-177	"	712
88-90	"	678	177-178	"	713
90-93	"	679	178	Dawson v. Columbia Avenue
93-95	"	680		Saving Fund, S. D. T. & T.
95-98	"	681		Co.	713

REFERENCE TABLE.

Off. Rep. 197 U. S.	Title.	Here in.	Off. Rep. 197 U. S.	Title.	Here in.
179-180	Davidson v. Columbia Avenue Saving Fund, S. D. T. & T. Co.	715	319-320	Chrisman v. Miller	772
180-182	" "	716	320-322	" "	773
182	" "	717	322-323	" "	774
183	Gregg v. Metropolitan Trust Co.	717	324-325	Strauss, Re	774
186-187	" "	718	325-326	" "	775
187-189	" "	719	329-331	" "	778
189-192	" "	720	331-334	" "	779
192-194	" "	721	334-335	Bishop v. United States	780
194-197	" "	721	336-337	" "	781
197	" "	723	337-339	" "	782
197-199	Caro v. Davidson	723	339-341	" "	783
199-200	" "	724	341-343	" "	784
200-201	United States v. Stinson	724	343	McMillen v. Ferrum Min. Co.	784
204-206	" "	725	343-345	" "	785
206-207	" "	726	345-346	" "	786
207-208	Clyatt v. United States	726	346-348	" "	787
208-209	" "	727	348	Carter v. Gear	787
215-217	" "	729	348-349	" "	788
217-219	" "	730	352-353	" "	788
219-222	" "	731	353-355	" "	789
222-223	" "	732	355	" "	790
223-224	United States v. Mills	732	356-357	Keppel v. Tiffin Savings Bank	790
224-226	" "	733	359	" "	790
226-229	" "	734	359-362	" "	791
229	" "	735	362-364	" "	792
230	Bartlett v. United States	735	364-367	" "	793
232	" "	735	367-369	" "	794
232-234	" "	736	369-372	" "	795
235	Greer County v. Texas	736	372-374	" "	796
240-242	" "	738	374-377	" "	797
242-243	" "	739	377-379	" "	798
244	Harriman v. Northern Securi- ties Co.	739	379-382	" "	799
245-247	" "	740	382-384	" "	800
247-249	" "	741	384-386	" "	801
249-252	" "	742	386	United States v. Smith	801
252-254	" "	743	386-387	" "	802
254-257	" "	744	391-392	" "	802
257-259	" "	745	392-393	" "	803
259-261	" "	746	394	Middletown Nat. Bank v. To- ledo, A. A. & N. M. R. Co.	803
286-288	" "	760	394-396	" "	804
288-291	" "	761	396-398	" "	805
291-294	" "	762	403-404	" "	809
294-296	" "	763	404-406	" "	810
296-299	" "	764	407	Pennsylvania Lumbermen's Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Meyer	810
299	" "	765	407-409	" "	811
299	Western Electrical Supply Co. v. Abbeville Elec. Light & P. Co.	765	409	" "	812
301-302	" "	765	412	" "	813
302-303	" "	766	412-415	" "	814
304	McMichael v. Murphy	766	415-417	" "	815
304-306	" "	768	417-419	" "	816
306	" "	769	419	{ Lincoln v. United States { Warner, Barnes, & Co. v. { United States	816
310-312	" "	769	427-428	" "	818
312-313	" "	770	428-429	" "	819
313-314	Chrisman v. Miller	770	430	Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Bar- ber Asphalt Pav. Co.	819
314-316	" "	771	432-434	" "	821
636			434-435	" "	822

REFERENCE TABLE

Off. Rep. 197 U. S.	Title.	Here In.	Off. Rep. 197 U. S.	Title.	Here In.
436	Stillman v. Combe	822	528-530	Rasmussen v. United States	867
438-439	" "	824	530-533	" "	868
439-442	" "	825	533-535	" "	869
442	" "	826	535-536	" "	870
442-444	H. Hackfeld & Co. v. United States	826	536	Knapp v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. ("United States ex rel. Knapp v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co.")	870
444	" "	827		" "	870
446-447	" "	828		" "	871
447-450	" "	829	540	" "	872
450-452	" "	830	540-543	" "	872
452-453	" "	831	543	" "	872
453-454	New Orleans Gaslight Co. v. New Orleans Drainage Commission	831	544-545	Muhlker v. New York & H. R. Co.	872
454-455	" "	832	545-548	" "	873
458-460	" "	834	560-562	" "	874
460-462	" "	835	562-565	" "	875
463-464	Iron Cliffs Co. v. Negaunee Iron Co.	836	565-567	" "	876
464-467	" "	837	567-570	" "	877
467-469	" "	838	570-572	" "	878
470-472	" "	840	572-574	" "	879
472-474	" "	841	574-577	" "	880
474-475	" "	842	577-579	} Missouri v. Nebraska } Nebraska v. Missouri	881
475	United States v. Cadarr	842	579
476-477	" "	843	580-581	" "	882
477-480	" "	844	582	" "	884
480-481	" "	845	583-584	" "	885
482	Massachusetts, Re	845	585	" "	886
482-484	" "	846	586-588	" "	887
487-488	" "	848	589	" "	888
488-489	Heff, Re	848	590-591	" "	889
489-492	" "	849	592	" "	890
492	" "	850	593-595	" "	891
497-498	" "	852	596	" "	892
498-501	" "	853	597-599	" "	893
501-503	" "	854	600-601	" "	894
503-505	" "	855	601-602	" "	895
505-508	" "	856	603	" "	896
508-509	" "	857	604-605	" "	897
510	Whitaker v. McBride	857	606	" "	898
510-511	" "	858	607-608	" "	899
511-512	" "	860	609	" "	900
512-515	" "	861	610-611	" "	901
515-516	" "	862	612	" "	902
516	Rasmussen v. United States	862	613-614	" "	903
518	" "	862	615	" "	904
518-521	" "	863	616	" "	905
521-523	" "	864	617	" "	906
523-526	" "	865	618	" "	907
526-528	" "	866	619-626	Memorandum Cases	908
197 U. S.					909-912

THE DECISIONS

OF THE

Supreme Court of the United States

AT

OCTOBER TERM, 1904.

[1]*NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.

WILLIAM S. ELY, Marvin Arnold, Julia Arnold, et al. (No. 102.)

NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.

WILLIAM S. ELY et al. (No. 88.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 1-9.)

Error to state court—formality of writ of error—description of judgment—adverse possession—of railroad right of way.

1. A writ of error to a state court, which incorrectly states the date of the judgment in the court below, may be dismissed without prejudice to proceedings under a second writ of error, which correctly describes the judgment.
2. Title to the right of way granted by Congress to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company for the construction of its road cannot be acquired by adverse possession for private use under a state statute of limitations except so far as the land so adversely held was so situated that a conveyance from the grantee company or its successor would have been confirmed by the act of April 28, 1904, validating such conveyances of the right of way as should not diminish it to a less width than 100 feet on each side of the center of the main track.

[Nos. 102, 88.]

Submitted December 15, 1904. Decided February 20, 1905.

NOTE.—On the practice and procedure governing the transfer of causes to the Federal Supreme Court on writ of error or appeal—see note to Wedding v. Meyler, 66 L. R. A. 833.

On adverse possession of railroad right of way—see note to Illinois C. R. Co. v. Houghton, 1 L. R. A. 214.

197 U. S.

TWO WRITS OF ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Washington to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Superior Court of Spokane County, in that State, in favor of defendants in a suit to quiet title, remove clouds, and recover possession of certain real property alleged to be portions of a railroad right of way. Writ of error in No. 88 dismissed; judgment reversed in No. 102, and cause remanded for further proceedings.

See same case below, 25 Wash. 384, 54 L. R. A. 526, 87 Am. St. Rep. 766, 65 Pac. 555.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. C. W. Bunn and James B. Kerr submitted the cause for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Harold Preston submitted the cause for defendants in error Browne et al. Mr. F. T. Post was on his brief.

Mr. William E. Cullen submitted the cause for defendant in error Ely. Mr. Samuel R. Stern was on his brief.

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the opinion of the court:

This was a suit brought by the Northern Pacific Railway Company, successor to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, in the superior court of the county of Spokane, state of Washington, against a large number of persons, to quiet title, remove clouds, and recover possession of certain parcels of real estate, alleged to be portions of its right of way in that county.

The complaint alleged that plaintiff was the owner and entitled to a strip of land, 400 feet wide, on which defendants had wrongfully entered. Some of the defendants were defaulted. Separate answers were interposed by others, separate trials had, separate verdicts rendered, and bill of exceptions granted. As to one defendant, the case was submitted to the court for trial, and findings of fact and conclusions of law were made and filed.

A single decree was rendered in favor of contesting defendants, from which the railway company appealed to the supreme court of the state, where the decree was affirmed. 25 Wash. 384, 54 L. R. A. 526, 87 Am. St. Rep. 766, 65 Pac. 555.

- [3] *The opinion of that court was filed June 29, 1901, and judgment of affirmance entered July 30, 1901. On May 4, 1903, the case of Northern P. R. Co. v. Townsend, 190 U. S. 267, 47 L. ed. 1044, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 671, was decided. May 28, 1903, the railway company was allowed a writ of error from this court, the judgment of the state supreme court being described as entered June 29, 1901. The case was docketed July 23, 1903, and is now numbered 88. June 30 a second writ of error was taken out and filed below, the papers correctly describing the judgment as entered July 30, 1901, and was docketed here August 13, 1903, and is now numbered 102.

Plaintiff moved for leave to amend the record in No. 88 so that the date of the judgment might be correctly given, and that thereupon No. 102 be dismissed, or, in the alternative, that No. 88 be dismissed. We grant the latter application, and dismiss No. 88 without prejudice to proceeding in No. 102. Wheeler v. Harris, 13 Wall. 51, 20 L. ed. 531; Silsby v. Foote, 20 How. 290, 15 L. ed. 822.

The facts on which the state supreme court proceeded are thus stated:

- "It may be conceded, we think, that the right of way which embraces the land in dispute was granted to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company by act of Congress in 1864, and that, to the title to the right of way thus granted to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, the Northern Pacific Railway Company has succeeded. It may also be conceded, for the purposes of this case, that the Northern Pacific Railway Company has complied with all the terms and provisions of the act of Congress aforesaid, and has constructed its railroad through the whole of the line of road between the points named in the granting act; that a map of definite location was filed October 4, 1880, prior to the acquiring of the title to the land in question by the defendants or their predecessors or grantors; and that said railroad had been continuously operated since its construction. The defendants, answering, claim title by patent from the United States government." The land was acquired under the pre-emption and
- [4] homestead acts, respectively, *and all the defendants or their grantors have been in quiet, peaceful, undisturbed, and undisputed possession of said land for more than ten years immediately prior to the commencement of this action, many of them for nearly twenty years. Valuable improvements have been made by the defendants, the said land consisting of town lots in the city of Spokane, and having been platted and laid out as additions to the city of Spokane by the defendants or their grantors after acquiring title to the same from the United States government. During all these years no claim whatever to these lands has been made by the appellant. It has stood by and seen improvements made thereon, and, in the case of defendant Brown, an agreement was entered into between him and General Sprague, who was then the general superintendent of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, that they would plat their lots so that the streets of the addition which the railroad company was dedicating would correspond with and meet the streets which Brown was dedicating to the city of Spokane, and the agreement was carried out by arranging the streets in accordance therewith. These streets have been used by the public for from ten to eighteen years. The testimony shows that, in addition to the improvements which these defendants have made upon their lots, many thousands of dollars have been paid by them for assessments levied upon abutting land for the improvement of streets running through this right of way; that the appellant has never paid these assessments; that they have never been assessed to the appellant, and that no question has ever been raised by the appellant as to the right and obligation of the defendants to pay the same. While the record does not show that any of the lands owned by the defendants were deeded to them by the appellant, it does show that the Northern Pacific Railroad Company has deeded to other parties lots in the city of Spokane situated within the 400 feet of right of way, upon which valuable improvements have been made by its grantees."

It may be added that it was only as to some of the parcels *that the filing of the [5] map of definite location and the construction of the railroad preceded the filing of the entries. But we regard the case as falling within the rule holding the grant of the right of way effective from the date of the act. St. Joseph & D. C. R. Co. v. Baldwin, 103 U. S. 426, 26 L. ed. 578.

The supreme court held that the action was barred by the statute of limitations; that the company was estopped from asserting title by reason of the circumstances; and that: "Where, through the negligence and laches of a railroad company, the occupancy by others of portions of the right of way granted to it by the government has ripened into title by adverse possession, the company cannot set up the defense that the right of way was granted for public purposes only, and that it would be against public policy to permit either its abandonment by the company or the acquisition of adverse rights therein by way of estoppel or of the bar of the statute of limitations."

As before stated, on the 4th day of May, 1903, the decision of this court in Northern P. R. Co. v. Townsend, 190 U. S. 267, 47 L. ed. 1044, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 671, was announced. We there ruled that individuals could not, for private purposes, acquire by adverse possession, under a state statute of limitations, any portion of a right of way granted by the United States to a railroad company in the manner and under the conditions that the right of way was granted to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company. At the same time it was not denied that such right of way granted through the public domain within a state was amenable to the police power of the state. And we said: "Congress must have assumed, when making this grant, for instance, that in the natural order of events, as settlements were made along the line of the railroad, crossings of the right of way would become necessary, and that other limitations in favor of the general public upon an exclusive right of occupancy by the railroad of its right of way might be justly imposed. But such limitations are in no sense analogous to claim of adverse ownership for private use."

[6] *We are not prepared to overrule that decision, and, tested by it, the judgment in this case must be reversed. But we were then dealing with the original right of way, which was of a width of 400 feet. April 28, 1904, an act of Congress entitled "An Act Validating Certain Conveyances of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company and the Northern Pacific Railway Company," was approved (33 Stat. at L. 538, chap. 1782), reading as follows:

"That all conveyances heretofore made by the Northern Pacific Railroad Company or by the Northern Pacific Railway Company, of land forming a part of the right of way of the Northern Pacific Railroad, granted by the government by any act of Congress, are hereby legalized, validated, and confirmed: Provided, That no such conveyance shall have effect to diminish said right of way to a less width than one hundred feet on each side of the center of the main track of the railroad as now established and maintained.

"Sec. 2. That this act shall have no validating force until the Northern Pacific Railway Company shall file with the Secretary of the Interior an instrument in writing, accepting its terms and provisions."

The terms and provisions of the act were accepted by the railway company June 22, 1904, and the acceptance, duly certified, was filed in the Interior Department July 7, 1904.

In Townsend's Case it was said, among other things:

"Manifestly, the land forming the right of way was not granted with the intent that it might be absolutely disposed of at the volition of the company. On the contrary, the grant was explicitly stated to be for a designated purpose, one which negated the existence of the power to voluntarily alienate the right of way or any portion thereof. The substantial consideration inducing the grant was the perpetual use of the land for the legitimate purposes of the railroad, just as though the land had been conveyed in terms to have and to hold the same so long as it was used for the railroad right of way. In effect the grant was of a limited fee, made on an implied condition *of reversion [7] or in the event that the company ceased to use or retain the land for the purpose for which it was granted. . . . Congress having plainly manifested its intention that the title to and possession of the right of way should continue in the original grantee, its successors and assigns, so long as the railroad was maintained, the possession by individuals of portions of the right of way cannot be treated, without overthrowing the act of Congress, as forming the basis of an adverse possession which may ripen into a title good as against the railroad company." 190 U. S. 271, 272, 47 L. ed. 1046, 1047, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 672, 673.

The act of April 28, 1904, in view of our decision in that case, was obviously intended to and did have the effect to narrow the right of way to 200 feet in width, so far, at least, as, outside of that strip, the original right of way had been parted with.

The rule in the state of Washington as to adverse possession is thus stated by the supreme court in this case:

"One holding land adversely to the rights of another can be divested only by the action of the other, even with a better right, within the time prescribed by the statute of limitations; and this is true, even though he may have originally entered under a void grant of sale. But his claim ripens into a perfect title and becomes absolute, if such possession is not disturbed within the time prescribed. As is said by 3 Washburn on Real Property, 5th ed. p. 176:

"The operation of the statute takes away the title of the real owner, and transfers it, not in form, indeed, but in legal effect, to the adverse occupant. In other words, the statute of limitations gives a perfect title. The doctrine is stated thus strongly because it seems to be the result of modern decisions, although it was once held that the effect of the statute was merely to take away the remedy, and did not bind the estate, or transfer the title.'” 25 Wash. 388, 54 L. R. A. 530, 87 Am. St. Rep. 768, 65 Pac. 556.

In Sharon v. Tucker, 144 U. S. 533, 543, 36 L. ed. 532, 535, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 720, 722, where the statute of limitations in force in the District of Columbia was applied, Mr. Justice Field, speaking for the court, said:

[8] “It is now well settled that, by adverse possession for the period designated by the statute, not only is the remedy of the former owner gone, but his title has passed to the occupant, so that the latter can maintain ejectment for the possession against such former owner, should he intrude upon the premises. In several of the states this doctrine has become a positive rule, by their statutes of limitations declaring that uninterrupted possession for the period designated to bar an action for the recovery of land shall, of itself, constitute a complete title. Leffingwell v. Warren, 2 Black, 599, 17 L. ed. 261; Campbell v. Holt, 115 U. S. 620, 623, 29 L. ed. 483, 485, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 209.”*

This was quoted in Toltec Ranch Co. v. Cook, 191 U. S. 532, 538, 48 L. ed. 291, 292, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 166, 167, and it was remarked:

“Adverse possession, therefore, may be said to transfer the title as effectually as a conveyance from the owner; it may be considered as tantamount to a conveyance.”

So far as title to portions of the right of way could be lawfully acquired from the railway company, defendants below, appellees in the supreme court, had acquired title to their parcels by adverse possession, and occupied the same position as if they had received conveyances, which the act of April 28, 1904, operated to confirm. The act is remedial, and to be construed accordingly. The lots of some of the defendants were outside of the 200 feet. The lots of others were partly within and partly without the strip. But the act was passed after the judgment of the supreme court was rendered, and while the case was pending here, and it must be left to the state courts to deal with the matter in the light of the conclusions at which we have arrived.

In Kansas P. R. Co. v. Twombly, 100 U. S. 78, 25 L. ed. 550, which was a writ of error to the supreme court of the territory of Colorado, the act authorizing the action was repealed while the writ was pending in this court, and we, in the exercise of appellate jurisdiction, declined to send the case back to the court below with instructions to enter a judgment of nonsuit, and affirmed the judgment because we found no error.

[9] *In the present case, the parties will not be compelled to resort to some form of original proceeding to obtain relief under the act of April 28, 1904, as, apart from that statute, the decree must be reversed, and thereupon the record will be open for such adjudication as the then situation may demand.
642

In No. 88, writ of error dismissed; in No. 102, decree reversed and cause remanded for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

Mr. Justice Harlan was of opinion that the decree of the state supreme court should be affirmed for the reasons given, and, therefore, dissented.

NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

AUGUST HASSE and ——— Hasse, His Wife.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 9, 10.)

Adverse possession — of railroad right of way.

This case is governed by the decision in Northern P. R. Co. v. Ely, ante, 639.

[No. 118.]

Submitted January 6, 1905. Decided February 20, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Washington to review a judgment which reversed a judgment of the Superior Court of Kittitas County, in that State, in favor of the Northern Pacific Railway Company, in an action of ejectment to recover possession of a part of its right of way, and remanded the cause, with directions to dismiss the action. Reversed.

See same case below, 28 Wash. 353, 92 Am. St. Rep. 840, 68 Pac. 882.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. C. W. Bunn and James B. Kerr submitted the cause for plaintiff in error.

No brief was filed for defendants in error.

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the opinion of the court:

This was an action of ejectment brought by the Northern Pacific Railway Company in the superior court of Kittitas county, [10] Washington, to recover possession of part of its right of way, the land being partly within and partly without a right of way of 200 feet in width. Defendants asserted title by virtue of a homestead application, filed May 24, 1883, final proof July 12, 1888, and patent September 27, 1889; and adverse possession for the period named in the statute of limitations. Judgment was entered in favor of the railway company, and defendants carried the case by appeal to the supreme court of Washington, which held the statute of limitations applicable, reversed the judgment below, and remanded the case with directions to dismiss the action. 28 Wash. 353, 92 Am. St. Rep. 840, 68 Pac. 882.
197 U. S.

The grant of right of way, unlike the land grant, was effective from the date of the act, and the fact that the railroad was not built until after defendants' entry does not affect the disposition of the case. St. Joseph & D. C. R. Co. v. Baldwin, 103 U. S. 426, 26 L. ed. 578; Bybee v. Oregon & C. R. Co. 139 U. S. 663, 679, 35 L. ed. 305, 308, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 687.

The judgment must be reversed on the authority of Northern P. R. Co. v. Townsend, 190 U. S. 267, 47 L. ed. 1044, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 671, and remanded for further proceedings not inconsistent with the opinion of this court in Northern P. R. Co. v. Ely, 197 U. S. 1, ante, 639, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 302.

Judgment reversed.

Mr. Justice Harlan dissented.

[11] *HENNING JACOBSON, Plff. in Err.,
v.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 11-39.)

Constitutional law—compulsory vaccination—personal liberty—equal protection of the laws—evidence—judicial notice.

1. The spirit of the Federal Constitution or its preamble cannot be invoked, apart from the words of that instrument, to invalidate a state statute.
2. The scope and meaning of a state statute, as indicated by the exclusion of evidence on the ground of its incompetency or immateriality under that statute, are conclusive on the Federal Supreme Court in determining, on writ of error to the state court, the question of the validity of the statute under the Federal Constitution.

3. The personal liberty secured by U. S. Const., 14th Amend., against state deprivation, is not infringed by Mass. Rev. Laws, chap. 75, § 137, authorizing compulsory vaccination by local boards of health when deemed necessary for the public health or safety, under which, as construed by the highest state court, vaccination may be required of all the inhabitants of a city where smallpox is prevalent and increasing.
4. Lack of any exception in favor of adults certified by a registered physician to be unfit subjects for vaccination does not render invalid Mass. Rev. Laws, chap. 75, § 137, authorizing compulsory vaccination by local boards of health, as denying the equal protection of the laws, although an exception in favor of children in like condition is made by § 139 of that act, since the statute is equally applicable to all adults.
5. Judicial notice will be taken that vaccination is commonly believed to be a safe and valuable means of preventing the spread of smallpox, and that this belief is supported by high medical authority.
6. A state legislature, in enacting a statute purporting to be for the protection of local communities against the spread of smallpox, is entitled to choose between the theory of those of the medical profession who think vaccination worthless for this purpose, and believe its effect to be injurious and dangerous, and the opposite theory, which is in accord with common belief, and is maintained by high medical authority; and is not compelled to commit a matter of this character, involving the public health and safety, to the final decision of a court or jury.
7. An adult cannot claim to have been deprived of the liberty secured by U. S. Const., 14th Amend., against state deprivation, by the enforcement against him of a compulsory vaccination law,—at least, where he does not show, with reasonable certainty, that he is not at the time a fit subject of vaccination, or that vaccination, by reason of his then condition, will seriously impair his health, or possibly cause his death.

[No. 70.]

Argued December 6, 1904. Decided February 20, 1905.

NOTE.—On what questions the Federal Supreme Court will consider in reviewing the judgments of state courts—see note to Missouri ex rel. Hill v. Dockery, 63 L. R. A. 571.

As to the validity of class legislation—see State v. Goodwill, 6 L. R. A. 621, and note; and State v. Loomis, 21 L. R. A. 789, and note.

As to constitutional equality of privileges, immunities, and protection—see Louisville Safety Vault & T. Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 14 L. R. A. 579, and note.

On the question of judicial notice—see note to Olive v. State, 4 L. R. A. 33.

Constitutionality of compulsory vaccination.

The question of the constitutionality of compulsory vaccination has very seldom arisen in the courts. Cases dealing with vaccination problems have generally grown out of the action of the authorities in excluding unvaccinated children from the public schools. Failure has been the result of every effort to contest the validity of such action when authorized by the legislature. Dunfield v. Williamsport School District, 162 Pa. 476, 25 L. R. A. 152, 29 Atl. 742; Field v. Robinson, 198 Pa. 638, 48 Atl. 873; Abeel v. Clark, 84 Cal. 226, 24 Pac. 383; French v. Davidson, 143 Cal. 658, 77 Pac. 663; Bissell v. Davison, 65 Conn. 183, 29 L. R. A. 251, 32 Atl. 348; Re Vlemelster, 179 N. Y. 235, 72 N. E. 97; Blue v. Beach, 155 Ind. 121, 50 L. R. A. 64, 80 Am. St. Rep. 195, 56 N. E. 89; State ex rel. Freeman v. Zimmerman, 86 Minn.
197 U. S.

[N ERROR to the Superior Court of the State of Massachusetts for the County of Middlesex to review a judgment entered on a verdict of guilty in a prosecution under the compulsory vaccination law of that State, after defendant's exceptions were overruled by the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court. Affirmed.

See same case below, 183 Mass. 242, 66 N. E. 719.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. George Fred Williams argued the cause, and, with Mr. James A. Halloran, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The only cases in which general compulsory vaccination laws have been considered are—

State v. Hay, 126 N. C. 999, 49 L. R. A. 588, 78 Am. St. Rep. 691, 35 S. E. 459; Morris v. Columbus, 102 Ga. 792, 42 L. R. A. 175, 66 Am. St. Rep. 243, 30 S. E. 850; Re Smith, 146 N. Y. 68, 28 L. R. A. 820, 4 Am. St. Rep. 769, 40 N. E. 497.

In the North Carolina case it was assumed that due process of law entitled a defendant to offer evidence that vaccination would be injurious to him.

In the Georgia case provision was made for the exemption of a person who presented a certificate that vaccination would be injurious.

In the New York case it was held that the fact of existence of a contagious disease, or of exposure to it, must be established before the health authorities could exercise the police power of quarantine or isolation of persons refusing to be vaccinated.

The laws providing that unvaccinated children shall not attend the public schools are widely variant from laws compelling the vaccination of adult citizens. The public school is a state institution in the nature of a beneficent business enterprise for the improvement of the population. No right to attend the schools is inherent in our laws unless the state Constitution confers it. Attendance at school is a privilege. The school is a part of the state's domestic economy, and the state may regulate it in its own discretion. It may exclude anyone it chooses. To provide vaccination as one of the conditions of admission to school is widely different in legal status from providing a legal penalty upon citizens for refusing vaccination.

The police power is for the security of liberty, and not for oppression.

Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 27, 28 L. ed. 923, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357.

To justify the exercise of the police power beyond the mere suppression of nuisances, it must appear that the interests of the public are affected, and that the means are reasonably necessary for the accomplishment of the purpose, and not unduly oppressive upon individuals.

Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 133, 38 L. ed. 385, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499.

The police power rests upon well-founded principles, all of which have their basis and reason in existing offensive acts or conditions.

4 Bl. Com. 162; Cooley, Const. Lim. p. 704; Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. v. Husen, 95 U. S. 465, 470, 24 L. ed. 527, 529.

The defendant in error will hardly care to contend that the state has a right to seize upon the citizen and insert into his blood the virus of vaccination, although in England, under the act of 1867 (30 & 31 Vict. chap. 84), vaccination was enforced upon children in many cases, and it was judicially determined that where a parent had refused to cause the vaccination of a child the court might order the child to be vaccinated.

Queen v. Cinque Ports Justice, L. R. 17 Q. B. Div. 191; Dutton v. Atkinson, L. R. 6 Q. B. 373.

The utmost that the law undertakes to do is to provide a penalty for its violation. After I have paid the penalty I am as much a menace to the community as I was before, and, if the effect of the law be that with one payment I may continue to be a menace to the public health, as was held in England (Pilcher v. Stafford, 4 Best & S. 775), the law is too absurd to justify its existence.

If I may be repeatedly fined for recalcitrance, as was provided by the English act 353, 58 L. R. A. 78, 91 Am. St. Rep. 351, 90 N. W. 783.

In Georgia and North Carolina the constitutionality of compulsory vaccination has been presented for determination, and the decision in each instance is in accord with JACOBSON v. MASSACHUSETTS.

Morris v. Columbus, 102 Ga. 792, 42 L. R. A. 175, 66 Am. St. Rep. 243, 30 S. E. 850, is the first of these cases. Here legislation under which compulsory vaccination of all persons within the limits of a city could be ordered when an epidemic of smallpox existed or was reasonably to be apprehended was held to be a valid exercise of the police power. Similar legislation was sustained in State v. Hay, 126 N. C. 999, 49 L. R. A. 588, 78 Am. St. Rep. 691, 35

S. E. 459, where it was also held that an ordinance requiring compulsory vaccination was not vitiated because of a failure to except from its operation persons whose health is such that it would be unsafe for them to submit to vaccination. The court admitted that the existence of such a condition would, however, be a sufficient excuse for noncompliance, but added that such noncompliance would not be justified by one's own opinion, or that of his physician, that it would be dangerous for him to be vaccinated, or that he is sufficiently protected by former vaccination.

See also notes to Duffield v. Williamsport School District, 25 L. R. A. 152, and Thomas v. Mason, 26 L. R. A. 727.

30 & 31 Vict. chap. 84, 31 (see Allen v. Worthy, L. R. 5 Q. B. 163; Tebb v. Jones, 37 L. T. N. S. 576), then the argument made by the supreme court of Massachusetts as to the insignificance of the fine of $5 is fallacious and unjust.

Compulsion to introduce disease into a healthy system is a violation of liberty.

Slaughter House Cases, 16 Wall. 36, 21 L. ed. 394.

In Miller v. Horton, 152 Mass. 546, 10 L. R. A. 116, 23 Am. St. Rep. 850, 26 N. E. 100, it was decided, under a law providing for the killing of infected animals, that a public officer would be liable in damages if an animal killed was not in point of fact infected with the disease. If the owner of an animal is entitled thus to recover for loss of property, shall he be held to be without remedy where his own health is injured by the state?

The vaccination law is not within any cognizable principle of criminal law.

1 Bishop, Crim. Law, §§ 204, 230, 490; Com. v. Thompson, 6 Mass. 134.

This attack upon the person of the citizen is no more to be justified by a mere legislative act than would be acts of attainder, bills of pains and penalties, and acts of confiscation, which would not be cognizable or constitutional in the United States.

Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 581, 4 L. ed. 629, 645.

The exemptions in the Massachusetts act are unconstitutional.

West v. Louisiana, 194 U. S. 258, 262, 48 L. ed. 965, 969, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 650; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. May, 194 U. S. 267, 48 L. ed. 971, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 638; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 41 L. ed. 666, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255.

The board of health is intrusted with arbitrary powers.

Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 134 U. S. 418, 33 L. ed. 970, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 209, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 462, 702; Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, 111 U. S. 701, 28 L. ed. 569, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663.

The Massachusetts law has not the justification of necessity.

Miller v. Horton, 152 Mass. 546, 10 L. R. A. 116, 23 Am. St. Rep. 850, 26 N. E. 100; American School of Magnetic Healing v. McAnnulty, 187 U. S. 94, 47 L. ed. 90, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 33.

Mr. Frederick H. Nash argued the cause, and, with Mr. Herbert Parker, filed a brief for defendant in error:

It is no argument that the conviction was repugnant to the spirit or to the preamble of the Constitution. An act of the legislature of a state, and regular proceedings under it, are to be overthrown only by virtue of some specific prohibition in the paramount law.

Forsythe v. Hammond, 68 Fed. 774; Walker v. Cincinnati, 21 Ohio St. 14, 8 Am. Rep. 24; State v. Staten, 6 Coldw. 233; State v. Gerhardt, 145 Ind. 439, 450, 33 L. R. A. 313, 44 N. E. 469; State ex rel. Heron v. Smith, 44 Ohio St. 348, 7 N. E. 447, 12 N. E. 829; People v. Fisher, 24 Wend. 214; Redell v. Moores, 63 Neb. 219, 55 L. R. A. 740, 93 Am. St. Rep. 431, 88 N. W. 243; State ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Moores, 55 Neb. 480, 41 L. R. A. 624, 76 N. W. 175.

The 5th Amendment does not apply to an action by a state.

Barron v. Baltimore, 7 Pet. 243, 247, 8 L. ed. 672, 674; Eilenbecker v. Plymouth County Dist. Court, 134 U. S. 31, 33 L. ed. 801, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 424; McElwaine v. Brush, 142 U. S. 155, 158, 35 L. ed. 971, 973, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 156; Brown v. New Jersey, 175 U. S. 172, 44 L. ed. 119, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; Capital City Dairy Co. v. Ohio, 183 U. S. 238, 46 L. ed. 171, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 120; Ohio ex rel. Lloyd v. Dollison, 194 U. S. 445, 48 L. ed. 1062, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 703; Slaughter House Cases, 16 Wall. 36, 21 L. ed. 394; Maxwell v. Dow, 176 U. S. 581, 44 L. ed. 597, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 448, 494.

In its unquestioned power to preserve and protect the public health, it is for the legislature of each state to determine whether vaccination is effective in preventing the spread of smallpox or not, and, deciding in the affirmative, to require doubting individuals to yield for the welfare of the community.

Re Smith, 146 N. Y. 68, 28 L. R. A. 820, 48 Am. St. Rep. 769, 40 N. E. 497.

No one will dispute the right of the legislature to enact such measures as will protect all persons from the impending calamity of a pestilence, and to vest in local authorities such comprehensive powers as will enable them to act effectively.

Powell v. Pennsylvania, 127 U. S. 678, 683, 3 L. ed. 253, 256, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 992, 1257.

There can be no doubt that the statute in the present case was enacted as a health measure, and has a real and substantial relation to that object. It cannot be seriously contended that this statute has some ulterior object which it seeks to conceal under a pretended desire to promote the public health.

Compare, by contrast, the statute forbidding the manufacture of cigars in tenement houses (Re Jacobs, 98 N. Y. 98, 50 Am. Rep. 636); the statute forbidding people to give away articles in connection with a sale of food (People v. Gillson, 109 N. Y. 389, 4 Am. St. Rep. 465, 17 N. E. 343); and the statute forbidding bakers' employees to work more than ten hours a day (People v. Lochner, 177 N. Y. 145, 101 Am. St. Rep. 773, 69 N. E. 373, dissenting opinion).

Only in such cases of legislative dissimulation is it held that a law, apparently looking to the protection of the public health and working without undue classification, is a violation of the 14th Amendment.

Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 31 L. ed. 205, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Sentell v. New Orleans & C. R. Co. 166 U. S. 698, 704, 705, 41 L. ed. 1169, 1171, 1172, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 693; Hawker v. New York, 170 U. S. 189, 192, 42 L. ed. 1002, 1004, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 573; Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 366, 42 L. ed. 780, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383.

In Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 133, 136, 38 L. ed. 385, 388, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499, it is said, by way of illustration, that compulsory vaccination is a proper exercise of the police power.

It has been directly so held in Morris v. Columbus, 102 Ga. 792, 42 L. R. A. 175, 66 Am. St. Rep. 243, 30 S. E. 850, and State v. Hay, 126 N. C. 999, 49 L. R. A. 588, 78 Am. St. Rep. 691, 35 S. E. 459.

The courts may not listen to conflicting expert testimony as to the efficacy or hurtfulness of vaccination in general. The legislature is the only body which has power to determine whether the anti-vaccinationists, or the majority of the medical profession, are in the right.

See Powell v. Pennsylvania, 127 U. S. 678, 3 L. ed. 253, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 992, 1257.

That the legislature has large discretion to determine what personal sacrifice the public health, morals, and safety require from individuals is elementary.

Booth v. Illinois, 184 U. S. 425, 46 L. ed. 623, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 425; Austin v. Tennessee, 179 U. S. 343, 45 L. ed. 224, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132; Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 133, 136, 38 L. ed. 385, 388, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 486; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 31 L. ed. 205, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Northwestern Fertilizing Co. v. Hyde Park, 97 U. S. 659, 24 L. ed. 1036.

The advantage of uniform and general laws is best attained by vesting discretionary power in local administrative bodies.

Wilson v. Eureka City, 173 U. S. 32, 43 L. ed. 603, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 317. See Health Department v. Trinity Church, 145 N. Y. 32, 27 L. R. A. 710, 45 Am. St. Rep. 579, 39 N. E. 833.

It is wise legislation which leaves the necessity for general vaccination and the decision as to the time for vaccination of each individual to the local boards of health. If they act in an arbitrary manner, depriving any individual of a right protected by the 14th Amendment, their action in such individual case is void. Thus the law in general stands, but particular cases of oppression may be prevented.

Compare Yiek Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 30 L. ed. 220, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064, and Jew Ho v. Williamson, 103 Fed. 10, with Williams v. Mississippi, 170 U. S. 213, 42 L. ed. 1012, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 583. See Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339, 25 L. ed. 676; Carter v. Texas, 177 U. S. 442, 44 L. ed. 839, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 687; Tarrance v. Florida, 188 U. S. 519, 47 L. ed. 572, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 402.

All the cases holding orders requiring vaccination to be invalid are decided on the ground that the orders were broader than the authority given by statute.

Mathews v. Kalamazoo Bd. of Edu. 127 Mich. 530, 54 L. R. A. 736, 86 N. W. 1036; Potts v. Breen, 167 Ill. 67, 39 L. R. A. 152, 59 Am. St. Rep. 262, 47 N. E. 81; State ex rel. Adams v. Burdge, 95 Wis. 390, 37 L. R. A. 157, 60 Am. St. Rep. 123, 70 N. W. 347; Lawbaugh v. District No. 2 Bd. of Edu. 177 Ill. 572, 52 N. E. 850; Re Smith, 146 N. Y. 68, 28 L. R. A. 820, 48 Am. St. Rep. 769, 40 N. E. 497. See also Wong Wai v. Williamson, 103 Fed. 1.

Compare similar quarantine regulations held to be unauthorized because broader than any statutory basis for them.

Wilson v. Alabama G. S. R. Co. 77 Miss. 714, 52 L. R. A. 357, 78 Am. St. Rep. 543, 28 So. 567; Hurst v. Warner, 102 Mich. 238, 26 L. R. A. 484, 47 Am. St. Rep. 525, 60 N. W. 440.

Even without express statutory authority, if smallpox is prevalent it is held that a board of health may require vaccination as a condition of attending school.

Duffield v. Williamsport School District, 162 Pa. 476, 25 L. R. A. 152, 29 Atl. 742; Field v. Robinson, 198 Pa. 638, 48 Atl. 873; State ex rel. Cox v. Board of Edu. 21 Utah, 401, 60 Pac. 1013.

All such orders passed, as in the present case, in the exercise of special authority from the legislature, have been sustained by the state courts wherever their validity has been questioned.

Blue v. Beach, 155 Ind. 121, 50 L. R. A. 64, 80 Am. St. Rep. 195, 56 N. E. 89; Bissell v. Davison, 65 Conn. 183, 29 L. R. A. 251, 32 Atl. 348; Morris v. Columbus, 102 Ga. 792, 42 L. R. A. 175, 66 Am. St. Rep. 243, 30 S. E. 850; State v. Hay, 126 N. C. 999, 49 L. R. A. 588, 78 Am. St. Rep. 691, 35 S. E. 459. See also Abeel v. Clark, 84 Cal. 226, 24 Pac. 383; State ex rel. Horne v. Beil, 157 Ind. 25, 60 N. E. 672; State ex rel. Freeman v. Zimmerman, 86 Minn. 353, 58 L. R. A. 78, 91 Am. St. Rep. 351, 90 N. W. 783; Re Walters, 84 Hun, 457, 32 N. Y. Supp. 322.

It is conceded that arbitrary action by the board of health "with evil mind" might result in a denial of due process of law. If they picked out one class of persons arbitrarily for immediate vaccination, while indefinitely postponing action toward all others; or if they abused their discretion as to time and manner of proceeding by requiring everybody to be vaccinated at a certain time, without regard to the state or his health,—their action might be in violation of the 14th Amendment.

Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 373, 30 L. ed. 220, 227, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064; Wong Wai v. Williamson, 103 Fed. 1; Jew Ho v. Williamson, 103 Fed. 10; Williams v. Mississippi, 170 U. S. 213, 42 L. ed. 1012, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 583.

But there is no suggestion of arbitrary conduct. It is not even hinted that, in the exercise of their discretion, they failed to make proper discrimination as to temporary conditions. If there were special reasons why the plaintiff in error could not be vaccinated at the time required by the board of health, he should have made them a ground of his refusal, and, if the board neglected to consider them, a defense to his prosecution.

State v. Hay, 126 N. C. 999, 49 L. R. A. 588, 78 Am. St. Rep. 691, 35 S. E. 459; State, Pennsylvania R. Co., Prosecutor, v. Jersey City, 47 N. J. L. 286.

The statute did not require the vaccination and revaccination of all the inhabitants, without discrimination, but left the matter to the discretion of the local authorities. This was an unobjectionable method of legislation.

Marshall Field & Co. v. Clark, 143 U. S. 649, 693, 694, 36 L. ed. 294, 310, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 495.

Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion of the court:

This case involves the validity, under the Constitution of the United States, of certain provisions in the statutes of Massachusetts relating to vaccination.

The Revised Laws of that commonwealth, chap. 75, § 137, provide that "the board of health of a city or town, if, in its opinion, it is necessary for the public health or safety, shall require and enforce the vaccination and revaccination of all the inhabitants thereof, and shall provide them with the means of free vaccination. Whoever, being over twenty-one years of age and not under guardianship, refuses or neglects to comply with such requirement shall forfeit $5."

An exception is made in favor of "children who present a certificate, signed by a registered physician, that they are unfit subjects for vaccination." § 139.

Proceeding under the above statutes, the board of health of the city of Cambridge, Massachusetts, on the 27th day of February, 1902, adopted the following regulation: "Whereas, smallpox has been prevalent to some extent in the city of Cambridge, and still continues to increase; and whereas, it is necessary for the speedy extermination of the disease that all persons not protected by vaccination should be vaccinated; and whereas, in the opinion of the board, the public health and safety require the vaccination or revaccination of *all the inhabitants[13] of Cambridge; be it ordered, that all the inhabitants of the city who have not been successfully vaccinated since March 1st, 1897, be vaccinated or revaccinated."

Subsequently, the board adopted an additional regulation empowering a named physician to enforce the vaccination of persons as directed by the board at its special meeting of February 27th.

The above regulations being in force, the plaintiff in error, Jacobson, was proceeded against by a criminal complaint in one of the inferior courts of Massachusetts. The complaint charged that on the 17th day of July, 1902, the board of health of Cambridge, being of the opinion that it was necessary for the public health and safety, required the vaccination and revaccination of all the inhabitants thereof who had not been successfully vaccinated since the 1st day of March, 1897, and provided them with the means of free vaccination; and that the defendant, being over twenty-one years of age and not under guardianship, refused and neglected to comply with such requirement.

The defendant, having been arraigned, pleaded not guilty. The government put in evidence the above regulations adopted by the board of health, and made proof tending to show that its chairman informed the defendant that, by refusing to be vaccinated, he would incur the penalty provided by the statute, and would be prosecuted therefor; that he offered to vaccinate the defendant without expense to him; and that the offer was declined, and defendant refused to be vaccinated.

The prosecution having introduced no other evidence, the defendant made numerous offers of proof. But the trial court ruled that each and all of the facts offered to be proved by the defendant were immaterial, and excluded all proof of them.

The defendant, standing upon his offers of proof, and introducing no evidence, asked numerous instructions to the jury, among which were the following:

That § 137 of chapter 75 of the Revised Laws of Massachusetts was in derogation of the rights secured to the defendant by the preamble to the Constitution of the United *States, and tended to subvert and defeat[14]

the purposes of the Constitution as declared in its preamble;

That the section referred to was in derogation of the rights secured to the defendant by the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States, and especially of the clauses of that amendment providing that no state shall make or enforce any law abridging the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States, nor deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws; and

That said section was opposed to the spirit of the Constitution.

Each of defendant's prayers for instructions was rejected, and he duly excepted. The defendant requested the court, but the court refused, to instruct the jury to return a verdict of not guilty. And the court instructed the jury, in substance, that, if they believed the evidence introduced by the commonwealth, and were satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant was guilty of the offense charged in the complaint, they would be warranted in finding a verdict of guilty. A verdict of guilty was thereupon returned.

The case was then continued for the opinion of the supreme judicial court of Massachusetts. That court overruled all the defendant's exceptions, sustained the action of the trial court, and thereafter, pursuant to the verdict of the jury, he was sentenced by the court to pay a fine of $5. And the court ordered that he stand committed until the fine was paid.

We pass without extended discussion the suggestion that the particular section of the statute of Massachusetts now in question (§ 137, chap. 75) is in derogation of rights secured by the preamble of the Constitution of the United States. Although that preamble indicates the general purposes for which the people ordained and established the Constitution, it has never been regarded as the source of any substantive power conferred on the government of the United States, or on any of its departments. Such powers embrace only those expressly granted in the body of the Constitution, and such as may be implied from those so granted. Although, therefore, one of the declared objects of the Constitution was to secure the blessings of liberty to all under the sovereign jurisdiction and authority of the United States, no power can be exerted to that end by the United States, unless, apart from the preamble, it be found in some express delegation of power, or in some power to be properly implied therefrom. 1 Story, Const. § 462.

We also pass without discussion the suggestion that the above section of the statute is opposed to the spirit of the Constitution. Undoubtedly, as observed by Chief Justice Marshall, speaking for the court in Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. 122, 202, 4 L. ed. 529, 550, "the spirit of an instrument, especially of a constitution, is to be respected not less than its letter; yet the spirit is to be collected chiefly from its words." We have no need in this case to go beyond the plain, obvious meaning of the words in those provisions of the Constitution which, it is contended, must control our decision.

What, according to the judgment of the state court, are the "scope and effect of the statute? What results were intended to be accomplished by it? These questions must be answered.

The supreme judicial court of Massachusetts said in the present case: "Let us consider the offer of evidence which was made by the defendant Jacobson. The ninth of the propositions which he offered to prove, as to what vaccination consists of, is nothing more than a fact of common knowledge, upon which the statute is founded, and proof of it was unnecessary and immaterial. The thirteenth and fourteenth involved matters depending upon his personal opinion, which could not be taken as correct, or given effect, merely because he made it a ground of refusal to comply with the requirement. Moreover, his views could not affect the validity of the statute, nor entitle him to be excepted from its provisions. Com. v. Connolly, 163 Mass. 539, 40 N. E. 862; Com. v. Has, 122 Mass. 40; Reynolds v. United States, 98 U. S. 145, 25 L. ed. 244; Reg. v. Downes, 13 Cox, C. C. 111. The other eleven propositions all relate to alleged injurious or dangerous effects of vaccination. The defendant 'offered to prove and show by competent evidence' these so-called facts. Each of them, in its nature, is such that it cannot be stated as a truth, otherwise than as a matter of opinion. The only 'competent evidence' that could be presented to the court to prove these propositions was the testimony of experts, giving their opinions. It would not have been competent to introduce the medical history of individual cases. Assuming that medical experts could have been found who would have testified in support of these propositions, and that it had become the duty of the judge, in accordance with the law as stated in Com. v. Anthes, 5 Gray, 185, to instruct the jury as to whether or not the statute is constitutional, he would have been obliged to consider the evidence in connection with facts of common knowledge, which the court will always regard in passing upon the constitutionality of a statute. He would have considered this testimony of experts in connection with the facts that for nearly a century most of the members of the medical [24]profession *have regarded vaccination, repeated after intervals, as a preventive of smallpox; that, while they have recognized the possibility of injury to an individual from carelessness in the performance of it, or even in a conceivable case without carelessness, they generally have considered the risk of such an injury too small to be seriously weighed as against the benefits coming from the discreet and proper use of the preventive; and that not only the medical profession and the people generally have for a long time entertained these opinions, but legislatures and courts have acted upon them with general unanimity. If the defendant had been permitted to introduce such expert testimony as he had in support of these several propositions, it could not have changed the result. It would not have justified the court in holding that the legislature had transcended its power in enacting this statute on their judgment of what the welfare of the people demands." Com. v. Jacobson, 183 Mass. 242, 66 N. E. 719.

While the mere rejection of defendant's offers of proof does not strictly present a Federal question, we may properly regard the exclusion of evidence upon the ground of its incompetency or immateriality under the statute as showing what, in the opinion of the state court, are the scope and meaning of the statute. Taking the above observations of the state court as indicating the scope of the statute,—and such is our duty (Leffingwell v. Warren, 2 Black, 599, 603, 17 L. ed. 261, 262; Morley v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 146 U. S. 162, 167, 36 L. ed. 925, 928, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 54; Tullis v. Lake Erie & W. R. Co. 175 U. S. 348, 44 L. ed. 192, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 136; W. W. Cargill Co. v. Minnesota, 180 U. S. 452, 466, 45 L. ed. 619, 625, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423),—we assume, for the purposes of the present inquiry, that its provisions require, at least as a general rule, that adults not under guardianship and remaining within the limits of the city of Cambridge must submit to the regulation adopted by the board of health. Is the statute, so construed, therefore, inconsistent with the liberty which the Constitution of the United States secures to every person against deprivation by the state?

The authority of the state to enact this [25]statute is to be *referred to what is commonly called the police power,—a power which the state did not surrender when becoming a member of the Union under the Constitution. Although this court has refrained from any attempt to define the limits of that power, yet it has distinctly recognized the authority of a state to enact quarantine laws and "health laws of every description;" indeed, all laws that relate to matters completely within its territory and which do not by their necessary operation affect the people of other states. According to settled principles, the police power of a state must be held to embrace, at least, such reasonable regulations established directly by legislative enactment as will protect the public health and the public safety. Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 203, 6 L. ed. 23, 71; Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. v. Husen, 95 U. S. 465, 470, 24 L. ed. 527, 530; Boston Beer Co. v. Massachusetts, 97 U. S. 25, 24 L. ed. 989; New Orleans Gaslight Co. v. Louisiana Light & H. P. & Mfg. Co. 115 U. S. 650, 661, 29 L. ed. 516, 520, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 252; Lawson v. Steele, 152 U. S. 133, 38 L. ed. 385, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499. It is equally true that the state may invest local bodies called into existence for purposes of local administration with authority in some appropriate way to safeguard the public health and the public safety. The mode or manner in which those results are to be accomplished is within the discretion of the state, subject, of course, so far as Federal power is concerned, only to the condition that no rule prescribed by a state, nor any regulation adopted by a local governmental agency acting under the sanction of state legislation, shall contravene the Constitution of the United States, nor infringe any right granted or secured by that instrument. A local enactment or regulation, even if based on the acknowledged police powers of a state, must always yield in case of conflict with the exercise by the general government of any power it possesses under the Constitution, or with any right which that instrument gives or secures. Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 210, 6 L. ed. 23, 73; Sinnot v. Davenport, 22 How. 227, 243, 16 L. ed. 243, 247; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Haber, 169 U. S. 613, 626, 42 L. ed. 878, 882, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 488.

We come, then, to inquire whether any right given or secured by the Constitution is invaded by the statute as interpreted *by [26] the state court. The defendant insists that his liberty is invaded when the state subjects him to fine or imprisonment for neglecting or refusing to submit to vaccination; that a compulsory vaccination law is unreasonable, arbitrary, and oppressive, and, therefore, hostile to the inherent right of every freeman to care for his own body and health in such way as to him seems best; and that the execution of such a law against one who objects to vaccination, no matter for what reason, is nothing short of an assault upon his person. But the liberty secured by the Constitution of the United States to every person within its jurisdiction does not import an absolute right in each person to be, at all times and in all circumstances, wholly freed from restraint. There are manifold restraints to which every person is necessarily subject for the common good. On any other basis organized society could not exist with safety to its members. Society based on the rule that each one is a law unto himself would soon be confronted with disorder and anarchy. Real liberty for all could not exist under the operation of a principle which recognizes the right of each individual person to use his own, whether in respect of his person or his property, regardless of the injury that may be done to others. This court has more than once recognized it as a fundamental principle that "persons and property are subjected to all kinds of restraints and burdens in order to secure the general comfort, health, and prosperity of the state; of the perfect right of the legislature to do which no question ever was, or upon acknowledged general principles ever can be, made, so far as natural persons are concerned." Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. v. Husen, 95 U. S. 465, 471, 24 L. ed. 527, 530; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Haber, 169 U. S. 613, 628, 629, 42 L. ed. 878-883, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 488; Thorpe v. Rutland & B. R. Co. 27 Vt. 148, 62 Am. Dec. 625. In Crowley v. Christensen, 137 U. S. 86, 89, 34 L. ed. 620, 621, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 13, we said: "The possession and enjoyment of all rights are subject to such reasonable conditions as may be deemed by the governing authority of the country essential to the safety, health, peace, good order, and morals of the community. Even [27] liberty *itself, the greatest of all rights, is not unrestricted license to act according to one's own will. It is only freedom from restraint under conditions essential to the equal enjoyment of the same right by others. It is, then, liberty regulated by law." In the Constitution of Massachusetts adopted in 1780 it was laid down as a fundamental principle of the social compact that the whole people covenants with each citizen, and each citizen with the whole people, that all shall be governed by certain laws for "the common good," and that government is instituted "for the common good, for the protection, safety, prosperity, and happiness of the people, and not for the profit, honor, or private interests of any one man, family, or class of men." The good and welfare of the commonwealth, of which the legislature is primarily the judge, is the basis on which the police power rests in Massachusetts. Com. v. Alger, 7 Cush. 84.

Applying these principles to the present case, it is to be observed that the legislature of Massachusetts required the inhabitants of a city or town to be vaccinated only when, in the opinion of the board of health, that was necessary for the public health or the public safety. The authority to determine for all what ought to be done in such an emergency must have been lodged somewhere or in some body; and surely it was appropriate for the legislature to refer that question, in the first instance, to a board of health composed of persons residing in the locality affected, and appointed, presumably, because of their fitness to determine such questions. To invest such a body with authority over such matters was not an unusual, nor an unreasonable or arbitrary, requirement. Upon the principle of self-defense, of paramount necessity, a community has the right to protect itself against an epidemic of disease which threatens the safety of its members. It is to be observed that when the regulation in question was adopted smallpox, according to the recitals in the regulation adopted by the board of health, was prevalent to some extent in the city of Cambridge, and the disease was increasing. If such was *the situation,—and [28] nothing is asserted or appears in the record to the contrary,—if we are to attach any value whatever to the knowledge which, it is safe to affirm, is common to all civilized peoples touching smallpox and the methods most usually employed to eradicate that disease, it cannot be adjudged that the present regulation of the board of health was not necessary in order to protect the public health and secure the public safety. Smallpox being prevalent and increasing at Cambridge, the court would usurp the functions of another branch of government if it adjudged, as matter of law, that the mode adopted under the sanction of the state to protect the people at large was arbitrary, and not justified by the necessities of the case. We say necessities of the case, because it might be that an acknowledged power of a local community to protect itself against an epidemic threatening the safety of all might be exercised in particular circumstances and in reference to particular persons in such an arbitrary, unreasonable manner, or might go so far beyond what was reasonably required for the safety of the public, as to authorize or compel the courts to interfere for the protection of such persons. Wisconsin, M. & P. R. Co. v. Jacobson, 179 U. S. 287, 301, 45 L. ed. 194, 201, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 115; 1 Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. §§ 319-325, and authorities in notes; Freurid, Police Power, §§ 63 et seq. In Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. v. Husen, 95 U. S. 465, 471-473, 24 L. ed. 527, 530, 531, this court recognized the right of a state to pass sanitary laws, laws for the protection of life, liberty, health, or property within its limits, laws to prevent persons and animals suffering under contagious or infectious diseases, or convicts, from coming within its borders. But, as the laws there involved went beyond the necessity of the case, and, under the guise of exerting a police power, invaded the domain of Federal authority, and violated rights secured by the Constitution, this court deemed it to be its duty to hold such laws invalid. If the mode adopted by the commonwealth of Massachusetts for the protection of its local communities against smallpox proved to be distressing, inconvenient, or objectionable to some,—if

[29] nothing more could be reasonably *affirmed of the statute in question,—the answer is that it was the duty of the constituted authorities primarily to keep in view the welfare, comfort, and safety of the many, and not permit the interests of the many to be subordinated to the wishes or convenience of the few. There is, of course, a sphere within which the individual may assert the supremacy of his own will, and rightfully dispute the authority of any human government,—especially of any free government existing under a written constitution,—to interfere with the exercise of that will. But it is equally true that in every well-ordered society charged with the duty of conserving the safety of its members the rights of the individual in respect of his liberty may at times, under the pressure of great dangers, be subjected to such restraint, to be enforced by reasonable regulations, as the safety of the general public may demand. An American citizen arriving at an American port on a vessel in which, during the voyage, there had been cases of yellow fever or Asiatic cholera, he, although apparently free from disease himself, may yet, in some circumstances, be held in quarantine against his will on board of such vessel or in a quarantine station, until it be ascertained by inspection, conducted with due diligence, that the danger of the spread of the disease among the community at large has disappeared. The liberty secured by the 14th Amendment, this court has said, consists, in part, in the right of a person “to live and work where he will” (Allgeyer v. Louisiana, 165 U. S. 578, 41 L. ed. 832, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427); and yet he may be compelled, by force if need be, against his will and without regard to his personal wishes or his pecuniary interests, or even his religious or political convictions, to take his place in the ranks of the army of his country, and risk the chance of being shot down in its defense. It is not, therefore, true that the power of the public to guard itself against imminent danger depends in every case involving the control of one’s body upon his willingness to submit to reasonable regulations established by the constituted authorities, under [30] the *sanction of the state, for the purpose of protecting the public collectively against such danger.

197 U. S.

It is said, however, that the statute, as interpreted by the state court, although making an exception in favor of children certified by a registered physician to be unfit subjects for vaccination, makes no exception in case of adults in like condition. But this cannot be deemed a denial of the equal protection of the laws to adults; for the statute is applicable equally to all in like condition, and there are obviously reasons why regulations may be appropriate for adults which could not be safely applied to persons of tender years.

Looking at the propositions embodied in the defendant’s rejected offers of proof, it is clear that they are more formidable by their number than by their inherent value. Those offers in the main seem to have had no purpose except to state the general theory of those of the medical profession who attach little or no value to vaccination as a means of preventing the spread of smallpox, or who think that vaccination causes other diseases of the body. What everybody knows the court must know, and therefore the state court judicially knew, as this court knows, that an opposite theory accords with the common belief, and is maintained by high medical authority. We must assume that, when the statute in question was passed, the legislature of Massachusetts was not unaware of these opposing theories, and was compelled, of necessity, to choose between them. It was not compelled to commit a matter involving the public health and safety to the final decision of a court or jury. It is no part of the function of a court or a jury to determine which one of two modes was likely to be the most effective for the protection of the public against disease. That was for the legislative department to determine in the light of all the information it had or could obtain. It could not properly abdicate its function to guard the public health and safety. The state legislature proceeded upon the theory which recognized vaccination as at least an effective, if not the best-known, way in which to meet and suppress the *evils of a smallpox epi- [31]demic that imperiled an entire population. Upon what sound principles as to the relations existing between the different departments of government can the court review this action of the legislature? If there is any such power in the judiciary to review legislative action in respect of a matter affecting the general welfare, it can only be when that which the legislature has done comes within the rule that, if a statute purporting to have been enacted to protect the public health, the public morals, or the public safety, has no real or substantial relation to those objects, or is, beyond all question, a plain, palpable invasion of rights secured by the fundamental law, it is the duty of the courts to so adjudge, and thereby give effect to the Constitution. Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 661, 31 L. ed. 205, 210, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Minnesota v. Barber, 136 U. S. 313, 320, 34 L. ed. 455, 458, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 185, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862; Atkin v. Kansas, 191 U. S. 207, 223, 48 L. ed. 148, 158, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 124.

Whatever may be thought of the expediency of this statute, it cannot be affirmed to be, beyond question, in palpable conflict with the Constitution. Nor, in view of the methods employed to stamp out the disease of smallpox, can anyone confidently assert that the means prescribed by the state to that end has no real or substantial relation to the protection of the public health and the public safety. Such an assertion would not be consistent with the experience of this and other countries whose authorities have dealt with the disease of smallpox.† And the principle of vaccination [32] as a means to *prevent the spread of smallpox has been enforced in many states by statutes making the vaccination of children a condition of their right to enter or remain in public schools. Blue v. Beach, 155 Ind. 121, 50 L. R. A. 64, 80 Am. St. Rep. 195, 56 N. E. 89; Morris v. Columbus, 102 *Ga. 792, [33] 42 L. R. A. 175, 66 Am. St. Rep. 243, 30 S. E. 850; State v. Hay, 126 N. C. 999, 49 L. R. A. 588, 78 Am. St. Rep. 691, 35 S. E. 459; Abeel v. Clark, 84 Cal. 226, 24 Pac. 383; Bissell v. Davison, 65 Conn. 183, 29 L. R. A. 251, 32 Atl. 348; Hazen v. Strong, 2 Vt. 427; Duffield v. Williamsport School District, 162 Pa. 476, 25 L. R. A. 152, 29 Atl. 742.

*The latest case upon the subject of which [34] we are aware is Viemester v. White, decided very recently by the court of appeals of New York. That case involved the validity of a statute excluding from the public schools all children who had not been vaccinated. One contention was that the statute and the regulation adopted in exercise of its provisions was inconsistent with the rights, privileges, and liberties of the citizen. The contention was overruled, the court saying, among other things: "Smallpox is known of all to be a dangerous and contagious disease. If vaccination strongly tends to prevent the transmission or spread of this disease, it logically follows that children may be refused admission to the †"State-supported facilities for vaccination began in England in 1808 with the National Vaccine Establishment. In 1840 vaccination fees were made payable out of the rates. The first compulsory act was passed in 1853, the guardians of the poor being intrusted with the carrying out of the law; in 1854 the public vaccinations under one year of age were 408,824 as against an average of 180,960 for several years before. In 1867 a new act was passed, rather to remove some technical difficulties than to enlarge the scope of the former act; and in 1871 the act was passed which compelled the boards of guardians to appoint vaccination officers. The guardians also appoint a public vaccinator, who must be duly qualified to practise medicine, and whose duty it is to vaccinate (for a fee of one shilling and sixpence) any child resident within his district brought to him for that purpose, to examine the same a week after, to give a certificate, and to certify to the vaccination officer the fact of vaccination or of insusceptibility. . . . Vaccination was made compulsory in Bavaria in 1807, and subsequently in the following countries: Denmark (1810), Sweden (1814), Württemberg, Hesse, and other German states (1818), Prussia (1835), Roumania (1874), Hungary (1876), and Servia (1881). It is compulsory by cantonal law in 10 out of the 22 Swiss cantons; an attempt to pass a Federal compulsory law was defeated by a plebiscite in 1881. In the following countries there is no compulsory law, but governmental facilities and compulsion on various classes more or less directly under governmental control, such as soldiers, state employees, apprentices, school pupils, etc.: France, Italy, Spain, Portugal, Belgium, Norway, Austria, Turkey. . . . Vaccination has been compulsory in South Australia since 1872, in Victoria since 1874, and in Western Australia since 1878.

652

In Tasmania a compulsory act was passed in 1882. In New South Wales there is no compulsion, but free facilities for vaccination. Compulsion was adopted at Calcutta in 1880, and since then at 80 other towns of Bengal, at Madras in 1884, and at Bombay and elsewhere in the presidency a few years earlier. Revaccination was made compulsory in Denmark in 1871, and in Roumania in 1874; in Holland it was enacted for all school pupils in 1872. The various laws and administrative orders which had been for many years in force as to vaccination and revaccination in the several German states were consolidated in an imperial statute of 1874." 24 Encyclopædia Britannica (1894), Vaccination.

"In 1857 the British Parliament received answers from 552 physicians to questions which were asked them in reference to the utility of vaccination, and only two of these spoke against it. Nothing proves this utility more clearly than the statistics obtained. Especially instructive are those which Flinzer compiled respecting the epidemic in Chemnitz which prevailed in 1870-71. At this time in the town there were 64,255 inhabitants, of whom 53,891, or 83.87 per cent, were vaccinated, 5,712, or 8.89 per cent were unvaccinated, and 4,652, or 7.24 per cent, had had the smallpox before. Of those vaccinated 953, or 1.77 per cent, became affected with smallpox, and of the unvaccinated 2,643, or 46.3 per cent, had the disease. In the vaccinated the mortality from the disease was 0.73 per cent, and in the unprotected it was 9.16 per cent. In general, the danger of infection is six times as great, and the mortality 68 times as great, in the unvaccinated as in the vaccinated. Statistics derived from the civil population are in general not so instructive as those derived from armies, where vaccination is usually more carefully performed, public schools until they have been vaccinated. The appellant claims that vaccination does not tend to prevent smallpox, but tends to bring about other diseases, and that it does much harm, with no good. It must be conceded that some laymen, both learned and unlearned, and some physicians of great skill and repute, do not believe that vaccination is a preventive of smallpox. The common belief, however, is that it has a decided tendency to prevent the spread of this fearful disease, and to render it less dangerous to those who contract it. While not accepted by all, it is accepted by the mass of the people, as well as by most members of the medical profession. It has been general in our state, and in most civilized [35] nations for generations. It is generally accepted in theory, and generally applied in practice, both by the voluntary action of the people, and in obedience to the command of law. Nearly every state in the Union has statutes to encourage, or directly or indirectly to require, vaccination; and this is true of most nations of Europe. . . . A common belief, like common knowledge, does not require evidence to establish its existence, but may be acted upon without proof by the legislature and the courts. . . .

197 U. S.

and where statistics can be more accurately collected. During the Franco-German war (1870-71) there was in France a widespread epidemic of smallpox, but the German army lost during the campaign only 450 cases, or 58 men to the 100,000; in the French army, however, where vaccination was not carefully carried out, the number of deaths from smallpox was 23,400." 8 Johnson's Universal Cyclopædia (1897), Vaccination.

"The degree of protection afforded by vaccination thus became a question of great interest. Its extreme value was easily demonstrated by statistical researches. In England, in the last half of the eighteenth century, out of every 1,000 deaths, 96 occurred from smallpox; in the first half of the present century, out of every 1,000 deaths, but 35 were caused by that disease. The amount of mortality in a country by smallpox seems to bear a fixed relation to the extent to which vaccination is carried out. In all England and Wales, for some years previous to 1853, the proportional mortality by smallpox was 21.9 to 1,000 deaths from all causes; in London it was but 16 to 1,000; in Ireland, where vaccination was much less general, it was 49 to 1,000, while in Connaught it was 60 to 1,000. On the other hand, in a number of European countries where vaccination was more or less compulsory, the proportionate number of deaths from smallpox about the same time varied from 2 per 1,000 of all causes in Bohemia, Lombardy, Venice, and Sweden, to 8.33 per 1,000 in Saxony. Although in many instances persons who had been vaccinated were attacked with smallpox in a more or less modified form, it was noticed that the persons so attacked had been commonly vaccinated many years previously." 16 American Cyclopædia, Vaccination (1883).

"Dr. Buchanan, the medical officer of the Lon-

The fact that the belief is not universal is not controlling, for there is scarcely any belief that is accepted by everyone. The possibility that the belief may be wrong, and that science may yet show it to be wrong, is not conclusive; for the legislature has the right to pass laws which, according to the common belief of the people, are adapted to prevent the spread of contagious diseases. In a free country, where the government is by the people, through their chosen representatives, practical legislation admits of no other standard of action, for what the people believe is for the common welfare must be accepted as tending to promote the common welfare, whether it does in fact or not. Any other basis would conflict with the spirit of the Constitution, and would sanction measures opposed to a Republican form of government. While we do not decide, and cannot decide, that vaccination is a preventive of smallpox, we take judicial notice of the fact that this is the common belief of the people of the state, and, with this fact as a foundation, we hold that the statute in question is a health law, enacted in a reasonable and proper exercise of the police power." 179 N. Y. 235, 72 N. E. 97. Since, then, vaccination, as a means of don Government Board, reported [1881] as the result of statistics that the smallpox death rate among adult persons vaccinated was 90 to a million; whereas among those unvaccinated it was 3,350 to a million; whereas among vaccinated children under five years of age, 42½ per million; whereas among unvaccinated children of the same age it was 5,950 per million." Hardway, Essentials of Vaccination (1882). The same author reports that, among other conclusions reached by the Académie de Médecine of France, was one that, "without vaccination, hygienic measures (isolation, disinfection, etc.) are of themselves insufficient for preservation from smallpox." Ibid.

The Belgian Academy of Medicine appointed a committee to make an exhaustive examination of the whole subject, and among the conclusions reported by them were: 1. "Without vaccination, hygienic measures and means, whether public or private, are powerless in preserving mankind from smallpox. . . . 3. Vaccination is always an inoffensive operation when practised with proper care on healthy subjects. . . . 4. It is highly desirable, in the interests of the health and lives of our countrymen, that vaccination should be rendered compulsory." Edwards, Vaccination (1882.)

The English Royal Commission, appointed with Lord Herschell, the Lord Chancellor of England, at its head, to inquire, among other things, as to the effect of vaccination in reducing the prevalence of, and mortality from, smallpox, reported, after several years of investigation: "We think that it diminishes the liability to be attacked by the disease; that it modifies the character of the disease and renders it less fatal,—of a milder and less severe type; that the protection it affords against attacks of the disease is greatest during the years immediately succeeding the operation of vaccination."

protecting a community against smallpox, finds strong support in the experience of this and other countries, no court, much less a jury, is justified in disregarding the action of the legislature simply because in its or their opinion that particular method was—perhaps, or possibly—not the best either for children or adults.

[36] Did the offers of proof made by the defendant present a case which entitled him, while remaining in Cambridge, to *claim exemption from the operation of the statute and of the regulation adopted by the board of health? We have already said that his rejected offers, in the main, only set forth the theory of those who had no faith in vaccination as a means of preventing the spread of smallpox, or who thought that vaccination, without benefiting the public, put in peril the health of the person vaccinated. But there were some offers which it is contended embodied distinct facts that might properly have been considered. Let us see how this is.

The defendant offered to prove that vaccination “quite often” caused serious and permanent injury to the health of the person vaccinated; that the operation “occasionally” resulted in death; that it was “impossible” to tell “in any particular case” what the results of vaccination would be, or whether it would injure the health or result in death; that “quite often” one’s blood is in a certain condition of impurity when it is not prudent or safe to vaccinate him; that there is no practical test by which to determine “with any degree of certainty” whether one’s blood is in such condition of impurity as to render vaccination necessarily unsafe or dangerous; that vaccine matter is “quite often” impure and dangerous to be used, but whether impure or not cannot be ascertained by any known practical test; that the defendant refused to submit to vaccination for the reason that he had, “when a child,” been caused great and extreme suffering for a long period by a disease produced by vaccination; and that he had witnessed a similar result of vaccination, not only in the case of his son, but in the cases of others.

These offers, in effect, invited the court and jury to go over the whole ground gone over by the legislature when it enacted the statute in question. The legislature assumed that some children, by reason of their condition at the time, might not be fit subjects of vaccination; and it is suggested—and we will not say without reason—that such is the case with some adults. But the defendant did not offer to prove that, by reason of his then condition, he was in fact [37] not a fit subject of vaccination *at the time he was informed of the requirement of the regulation adopted by the board of health. It is entirely consistent with his offer of proof that, after reaching full age, he had become, so far as medical skill could discover, and when informed of the regulation of the board of health was, a fit subject of vaccination, and that the vaccine matter to be used in his case was such as any medical practitioner of good standing would regard as proper to be used. The matured opinions of medical men everywhere, and the experience of mankind, as all must know, negative the suggestion that it is not possible in any case to determine whether vaccination is safe. Was defendant exempted from the operation of the statute simply because of his dread of the same evil results experienced by him when a child, and which he had observed in the cases of his son and other children? Could he reasonably claim such an exemption because “quite often,” or “occasionally,” injury had resulted from vaccination, or because it was impossible, in the opinion of some, by any practical test, to determine with absolute certainty whether a particular person could be safely vaccinated?

It seems to the court that an affirmative answer to these questions would practically strip the legislative department of its function to care for the public health and the public safety when endangered by epidemics of disease. Such an answer would mean that compulsory vaccination could not, in any conceivable case, be legally enforced in a community, even at the command of the legislature, however widespread the epidemic of smallpox, and however deep and universal was the belief of the community and of its medical advisers that a system of general vaccination was vital to the safety of all.

We are not prepared to hold that a minority, residing or remaining in any city or town where smallpox is prevalent, and enjoying the general protection afforded by an organized local government, may thus defy the will of its constituted authorities, acting in good faith for all, under the legislative sanction of the state. If such be the privilege of a minority, *then a like privilege [38] would belong to each individual of the community, and the spectacle would be presented of the welfare and safety of an entire population being subordinated to the notions of a single individual who chooses to remain a part of that population. We are unwilling to hold it to be an element in the liberty secured by the Constitution of the United States that one person, or a minority of persons, residing in any community and enjoying the benefits of its local government, should have the power thus to dominate the majority when supported in their action by the authority of the state. While this court should guard with firmness every right appertaining to life, liberty, or property as secured to the individual by the supreme law of the land, it is of the last importance that it should not invade the domain of local authority except when it is plainly necessary to do so in order to enforce that law. The safety and the health of the people of Massachusetts are, in the first instance, for that commonwealth to guard and protect. They are matters that do not ordinarily concern the national government. So far as they can be reached by any government, they depend, primarily, upon such action as the state, in its wisdom, may take; and we do not perceive that this legislation has invaded any right secured by the Federal Constitution.

Before closing this opinion we deem it appropriate, in order to prevent misapprehension as to our views, to observe—perhaps to repeat a thought already sufficiently expressed, namely—that the police power of a state, whether exercised directly by the legislature, or by a local body acting under its authority, may be exerted in such circumstances, or by regulations so arbitrary and oppressive in particular cases, as to justify the interference of the courts to prevent wrong and oppression. Extreme cases can be readily suggested. Ordinarily such cases are not safe guides in the administration of the law. It is easy, for instance, to suppose the case of an adult who is embraced by the mere words of the act, but yet to subject whom to vaccination in a particular condition of his health *or body would be cruel and inhuman in the last degree. We are not to be understood as holding that the statute was intended to be applied to such a case, or, if it was so intended, that the judiciary would not be competent to interfere and protect the health and life of the individual concerned. “All laws,” this court has said, “should receive a sensible construction. General terms should be so limited in their application as not to lead to injustice, oppression, or an absurd consequence. It will always, therefore, be presumed that the legislature intended exceptions to its language which would avoid results of this character. The reason of the law in such cases should prevail over its letter.” United States v. Kirby, 7 Wall. 482, 19 L. ed. 278; Lau Ow Bew v. United States, 144 U. S. 47, 58, 36 L. ed. 340, 344, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 517. Until otherwise informed by the highest court of Massachusetts, we are not inclined to hold that the statute establishes the absolute rule that an adult must be vaccinated if it be apparent or can be shown with reasonable certainty that he is not at the time a fit subject of vaccination, or that vaccination, by reason of his then condition, would seriously impair his health, or probably cause his death. No such case is here presented. It is the cause of an adult who, for aught that appears, was himself in perfect health and a fit subject of vaccination, and yet, while remaining in the community, refused to obey the statute and the regulation adopted in execution of its provisions for the protection of the public health and the public safety, confessedly endangered by the presence of a dangerous disease.

[39]

We now decide only that the statute covers the present case, and that nothing clearly appears that would justify this court in holding it to be unconstitutional and inoperative in its application to the plaintiff in error.

The judgment of the court below must be affirmed.

It is so ordered.

Mr. Justice Brewer and Mr. Justice Peckham dissent.

*CHARLES H. UTERMEHLE, Plff. in Err., [40]
v.

MAMIE E. NORMENT et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 40-60.)

Estoppel—by receiving benefits—ignorance of law.

1. A party taking the benefit of a provision in his favor under a will is estopped to assert the invalidity of that instrument.
2. Ignorance of the rule of law that a party taking the benefit of a provision in his favor under a will is estopped to assert the invalidity of that instrument, although coupled with ignorance of any evidence on which a contest could be based, will not prevent the application of such rule, in the absence of fraud, imposition, or misrepresentation, where the original situation cannot be restored, and there has been extreme negligence in attempting to discover the facts.

[No. 63.]

Argued November 28, 29, 1904. Decided February 20, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia to review a judgment which affirmed a decree of the Supreme Court of that District, sitting as a court of probate, admitting a will to probate as a will of real estate which had previously been admitted to probate as a will of personalty, with the concurrence and consent of all the parties. Affirmed.

NOTE.—On estoppel by receiving benefits—see notes to Katz v. Bedford, 1 L. R. A. 827; Tarkington v. Purvis, 9 L. R. A. 609; and Michigan ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Flint & P. M. R. Co. 38 L. ed. U. S. 478.

See same case below, 22 App. D. C. 31.

Statement by Mr. Justice Peckham:

The plaintiff in error seeks by this writ to review the judgment of the court of appeals of the District of Columbia (22 App. D. C. 31), affirming the decree of the supreme court of that District, sitting as a court of probate, admitting the will of George W. Utermehle to probate as a will of real estate, by virtue of the jurisdiction conferred upon the court by the act of Congress of June 8, 1898. 30 Stat. at L. 434, chap. 394. The same will had been admitted to probate in the District in the year 1889 as a will of personalty (which was all the jurisdiction at that time possessed by the court), with the concurrence and consent of the plaintiff in error. The facts upon which the case hinges are in substance the following:

George W. Utermehle, the testator, died in the city of Washington on the 16th day of April, 1889, leaving a large amount of real and personal property, the real estate amounting, as is said, to about a million dollars, and the personalty to between six hundred thousand and a million of dollars. He left a will, bearing date December 7, [41] 1887, which *appeared on its face to have been duly executed for the conveyance of real estate. The testator left him surviving his widow, two daughters,—Mrs. Taylor and Mrs. Norment,—and the plaintiff in error, his grandson, the son of his deceased son, as his sole heirs at law and next of kin. The widow was named executrix of the will, and she propounded the same for probate April 26, 1889. It was duly admitted to probate, on that day, on the petition of the widow, as executrix, with the written consent of the daughters and the plaintiff in error. The executrix gave a bond in the sum of $20,000 for the payment of all just debts and claims against the deceased, and for the payment of the legacies bequeathed by the will, and letters were issued to her. She duly administered upon the estate, paid the funeral expenses and other charges, and the legacies mentioned in the will, including that to the plaintiff in error. She filed no inventory, but made a statement of account on the 14th day of May, 1890. The personal property, except such as was otherwise disposed of under the will, and in payment of debts and legacies, she retained for herself, as sole and absolute owner, in accordance with the terms of the will. Of this amount it is said that she thereafter disposed of a large part in charities. By the will of George W. Utermehle, he bequeathed to each of his three nieces, residing in Germany, the sum of $3,000; he devised to his grandson, the plaintiff in error, the property known as the Young Law Building, in Washington; he also bequeathed to him the interest due or to become due on a note for $750, secured on a lot in Washington, and also the principal of the same; he bequeathed to his wife, Sarah Utermehle, all the rest of his personal property, of every kind, to be taken by her in lieu of dower, and to be disposed of by her by deed, will, or otherwise, as she pleased; he devised to her his then present residence and the property adjoining, being square 765 in the city of Washington; he then bequeathed all the rest and residue of his real estate, wherever situated, and all the real estate of which he might die seised and possessed, other than *that already devised, [42] to his two daughters, Mamie Norment and Rosa Taylor, as tenants in common, share and share alike; he appointed his wife sole executrix of his will, and revoked all other wills theretofore made by him; he suggested that, as he had no debts, and his personal estate was to go to his wife, a very moderate bond should be required of her as executrix.

After the death of his grandfather, the plaintiff was present at his late residence and heard this will read.

Immediately after the reading of the will he left the house, but Mrs. Taylor, one of his aunts, as he was leaving, asked him to come over the next day, which he did. He testified on this trial that he arrived at the house and went into the dining room, and Mrs. Taylor, Mrs. Norment, and his grandmother were there. Mrs. Taylor did the talking, and started the conversation by stating to the plaintiff in error that the will had virtually cut him off, and that if it had not been for her and the Doctor (her husband) the plaintiff in error would not have been left the property called the Young Law Building; but that they had had his grandfather paint it up and put it in repair, so that when it came into his possession it would not be any expense to him to put it in condition at the time. She further said that his grandmother was left all the personal property, which amounted to almost, if not quite as much, as that which they (his aunts) would receive under the will, and that when his grandmother died she proposed to make him right,—to make him equal with them by equalizing his share; that his grandmother wanted to know what the mortgage on his farm was, as she understood that there was a mortgage; that she wanted to pay it off; that she wanted to start him off without any debts on him. His grandmother was sitting there at the time, but said nothing. He was asked what the mortgage was on his farm. He told them $11,500. The only remarks made were those between Mrs. Taylor (his aunt) and himself, and the only statement he made was what the mortgage on the farm [43] was. He also testified on the trial *below that he believed what was then promised him, as to what his grandmother would do when she made her will; that he had no doubt whatever that she would fulfil her promise. His grandmother told him at that interview she would give him a check for the mortgage in a few days, and he then went home. Subsequently, and on the 26th day of April, 1889, he signed the consent to the probate of the will. He did it in reliance, as he said, upon the promise above mentioned.

From the time of the probate of his grandfather's will up to the time of the death of his grandmother, he did nothing to attack the will of his grandfather, but relied upon the promise made by or on the part of his grandmother, the day after the funeral. After the probate of his grandfather's will he received from his grandmother, as the executrix, the legacy spoken of therein, and gave receipt therefor; he also took possession of the real estate given him by the will, called Young's Law Building, and received the rents therefor for nearly two years, and (on March 24, 1891) sold it for $20,000, and kept the proceeds. The sisters took the real estate devised to them by the will. They commenced an action of partition, and the real estate was partitioned between them, and each thereafter treated the real estate set off to her under the partition as her own absolute property. Some of it they conveyed and disposed of so that it passed beyond their control. They assumed and supposed that the real estate given to them in the will was their own, as the plaintiff in error had consented to the probate of the will, and had made no objections whatever since that time to its validity, or questioned it in any way.

On the 13th of March, 1893, the grandmother died, leaving a will dated July 5, 1889, less than three months after the promise alleged to have been made by her, or in her behalf, to the plaintiff in error immediately after the funeral of his grandfather. The will of the grandmother was admitted to probate, by the consent of all the parties [44] interested, on the *17th day of March, 1893. The two daughters were executrices under the will, but, on objection being made by the plaintiff in error to their receiving commissions, they waived their right to them, and performed the services without pay. By the terms of this will the two aunts and the plaintiff in error were made to share equally in the estate of the grandmother, 197 U. S.

which turned out to amount to something over $200,000, the grandmother having, during her lifetime, as is stated, disposed of a large amount of the personal property bequeathed to her under the will of her husband, in charities. When the terms of the will of the grandmother were read to the plaintiff in error he testified on the trial below that he then said, "So far as I am concerned I have got the worst of and I have got to stand it. I never made but one mistake in my life, and that was when I held still once before, and now I have to stand still."

He received under the will of his grandmother $84,256.87, being the same share as was received by each of his aunts. He received, under the will of his grandfather and that of his grandmother a total of between $140,000 and $150,000. After the death of his grandmother he took no steps showing an intention to contest the will of either, until May 19, 1900, which was ten years after the settlement of the estate of his grandfather, and nearly seven years after the settlement of the estate of his grandmother. On the date named he addressed two letters of the same tenor, one to Mrs. Taylor and the other to Mrs. Norment, in which he states that he had been under a misapprehension and was ignorant regarding his rights at the time his grandfather died, and that misrepresentations had been made to him from those interested, touching his rights and interest in his grandfather's estate, and he therefore notified them that he denied the validity of the paper writing alleged to be the last will and testament of his grandfather, which had been admitted to probate as a will of personal property, and stated that he contended that the alleged will had never been operative in connection with the real property, *and that his claim to the building and [45] ground known as Young's Law Building was merely a one-third interest in the property as tenant in common with the other heirs at law of his deceased grandfather; he also stated that he held himself ready to account, upon demand, to his two aunts for the one-third interest to which each was entitled in that real estate, as two of the heirs at law of his grandfather, in both the property and the rents and profits from the same, from his grandfather's death; that he held himself as ready, upon demand, to make proper settlement with both of his aunts for the $750 note, with the accrued interest thereon, which had been all paid, and was pretended to have been bequeathed to him under the will of his grandfather. Plaintiff in error testified that he did not receive any answer to either letter, nor any communication from either of his aunts, and soon thereafter he instituted a suit in ejectment, and on June 9, 1900, filed a caveat in the probate court against the validity of the will, as a will of personalty. The plaintiff in error there charged that the will was procured by the fraud, undue influence, and duress of Mrs. Taylor and her husband, and that the testator had no testamentary capacity when the paper was signed by him. Mrs. Taylor and Mrs. Norment answered this caveat, and at the same time filed a petition asking for probate of the will of their father, of December 7, 1887, as a will of real estate, under the act of Congress of June 8, 1898, above mentioned. To this petition the plaintiff in error made answer.

Pending proceedings in the probate court on this caveat of the plaintiff in error, and the petition for the probate of the will as one of real estate, Mrs. Taylor, one of the aunts, died, January 22, 1901, leaving a will by which she devised all of her estate and property to her husband, subject to an annuity to her son, and nominated her husband as executor. This will was duly admitted to probate on the 18th day of March, 1901, and letters testamentary were issued to Dr. Taylor (the husband). Thereupon [46] he filed his petition in these *proceedings, wherein he stated that the property devised and bequeathed to him by his wife was in fact to be held in trust by him for the benefit of his son and his children, with the reservation of certain rights and powers for himself, and he asked that the parties named by him be made parties to the present proceedings in place of Mrs. Taylor, and they were accordingly made such.

The court then determined that issues should be formulated between the parties, to be tried in the probate court with a jury, under the act of June 8, 1898, and there were six issues thus drawn: The first was in regard to the question whether the plaintiff in error was estopped to deny the validity of his grandfather's will as a will of personal property; the second, whether he was estopped to deny its validity as one disposing of real property; third, was a question as to the testamentary capacity of the grandfather; the fourth, whether there was undue influence; fifth, whether there was fraud in obtaining the will from the grandfather; and sixth, whether there was duress.

It was stipulated that the question of the application of the statute of limitations, which was raised by the caveats and petitions, and all other questions, should be reserved for future determination by the court. Charles H. Utermehle was made plaintiff for the purpose of the trial, and all the other parties were made defendants. On March 17, 1902, a jury was impaneled and the trial commenced. The plaintiff proceeded to give his testimony, addressed to the question of estoppel and to an explanation of his delay in asserting his alleged rights. When the counsel for plaintiff in error announced their testimony on the question of estoppel closed, they were about to proceed with their testimony on the other issues, but counsel for the defendants objected, and asked the court to direct a verdict against the plaintiff on the issue of estoppel, and against the plaintiff upon all the other issues. After consideration the court instructed the jury to render a verdict against the plaintiff on each and all the issues, and a verdict *was thus rendered and recorded. Thereupon an order or decree was rendered affirming the decree of April 26, 1889, admitting the grandfather's will to probate as and for a will of personalty, and also admitting it now to probate as and for a will of real estate, under the act of Congress of 1898. The court of appeals having affirmed this decree, the case has come to us by writ of error on the part of the plaintiff.

Messrs. Wilton J. Lambert and D. W. Baker argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

Can the appellees invoke the doctrine of estoppel in their behalf when one of them is a devisee under the will, and the others claim from a devisee, both of whom are charged with exercising undue influence or fraud in the making of the will, and in making false and fraudulent misrepresentations to prevent the plaintiff in error from investigating the facts surrounding the making of the will, this last fraud being merely ancillary to the principal fraud charged?

Neblett v. Macfarland, 92 U. S. 103, 23 L. ed. 471.

If the caveator was ignorant of the facts surrounding the making of the alleged will at the time that he acted under it, his action, while ignorant, in no way estops him from attacking its validity.

Fisher v. Boyce, 81 Md. 46, 31 Atl. 707; Miller's Estate, 159 Pa. 562, 28 Atl. 441; Medill v. Snyder, 61 Kan. 15, 78 Am. St. Rep. 306, 58 Pac. 962; Lee v. Templeton, 73 Ind. 317; Fletcher v. Holmes, 25 Ind. 469; Andrews v. Lyons, 11 Allen, 350; Brant v. Virginia Coal & I. Co. 93 U. S. 335, 23 L. ed. 929; Henshaw v. Bissell, 18 Wall. 271, 21 L. ed. 840; Farmers' & M. Bank v. Farwell, 7 C. C. A. 391, 19 U. S. App. 262, 58 Fed. 633; Halloran v. Halloran, 137 Ill. 112, 27 N. E. 82; Clinton v. Haddam, 50 Conn. 84; Taylor v. Cussen, 90 Va. 43, 17 S. E. 721; Cumberland Coal & I. Co. v. Sherman, 20 Md. 117.

In this case the caveator could, under the law, file his caveat or bring his action of ejectment at any time within twenty years from the death of George W. Utermehle.

Barbour v. Moore, 4 App. D. C. 535; McGee v. Welch, 18 App. D. C. 177.

Where a person claims title to real property the doctrine of laches can never be invoked if proceedings are taken within the statutory period.

Acquiescences and waivers are questions of fact.

Pence v. Langdon, 99 U. S. 578, 25 L. ed. 420.

If the caveator acted in ignorance of his legal rights, or was wanting in knowledge of the rule which compelled him to elect, his acts under such circumstances did not constitute an estoppel.

Henshaw v. Bissell, 18 Wall. 271, 21 L. ed. 840; Watson v. Watson, 128 Mass. 152. See also Spread v. Morgan, 11 H. L. Cas. 588; Wheeler v. Smith, 9 How. 55, 13 L. ed. 44; Spurlock v. Brown, 91 Tenn. 261, 18 S. W. 868; Williams v. Williams, 63 Md. 371.

Mr. A. S. Worthington argued the cause, and, with Mr. T. Percy Woodward, filed a brief for defendants in error:

The caveator is to be charged, not only with what he actually knew in regard to the physical and mental condition of his grandfather and the alleged undue influence, coercion, misrepresentation, and fraud, but with the knowledge he could have acquired by the use of reasonable diligence,—especially as to matters concerning which what he did know would have led a man of ordinary prudence to make further inquiry.

Upton v. Tribilcock, 91 U. S. 55, 23 L. ed. 203; Grymes v. Sanders, 93 U. S. 55, 62, 23 L. ed. 798, 801; Wollensak v. Reiher, 115 U. S. 99, 29 L. ed. 351, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1137; Leather Mfrs. Nat. Bank v. Morgan, 117 U. S. 96, 108, 112, 122, 29 L. ed. 811, 816, 817, 821, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 657; Foster v. Mansfield, C. & L. M. R. Co. 146 U. S. 88-102, 36 L. ed. 899-904, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28; Johnston v. Standard Min. Co. 148 U. S. 360, 37 L. ed. 480, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585; Johnson v. Atlantic, G. & W. I. Transit Co. 156 U. S. 618, 39 L. ed. 556, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 520; McLean v. Clapp, 141 U. S. 429, 35 L. ed. 804, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 29; Wood v. Carpenter, 101 U. S. 135-143, 25 L. ed. 807-809; Felix v. Patrick, 145 U. S. 317, 331, 36 L. ed. 719, 726, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862.

Under the circumstances of this case the mere lapse of time has raised an insurmountable obstacle to an attack by the caveator upon his grandfather's will.

Hammond v. Hopkins, 143 U. S. 224-274, 36 L. ed. 134-153, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Galliher v. Cadwell, 145 U. S. 368, 372, 376, 36 L. ed. 738, 740, 741, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 873; Simmons v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. 197 U. S.

Co. 159 U. S. 291, 40 L. ed. 154, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Fulton v. Moore, 25 Pa. 468; Bradford v. Kent, 43 Pa. 474; Baxter v. Bowyer, 19 Ohio St. 490; Wilson v. Wilson, 145 Ind. 662, 44 N. E. 665; Drake v. Wild, 70 Vt. 52, 39 Atl. 248; Hovey v. Hovey, 61 N. H. 599; Wells v. Congregational Church, 63 Vt. 116, 21 Atl. 270.

One who takes a benefit under a will is precluded from assailing the instrument as invalid.

Herbert v. Wren, 7 Cranch, 370, 3 L. ed. 374; Fisher v. Boyce, 81 Md. 46, 31 Atl. 707; Hyde v. Baldwin, 17 Pick. 308; Smith v. Smith, 14 Gray, 532; Fry v. Morrison, 159 Ill. 244, 42 N. E. 774; Drake v. Wild, 70 Vt. 52, 39 Atl. 248; Williams v. Whittell, 69 App. Div. 340, 74 N. Y. Supp. 820; Branson v. Watkins, 96 Ga. 54, 23 S. E. 204; Van Duyne v. Van Duyne, 14 N. J. Eq. 49; Madison v. Larmon, 170 Ill. 65, 62 Am. St. Rep. 356, 48 N. E. 556.

In such cases the amount received under the will compared with what the party estopped would have received otherwise is unimportant.

Cunningham's Estate, 137 Pa. 621, 21 Am. St. Rep. 901, 20 Atl. 714; Lee v. Tower, 124 N. Y. 370, 26 N. E. 943.

The principle of equitable estoppel is as applicable in a court of law as in a court of equity.

Dickerson v. Colgrove, 100 U. S. 578, 25 L. ed. 618; Kirk v. Hamilton, 102 U. S. 68, 26 L. ed. 79.

It is applied even to a case where a party sets up the unconstitutionality of an act of the legislature under which he has derived a benefit.

Ferguson v. Landram, 5 Bush, 230, 96 Am. Dec. 350; Van Hook v. Whitlock, 26 Wend. 43, 37 Am. Dec. 246; Daniels v. Tearney, 102 U. S. 415, 421, 26 L. ed. 187, 189.

It prevents a debtor from assailing a void judgment against him when in another proceeding he has had his creditor excluded because of the judgment.

Davis v. Wakelee, 156 U. S. 680, 691, 39 L. ed. 578, 585, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 555.

Even the rules of evidence will be suspended as against one who in another controversy has escaped liability by misstating them.

Mexican Nat. R. Co. v. Davidson, 157 U. S. 201, 39 L. ed. 672, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 563; Michels v. Olmstead, 157 U. S. 198, 39 L. ed. 671, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 580.

An intention to deceive any particular person is not necessary. It is not even essential that there should be any intention to deceive anybody.

Horn v. Cole, 51 N. H. 287, 12 Am. Rep. 111; Leather Mfrs. Nat. Bank v. Morgan, 117 U. S. 96, 112, 122, 29 L. ed. 811, 817, 821, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 657; O'Donnell v. Clin- ton, 145 Mass. 462, 14 N. E. 747; 11 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 431.

This case is governed by the law relating to equitable estoppel, not by the practice or procedure of courts of equity relating to "election."

11 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 59; 1 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 395; Parkey v. Ramsey, 111 Tenn. 302, 76 S. W. 812.

If, relying upon the implied assertion of the validity of the will by the receipt of the legacy, the executor or some other party in interest has changed his position so that he cannot be put in statu quo, then the doctrine of equitable estoppel may be invoked for his protection.

Watson v. Watson, 128 Mass. 152.

A closer analogy than the equitable rule as to "election" is found in the case of a vendor who, on discovering that he has been defrauded, may disaffirm the sale and bring replevin or ejectment to get back his property, or may affirm the sale by seeking to recover its value. In such a case a decision once made and acted on is binding, whether the other party has changed his position or not.

Robb v. Vos, 155 U. S. 13, 43, 39 L. ed. 52; 63, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 4; Thompson v. Howard, 31 Mich. 309; Smith v. Gilmore, 7 App. D. C. 192.

Ignorance of the law of equitable estoppel is no excuse.

Hunt v. Rousmanier, 8 Wheat. 215, 5 L. ed. 599; Hunt v. Rhodes, 1 Pet. 1, 7 L. ed. 27; Bank of United States v. Daniel, 12 Pet. 32, 55-58, 9 L. ed. 989, 998, 999; 3 Rose's Notes, p. 702; United States v. Rodson, 10 Wall. 395, 19 L. ed. 937; Milwaukee & M. R. Co. v. Soutter, 13 Wall. 517-524, 20 L. ed. 543-545; Upton v. Tribilcock, 91 U. S. 45-50, 23 L. ed. 203-205; Lamborn v. Dickinson County, 97 U. S. 181-185, 24 L. ed. 926-928; United States v. Ames, 99 U. S. 35, 23 L. ed. 295; Laver v. Dennett, 109 U. S. 90, 27 L. ed. 867, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 73; Allen v. Galloway, 30 Fed. 466; Rankin v. Mortimore, 7 Watts, 372; Light v. Light, 21 Pa. 407; Cox v. Rogers, 77 Pa. 160; Whitwell v. Winslow, 134 Mass. 343; Alabama & V. R. Co. v. Jones, 55 Am. St. Rep. 494, note, 73 Miss. 110, 19 So. 105; Storrs v. Barker, 6 Johns. Ch. 166, 10 Am. Dec. 316.

[52] *Mr. Justice Peckham, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

It is true that the plaintiff in error has received out of the estates of his grandfather and grandmother only between the sum of $140,000 and $150,000, while an equal division of the estate of his grandfather, between himself and his aunts, would have given him a much larger sum. What was the reason, if any, for this discrimination, the record does not show.

When the will of his grandfather was read the plaintiff in error was perfectly aware of its contents. He was a young man, nearly twenty-four years of age, married, and there is no proof that he was not of ordinary intelligence and capacity. There is no pretense in the evidence that there was any fraud or misrepresentation connected with obtaining his consent to the probate of the will, without opposition or contest on his part. By his own statement he understood distinctly from one of his aunts, after the reading of the will, that it substantially cut him off; that he would receive under the will a devise of the Young Law Building, worth about $20,000, and a bequest of the note of $750 and accrued interest, amounting to not quite $3,000, and that that was all that was given him under the will. He knew it when the will was read. There is not a particle of evidence that he did not know that, if there had been fraud or undue influence or duress in obtaining the alleged will from his grandfather, or if the latter was without testamentary capacity, such will would be void. The trial court, indeed, observed that he admitted he knew what his legal rights were at the time of the death of his grandfather, if there were no will. He was ignorant only of any evidence on which to base a contest against the proof of the will. He says he did not know at that time that fraud or undue influence or duress had been exercised, in order to obtain the will, nor did he know that his grandfather lacked testamentary capacity to execute a will, but there is no evidence whatever *that [53] any means were used or representation made to prevent him from ascertaining what the facts really were. The reason for his not contesting was, as he said, his reliance on the promise alleged to have been made by or on behalf of his grandmother to make him equal by her own will. On account of this promise he did not contest the will. By reason of his consent, his aunts, the other heirs at law of his grandfather, proceeded to make partition of the real estate given to them by the will, and to use, convey, and dispose of it as if it were absolutely their own property. His grandmother received the personal property bequeathed to her by the will, and disposed of large amounts of it prior to her death by gifts to charity and otherwise. It would be impossible to place the other heirs in the same position that they were in at the time of the death of the grandfather. The two aunts, if that will had not been proved, would have received their share of the personalty instead of almost the whole of it going to the mother. Under the will, however, the mother took the personalty and spent or disposed of large portions of it, so that she died possessed of only about $200,000, and the two aunts and the plaintiff in error have received an equal share of that sum. The aunts would have received a much larger share of the personalty had it not been for the will of their father. As is stated by the court of appeals in the opinion delivered in this case:

"It is impossible to tell from the record before us whether they [the aunts of the plaintiff in error] fared any better with the will than they would have fared without it; but it is very evident that, by the bequest of the entire personalty by the will to their mother, they lost a valuable interest to which they cannot now be restored. It is impossible to restore the original situation, and the attempt to do so would be wantonly to question titles that have long since accrued, including the very title which the caveator has himself disposed of to the Young Law Building."

Of the witnesses to the grandfather's will, [54] two are dead *and the third paralyzed. From the date of the probate of the grandfather's will in April, 1889, down to the 19th of May, 1900, the plaintiff in error took no steps towards a contest. On that date he wrote the letters to his aunts, above referred to, and therein he says that misrepresentations were made to him as to his rights and interest in the estate. We find a total absence of all proof as to any such misrepresentations, either as to his rights or his interest in the estate of his grandfather. The trial court also found that the plaintiff in error had not exhibited even reasonable diligence to learn any facts as to the will of his grandfather, and that his alleged ignorance of the law was the only excuse which had the semblance of sufficiency.

We have, therefore, his consent given in April, 1889, to the probate of the will of his grandfather; his taking the legacy provided for under that will; his taking possession of the real estate devised to him by that will; his receipts of its rents and profits, and his subsequent sale thereof for $20,000, and the retention of that sum for his own purposes; his consent to the probate of his grandmother's will, although it clearly does not fulfil the promise he alleges was made on her behalf after the death and funeral of his grandfather; no movement is made on his part or sign of discontent given for about seven years thereafter, and then he writes letters and files his caveat and proceeds, as already stated. We have the total lack of diligence in the attempt even to ascertain facts. After his grandmother's death he says that he was still ignorant of the facts which he alleges he has since discovered of the existence of fraud in obtaining the will from his grandfather, and of the latter's lack of testamentary capacity, and the existence of duress and undue influence under which the will was obtained; and he also avers that he was ignorant of the law at the time that he consented to the probate of his grandfather's will, that he could not take a devise or bequest under that will, and at the same time seek to prevent its probate, or to set it aside as an invalid instrument. The trial court found that right after *the death of his grand-[55] mother he had the advice of counsel, and if he had been ignorant of any rights he would have been informed of the same.

The plaintiff in error asserts that he gave consent to the probate of his grandfather's will because of the promise of his grandmother to rectify, by her will, the injustice resulting from the will of his grandfather, and when he found that the promise was broken, on reading the will of his grandmother, after her decease, he then waited seven years before proceeding to attack the will of his grandfather, admitted to probate in 1889. The court of appeals doubted the existence of the promise, and said it was probably only a promise that he should share equally in his grandmother's estate, which his grandmother fully performed. He says that after the death of his grandmother he was very ill for six weeks, and that for two years he was not in good health, and that he remained ignorant of the fraud and undue influence and duress and mental incapacity of his grandfather until a short time before the filing of the caveat or the writing of the letters. He does not contend that, if these facts existed, he did not know that, if proved, they would avoid the will.

He insists, however, that the law pertaining to the taking of the legacy or devise under a will, which prevents the assertion of the invalidity of the same will, ought not to bind him, because he was ignorant that such was the law; in other words, the law should not cover his case because he was ignorant that it was the law.

We know of no case where mere ignorance of the law, standing alone, constitutes any excuse or defense against its enforcement. It would be impossible to administer the law if ignorance of its provisions were a defense thereto. There are cases, undoubtedly, where ignorance of the law, united with fraudulent conduct on the part of others, or mistakes of fact relating thereto, will be regarded as a defense, but there must be some element, other than a mere mistake of law, which will afford an excuse. In addition, there ought to be no negligence *in attempt-[56] ing to discover the facts. The ignorance of the plaintiff in error as to his alleged rights, it would seem, was an ignorance of the existence of alleged facts regarding the procurement of the will of his grandfather; but he does not pretend that, had he known of their existence, he was ignorant of their effect as a ground for refusing probate of the alleged will. The ignorance of evidence to substantiate what he knew were his rights is a very different thing from ignorance of the rights themselves, as is stated so clearly by the court of appeals; and so it rests in this case that the only obstacle to the enforcement of the rule of estoppel rests in the alleged ignorance of the plaintiff in error that such a rule existed. Although his action in consenting to the probate of the will of his grandfather was not the result of fraud or misrepresentation, and the other parties to this litigation cannot be placed back in the position they occupied when the will was admitted to probate, and this condition is the result of the action of the plaintiff in error in consenting to the probate of the will, yet he now contends, notwithstanding all this, that he must be permitted, after the lapse of eleven years, to attempt to defeat the will of his grandfather because he did not know the law applicable to the case in hand. This is a totally inadmissible proposition.

It has been held from the earliest days, in both the Federal and state courts, that a mistake of law, pure and simple, without the addition of any circumstances of fraud or misrepresentation, constitutes no basis for relief at law or in equity, and forms no excuse in favor of the party asserting that he made such mistake. Hunt v. Rousmaniere (Hunt v. Rhodes) 1 Pet. 1-15, 7 L. ed. 27-33; Bank of United States v. Daniel, 12 Pet. 32-55, 9 L. ed. 989-999; United States v. Hodson, 10 Wall. 395-409, 19 L. ed. 937-940; Lamborn v. Dickinson County, 97 U. S. 181-185, 24 L. ed. 926-928; Snell v. Atlantic F. & M. Ins. Co. 98 U. S. 85-92, 25 L. ed. 52-55; Allen v. Galloway, 30 Fed. 466, where Hammond, J., in reviewing the decisions of this court, says: "Whatever rule may prevail elsewhere, there can be in the equity courts of the United States no relief from a mistake of law." Drake v. Wild, 70 Vt. 52-59, 39 Atl. 248; in that case the [57] court said (p. 59, Atl. p. 251): "That ignorance of the law does not excuse a wrong done or a right withheld. That relief from liabilities under the law, arising from a known state of facts, will be denied. But to these general rules there are exceptions, as where there is a mistake of law caused by fraud, imposition, or misrepresentation. We think it will be found that, in most of the cases cited in these notes and in Pomeroy, the party seeking relief was led into error by the action of the other party to a transaction, as in contracts and releases." Light v. Light, 21 Pa. 407-412; Storrs v. Barker, 6 Johns. Ch. 166, 10 Am. Dec. 316; Whitwell v. Winslow, 134 Mass. 343-345; Alabama & V. R. Co. v. Jones, 73 Miss. 110, 55 Am. St. Rep. 488, note, 19 So. 105.

Exceptional cases where relief has been given have been, as stated, where there was fraud or imposition upon the individual by the person seeking to avail himself of the contract of the other party. In this case there was, as we have said, neither fraud nor imposition, nor misrepresentation; plaintiff in error was not advised that, although he took under the will, he could attack it. It is a simple, bald case of an alleged mistake or misapprehension, on the part of plaintiff, of what the law was under certain circumstances, with no representation or persuasion on the part of others to cause him to act upon such mistaken assumption.

As to what is the law relating to a party taking the benefit of a provision in his favor under a will, there is really no foundation to dispute the proposition that he thereby is precluded from, at the same time, attacking the validity of the very instrument under which he received the benefit.

In Hyde v. Baldwin, 17 Pick. 303, 308, it was held that one who accepted the beneficial interest under a will was thereby barred from setting up any claim which would defeat the full operation of the will. Drake v. Wild, 70 Vt. 52, 39 Atl. 248, holds the same doctrine. In that case a party was held to be estopped from asserting her title to a trust fund disposed of by the will, because she had accepted the provisions of the will in her own favor. In Branson v. Watkins, 96 Ga. 55, 23 S. E. 204, it *was held that one [58] who took an estate under a will was thereby estopped from, at the same time, denying its validity as a will, or from questioning the jurisdiction of the court admitting it to probate, or the regularity of the probate proceedings. In Smith v. Smith, 14 Gray, 532, it was held that the acceptance of a devise estops the devisee to set up a title in opposition to the will, at law as well as in equity. In Fry v. Morrison, 159 Ill. 244, 42 N. E. 774, it was held that one who took a beneficial interest under a will was thereby estopped to set up any right or claim of his own, though otherwise well founded, which would bar or defeat the effect of any part of the will. And in Madison v. Larmon, 170 Ill. 65, 82, 62 Am. St. Rep. 356, 48 N. E. 556, it was again held that one who takes under a will cannot contest it as an heir at law of the devised property. So, in Fisher v. Boyce, 81 Md. 46, 53, 31 Atl. 707, the court said: "It is a maxim in a court of equity not to permit the same person to hold under and against a will." This maxim was equally appropriate to the jurisdiction and practice of courts of law, and where one claimed under a will he must give it effect as far as he can, and he will be estopped from denying its validity and genuineness. Waters's Appeal, 35 Pa. 523; Thrower v. Wood, 53 Ga. 458.

When, in addition to the fact that he took a benefit under the will, a party has acquiesced in its validity for many years, and the opposing party in interest has acted upon such consent and acquiescence, and has so changed his position on that account that he cannot be restored to it, and where witnesses have, in the meantime, died, the reason for the rule upon which an estoppel is founded is thereby greatly strengthened.

Two cases, among others, were cited by counsel for plaintiff in error, in the court below, and are referred to in the opinion of the court of appeals, and they are also cited here for the purpose of showing his right to maintain these proceedings to set aside the will of his grandfather. They are: Spread v. Morgan, 11 H. L. Cas. 587, decided in 1864; Watson v. Watson, 128 Mass. 152, decided in 1880.

[59] *In the English case it was held that one remaining in possession of two estates, under titles not consistent with each other, thereby afforded no decisive proof of an election under which title to take. It was there held that the rule was, "that if a party being bound to elect between two properties, not being called upon so to elect, continues in the receipt of the rents and profits of both, such receipt affording no proof of preference cannot be an election to take the one and reject the other."

We think the case has no application to the one at bar, and is well distinguished in the opinion of the court of appeals in this case.

In Watson v. Watson, 128 Mass. 152, the general doctrine that any person taking a beneficial interest under a will thereby confirmed it, and could not set up any right or claim of his own which would defeat or in any way prevent the full operation of every part of the will, was recognized and affirmed, but it was said (page 155):

"An election made in ignorance of material facts is, of course, not binding, when no other person's rights have been affected thereby. So, if a person, though knowing the facts, has acted in misapprehension of his legal rights, and in ignorance of his obligation to make an election, no intention to elect, and consequently no election, is to be presumed."

Regarding the legatee who took a legacy under the will, the court continued (at p. 157) as follows:

"But as to Edward, the case stands differently. Immediately upon being informed of the rule of law, little more than a year after the probate of the will, and before the executor had settled any account in the probate court, or the position of any other person had been changed, he returned his legacy to the executor, and gave him notice that he elected not to take it. He cannot therefore be held to have made such an election as should deprive him of the right, under his independent title, to partition of the whole estate, not excepting the parcel claimed by the respondent."

ferently. Immediately upon being informed of the rule of law, little more than a year after the probate of the will, and before the executor had settled any account in the probate court, or the position of any other person had been changed, he returned his legacy to the executor, and gave him notice that he elected not to take it. He cannot therefore be held to have made such an election as should deprive him of the right, under his independent title, to partition of the whole estate, not excepting the parcel claimed by the respondent."

*In this case the position of other parties [60] to this litigation has most materially changed, as has already been shown (the particulars of which need not be repeated), while the plaintiff in error has been also guilty of extreme negligence even in attempting to discover what he alleges are facts. We are satisfied that the plaintiff in error is estopped from now contesting the will, and that great injustice would result from the overturning of the principle adjudged in so many cases.

We are of opinion the case has been rightly decided, and the judgment of the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia is affirmed.

FRANK E. KEHRER, Plff. in Err.,

v.

ANDREW P. STEWART.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 60-70.)

Constitutional law—state taxation of local managers of foreign packing houses—infringement of commerce clause—equal protection of the laws.

1. The tax of $200 upon resident managing agents of nonresident meat-packing houses which is imposed by Georgia act of December 21, 1900, regardless of the fact that the greater portion of the business may be interstate in its character, does not conflict with the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution, where the tax is construed by the highest state court to apply only to the business of selling to local customers from the stock of original packages shipped into the state without a previous sale or contract to sell, and kept and held for sale in the ordinary course of trade, and this domestic business is not shown to be a mere incident to the interstate business.

NOTE.—On state regulation of interstate or foreign commerce—see notes to Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Com. 13 L. R. A. 107; McCanna & F. Co. v. Citizens' Trust & Surety Co. 24 C. C. A. 13; Ratterman v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 32 L. ed. U. S. 229; Harmon v. Chicago, 37 L. ed. U. S. 216; Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 38 L. ed. U. S. 1041; and Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Adams, 39 L. ed. U. S. 311.

As to police power as affecting commerce—see notes to People v. Budd, 5 L. R. A. 559, and State ex rel. Corwin v. Indiana & O. Oil, Gas, & Min. Co. 6 L. R. A. 579.

On license taxes as affecting interstate commerce—see notes to Rothermel v. Meyerle, 9 L.

2. The equal protection of the laws is not denied a managing agent of a nonresident meat-packing house by the imposition, under Georgia act of December 21, 1900, of a license tax on the domestic business conducted by him, since such act applies to managing agents of both domestic and foreign houses.
3. The obligation of the contract of employment, by a nonresident meat-packing house, of a resident managing agent at a weekly wage, is not unconstitutionally impaired by the imposition upon him, under Georgia act of December 21, 1900, of a license tax of $200 upon the domestic business carried on by him.

[No. 152.]

Argued January 24, 25, 1905. Decided February 27, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Georgia to review a judgment which affirmed, on a second writ of error, a judgment of the City Court of Atlanta, sustaining a demurrer to an amended petition in an action to recover back a license tax imposed on a resident managing agent of a nonresident meat-packing house. Affirmed.

See same case below, on first writ of error, 115 Ga. 184, 41 S. E. 680; on second writ of error, 117 Ga. 969, 44 S. E. 854.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brown:

This was an action by Kehrer against the tax collector of the county of Fulton to recover back a tax of $200, with interest and costs, paid to Stewart under protest, such tax having been assessed against him under the general tax law of the state, of December 21, 1900, which provided that there should be assessed and collected "upon all agents of packing houses doing business in this state, $200 in each county where said business is carried on." Petitioner charged the law to be a violation of the 14th Amendment.

Defendant demurred to the petition, and this demurrer being overruled, a writ of error was taken from the supreme court, which reversed the judgment of the court below in overruling the demurrer. 115 Ga. 184, 41 S. E. 680. Plaintiff thereupon amended his petition, insisting that the tax denied him due process of law as well as the equal protection of the law, impaired the obligation of his contract with the firm, and was also in conflict with the commerce clause of the Constitution of the United States. The defendant demurred to the amended petition. The court sustained the demurrer and the supreme court affirmed its action. 117 Ga. 969, 44 S. E. 854.

Mr. Alexander W. Smith argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The act violates the 14th Amendment.

Butchers' Union S. H. & L. S. L. Co. v. Crescent City L. S. L. & S. H. Co. 111 U. S. 746, 28 L. ed. 585, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 652; Allgeyer v. Louisiana, 165 U. S. 578, 41 L. ed. 832, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427; Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339, 25 L. ed. 676; Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 27, 31, 28 L. ed. 923, 924, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 30 L. ed. 220, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 151, 168, 41 L. ed. 667, 672, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255.

The doctrine now sought to be applied is in no manner modified, but fully reaffirmed, in Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Matthews, 174 U. S. 96, 43 L. ed. 909, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609, notwithstanding a Kansas statute imposing attorneys' fees was there upheld, while the Texas statute imposing attorneys' fees was, in the Ellis Case, declared unconstitutional. The Kansas statute was upheld because it involved a police regulation, while the Texas statute merely imposes a penalty. There is no pretense that the act in the case at bar is anything more than a revenue law. Its caption so declares it, and the court below so treats it.

Linton v. Childs, 105 Ga. 567, 32 S. E. 617; Re Yot Sang, 75 Fed. 984; Fraser v. McConway & T. Co. 82 Fed. 257; Randolph v. Builders' & P. Supply Co. 106 Ala. 501, 17 So. 721; New York L. Ins. Co. v. Smith (Tex. Civ. App.) 41 S. W. 680; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Williams, 49 Ark. 492, 5 S. W. 883; Denver & R. G. R. Co. v. Outcalt, 2 Colo. App. 395, 31 Pac. 177; Atchison & N. R. Co. v. Baty, 6 Neb. 37, 29 Am. Rep. 356; O'Connell v. Menominee Bay Shore Lumber Co. 113 Mich. 124, 71 N. W. 449; Janesville v. Carpenter, 77 Wis. 288, 8 L.

R. A. 366, and American Fertilizing Co. v. Board of Agriculture, 11 L. R. A. 179.

On importations in original packages—see notes to Re Wilson, 12 L. R. A. 624; State ex rel. Cochran v. Winters, 10 L. R. A. 616, and Pittsburg & S. Coal Co. v. Bates, 39 L. ed. U. S. 539.

As to the validity of class legislation—see State v. Goodwill, 6 L. R. A. 621, and note, and State v. Loomis, 21 L. R. A. 789, and note.

As to constitutional equality of privileges, immunities, and protection—see Louisville Safety Vault & T. Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 14 L. R. A. 579, and note.

As to what laws are void as impairing obligation of contracts—see notes to Franklin County Grammar School v. Bailey, 10 L. R. A. 405; Fletcher v. Peck, 3 L. ed. U. S. 162; McCanna & F. Co. v. Citizens' Trust & Surety Co. 24 C. C. A. 20, and Montana Ore-Purchasing Co. v. Boston & M. Consol. Copper & S. Min. Co. 35 C. C. A. 12.

R. A. 808, 20 Am. St. Rep. 123, 46 N. W. 128; State ex rel. Garrabad v. Dering (Re Garrabad) 84 Wis. 588, 19 L. R. A. 858, 36 Am. St. Rep. 948, 54 N. W. 1104; Pearson v. Portland, 69 Me. 278, 31 Am. Rep. 276; Burrows v. Brooks, 113 Mich. 307, 71 N. W. 460; Middleton v. Middleton, 54 N. J. Eq. 692, 36 L. R. A. 221, 55 Am. St. Rep. 602, 35 Atl. 1065, 37 Atl. 1106; State v. Goodwill, 33 W. Va. 179, 6 L. R. A. 621, 25 Am. St. Rep. 863, 10 S. E. 285; Kuhn v. Detroit, 70 Mich. 538, 38 N. W. 470; State v. Hinman, 65 N. H. 105, 23 Am. St. Rep. 22, 18 Atl. 194; State v. Pennoyer, 65 N. H. 116, 5 L. R. A. 709, 18 Atl. 878.

The act is a burden upon, and a regulation of, interstate commerce.

Crutcher v. Kentucky, 141 U. S. 47, 35 L. ed. 649, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 851; Allcn v. Pullman's Palace Car Co. 191 U. S. 172, 183, 48 L. ed. 134, 140, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 39; Leloup v. Mobile, 127 U. S. 640, 647, 32 L. ed. 311, 314, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 134, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1380; Asher v. Texas, 128 U. S. 129, 32 L. ed. 368, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 241, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Alabama Bd. of Assessment (Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Seay) 132 U. S. 477, 33 L. ed. 410, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 726, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 161; Lyng v. Michigan, 135 U. S. 166, 34 L. ed. 153, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 143, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 725; McCall v. California, 136 U. S. 110, 34 L. ed. 393, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 881; Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 157 U. S. 582, 39 L. ed. 819, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673; Adams Exp. Co. v. Ohio State Auditor, 165 U. S. 234, 41 L. ed. 700, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 305; Stockard v. Morgan, 185 U. S. 34, 46 L. ed. 793, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 576; Atlantic & P. Teleg. Co. v. Philadelphia, 190 U. S. 162, 47 L. ed. 999, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 817.

The statute herein falls within the cases where statutes upon this subject have been held void, because the statute prohibited the doing of any business in the state whatever unless upon the payment of the fee or tax.

Osborne v. Florida, 164 U. S. 650, 41 L. ed. 586, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 214.

In Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 18, 35 L. ed. 613, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 595, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 876, a distinction is very clearly drawn between cases upholding a tax as not regulating interstate commerce, where it is imposed merely on the property employed in the business, and cases where the tax is laid upon the right to do business at all. In the latter class of cases such taxes are held to impose a direct burden on the commerce itself, and of course the regulations as to procurement of license, etc., amount to regulations of such commerce.

If the tax under discussion was levied directly upon all packing houses doing business in Georgia, and all such packing houses were required to take out licenses, the question would be very different.

Pullman Co. v. Adams, 189 U. S. 420, 47 L. ed. 877, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 494.

The Leloup Case is in no manner modified, and the opinion under review is to no extent supported, by Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Charleston, 153 U. S. 692, 38 L. ed. 871, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 637, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1094.

The distinction lies in the language of the legislation attacked. The ordinance there complained of by its express terms limited its operation to "business done exclusively within the city of Charleston."

So in Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Alabama Bd. of Assessment (Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Seay) 132 U. S. 472, 33 L. ed. 409, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 726, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 161, the tax contested was imposed by the express letter of the law exclusively upon the business done by the company in the state of Alabama.

Ratterman v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 127 U. S. 411, 32 L. ed. 229, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 59, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1127, was decided on the same date as the Leloup Case. Both decisions were unanimous. It is hardly to be supposed there was any conflict between them in the minds of this court at the time they were decided. There is no conflict between them in fact or in principle.

Mr. John C. Hart argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

This act does not deny to any person the equal protection of the laws, for all persons of the class designated and described by the occupation in which they are engaged are subject to the same specific tax. The agent of the domestic packing house is liable to the tax, as is the agent of the foreign packing house. The object of the 14th Amendment to the Federal Constitution was to preclude the several states from discriminating against citizens of other states.

Cooley, Taxn. p. 99; 1 Desty, Taxn. p. 223; Slaughter House Cases, 16 Wall. 36, 21 L. ed. 394.

The specific tax levied upon persons engaged in the conduct of a particular business is in no sense obnoxious to the 14th Amendment.

Williams v. Fears, 110 Ga. 584, 50 L. R. A. 685, 35 S. E. 699.

The Constitution imposes no restriction on the states in the levy of taxes other than that there shall be no discrimination against citizens of other states.

Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 105, 24 L. ed. 620; Giozza v. Tiernan, 148 U. S. 657, 37 L. ed. 599, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 721; Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, 111

U. S. 709, 28 L. ed. 572, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663.

Due process of law, within the meaning of the 14th Amendment, is secured if the laws operate on all alike, and do not subject the individual to an arbitrary exercise of the powers of government.

Giozza v. Tiernan, 148 U. S. 657, 37 L. ed. 599, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 721.

The shipping of dressed meats into the state of Georgia in pursuance of orders heretofore received from its citizens would be interstate commerce, and a tax upon that business, or upon the agent who distributed the goods so ordered, would be unconstitutional as an illegal interference with interstate commerce, and would fall within the case of Caldwell v. North Carolina, 187 U. S. 622, 47 L. ed. 336, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229.

The supreme court of Georgia recognizes that it is not within the power of the state to levy and collect a tax out of one who, as the representative of a principal residing in another state, takes orders, and receives the goods in Georgia, and distributes them among the customers from whom he obtains such orders. Such business would be interstate commerce, and neither the agent, nor goods, would be liable to the tax.

Stone v. State, 117 Ga. 292, 43 S. E. 740.

The tax is here levied and collected because the plaintiff in error is engaged in a domestic business in that the goods he offers for sale (though shipped from outside of the state and into the state of Georgia) were here stored and offered for sale in open market, thereby becoming in character a domestic business. The Constitution of the United States protects such goods only to the extent of preventing state legislation which imposes on them, because of their origin, burdens which are not imposed upon goods the product of the state imposing such burdens.

Kehrer v. Stewart, 117 Ga. 969, 44 S. E. 854.

Mr. Justice Brown delivered the opinion of the court:

This case arose upon the following state of facts:

Nelson Morris & Co., citizens of Illinois, were engaged, in the city of Chicago, in the business of packing meats for sale and consumption, and also had a place of business in Atlanta, Georgia, where they sold their products at wholesale, having in their employ several clerks and helpers, one of whom was the petitioner, who was employed as chief clerk and manager at a salary of $25 per week. The firm did not have anywhere within the state of Georgia any packing house for slaughtering, dressing, curing, packing, or manufacturing the products of any animals for food or commercial use, but took orders, which were transmitted and filled at Chicago, the meats sent* to Atlanta, [65] and there distributed in pursuance of such orders. Certain meats were also shipped from Chicago to Atlanta without a previous sale or contract to sell. These were stored in the Atlanta house of the firm in the original packages, and were kept and held for sale, in the ordinary course of trade, as domestic business. They were offered for sale to such customers as might require them, and until sold were stored and preserved and remained the property of the firm.

1. It was admitted by the supreme court of Georgia, in its opinion, and by both parties hereto, that a tax upon the seller of goods is a tax upon the goods themselves (Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat. 419, 6 L. ed. 678; Welton v. Missouri, 91 U. S. 275, 23 L. ed. 347), and that a tax upon goods sold in another state, delivered to a common carrier, and consigned to the purchaser in the state of Georgia, was an illegal interference with interstate commerce. Caldwell v. North Carolina, 187 U. S. 622, 47 L. ed. 336, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229; Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Sims, 191 U. S. 441, 48 L. ed. 254, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 151; Stone v. State, 117 Ga. 292, 43 S. E. 740. It was therefore held that the tax, so far as applied to meats sold in Chicago, and shipped to the petitioner in Georgia for distribution, could not be supported; but that so far as the petitioner was engaged in the business of selling directly to customers in Atlanta, he was engaged in carrying on an independent business as a wholesale dealer, and was liable to the tax.

This decision was correct. In carrying on the domestic business, petitioner was indistinguishable from the ordinary butcher, who slaughters cattle and sells their carcasses, and in principle it made no difference that the cattle were slaughtered in Chicago and their carcasses sent to Atlanta for sale and consumption in the ordinary course of trade. Upon arrival there they became a part of the taxable property of the state. It made no difference whence they came and to whom they were ultimately sold, or whether the domestic and interstate business were carried on in the same or different buildings. In this particular the case is covered by that of Brown v. Houston, 114 U. S. 622, 29 L. ed. 257, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1091, wherein it was held that coal mined *in Pennsylvania [66] and sent by water to New Orleans, to be sold in open market there on account of the owners in Pennsylvania, became intermingled with the general property of the state, and liable to taxation under its laws, although it might have been after arrival sold from the vessel on which the transportation was made, without being landed, and for the purpose of being taken out of the country on a vessel bound to a foreign port. The same principle was applied in Emert v. Missouri, 156 U. S. 296, 39 L. ed. 430, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 68, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 367, in which a license tax upon peddlers of goods, which made no distinction between residents and products of the state and of those of other states, was sustained. To the same effect is Howe Mach. Co. v. Gage, 100 U. S. 676, 25 L. ed. 754.

The case is readily distinguishable from that of Crutcher v. Kentucky, 141 U. S. 47, 35 L. ed. 649, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 851, wherein a state law requiring a license from agencies of foreign express companies was held to be a regulation of interstate commerce, so far as applied to a corporation of another state engaged in interstate business, although as incidental thereto it did some local business by carrying goods from one point to another in the state of Kentucky. The court observed that while the local business was probably quite as much for the accommodation of the people of the state as for the advantage of the company, this did not obviate the objection to the tax; that the regulations as to license and capital stock were imposed as conditions of the company's carrying on the business of interstate commerce, which was manifestly the principal object of its organization. "These regulations are clearly a burden and a restriction upon that commerce. Whether intended as such or not, they operate as such. But taxes or license fees in good faith imposed exclusively on express business carried on wholly within the state would be open to no such objection."

The same doctrine was applied to telegraph companies in Leloup v. Mobile, 127 U. S. 640, 32 L. ed. 311, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 134, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1380, wherein a general license tax upon the telegraph company was held to affect its entire business, interstate as well as domestic or internal, and was unconstitutional. This case, however, must be [67] read *in connection with the Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Charleston, 153 U. S. 692, 38 L. ed. 871, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 637, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1094, wherein we held that a license tax upon a telegraph company on business done exclusively within the state, and not including any business done to or from points without the state, and not including any business done for the government of the United States, was an exercise of the police power, and not an interference with interstate commerce. In line with this case is 197 U. S.

that of Ratterman v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 127 U. S. 411, 32 L. ed. 229, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 59, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1127, in which a percentage tax assessed upon receipts of telegraph companies partly derived from interstate commerce and partly from commerce within the state, and which were capable of separation, but were returned and assessed in gross, and without separation or apportionment, was held invalid in proportion to the extent that such receipts were derived from interstate commerce, but valid as applied to receipts from messages within the state. To the same effect is Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Alabama Bd. of Assessment (Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Seay), 132 U. S. 472, 33 L. ed. 409, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 726, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 161.

So, if the stock of a transportation company be taxed by taking as a basis of assessment such proportion of its capital stock as the number of miles of railroad over which its cars are run within the state bear to the whole number of miles over which its cars are run throughout the United States, such assessment does not impinge upon the power of Congress. Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 18, 35 L. ed. 613, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 595, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 876. The case is still simpler if the tax be imposed in terms upon the domestic commerce, seeing that the corporation is free to abandon the business taxed if it sees fit. Pullman Co. v. Adams, 189 U. S. 420, 47 L. ed. 877, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 494; Allen v. Pullman's Palace Car Co. 191 U. S. 171, 48 L. ed. 134, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 39.

The only difficulty in this case arises from the fact that the tax is laid not in terms upon the domestic business, nor upon the gross receipts or profits which might be apportioned between interstate and domestic business, but is a gross sum imposed upon the managing agent of packing houses, regardless of the fact that the greater portion of the business may *be interstate in its char-[68]acter. This contingency, however, is met by the case of Osborne v. Florida, 164 U. S. 650, 41 L. ed. 586, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 214, wherein a license tax imposed upon express companies doing business in Florida had been construed by the supreme court of that state as applying solely to business of the company done within the state, and not to its interstate business. Accepting this construction of the state statute as in reality part of the statute itself, we held that it did not in any way violate the Federal Constitution. The statute was sustained, notwithstanding the fact that 95 per cent of the business was interstate in its character, and only 5 per cent consisted of carrying goods and freight between points within the state of Florida. Crutcher v. Kentucky, 141 U. S. 47, 35 L. ed. 649, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 851, was distinguished as one which prohibited the agent of a foreign express company from carrying on business at all in that state without first obtaining a license from the state. Said the court: "It has never been held, however, that when the business of the company which is wholly within the state is but [not] a mere incident to its interstate business, such fact would furnish any obstacle to the valid taxation by the state of the business of the company which is entirely local. So long as the regulation as to the license or taxation does not refer to, and is not imposed upon, the business of the company which is interstate, there is no interference with that commerce by the state statute."

So, in the case under consideration, it was expressly held by the supreme court of Georgia that that part of the Nelson Morris & Company's business which consisted in shipping goods to Atlanta to fill orders previously received, the goods being delivered in accordance with such orders, was interstate commerce, not subject to taxation within the state, and that, so far as applied to that business, the tax was void. Accepting this construction of the supreme court, we think the act, so far as applied to domestic business, is valid. The record does not show what proportion of such business is interstate and what proportion is domestic, al-

[69] though it is conceded *that most of the business is interstate in its character. If the amount of domestic business were purely nominal, as, for instance, if the consignee of a shipment made in Chicago, upon an order filled there, refused the goods shipped, and the only way of disposing of them was by sales at Atlanta, this might be held to be strictly incidental to an interstate business, and in reality a part of it, as we held in Crutcher v. Kentucky, 141 U. S. 47, 35 L. ed. 649, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 851; but if the agent carried on a definite, though a minor, part of his business in the state by the sales of meat there, he would not escape the payment of the tax, since the greater or less magnitude of the business cuts no figure in the imposition of the tax. There could be no doubt whatever that, if the agent carried on his interstate and domestic business in two distinct establishments, one would be subject and the other would not be subject to the tax, and in our view it makes no difference that the two branches of business are carried on in the same establishment. The burden of proof was clearly upon the plaintiff to show that the domestic business was a mere incident to the interstate business.

2. The act in question does not deny to the petitioner the equal protection of the laws, as the tax is imposed alike upon the managing agent both of domestic and of foreign houses. In its first opinion in this case the supreme court held that the tax was a vocation or occupation tax, and that it was not designed to apply to every agent or employee of the company, but only to the managing or superintending agent, who is the alter ego of the principal by whom he is employed. There is no discrimination in favor of the agents of domestic houses, and, while we may suspect that the act was primarily intended to apply to agents of ultra state houses, there is no discrimination upon the face of the act, and none, so far as the record shows, upon its practical administration. As we have frequently held, the state has the right to classify occupations, and to impose different taxes upon different occupations. Such has been constantly the practice of Congress under the internal revenue laws. Cook v. Marshall County, 196 U. S. 261, 275, ante, 471, 476, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 233. *What the necessity is for such tax, and up-[70] on what occupations it shall be imposed, as well as the amount of the imposition, are exclusively within the control of the state legislature. So long as there is no discrimination against citizens of other states, the amount and necessity of the tax are not open to criticism here.

3. The argument that the tax impairs the obligation of a contract between the petitioner and Nelson Morris & Company is hardly worthy of serious consideration. The power of taxation overrides any agreement of an employee to serve for a specific sum. His contract remains entirely undisturbed. There was no stipulation for an employment for a definite period; and if there were, it is inconceivable that the state should lose this right of taxation by the fact that the party taxed had entered into an engagement with his employer for a definite period. The tax is an incident to the business, and probably might, under the terms of their contract, be charged up against the employer as one of the necessary expenses of carrying it on.

The judgment of the Supreme Court of Georgia is affirmed.

SAN FRANCISCO NATIONAL BANK,
Appt.,
v.
 WASHINGTON DODGE, as Assessor of the City and County of San Francisco.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 70-115.)

State taxation of national bank stock—discrimination.

1. The adoption of a different method for taxing state banks and other moneyed corporations from that adopted for the taxation of national banks does not necessarily conflict with U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5219 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3502), authorizing state taxation of shares of stock in national banks, but exacting that the tax, when levied, shall be at no greater rate than that imposed on other moneyed corporations.
2. A discrimination against national banks, and in favor of state banks and other moneyed corporations, forbidden by U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5219 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3502), results from the taxation of shares of stock of national banks, under Cal. Pol. Code, §§ 3608-3610, at their market value, while the construction given by the highest state court to the provisions for the taxation of the "property" of state banks and other moneyed corporations does not require, although property is defined by Cal. Const. art. 13, § 1, as including "franchises," that the assessing officers shall include in the assessment all the intangible elements of value which form part of the market and selling value of shares of stock.

[No. 44.]

Argued November 7, 1904. Decided February 27, 1905.

APPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court for the Northern District of California, dismissing a suit to restrain the enforcement of taxes on shares of stock of a national bank. Decrees of both courts below reversed and the cause remanded to the Circuit Court for further proceedings.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. William S. Wood argued the cause, and, with Messrs. E. S. Pillsbury, Alfred Sutro, and Lloyd & Wood, filed a brief for appellant:

All subjects over which the sovereign power of a state extends are objects of state taxation; but those over which it does not extend are, upon the soundest principles, exempt from taxation.

NOTE.—On state taxation of national banks—see note to McHenry v. Downer, 45 L. R. A. 737.

M'Culloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316-429, 4 L. ed. 579-607.

It matters not how or by whom the exempt property may be held, the exemption is equally obligatory. The exemption must be allowed in its entirety.

Income Tax Cases (Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co.) 157 U. S. 429, 581-592, 646, 652, 39 L. ed. 759, 819-823, 842, 844, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673.

National banks are not subject to state taxation. The franchise to be a national bank is not subject to state taxation.

Owensboro Nat. Bank v. Owensboro, 173 U. S. 671, 43 L. ed. 853, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 537; First Nat. Bank v. Louisville, 174 U. S. 438, 439, 43 L. ed. 1038, 1039, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 876.

The authority to tax shareholders is upon the express limitations declared by Congress.

Owensboro Nat. Bank v. Owensboro, 173 U. S. 668, 43 L. ed. 852, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 537; First Nat. Bank v. San Francisco, 129 Cal. 97, 61 Pac. 778.

Whenever state legislation assumes to tax shareholders of national banks at a greater rate than other moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens of such state, such legislation is unconstitutional and void.

New York v. Weaver, 100 U. S. 539, 25 L. ed. 705; Pelton v. Commercial Nat. Bank, 101 U. S. 146, 25 L. ed. 902; Evansville Nat. Bank v. Britton, 105 U. S. 322, 26 L. ed. 1053; McHenry v. Downer, 116 Cal. 25, 45 L. R. A. 737, 47 Pac. 779; Miller v. Heilbron, 58 Cal. 133.

The Political Code discriminates between shareholders in national-bank associations and stockholders in state corporations:

1. The stock of the one is subject to state taxation; the stock of the other is not.

2. The statutory rule as to the value of stock is made applicable to state corporations, and declared inapplicable to national-banking associations.

3. The corporate property alone of state corporations is assessable, while, of course, there is neither provision nor authority for assessing the corporate property of national-banking associations.

First Nat. Bank v. San Francisco, 129 Cal. 96, 61 Pac. 778.

That shares of stock and corporate property essentially differ in value is the settled doctrine of the Federal courts. And that the difference in thus assessing the shareholders in national-bank associations largely discriminates against them, must be obvious.

Albany County v. Stanley, 105 U. S. 311, 26 L. ed. 1049; Evansville Nat. Bank v. Britton, 105 U. S. 324, 26 L. ed. 1054.

The rule applicable to the property of the stockholder in a state corporation or in a state bank is not the equivalent of the rule made applicable to stockholders in national-banking associations.

Miller v. Heilbron, 58 Cal. 133; McHenry v. Downer, 116 Cal. 20, 45 L. R. A. 737, 47 Pac. 779.

The objection held good in Miller v. Heilbron and McHenry v. Downer still remains, and is equally fatal to the attempt to tax the shares of stock in national banks. Stock is not now, any more than it was then, a solvent credit.

Dutton v. Citizens' Nat. Bank, 53 Kan. 440, 36 Pac. 719; First Nat. Bank v. Ayers, 160 U. S. 660-664, 40 L. ed. 573, 574, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 412.

In assessing the property of the corporation it must be held exempt from assessment and taxation upon all its Federal securities, whereas in assessing its stock to the shareholders no such exemption is allowed.

Owensboro Nat. Bank v. Owensboro, 173 U. S. 664, 667, 43 L. ed. 850, 852; Whitbeck v. Mercantile Nat. Bank, 127 U. S. 199, 32 L. ed. 120, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1121; Palmer v. McMahon, 133 U. S. 660, 33 L. ed. 772, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 324.

Mr. William S. Wood also filed a separate brief for appellant:

The assets of the state banks may consist in whole or in part of nontaxable things; and, by reason of that fact, the equality would and could not be preserved when national-bank shares continued to be assessed at their value without regard to the character of the property in which the capital of the bank might be invested.

Van Allen v. Assessors (Churchill v. Utica) 3 Wall. 573, 18 L. ed. 229.

A share of national-bank stock is to be treated as a distinct, independent interest or property, to be valued for tax purposes at its market value, without reference to the question where, or in what manner or nature of property, the capital stock may be invested.

Van Allen v. Assessors (Churchill v. Utica) 3 Wall. 584, 18 L. ed. 234; Commercial Nat. Bank v. Chambers, 182 U. S. 561, 45 L. ed. 1229, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 863.

A tax upon the money of individuals invested in the form of shares of stock in national banks would diminish their value as an investment, and drive the capital so invested from this employment, if, at the same time, similar investments and similar employments under the authority of state laws were exempt from an equal burden.

Aberdeen Bank v. Chehalis County (First Nat. Bank v. Chehalis County) 166 U. S. 440, 41 L. ed. 1069, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 629.

In Whitbeck v. Mercantile Nat. Bank, 127 U. S. 193, 32 L. ed. 118, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep.

1121, a difference in valuation between 60 and 65 per cent valuation was held to be sufficient to establish a discrimination.

The market value of property means the price at which it is bought and sold in the open market; that is to say, its "salable value."

Cummings v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 101 U. S. 162, 25 L. ed. 906; Cluquot's Champagne (125 Baskets of Champagne v. United States) 3 Wall. 125, 18 L. ed. 116.

Elements other than the assets enter into and aid materially in creating the market value of the shares of a corporation.

Com. v. Hamilton Mfg. Co. 12 Allen, 302; People ex rel. Manhattan R. Co. v. Barker, 28 Misc. 13, 59 N. Y. Supp. 926; Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Central Transp. Co. 171 U. S. 154, 155, 43 L. ed. 115, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808; Adams Exp. Co. v. Ohio State Auditor, 166 U. S. 221, 41 L. ed. 977, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 604.

If it be conceded that appellant's shares were properly valued, that would not save the assessment when it appears that the state banks were undervalued.

Railroad & Teleph. Cos. v. Board of Equalizers, 85 Fed. 312.

From every standpoint of consideration, and from every point of view, the record shows a plain, unmistakable case of discrimination against the shareholders of the appellant bank, from which it is entitled to seek relief from the courts.

Louisville Trust Co. v. Stone, 46 C. C. A. 299, 107 Fed. 305; Cummings v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 101 U. S. 153, 25 L. ed. 903; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Coulter, 131 Fed. 282; Taylor v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 31 C. C. A. 537, 60 U. S. App. 166, 88 Fed. 373; Whitbeck v. Mercantile Nat. Bank, 127 U. S. 193, 195, 32 L. ed. 118, 119, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1121.

Mr. E. S. Pillsbury also filed a separate brief for appellant.

Mr. William Irwin Brobeck argued the cause, and, with Mr. Percy V. Long, filed a brief for appellee:

While it is important that no national bank should be the object of unjust discrimination at the instance of the state, it is equally essential that no state bank should be so subjected.

Davenport Nat. Bank v. Davenport Bd. of Equalization, 123 U. S. 84, 31 L. ed. 96, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 73; Mercantile Nat. Bank v. New York, 121 U. S. 138, 30 L. ed. 895, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826.

While the right of every citizen to resist an unjust or excessive tax must be cheerfully conceded, the practical workings of an intricate system of taxation do not admit of that nicety of adjustment which will relieve all individual hardship or produce absolute uniformity of assessment.

Stanley v. Albany County, 121 U. S. 550, 30 L. ed. 1003, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1234.

Unless restrained by provisions of the Federal Constitution, the power of the state as to the mode, form, and extent of taxation is unlimited, where the subjects to which it applies are within the jurisdiction.

State Tax on Foreign-Held Bonds (Cleveland, P. & A. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania) 15 Wall. 300, 21 L. ed. 179; Kirtland v. Hotchkiss, 100 U. S. 491, 25 L. ed. 558; Mackay v. San Francisco, 113 Cal. 392, 45 Pac. 696.

It is only under a state of facts which discloses a preconceived understanding on the part of the assessor, or as a result of operations of the state statute, to discriminate against the shares of national banks, that the courts will declare an assessment void on that ground.

Stanley v. Albany County, 121 U. S. 550, 30 L. ed. 1003, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1234; German Nat. Bank v. Kimball, 103 U. S. 732, 26 L. ed. 469; Albuquerque Nat. Bank v. Perea, 147 U. S. 87, 37 L. ed. 91, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 194; Albany County v. Stanley, 105 U. S. 305, 26 L. ed. 1044.

Only competing "moneyed capital" is required to be assessed at no less a rate than shares of stock of national banks.

National Bank v. Baltimore, 40 C. C. A. 254, 100 Fed. 29; Mercantile Nat. Bank v. New York, 121 U. S. 154-157, 30 L. ed. 895-902, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826; Evansville Nat. Bank v. Britton, 105 U. S. 322, 26 L. ed. 1053; First Nat. Bank v. Chehalis County, 166 U. S. 440, 41 L. ed. 1069, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 629.

The appellant has deducted from the properties of the banks, which are legally elements in the estimation and determination of the value of its shares, the United States bonds held by such banks, although it was early declared by the United States Supreme Court that it was competent to include such bonds in the estimation of the value of the shares.

Van Allen v. Assessors (Churchill v. Utica) 3 Wall. 573, 18 L. ed. 229; Bradley v. Illinois, 4 Wall. 459, 18 L. ed. 433; New York v. Tax & A. Comrs. 4 Wall. 244, 18 L. ed. 344.

The question is whether the Constitution and laws of the state of California, on their face, discriminate against national-bank shares in their assessment and the assessment of other competitive moneyed capital.

Davenport Nat. Bank v. Davenport Bd. of Equalization, 123 U. S. 83, 31 L. ed. 94, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 73.

If appellant can be heard to complain of a provision in the law favorable to its shareholders, and of which the appellee alleges his intention or giving it the full benefit, and its contention that this beneficial provision of the statute is void in so far as it denies such deduction, where the shareholders are entitled to it, is sustained, it by no means follows that the assessor is without power to make such assessment, or that the assessment, when made, would be anything more than voidable; on the contrary, it would not be either void or voidable until a showing was made and sustained that the shareholders were indebted, in unsecured debts, to bona fide residents of the state.

Albany County v. Stanley, 105 U. S. 305-311, 26 L. ed. 1044-1049; Palmer v. McMahon, 133 U. S. 667, 33 L. ed. 775, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 354.

The method of assessment required by act of Congress has been followed by an assessment of the shares of stock without permitting a deduction from such shares of unsecured debts. To allow such deduction to the shareholder would be to allow a double deduction from such credits,—once for the unsecured debts of the bank, and second, for the unsecured debts of the shareholders.

First Nat. Bank v. Chapman, 173 U. S. 211, 43 L. ed. 671, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 407; Van Allen v. Assessors, 3 Wall. 573, 18 L. ed. 229; Bressler v. Wayne County, 32 Ncb. 834, 13 L. R. A. 614, 49 N. W. 787; Chapman v. First Nat. Bank, 56 Ohio St. 310, 47 N. E. 54.

The shareholder is entitled to a part only of the net assets, or assets remaining after the payment of debts.

Plimpton v. Bigelow, 93 N. Y. 599; Field v. Pierce, 102 Mass. 261; Jones v. Davis, 35 Ohio St. 477; Parker v. Sun Ins. Co. 42 La. Ann. 1172, 8 So. 618; Farrington v. Tennessee, 95 U. S. 687, 24 L. ed. 560; People v. National Bank, 123 Cal. 60, 45 L. R. A. 747, 69 Am. St. Rep. 32, 55 Pac. 685.

Under the California system of taxation of corporations, the full market value of stock of such corporations is assessed by an assessment of their entire property, including their franchise. Where such property is situated in another state, and is not subject to the taxing jurisdiction of the state, the same end is attained by an assessment of the stock.

Stanford v. San Francisco, 131 Cal. 34, 63 Pac. 145; San José Gas Co. v. January, 57 Cal. 614; Spring Valley Waterworks v. Schottler, 62 Cal. 100; Ottawa Glass Co. v. McCaleb, 81 Ill. 556; People ex rel. Burke v. Badlam, 57 Cal. 594; Bank of California v. San Francisco, 142 Cal. 276, 64 L. R. A. 918, 100 Am. St. Rep. 130, 75 Pac. 832.

The question is not whether an assessment of the property of a national bank is the equivalent, in fact and law, of the assessment of the shares of stock of such bank in the hands of its shareholders. The Supreme Court of the United States has held that it is not equivalent.

Owensboro Nat. Bank v. Owensboro, 173 U. S. 664, 43 L. ed. 850, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 537.

So, also, has the supreme court of the state of California.

First Nat. Bank v. San Francisco, 129 Cal. 94, 61 Pac. 778.

The real question is whether, under the California system, the assessment and taxation of all the property of California corporations is equivalent to the assessment and taxation of the shares of stock of California corporations.

As an interpretation of the revenue laws of a state by its own courts is binding upon a Federal court, we are concerned here only with the views of the supreme court of California upon this point. It may be said, however, that the supreme court of that state is not alone in the views expressed, very eminent authority in sister states having taken the same view.

Rice County v. Citizens' Nat. Bank, 23 Minn. 280; Frederick Co. v. Farmers' & M. Nat. Bank, 48 Md. 117; Lackawanna County v. First Nat. Bank, 94 Pa. 221; Rosenberg v. Weekes, 67 Tex. 578, 4 S. W. 899; Gordon v. Baltimore, 5 Gill, 231; State, Fish, Prosecutor, v. Branin, 23 N. J. L. 484; Johnson v. Com. 7 Dana, 342; The Tax Cases, 12 Gill & J. 117; Smith v. Burley, 9 N. H. 423; Williams v. Weaver, 75 N. Y. 31; New Haven v. City Bank, 31 Conn. 106.

In passing upon that question the supreme court of California has held in so many terms that such equivalency exists,—that it exists to such an extent as to leave an assessment of both the corporate property and the shares open to the objection that the same property is thereby taxed twice.

People ex rel. Burke v. Badlam, 57 Cal. 601; San Francisco v. Anderson, 103 Cal. 70, 42 Am. St. Rep. 98, 36 Pac. 1034; Germania Trust Co. v. San Francisco, 128 Cal. 595, 61 Pac. 178; People v. National Bank, 123 Cal. 53, 45 L. R. A. 747, 69 Am. St. Rep. 32, 55 Pac. 685; Spring Valley Waterworks v. Schottler, 62 Cal. 69; San Francisco v. Fry, 63 Cal. 470; Bank of California v. San Francisco, 142 Cal. 276, 64 L. R. A. 918, 100 Am. St. Rep. 130, 75 Pac. 832. See also San Francisco v. Mackey, 21 Fed. 539.

The taxation of all the property of a state bank may be the same as the taxation of the stock of such bank.

Davenport Nat. Bank v. Davenport Bd. of Equalization, 123 U. S. 85, 31 L. ed. 96, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 73; Mercantile Nat. Bank v. New York, 121 U. S. 138–160, 30 L. ed. 895–903, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826; Palmer v. Mc-

Mahon, 133 U. S. 660, 33 L. ed. 772, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 324; National Bank v. Boston, 125 U. S. 60, 31 L. ed. 689, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 772.

The revenue laws of the state require the assessment of all property "at its full cash value" without discrimination. They require the assessment of the franchises of local banking corporations at a value ascertained in such a manner as will make the aggregate value of the property and franchise of such corporations equivalent to the aggregate market value of their shares of stock.

Bank of California v. San Francisco, 142 Cal. 276, 64 L. R. A. 918, 100 Am. St. Rep. 130, 75 Pac. 832; People ex rel. Burke v. Badlam, 57 Cal. 594.

If these laws are impartially administered no discrimination can result against national-banking associations through the direct taxation of their shares.

Stanley v. Albany County, 121 U. S. 550, 30 L. ed. 1003, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1234; German Nat. Bank v. Kimball, 103 U. S. 732, 26 L. ed. 469; Albany County v. Stanley, 105 U. S. 305, 26 L. ed. 1044; Albuquerque Nat. Bank v. Perea, 147 U. S. 87, 37 L. ed. 91, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 194.

No discrimination was intended, or is countenanced, by the statute of California.

Nevada Nat. Bank v. Dodge, 56 C. C. A. 145, 119 Fed. 57; Cincinnati S. R. Co. v. Guenther, 19 Fed. 395; Cummings v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 101 U. S. 157, 25 L. ed. 904.

In Hepburn v. School Directors, 23 Wall. 480, 23 L. ed. 112, it is held that the exemption of all mortgages, judgments, recognizances, and moneys owing upon articles of agreement for sale of real estate from taxation, to prevent a double burden by the taxation both of the property and the secured debt, was a justifiable exemption, and did not discriminate against shareholders of national-bank stock.

Mr. Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

The appellant bank sued to restrain the enforcement of state, county, and city taxes, levied for the year 1900, upon shares of stock of the bank. Adequate averments were made to show equitable jurisdiction. Cummings v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 101 U. S. 153, 157, 25 L. ed. 903, 904; Hills v. National Albany Exch. Bank, 105 U. S. 319, 26 L. ed. 1052; Lander v. Mercantile Nat. Bank, 186 U. S. 458, 46 L. ed. 1247, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 908. The taxes were alleged to be in conflict with the law of the United States. Rev. Stat. § 5219, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3502.

The case was submitted upon the pleadings and an agreed statement of facts. A decree of dismissal was affirmed by the circuit court of appeals for the ninth circuit. That court deemed that the cause was controlled by the reasoning of an opinion delivered in deciding a previous case (Nevada Nat. Bank v. Dodge), the opinion in which case is reported in 50 C. C. A. 145, 119 Fed. 57.

Before considering the contentions relied on we quote the text of the Constitution of California directly relating to the subject in hand, and briefly advert to the legislation of that state which preceded the act under which the assailed tax was levied.

Section 1 of article 13 of the Constitution of California provides:

"All property in the state, not exempt under the laws of the United States, shall [76] be taxed in proportion to its value, *to be ascertained as provided by law. The word 'property,' as used in this article and section, is hereby declared to include moneys, credits, bonds, stocks, dues, franchises, and all other matters and things, real, personal, and mixed, capable of private ownership. . . . The legislature may provide, except in the case of credits secured by mortgage or trust deed, for a reduction from credits of debts due to bona fide residents of this state."

Carrying out the command to provide for the ascertainment of the value of property to be taxed, it was enacted (Pol. Code, § 3627) that all taxable property shall be assessed "at its full cash value," and (Pol. Code, § 3617) that "the terms 'value' and 'full cash value' mean the amount at which the property would be taken in payment of a just debt due from a solvent debtor."

Prior to 1881 shares of stock of all corporations were taxed, and § 3640 of the Political Code commanded that the market value of the stock of a corporation should be taken as the value of the shares for assessment. Where the shares of stock were taxed no tax was levied upon the corporate property. This was because the supreme court of California had decided that to tax both the stock and the corporate property would be double taxation. Burke v. Badlam, 57 Cal. 594.

In the year 1881 the general system of taxing shares of stock was abandoned, and a rule was put in force taxing the corporate property. Section 3608 of the Political Code, which embodied this change, was as follows:

"Shares of stock in corporations possess no intrinsic value over and above the actual value of the property of the corporation, which they stand for and represent, and the assessment and taxation of such shares and also of the corporate property would be double taxation. Therefore, all [77] 197 U. S.

property belonging to corporations shall be assessed and taxed, but no assessment shall be made of shares of stock; nor shall any holder thereof be taxed therefor."

*The act of 1899, under which the tax in [77] this case was levied, amended the section just quoted, by providing that all property belonging to corporations shall be assessed and taxed, "save and except the property of national banking associations, not assessable by Federal statute;" and by adding to the provision commanding that no assessment shall be made of shares of stock in any corporation the following words: "Save and except in national banking associations, whose property, other than real estate, is exempt from assessment by Federal statute." To carry out the change made by the provision just referred to two sections were added to the Political Code, viz., 3609 and 3610. Section 3608, as amended by the act of 1899, and the two new sections resulting from that act, are in the margin.†

*The first contention is that the law of [78] 1899 is on its face in conflict with § 5219 of the Revised Statutes, because it taxes shares of stock in national banks, and does not tax such shares in state banks and other state moneyed corporations. As it is patent that the state banks and corporations are taxed on their property, the proposition reduces itself to this: That the states may not pursue the method permitted by the act of Congress of taxing shares of stock in national banks, unless the same method is employed as to the stock of state banks and other state moneyed corporations.

In Davenport Nat. Bank v. Board of Equalization, 123 U. S. 83, 31 L. ed. 94, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 73, it was decided that the provision of § 5219 of the Revised Statutes †3608. Shares of stock in corporations possess no intrinsic value over and above the actual value of the property of the corporation which they stand for and represent; and the assessment and taxation of such shares, and also all the corporate property, would be double taxation. Therefore, all property belonging to corporations (save and except the property of national banking associations, not assessable by Federal statute) shall be assessed and taxed. But no assessment shall be made of shares and stocks in any corporation (save and except in national banking associations, whose property, other than real estate, is exempt from assessment by Federal statute).

3609. The stockholders in every national banking association doing business in this state, and having its principal place of business located in this state, shall be assessed and taxed on the value of their shares of stock therein; and said shares shall be valued and assessed as is other property for taxation, and shall be included in the valuation of the personal property of such stockholders in the assessment of the taxes at the place, city, town, and county where such national banking association is located, and not elsewhere, whether the said

[U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3502], authorizing the taxation of shares of stock in national banks, but exacting that the tax when levied should be at no greater rate than that imposed on other moneyed capital, did not require the states, in taxing their own corporations, "to conform to the system of taxing national banks upon the shares of their stock in the hands of their owners."

True it is in the Davenport Case it was also decided that the prohibition in the act of Congress of a higher rate of taxation of shares of stock in national banks than on other moneyed capital operated to avoid any [79] method of assessment or taxation, "the usual or probable effect of which would be to discriminate in favor of state banks and against national banks. True, also, is it that in the same case it was held that, even where no such discrimination seemingly arose on the face of the statute, nevertheless, if from the record it appeared that the system created by the state in its practical execution produced an actual and material discrimination against national banks, it would be the duty of the court to hold the state statute to be in conflict with the act of Congress, and therefore void.

As, then, no conflict necessarily arises between the act of Congress and the state law, solely because the latter provides one method for taxation of state banks and other moneyed corporations and another method for national banks, it follows that the contention, that the state law, for that reason, is repugnant to the act of Congress, is without merit. And this brings us to consider the contention of the appellant, which we think was embraced in the pleadings, which was expressly covered by the stipulated facts, the overruling of which was assigned as error in the circuit court of appeals and in this court, and was elaborately discussed by both parties in the argument at bar, viz., that, irrespective of the face of the state law, that law is void because of a discrimination against national banks, within the principles settled in the Davenport Case.

To determine this latter contention requires an analysis of the two systems which the law of California enforces, in order that the two may be accurately compared.

Under the law the shares of national banks must be valued at their "full cash value," which the statute defines to mean the amount at which they "would be taken for a just debt due from a solvent debtor." These words are but synonymous with the requirement that, in assessing shares of stock, their market value must be the criterion. This is the case, for, eliminating exceptional and extraordinary conditions, giving an abnormal value for the moment to stock, it is apparent that *the general mar-[80] ket value of stock is its true cash and selling value. That such is the meaning of the words in the legislation of California is indisputable, in view of the provision of § 3640 of the Political Code, which made market value the rule for assessing shares of stock during the period when the taxation of shares of stock generally prevailed, and that such requirement was mandatory was in effect held by the supreme court of California. Miller v. Heilbron, 58 Cal. 133, 138.

What, then, was embraced in the assessment of the shares of stock at their full cash or selling or market value? It embraced, not only the book value of all the assets of the corporations, but the good will, the dividend-earning power, the ability with which the corporate affairs were managed, the confidence reposed in the capacity and permanency of tenure of the officers, and all those other indirect and intangible increments of value which enter into the estimate of the worth of stock, and help to fix the market value or selling price of the shares. Considering this subject in Adams stockholders reside in said place, city, town, or county, or not; but in the assessment of such shares each stockholder shall be allowed all the deductions permitted by law to the holders of moneyed capital in the form of solvent credits, in the same manner as such deductions are allowed by the provisions of paragraph 6 of § 3629 of the Political Code of the state of California. In making such assessment to each stockholder there shall be deducted from the value of his shares of stock such sum as is in the same proportion to such value as the total value of its real estate and property exempt by law from taxation bears to the whole value of all the shares of capital stock in said national bank. And nothing herein shall be construed to exempt the real estate of such national bank from taxation. And the assessment and taxation of such shares of stock in said national banking associations shall not be at a greater rate than is made or assessed upon other moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens of this state.

3610. The assessor charged by law with the assessment of said shares shall, within ten days after he has made such assessment, give written notice to each national banking association of such assessment of the shares of its respective shareholders; and no personal or other notice to such shareholder of such assessment shall be necessary for the purpose of this act. And, in case the tax on any such stock is unsecured by real estate owned by the holder of such stock, then the bank in which said stock is held shall become liable therefor; and the assessor shall collect the same from said bank, which may then charge the amount of the tax so collected to the account of the stockholder owning such stock, and shall have a lien, prior to all other liens, on his said stock, and the dividends and earnings thereof, for the reimbursement to it of such taxes so paid.

Exp. Co. v. Ohio State Auditor, 166 U. S. 211, 41 L. ed. 974, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 604, the court said:

"The capital stock of a corporation, and the shares of a joint-stock association, represent, not only tangible property, but also the intangible, including therein all corporate franchises, and all contracts, privileges, and good will of the concern."

And in Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Central Transp. Co. 171 U. S. 138, 43 L. ed. 108, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808, this was reiterated. The court, after observing that, while the franchise was one of the things entering into the computation of market value of shares of stock, said (p. 154, L. ed. p. 115, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 815):

"The probable prospective capacity for earnings also enters largely into market value, and future possible earnings again depend to a great extent upon the skill with which the affairs of the company may be managed. These considerations, while they may enhance the value of the shares in the market, yet do not in fact increase the value of the actual property itself. They are mat-[81] ters of opinion upon which *persons selling and buying the stock may have different views."

That this doctrine is the rule in California is clearly shown by Bank of California v. San Francisco, 142 Cal. 276, 64 L. R. A. 918, 100 Am. St. Rep. 130, 75 Pac. 832, for in that case the court, speaking of such elements of value as "dividend or profit-earning power, or good will," said (p. 289, L. R. A. p. 924, Am. St. Rep. p. 141, Pac. p. 838):

"In this connection, it will be observed that these elements, so far as they may enter into the value of shares of stock, would be included in an assessment of such shares to the stockholders."

The state banks and other corporations are assessed on their property. Conceding that every species of property is assessed which is specifically enumerated as taxable in the state Constitution, it does not follow that the assessment of property as such includes good will, dividend earning power, confidence in the ability of the management, and all those other intangible elements which necessarily enter into the cash or selling value of shares of stock. As said in the passage already quoted from the Pullman Case, 171 U. S. 138, 43 L. ed. 108, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808, such elements "may enhance the value of the shares [of stock] in the market, yet [they] do not in fact increase the value of the actual property itself. They are matters of opinion upon which persons selling and buying the stock may have different views." In the argument at bar no law of the state was referred to requiring that the assessing officers, in valuing the property of a corporation, should assess as property its good will, its dividend-earning power, the confidence reposed in its officers, etc. From this analysis it results that in the one case, that of national banks, not only the value of all the tangible property, but also the value of all the intangible elements above referred to, is assessed and taxed, whilst in the other case, that of state banks and other moneyed corporations, their property is taxed, but the intangible elements of value which we have indicated are not assessed and taxed; the consequence being to give rise to the discrimination against national banks *and in [82] favor of state banks and other moneyed corporations forbidden by the act of Congress.

In the argument at bar this conclusion, it is insisted, is avoided, because, whilst under the text of the state statutes it may be that all the elements of value which are included in the assessment of shares of stock are not eo nomine assessed against state banks and other moneyed corporations as property, they are, nevertheless, assessed against such corporations under the denomination of "franchise," the duty of the assessing officer to do so being imperative, as the result of the interpretation given to the taxing law by the supreme court of the state. The proposition is thus stated in the argument of counsel:

"Under the California system, all the property of California corporations is assessed, including their franchises. It is frequently the case that the market value of the stock of the corporation is greatly in excess of the value of its property, other than its franchise. This fact was called to the attention of the state court, which recognized the force of this suggestion, and held, the Constitution and laws of the state require the assessment and taxation of the franchise of the corporation, and that its value, for the purpose of such assessment and taxation, was properly ascertained by deducting from the market value of its stock the value of its corporate property and assessing the remainder as franchise."

It may be conceded that, if the statutes have been interpreted by the supreme court of the state as thus asserted, and that, as so interpreted, they have been applied by the assessing officers, there would be an end to the discrimination which we have seen arises from the consideration of the result of the statutes when not so interpreted.

The question then is, Do the decisions of the supreme court of California, as contended, place the positive duty on the assessor of including in an assessment of the franchises of state corporations all the elements of value which form part of the market or selling value of shares of stock?

- [83] *Three cases are cited to sustain the proposition, viz., San José Gas Co. v. January, 57 Cal. 614; Spring Valley Waterworks v. Schottler, 62 Cal. 69; and Bank of California v. San Francisco, 142 Cal. 276, 64 L. R. A. 918, 100 Am. St. Rep. 130, 75 Pac. 832.

Before coming to consider the last case cited, which is the one principally relied upon, we dispose of the two others by saying that they do not support the proposition. The first simply decided that where a part of a tax was asserted to be illegal, and a part was admitted to be valid, the duty existed to pay the confessedly legal part to justify relief concerning the portion claimed to be illegal. The second case but decided that the franchises of corporations were taxable as property, and, where a corporation enjoyed other franchises than the right to exist as a corporation, and the board of equalization, in assessing such franchises, had treated them as equivalent in value to the selling value of the capital stock, the courts had no power to interfere with the discretion lodged in the assessing officers. In the last-cited and latest-decided case, Bank of California v. San Francisco, the controversy was this: The Bank of California was assessed on its property. The difference between the value of such property and the cash or selling or market value of the shares of stock of the corporation was $2,943,096.92. The franchise, instead of being assessed for this amount, was valued only at $750,000. This valuation was resisted by the bank, upon the ground that it was so large that it must have included good will, dividend-earning capacity, etc., which, it was asserted, could not under the law be embraced in an assessment of franchises. The court elaborately reasoned (there being two dissenting judges) that, in view of the power of the assessors to value property, it "could not say" that the assessing officers had transcended their authority in making the valuation complained of. Speaking of the duty of the assessing officers, it was said (p. 288, L. R. A. p. 923, Am. St. Rep. p. 141, Pac. p. 837):

- "The duty of making the valuation was cast upon the assessor. The method of arriving at the valuation, the process *by which his mind reached the conclusion [in cases where, as here, it is not pretended that he acted fraudulently or dishonestly], is matter committed to his determination." . . . This appears to be determinative of the contention here made. . . . (p. 289, L. R. A. p. 924, Am. St. Rep. p. 141, Pac. p. 838.) Whether or not the whole difference between the aggregate market value of the shares of stock and the value of the tangible property,—viz., $2,943,096.92,—was the value of the franchise, the assessor certainly had the right to take the value of the shares into consideration in determining the value of the franchise; and, were we at liberty to review the judgment of the assessor and of the board of equalization upon those matters, we could not say that an assessment of $750,000 thereon is unjust, or that it includes such elements as dividend or profit-earning power, or good will, which, it is claimed, should not be taken into consideration in determining the value of the property of the corporation."

After pointing out that these elements entered into the assessment of shares of stock at their market value, it was observed (p. 289, L. R. A. p. 924, Am. St. Rep. p. 741, Pac. p. 838):

"It is clear that, if the laws of the state properly express the intention that everything that gives value to the shares of a corporation shall be assessed as property of the corporation, the true value of those shares is a most important element in determining the value of such property."

In other words, the court simply declared that if the law of the state properly expressed the purpose to tax everything of value, the assessor had a discretion to consider what was the selling value of shares of stock in fixing the value of the franchise. Instead of supporting the contention that the law obliged the assessor to attribute to the franchise the value of those intangible elements which it was conceded were embraced in the assessment of shares of stock, the reasoning of the opinion is to the contrary. As the cash, selling, or market value of the stock in the case before the court was conceded to have been nearly $3,000,000 greater than the *tangible property assessed [85] to the corporation, and the assessor had valued the franchise, not at that sum, but at only $750,000, it is patent that, if the law of California had been what it is now asserted the court held it to be, that the claim that there was an overvaluation of the franchise would have been so frivolous as to require only a statement of the law to decide against the claim of overvaluation.

But the court made no such statement. On the contrary, it stated its inability to judicially declare that an assessment was extravagant and grossly unjust which was more than $2,000,000 lower than it should have been if the law imposed the obligation on the assessor of valuing the franchise by the difference between the value of the tangible property assessed and the cash or selling value of the shares of stock. This inability to give relief was placed solely upon the discretion which the law lodged in the assessor. But this interpretation of the statute serves only to further demonstrate the discrimination which has been previously pointed out. This result is made clear by comparing the discretion lodged in the assessor in valuing the franchise of state banks or other moneyed corporations with the duty resting on him as to the valuation of shares of national banks. The wide difference between the discretion on the one hand and the duty on the other will be additionally demonstrated by a consideration of the discrimination against national banks which has arisen in the practical execution of the statutes.

In the agreed statement of facts it was admitted that there are in the state of California 178 commercial (or state) banks, possessing a vast amount of capital, 18 of which were located in San Francisco. And, to quote from the statement, "that the manner in which franchises of commercial banks and trust companies were assessed for said fiscal year ending June 30, 1901, by the assessor of the city and county of San Francisco, is illustrated by the case of the Bank of California, a banking corporation organized under the laws of the state of California." The *assessment in question, which it is thus declared in the statement of facts is illustrative of the other assessments against state banks, was the one which was involved in the controversy decided in the Bank of California Case, supra. It is then recited in the agreed statement that the total property resources of the Bank of California, correcting a misprint in the record, were $5,156,903.08; and that the market or selling value of its capital stock was $8,100,000, a difference of $2,943,096.92; and that, deducting from the resources of the bank certain exemptions, the bank was assessed for property at $2,311,774. To this last-mentioned sum was added for franchise tax, not the difference between the value of the property and the selling value of the stock, which, as stated, was nearly $3,000,000, but only $750,000. It is insisted in argument that this statement shows but a single case of undervaluation of a state bank by the assessors, and therefore does not justify the conclusion that, in the exercise of their discretion, the assessors had generally, as to state banks and corporations, valued the franchises at less than the difference between the value of the property taxed and the market or selling value of the stock. But this contention disregards the fact that, by the agreed statement, it was expressly admitted that the assessment in question was illustrative of the assessments upon the other state banks and moneyed corporations. In view of the issues in the cause, as to which the facts were agreed, to say that the assessment in question only illustrated the case of the Bank of California would require us to disregard the agreed statement.

Finally, it is contended that, even if the state banks and other state moneyed corporations were assessed as illustrated by the valuation placed on the Bank of California, the complainant national bank has no reason to complain because the assessment put upon its shares of stock was relatively no higher than that put upon the Bank of California, and therefore no discrimination was occasioned. This is predicated upon the fact that the value per share affixed to the stock of *the complainant national bank was not [87] higher, having sole reference to the value of the stock as shown by the book value of the assets, and, considering allowable deductions, than was the assessment put upon the Bank of California, considering, alone, the same elements. But there is no proof whatever that the stock of the complainant bank had a market or selling value higher than the value affixed to it by the assessor; and the items which were made the basis of the assessment against the stock are declared in the agreed statement to be the entire assets of the bank, and in the argument at bar on behalf of the assessor the value of the shares of stock of the bank in excess of their book value is assumed to have been only nominal. The proposition, therefore, comes to this,—although the complainant national bank was assessed at the full value of its stock, there was no discrimination in favor of the state bank, albeit there was a difference in excess of $2,000,000 between the value put upon the property and franchise of the state bank and the sum which should have been levied against it, if all the elements had been assessed which enter into the value of shares of stock. And, thus analyzed, the contention is again reducible to this proposition,—that, where property of one person worth a given amount is assessed for its full value, no discrimination in favor of another results when the latter is assessed for a sum greatly below the value of the property assessed.

What has just been said disposes, also, of the contention that, if the national bank had been assessed under the state law by the rule applied to state banks, it would have had affixed to its property a slightly higher valuation than was given as the value of the shares of its capital stock. Without stopping to point out the error in the calculation by which this result is supposed to be demonstrated, it suffices to say that the contention would have merit only in the event that the property and franchise of all state banks had no higher value than the book value of the shares of stock. The fallacy underlying the whole contention cannot better be made clear than by *the mere reiteration of the [88] statement that, under the facts as agreed, it is obvious that the shares of stock of the national bank were assessed for all they were worth under the rule of market or selling value, whilst the state bank was only assessed for $750,000 above the book value of the stock, although the cash, selling, or market value would have required an assessment of nearly $3,000,000.

Many contentions were argued at bar involving the assertion that the state law was invalid because of deductions of debts or exempt property which, it was asserted, the law allows to state banks and other moneyed corporations on an assessment of their property, and does not allow holders of shares of stock in national banks. Most of these contentions are, in effect, disposed of by the consideration which we have given to the proposition that the state law was void simply because it established different methods of taxation as to the two classes of corporations. In so far as the contentions referred to are not, in effect, disposed of by our conclusions on that subject, we content ourselves with saying that we think all such propositions were rightly decided by the court below to be without merit, for the reasons expressed in the opinion delivered by that court in the Nevada Bank Case, to which the court referred, and upon which it placed its rulings. We decide this case solely upon the record before us. Our conclusion, therefore, does not deny the power of the state of California to assess shares of stock in national banks, provided only the method adopted does not produce the discrimination prohibited by the act of Congress. From this, of course, it would follow that, if the statutes of California, either from their text or as construed by the highest court of that state, compelled the assessing officers in the valuation of the property of state banks and other state moneyed corporations to include all those elements of value which are embraced in the assessment of shares of stock in national banks so that there would be an equality of taxation as re-[89]spects national banks, *the discrimination which we find to exist under the present state of the law of California would disappear.

The decree of the Circuit Court of Appeals is reversed; the decree of the Circuit Court is also reversed, and the cause is remanded to the Circuit Court for further proceedings in conformity with this opinion.

Mr. Justice Brewer, with whom the CHIEF JUSTICE, Mr. Justice Brown, and Justice Peckham concur, dissenting:

I am unable to concur in the foregoing opinion, and, believing that a grievous wrong is done to the state of California, will state the reasons for my dissent. Section 5219; Rev. Stat. (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3502), prescribes the conditions and limitations of state taxation of national banks. In reference to it, we said in Owensboro Nat. Bank v. Owensboro, 173 U. S. 664, 669, 43 L. ed. 850, 852, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 537, 539:

"This section, then, of the Revised Statutes is the measure of the power of a state to tax national banks, their property, or their franchises. By its unambiguous provisions, the power is confined to a taxation of the shares of stock in the names of the shareholders, and to an assessment of the real estate of the bank."

By the section two restrictions, and two only, are placed on the power of the state to tax the shares of stock: "That the taxation shall not be at a greater rate than is assessed upon other moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens of such state, and that the shares of any national banking association owned by nonresidents of any state shall be taxed in the city or town where the bank is located, and not elsewhere."

No uniform rule is prescribed by Congress as to the mode of assessment or the manner in which the state shall impose its burden of taxation on the shares of stock in national banks. Each state is left to determine that according to its own judgment. All that is demanded is that in fact neither the rate of tax nor the assessment shall discriminate against national banks, and that the property subject to taxation shall not be *bur- [90]dened in excess of the burdens cast upon other moneyed capital. Davenport Nat. Bank v. Board of Equalization, 123 U. S. 83, 31 L. ed. 94, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 73.

The mandate of § 1 of the Constitution of California is:

"All property in the state, not exempt under the laws of the United States, shall be taxed in proportion to its value, to be ascertained as provided by law. The word 'property,' as used in this article and section, is hereby declared to include moneys, credits, bonds, stocks, dues, franchises, and all other matters and things, real, personal, and mixed, capable of private ownership."

Thus, the Constitution requires the taxation of all property and a taxation in proportion to its value, and defines property as including everything capable of private ownership. Certainly, if the mandate of the Constitution is expressed in the statutes the shares of stock in national banks will be subjected to the same rate of taxation as all other property in the state, including therein moneyed capital. It must, therefore, be held that the legislation respecting the taxation of national bank shares is in defiance of the state Constitution before it can be adjudged in conflict with the equality provision of § 5219, Rev. Stat. Or, in other words, that the legislature of California disregarded the requirements of their own Constitution in order to subject to taxation property protected by Federal laws.

The legislation of California in this regard is found in § 3608 of the Political Code, as amended in 1899, and two additional sections enacted in that year, numbered 3609 and 3610:

“3608. Shares of stock in corporations possess no intrinsic value over and above the actual value of the property of the corporation which they stand for and represent; and the assessment and taxation of such shares, and also all the corporate property, would be double taxation. Therefore, all property belonging to corporations, save and except the property of national banking associations not assessable by Federal statute, shall be assessed and taxed. But [91] no assessment shall *be made of shares of stock in any corporation, save and except in national banking associations, whose property, other than real estate, is exempt from assessment by Federal statute.

“3609. The stockholders in every national banking association doing business in this state, and having its principal place of business located in this state, shall be assessed and taxed on the value of their shares of stock therein; and said shares shall be valued and assessed as is other property for taxation; and shall be included in the valuation of the personal property of such stockholders in the assessment of the taxes at the place, city, town, and county where such national banking association is located, and not elsewhere, whether the said stockholders reside in said place, city, town, or county, or not; but, in the assessment of such shares, each stockholder shall be allowed all the deductions permitted by law to the holders of moneyed capital in the form of solvent credits, in the same manner as such deductions are allowed by the provision of paragraph 6 of § 3629 of the Political Code of the state of California. In making such assessment to each stockholder, there shall be deducted from the value of his shares of stock such sum as is in the same proportion to such value as the total value of its real estate and property exempt by law from taxation bears to the whole value of all the shares of capital stock in said national bank. And nothing herein shall be construed to exempt the real estate of such national bank from taxation. And the assessment and taxation of such shares of stock in said national banking associations shall not be at a greater rate than is made or assessed upon other moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens of this state.

“3610. The assessor charged by law with the assessment of said shares shall, within ten days after he has made such assessment, give written notice to each national banking association of such assessment of the shares of its respective shareholders; and no personal or other notice to such shareholders of such assessment shall be necessary for the purpose of this *act. And, in case the tax on [92] any such stock is unsecured by real estate owned by the holder of such stock, then the bank in which said stock is held shall become liable therefor; and the assessor shall collect the same from said bank, which may then charge the amount of the tax so collected to the account of the stockholder owning such stock, and shall have a lien, prior to all other liens, on his said stock, and the dividends and earnings thereof, for the reimbursement to it of such taxes so paid.”

The rule of valuation is prescribed by the 5th subdivision of § 3617 of the Political Code, which provides that “the terms ‘value’ and ‘full cash value’ mean the amount at which the property would be taken in payment of a just debt due from a solvent debtor.” It is true that prior to 1881 market value was made the rule of valuation, but the section prescribing that rule was, so far as it applied to national bank shares, adjudged void by the supreme court of the state (Miller v. Heilbron, 58 Cal. 133), and wholly repealed by the legislature (Stat. 1881, p. 59), and in lieu of that the present rule of valuation established. But, the rule of valuation is not so material, and, doubtless, an established market value would be the amount at which property would be taken in payment of a just debt due from a solvent debtor. The main thing is that the same rule of valuation shall be applied to the assessment and taxation of national bank shares as of other moneyed capital. And the express declaration of § 3609 is that the shares in national banks “shall be valued and assessed as is other property for taxation.”

From the sections quoted it appears that the method of reaching the property of state corporations for purposes of taxation is by treating the corporation as owner of all, and casting the burden of taxation directly upon it, while, on the other hand, in obedience to the requirements of the Federal statute, taxation in respect to national banks is limited to an assessment and taxation of the shares of stock. But there is no discrimination if the same property is reached by each *method, and by each subjected to the same [93] rule of valuation. By § 3608 all the property of state corporations must be assessed and taxed, and the word “property” is defined by the Constitution to include, not merely tangible assets, but also "franchises, and all other matters and things, real, personal, and mixed, capable of private ownership." Everything, therefore, which is a part of the property of a state corporation is subject to assessment and taxation. No other or larger burden is cast upon shares of national banks, and surely there can be no discrimination when the entire property in the one instance is taxed as a whole to the corporation and in the other instance subdivided and taxed to the stockholder. The whole is neither less nor more than all its parts. But it is said there is no specific command to include in the property of a state corporation the good will, dividend-earning power, and the like, and that they are necessarily included in the selling value of the stock of any corporation. It is true, these items are not in terms mentioned, but neither are desks and furniture. The language is general, so general that it includes everything, not excepting good will, dividend-earning power, and the like, for they are "capable of private ownership." They belong to the corporation. There is no good will in a share of stock over and above the good will which belongs to the corporation, and, if the corporation sells and conveys all that it possesses: "capable of private ownership," it sells and conveys its good will, and there is nothing left of good will or anything else belonging to the stockholders. This is so plain that he who runs may read. It is hardly necessary in a matter so clear to refer to the decisions of the supreme court of California, and yet they are direct upon the proposition. Thus in Burke v. Badlam, 57 Cal. 594, the court said (pp. 601, 602):

"Now, what is the stock of a corporation but its property, consisting of its franchise and such other property as the corporation may own? Of what else does its stock consist? If all this is taken away, what re-
[94] mains? Obviously nothing. *When, therefore, all of the property of the corporation is assessed,—its franchise and all of its other property of every character,—then all of the stock of the corporation is assessed, and the mandate of the Constitution is complied with. This property is held by the corporation in trust for the stockholders, who are the beneficial owners of it in certain proportions called shares, and which are usually evidenced by certificates of stock. The share of each stockholder is undoubtedly property, but it is an interest in the very property held by the corporation. It is his right to a proportionate share of the dividends and other property of the corporation,—nothing more. When the property of the corporation is assessed to it, and the tax thereon paid, who but the stockholders pay it? It is true that it is paid from the treasury of the corporation before the money therein is divided, but it is substantially the same thing as if paid from the pockets of the individual stockholders. To assess all of the corporate property of the corporation, and also to assess to each of the stockholders the number of shares held by him, would, it is manifest, be assessing the same property twice, once in the aggregate to the corporation, the trustee of all the stockholders, and again separately to the individual stockholders, in proportion to the number of shares held by each. As well might it be contended that the property of a partnership should be assessed to the firm, and, in addition, that the interest of each partner in the firm property should be assessed to him individually. If I have an interest in partnership property, my interest therein is property. It is the right I have to share in the profits and property of the firm, in proportion to the interest I own. But my property rights are confined to the property held by the firm, just as the property rights of the stockholder in the corporation are confined to the property held by the corporation. In the case of a partnership, take away all the property of the firm, and I have no longer any property as a partner. In the case of the corporation, take away all of its property, which, it must be remembered, includes its franchise, and the shareholder no longer *has any property. The[95] cases are parallel. If in the one case it is competent to assess to the corporation all of the property held by it, and to the individual stockholders the respective interest owned by each therein, so must it be competent to assess to every partnership the property held by the firm, and to each individual partner his interest therein. It is clear to our minds that in the one case the partner, and in the other the stockholder, would be compelled to pay twice on the same property, which is neither required nor permitted by the Constitution. In the case of corporations to which we have referred the legislature has declared that all of the property held by such corporations shall be assessed to them. It has not attempted to exempt any property from taxation not exempted by the Constitution itself, and, of course, could not do it if it had. It has only said that the property shall be assessed to the corporation, and shall not be again assessed for the same tax. This it had the right to say." (Italics in this and succeeding quotations are mine.)

680

It will be seen from this quotation that the court places partnerships on the same basis as corporations. If the partnership sells out its property, including its good will and its profit-earning power, which are part of its property under the constitutional definition of property, there is nothing left to the separate partners. The whole thing has passed to the purchaser, and in the same way when a corporation makes a sale. And to hold that the good will and profit-earning power must be specifically mentioned is to hold that the constitutional definition of property is insufficient; that good will and profit-earning power are not "capable of private ownership," or do not belong to the corporation. Burke v. Badlam was reaffirmed in Bank of California v. San Francisco, 142 Cal. 276, 64 L. R. A. 918, 100 Am. St. Rep. 130, 75 Pac. 832, decided since the decision of this case by the court of appeals. This case is very instructive. It was an action brought by the plaintiff, a state bank, to have an assessment of its franchise declared illegal and void, and to recover the amount paid by it under protest as taxes [96] thereon. The contention of the *plaintiff was that it did not own or possess any franchise whatever; that the only franchise in any way connected with it was the corporate franchise, the franchise of being a corporation, which was the property of the stockholders and not assessable or taxable to the corporation. It appears from the opinion that the assessor found that the aggregate value of the tangible property of the bank was $5,156,903.08, that the market value of all the shares of the capital stock was $8,100,000, and the difference between the two was by him ascertained and determined to be the value of the franchise of the bank. The state was not challenging the assessment, and, of course, no inquiry was made as to the propriety of an increase in the valuation.

In reply to the contention of the plaintiff, the court uses this language:

"It was said by the Supreme Court of the United States, in Society for Savings v. Coite, 6 Wall. 594, 606, 18 L. ed. 897: 'Corporate franchises are legal entities vested in the corporation itself as soon as it is in esse. They are not mere naked powers granted to the corporation, but powers coupled with an interest which vest in the corporation, upon the possession of its franchises, and, whatever may be thought of the corporators, it cannot be denied that the corporation itself has a legal interest in such franchises.'

"If this corporate franchise is assessable as property, then, that it must be assessed to the corporation instead of the members or stockholders is clearly settled in this state by the decision in Burke v. Badlam, 57 Cal. 594, where it was held that a stockholder could not be assessed upon his certificate of stock, inasmuch as his shares were simply an interest in the very property held by the corporation, and the assessment of all the property of the corporation covered everything represented by the certificate. See also Pol. Code, § 3608."

Again, referring to Burke v. Badlam, 57 Cal. 594, the court said (p. 285, L. R. A. p. 922, Am. St. Rep. p. 138, Pac. p. 836):

"This case necessarily involved the question as to the constitutionality *of § 3608 of [97] the Political Code, prohibiting the assessment of shares of stock to the holders thereof. Such shares being undoubtedly property, unless they were otherwise assessed, the section was clearly unconstitutional, in view of the provision of the Constitution requiring all property to be taxed. According to the decision of the court they were under the law to be otherwise assessed—i. e., everything represented by the certificate was to be assessed to the corporation."

And again, on p. 289, L. R. A. p. 924, Am. St. Rep. p. 141, Pac. p. 838:

"Whether or not the whole difference between the aggregate market value of the shares of stock and the value of the tangible property—viz., $2,943,096.92—was the value of the franchise, the assessor certainly had the right to take the value of the shares into consideration in determining the value of the franchise; and, were we at liberty to review the judgment of the assessor and the board of equalization upon those matters, we could not say that an assessment of $750,000 thereon is unjust, or that it includes such elements as dividend or profit-earning power, or good will, which, it is claimed, should not be taken into consideration in determining the value of the property of the corporation. In this connection, it will be observed that these elements, so far as they may enter into the value of shares of stock, would be included in an assessment of such shares to the stockholders, a method of assessment which the state is at liberty to adopt,—in fact, bound to adopt,—unless such shares are otherwise covered by the assessment of the property of the corporation.

"It is clear that, if the laws of this state properly express the intention that everything that gives value to the shares of a corporation shall be assessed as property of the corporation, the true value of those shares is a most important element in determining the value of such property."

I have made these extensive quotations from the opinions of the supreme court of California, for in cases like this we follow the construction placed by the highest court of the state upon its statutes. Obviously, that court construes them as including within the corporate property the aggregate value *of all the shares of stock, and that, [98] while they forbid the assessment and taxation of shares of stock in a state corporation, they require that all the value represented by those shares of stock be assessed and taxed against the corporation; so that, when you ascertain the value of a single share of stock, and multiply that by the number of shares in the corporation, you have the value of the corporate property subject to taxation.

After declaring that the prohibition of the assessment and taxation of shares was clearly unconstitutional, unless they were otherwise assessed, it added, referring to the case of Burks v. Badlam, "according to the decision of the court they were under the law to be otherwise assessed,—i. e., everything represented by the certificates was to be assessed to the corporation." Now, if, as claimed, the shares represent, not merely the tangible property, but the franchise, the dividend-earning power, then, as stated, "everything represented by the certificates was to be assessed to the corporation." And this language is followed by the declaration, referring to dividends, profit-earning power, good will, etc.: "In this connection it will be observed that these elements, so far as they may enter into the value of shares of stock, would be included in an assessment of such shares to the stockholders, a method of assessment which the state is at liberty to adopt,—in fact bound to adopt,—unless such shares are otherwise covered by the assessment of the property of the corporation." Reference is made to the use of the word "if" in the last paragraph of the quotation, as though that implied a doubt as to the meaning of the state statutes. But surely that cannot be, in view of the prior declaration in the same opinion, that "everything represented by the certificates was to be assessed to the corporation." The paragraph is to be read as though it said that provided the laws of the state properly express the intention, as we have already held that they do, then the true value of the shares is an important element in determining the value of the corporate property. The same word "if" is used at the commencement of the second paragraph of the [99] quotation "if this corporate franchise is assessable as property," in like manner, for the word "franchises" is found in the constitutional definition of property, the paragraph preceding "if" declares that "the corporation itself has a legal interest in such franchises," and the very paragraph says that "the assessment of all the property of the corporation covered everything represented by the certificate." Certainly it seems to me there is no justification in torturing this word "if" as overthrowing all the clear declarations of the court, as well as implying a destruction of the plain letter of the statutes.

But great reliance is placed upon the admission, in the agreed statement of facts, "that the manner in which franchises of commercial banks and trust companies were assessed for said fiscal year ending June 30, 1901, by the assessor of the city and county of San Francisco, is illustrated by the case of the Bank of California, a banking corporation organized under the laws of the state of California." In the assessment of that bank the assessor did not add to the value of the tangible property the difference between that value and the market value of the capital stock, but a sum very much less. A tabular statement is also annexed, showing the financial condition during the year of the 178 state banks of California. It might be sufficient to say that the stipulation is satisfied by a conclusion that the assessor, in assessing state banks, generally added to the value of the tangible property something on account of the franchise,—we are not compelled to infer that to the valuation of the tangible property of each bank he added $750,000, or even that he failed to add the full difference between the value of that property and that of the stock. Indeed, it does not appear from the tabular statement that the market value of the shares in a single state bank in California exceeded the value of its tangible property. So that, so far as that evidence goes, the only case in which there was any franchise value to be added was that of the Bank of California. But more significant is this: It appears from the *agreed statement that the assess- [100] ment complained of in this case was made in the following way:

"The defendant, in making his assessment, fixed the value of the shares for taxation at $104.35 each, and arrived at that valuation in the following manner: He added to the capital stock of the bank, $500,000, its undivided profits amounting to $77,260, deducted the face value of United States bonds held by it, $50,000, and the value of its furniture, $5,500, leaving $521,760 as the total assessable value, and dividing that by the number of shares made the assessable value of each share the sum above stated."

In other words, the only assessment against the plaintiff's shares was based upon the value of the tangible property. Not a dollar was added to the valuation on account of franchise, good will, or dividend-earning power, or anything of that kind. Or, to put it in another form, the assessment of the state bank added to the value of the tangible property something for the value of the franchise, the assessment of the plaintiff stopped with the tangible property, and yet it is held that there was an actual unjust discrimination against the plaintiff. And how is this conclusion reached? By assuming that the shares in the plaintiff bank had no value above the value of the tangible property. But this is a mere assumption. A more rational guess would be that the shares of stock in a bank whose undivided profits were over 15 per cent of its capital had a value much above the par value of its stock or the value of its tangible property. And can it be that the whole system of the legislation of a state in respect to the taxation of national banks can be stricken down upon an unfounded assumption that the shares of a given national bank were worth no more than its tangible property? If the complaint was of an actual discrimination it was a part of the plaintiff's duty to prove it, and show that its shares had no value above that of the tangible property, and would not "be taken in payment of a just debt due from a solvent debtor" at a larger sum. The most elementary rule of judicial proceedings *is that a party, to make out his cause of action, must prove, not assume, the existence of all essential facts.

But I need not rest upon the omission of proof. There is no allegation of any discrimination based upon such difference of valuation. The eleventh and twelfth paragraphs of the complaint state the wrongs on account of which relief is sought. In order that there may be no misunderstanding of the full scope of the causes of action alleged I quote these paragraphs entire:

"Eleventh.—That the said assessment and taxation, so as aforesaid threatened to be made and levied by the respondent upon the shares of the capital stock of your orator, will be in violation of, and repugnant to, the provisions of §§ 5219 and 1977 of the Revised Statutes of the United States (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 1259, 3502), in that the said assessment and taxation will be at a greater rate than is or will be assessed upon other moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens of the said state of California. And in that behalf your orator shows that, under and by virtue of the laws of the said state of California, all shares of stock in corporations organized under the laws of the said state and amounting to more than the sum of two hundred million dollars ($200,000,000), and especially in corporations organized under the laws of the said state for the purpose of banking, all shares of stock thereof amounting to more than the sum of thirty-five million dollars ($35,000,000), are expressly exempt from assessment and taxation, and the same are not subject thereto, and that the respondent has not assessed, and will not assess, for the said fiscal year ending June 30th, 1901, and does not intend to assess, to the holders of shares in corporations, organized under the laws of the said state of California, the value of the same, or to collect from such shareholders any taxes on said shares or the value thereof.

"And your orator further shows that the said pretended assessment and taxation so as aforesaid threatened to be made and levied by the respondent upon the shares of the capital stock of your orator will be in violation of, and repugnant to, *the provisions of said § 5219 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, in that the said taxation will be at a greater rate than will be assessed upon any other moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens in the state of California. And, in that behalf, your orator further shows that, in assessing and taxing the said shares of the capital stock of your orator, no deduction will, or can legally, be made from the valuation of said shares, or any of them, of debts unsecured by deed of trust, mortgage, or other lien on real or personal property due or owing by the stockholders of your orator, or by any of them, to bona fide residents of the state of California; and that, in assessing and taxing other moneyed capital in the form of solvent credits unsecured by deed of trust, mortgage, or other lien on real or personal property, due, or owing to, or in the hands of, individual citizens in said state of California, the respondent does and will make a deduction from said credits, under and by the Constitution and laws of the state of California, of the debts unsecured by trust deed, mortgage, or other lien on real or personal property as may be owing by such individual citizens, or by any of them, to bona fide residents of the state of California, and that said threatened assessment and taxation of the shares of your orator is, and will be, unjust, unlawful, and illegal, and will discriminate against and upon such shares, and against and upon the persons owning and holding the same, and will compel them to sustain and bear more than their just share and burden of the taxes of the said state of California. And in this behalf your orator further avers that it is informed and believes, and upon such information and belief states, the fact to be, that the amount of moneyed capital in the city and county of San Francisco in said state of California on the first Monday of March, 1900, to wit, on March 5th, 1900, at noon of said day, invested by banks and bankers, having their principal place of business in said city and county, and residents therein, in unsecured solvent credits, and from which, under the Constitution and laws of said state, unsecured debts can be deducted, *was the sum[103] of $14,074,561; and on the day and year last aforesaid the amount of moneyed capital in the state of California, other than in the said city and county of San Francisco, invested by banks and bankers in unsecured solvent credits, and from which, under the Constitution and laws of said state, unsecured debts can be deducted, was the sum of $7,589,302; that on the day and year last aforesaid said banks and bankers at said city and county of San Francisco had debts unsecured by trust deed, mortgage, or other lien on real or personal property owing by such banks and bankers in said city and county, amounting to the sum of $36,710,062; and that on said day last aforesaid the amount of debts unsecured by trust deed, mortgage, or other lien on real or personal property owing by said banks and bankers in the state of California, other than in the said city and county of San Francisco, was the sum of $32,400,304; that the amount of moneyed capital invested in such solvent credits by such banks and bankers on the day and year last aforesaid, in said city and county of San Francisco and in said state of California, as compared with the amount of moneyed capital invested in the shares of the capital stock of your orator, is so large and substantial that the assessment and taxation of the shares of the capital stock of your orator without deducting therefrom, and without being able to deduct therefrom, debts unsecured by trust deed, mortgage, or other lien on real or personal property, as may have been owing by the respective holders of the shares of the capital stock of your orator on the day and year last aforesaid, will be an illegal and unjust discrimination against the owners and holders of the shares of the capital stock of your orator, and will make the taxation of said shares of stock at a greater rate than is imposed upon other moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens in the state of California, and particularly in the city and county of San Francisco in said state. And in this behalf your orator further avers that the said solvent credits so held as aforesaid by banks and bankers in the said city and county of [104] San Francisco and in the said state of California are moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens of the state of California, which enter into competition for business with your orator.

"Twelfth.—That, in the making of the said assessment of the said shares of the capital stock of your orator, the respondent will not proceed in the manner directed by the said act of March 14th, 1899, in this: That the said respondent, as hereinbefore set out, will ascertain and determine the value of each of the shares of the capital stock of your orator to be the sum of $115,452, and will deduct therefrom the sum of $11.10 per share as the proportionate amount per share of the value of the United States bonds held by your orator to secure its circulation, and of its furniture, and will, as hereinbefore set out, assess to the stockholders the sum of $104.36 per share as the value of each share of said capital stock by the said respondent claimed to be subject to assessment and taxation under the provisions of said act of March 14th, 1899, and that the respondent will wholly fail and refuse to make any other or further deductions from such ascertained value of said shares, in order to determine the assessable value thereof; whereas, by the provisions of said § 3609 of the Political Code of the state of California, under and in pursuance whereof the respondent has threatened and intends to make the said assessment, and will proceed to demand, and will attempt to collect, the taxes aforesaid, he was and is required to deduct from the value of each share of the capital stock of your orator such sum as is in the same proportion to such value as the total value of the real estate and property of your orator exempt by law from taxation bears to the whole value of all the shares of the capital stock of your orator. That on the first Monday of March, 1900, to wit, on March 5th, 1900, at twelve o'clock M. of said day, your orator had not, and thence hitherto has not had, nor has it now, any real estate, and, as in paragraph 'eighth' hereof averred, all of the property of your orator consisted on said day and at said time, and has *thence [105] hitherto consisted, and does now consist, of its bonds, money on hand, credits, furniture, and other personal property, and on said day and at said time the same constituted and were, and thence hitherto have been, and now are, the assets of your orator, and were and are used and employed by it in the conduct and carrying on its business as a national banking association under and by virtue of the provisions of the act of the Congress of the United States known as the national banking act, and were and are exempt by law from assessment and taxation. That, if deduction of all the property of your orator exempt from assessment and taxation as last aforesaid were made to each stockholder in assessing said stock, there would remain nothing of value subject to assessment and taxation; and that the pretended assessment and taxation of said shares at said value of $104.36 per share would be based wholly upon supposed and fictitious property, and upon property exempt by the Constitution and laws of the United States from assessment and taxation."

The first of these paragraphs alleges a violation of the Federal statute in the taxation of plaintiff's shares of stock, because under and by virtue of the laws of California all shares of stock in state corporations are exempt from assessment and taxation, and the assessor does not intend to assess to the holders the value of those shares. But, as repeatedly held, a mere difference in the methods of state and national bank taxation is not repugnant to the act of Congress. The balance of the paragraph is substantially a charge of a discrimination by reason of a failure to deduct debts. But that, it is conceded in the opinion of the court, may be put one side,—a concession undoubtedly compelled by the facts as agreed upon, for an opportunity was given to each stockholder in the plaintiff bank to have any debts deducted, and no one of them sought to avail of this privilege.

The other paragraph charges a discrimination and that the assessor ascertained the value of the shares of the capital stock of the plaintiff at the sum of $115,452 and deducted therefrom *the sum of $11.00 per share as the proportionate share of the value of United States bonds held by the bank; that he refused to make any further deductions, although the various items of property held by the bank, consisting of bonds, moneys, credits, etc., "were and are used and employed by it in the conduct and carrying on its business as a national banking association, under and by virtue of the provisions of the act of Congress of the United States known as the national bank act, and were and are exempt by law from taxation." The complaint here is that the tangible property of the national bank is wholly exempt from taxation because used for the purpose of carrying on the banking business, and, as the only assessment of plaintiff's shares was based upon the value of the tangible property, the entire assessment was void. Now it is not pretended in the opinion of the court, nor can it be successfully claimed in view of prior decisions of this court, that shares of stock in a national bank are subject to taxation to only the extent of the excess of their value above that of the tangible property of the corporation, and yet that is the burden of plaintiff's complaint. I have made this extensive quotation because it is apparent therefrom that the matter which, in the judgment of the court, is sufficient to overthrow the law of California in respect to the taxation of national banks, was not charged or complained of by the plaintiff. If the plaintiff neither alleges nor proves any discrimination in the matter of valuation I cannot understand why this court should assume that there was one, and thereupon upset the tax.

197 U. S.

Further, there is no reference in the opinion of the court of appeals to any discrimination in fact.

Still further, counsel for plaintiff in error evidently fail to perceive any actual discrimination, as appears by this quotation from their brief:

"The questions involved in the appeal are:

"(1) That the act of 1899, providing for the assessment and taxation of shares of the capital stock of national banks, *is repugnant to the provisions of § 5219 of the Revised Statutes of the United States:

"(a) Because shares of stock in the commercial banks of the state are not taxed, and are exempt;

"(b) Because, by reason of the failure to tax shares in the commercial banks of the state, the shares of national banks are subjected to an adverse discrimination, and taxed at a higher rate than such commercial bank shares;

"(c) Because the provisions § 3609, are wholly void, in that it is thereby undertaken to provide that a stockholder may deduct from the value of his shares the amount of his debts due to bona fide residents of the state.

"(2) That, under the express provision of the Political Code, §§ 3608 and 3609, the whole property of the appellant included in the assessment was exempt from taxation."

The only reference to discrimination is the alleged legal one, "by reason of the failure to tax shares in the commercial banks of the state." If the failure to tax shares in the commercial banks of the state does not of itself work a discrimination, as is practically conceded in the opinion of the court, then the whole basis of plaintiff's complaint fails.

Summing the matter up, the Constitution declares that "all property . . . shall be taxed in proportion to its value," and defines "property" as including "franchises, and all other matters and things, real, personal, and mixed, capable of private ownership." Franchises, dividend-earning, profit-earning power, are capable of private ownership. Indeed, the opinion of the court is based on the contention that they are assessed to the holder of shares in national banks, and not assessed upon the state banks. Section 3608 provides that "all property belonging to corporations (save and except the property of national banking associations, not assessable by Federal statute) shall be assessed and taxed." Section 3609, that the shares in national banking associations "shall be valued and assessed as is other property for taxation." The *supreme court of the state holds that a stockholder in a state bank "could not be assessed upon his certificate of stock, inasmuch as his shares were simply an interest in the very property held by the corporation, and the assessment of all the property of the corporation covered everything represented by the certificate." [142 Cal. 282, 64 L. R. A. 920, 100 Am. St. Rep. 135, 75 Pac. 835.] There is neither allegation nor evidence that there was any overvaluation of the plaintiff's shares of stock. The complaint is that there was a discrimination by reason of the failure to deduct from the value of the shares the entire value of the bank's tangible property, because "used and employed by it in the conduct and carrying on its business as a national banking association." And yet, in the face of the plain words of the Constitution and statutes, the clear language of the supreme court of California, and the absence of allegation or proof of actual discrimination, this court, by its opinion, strikes down the whole system of California for the taxation of shares of national banks.

But beyond and aside from the matters which I have considered, and conceding, for the purposes of the following suggestion, that the law of California providing for the taxation of shares of stock in national banks is invalid, still I insist that the decree of the court of appeals ought to be affirmed. This is an equitable suit brought in the United States court, where the distinction between law and equity is constantly enforced. Upon the theory of the opinion, the tax upon the shares of stock in the plaintiff bank was illegal. The statute of California imposing that tax was void. Now, there are two propositions which have entered into the jurisprudence of this court so thoroughly that they may be regarded as settled law: First, that equity will not interfere where there is a plain, adequate, and complete remedy at law; and, second, that injunction will not issue to restrain the collection of a tax simply on the ground of its illegality. The first is not only the rule of the court of chancery in England, but it is the command of the Federal statute. Section 723, Rev. Stat. [U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 583], reads: "Suits in equity shall not be sustained in either of the courts of the *United States in any case where a plain, adequate, and complete remedy may be had at law."

This defense was pleaded by the defendant in his answer, the sixteenth paragraph of which reads as follows:

"And respondent further submits to this honorable court that complainant has a full, complete, speedy, and adequate remedy at law against respondent for all causes of action, or causes of actions, stated or attempted to be stated in complainant's bill of complaint on file in this action; and he here claims the same benefit of the objection as if he had not demurred to the relief so sought."

Even if it had not been formally pleaded, the matter is one which this court of its own motion would consider and determine. As said in Wright v. Ellison, 1 Wall. 16, 22, 17 L. ed. 555, 557:

"But this is a suit in equity. The rules of equity are as fixed as those of law, and this court can no more depart from the former than the latter. Unless the complainant has shown a right to relief in equity, however clear his rights at law, he can have no redress in this proceeding. In such cases the adverse party has a constitutional right to a trial by jury. The objection is one which, though not raised by the pleadings nor suggested by counsel, this court is bound to recognize and enforce."

It is unnecessary to cite the many cases in this court in which this rule has been recognized, the latest being Scottish Union & Nat. Ins. Co. v. Bowland, the opinion in which has just been filed (196 U. S. 611, ante, 619, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 345), though reference may be made to the discussion by Mr. Justice Field in Whitehead v. Shattuck, 138 U. S. 146, 34 L. ed. 873, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 276, and in Scott v. Neely, 140 U. S. 106, 35 L. ed. 358, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 712, and by Mr. Justice Brown in Wehrman v. Conklin, 155 U. S. 314, 39 L. ed. 167, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 120. Now, in California there is a perfectly adequate legal remedy for cases of this nature. Section 3819 of the Political Code provides that "the owner of any property, . . . who may claim that the assessment is void in whole or in part, may pay the same to the tax collector under protest, which protest shall be in writing, and shall specify whether the whole *assessment is [110] claimed to be void, or, if a part only, what portion, and in either case the grounds upon which such claim is founded; and when so paid under protest the payment shall in no case be regarded as voluntary payment, and such owner may at any time within six months after such payment bring an action against the county in the superior court, to recover back the tax so paid under protest." Such a remedy has, in a case of the taxation of national bank shares, been held by this court adequate and complete, and sufficient to exclude the interposition of a court of equity. In Dows v. Chicago, 11 Wall. 108, 20 L. ed. 65, which was a bill filed by the owner of shares of the capital stock of the Union National Bank of Chicago, to restrain the collection of a tax levied by that city upon his shares, we said (p. 112, L. ed. p. 67):

"The equitable powers of the court can only be invoked by the presentation of a case of equitable cognizance. There can be no such case, at least in the Federal courts, where there is a plain and adequate remedy at law. And, except where the special circumstances which we have mentioned exist, the party of whom an illegal tax is collected has ordinarily ample remedy, either by action against the officer making the collection or the body to whom the tax is paid. Here such remedy existed. If the tax was illegal, the plaintiff protesting against its enforcement might have had his action, after it was paid, against the officer or the city to recover back the money, or he might have prosecuted either for his damages. No irreparable injury would have followed to him from its collection. Nor would he have been compelled to resort to a multiplicity of suits to determine his rights. His entire claim might have been embraced in a single action."

And this case was reaffirmed by the unanimous opinion of this court in the late case of Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Board of Public Works, 172 U. S. 32, 43 L. ed. 354, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 90, in which the quotation I have just made is also quoted.

The second proposition to which I have referred has also been often decided. Out of [111] the many decisions I refer to only *two or three. Dows v. Chicago, 11 Wall. 108, 20 L. ed. 65, in which is this language (p. 109, L. ed. p. 66) :

"Assuming the tax to be illegal and void, we do not think any ground is presented by the bill justifying the interposition of a court of equity to enjoin its collection. The illegality of the tax and the threatened sale of the shares for its payment constitute of themselves alone no ground for such interposition. There must be some special circumstances attending a threatened injury of this kind, distinguishing it from a common trespass, and bringing the case under some recognized head of equity jurisdiction before the preventive remedy of injunction can be invoked."

State Railroad Tax Cases (Taylor v. Secor), 92 U. S. 575, 23 L. ed. 663, in which is this (p. 614, L. ed. 673) :

"We do not propose to lay down in these cases any absolute limitation of the powers of a court of equity in restraining the collection of illegal taxes; but we may say that, in addition to illegality, hardship, or irregularity, the case must be brought within some of the recognized foundations of equitable jurisdiction, and that mere errors or excess in valuation, or hardship or injustice of the law, or any grievance which can be remedied by a suit at law, either before or after payment of taxes, will not justify a court of equity to interpose by injunction to stay collection of a tax."

And in Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Board of Public Works, 172 U. S. 32, 43 197 U. S.

L. ed. 354, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 90, in which the rule is thus stated (p. 37, L. ed. p. 356, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 92) :

"The collection of taxes assessed under the authority of a state is not to be restrained by writ of injunction from a court of the United States, unless it clearly appears, not only that the tax is illegal, but that the owner of the property taxed has no adequate remedy by the ordinary processes of law, and that there are special circumstances bringing the case under some recognized head of equity jurisdiction."

But it may be said that in the following cases this court has laid down an apparently different rule in respect to the taxation of national bank shares. New York v. Weaver, 100 U. S. 539, 25 L. ed. 705; Pelton v. Commercial Nat. Bank*, 101 U. S. 143, 25 L. ed. 901; Cummings v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 101 U. S. 153, 25 L. ed. 903; Hill v. National Albany Exch. Bank, 105 U. S. 319, 26 L. ed. 1052; Evansville Nat. Bank v. Britton, 105 U. S. 322, 26 L. ed. 1053; Lander v. Mercantile Nat. Bank, 186 U. S. 458, 46 L. ed. 1247, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 908. The first was a writ of error to the court of appeals of the state of New York, and, the mode of attack upon the law having been recognized by that court as proper, the question was not discussed here. In Cummings v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, Pelton v. Commercial Nat. Bank being decided on its authority, the right to an injunction was asserted. The case came from the circuit court of the United States for the northern district of Ohio, in which district the bank was located. In delivering the opinion of the court Mr. Justice Miller said on page 157:

"But the statute of the state expressly declares that suits may be brought to enjoin the illegal levy of taxes and assessments or the collection of them. Section 5848 of the Revised Statutes of Ohio, 1880, vol. 53, Laws of Ohio, 178, §§ 1, 2. And though we have repeatedly decided in this court that the statute of a state cannot control the mode of procedure in equity cases in Federal courts, nor deprive them of their separate equity jurisdiction, we have also held that, where a statute of a state created a new right or provided a new remedy, the Federal courts will enforce that right, either on the common-law or equity side of its docket, as the nature of the new right or new remedy requires. Van Norden v. Morton, 99 U. S. 378, 25 L. ed. 453. Here there can be no doubt that the remedy by injunction against an illegal tax, expressly granted by the statute, is to be enforced, and can only be appropriately enforced on the equity side of the court.

"The statute also answers another objection made to the relief sought in this suit, namely, that equity will not enjoin the collection of a tax except under some of the well-known heads of equity jurisdiction, among which is not a mere overvaluation, or the illegality of the tax, or in any case where there is an adequate remedy at law. The statute of Ohio expressly provides for an injunction against the collection of a tax illegally *assessed, as well as for an action to recover back such tax when paid, showing clearly an intention to authorize both remedies in such cases.

"Independently of this statute, however, we are of opinion that when a rule or system of valuation is adopted by those whose duty it is to make the assessment, which is designed to operate unequally and to violate a fundamental principle of the Constitution, and when this rule is applied, not solely to one individual, but to a large class of individuals or corporations, that equity may properly interfere to restrain the operation of this unconstitutional exercise of power."

Two reasons are here stated to justify the exception to the ordinary rule in respect to injunctive relief. First, a state statute, and, second, a design on the part of the state authorities to discriminate. There is no statute of California making such special provision in reference to injunctions, and that reason for a departure from the general rule may be put one side. The other implies an intent on the part of the legislature or assessing officials to discriminate. It does not mean simply that there has resulted a discrimination, but that one was intended. It is well known that in the early days of the national banking law there was a strong prejudice against it in different portions of the Union, and adverse legislation in the way of burdensome taxation was not uncommon, and it was because of that fact that the court permitted the exercise of the strong powers of equity. That I am right in this, and that there has never been an intent to apply a different rule to a national bank from that which has been in force in respect to other property, is made clear by the language of Mr. Justice Miller in a subsequent case, German Nat. Bank v. Kimball, 103 U. S. 732, 735, 26 L. ed. 469, 470. Delivering the opinion of the court, he says:

"An apparent exception to the universality of the rule is admitted in People v. Weaver, 100 U. S. 539, 25 L. ed. 705; Pelton v. Commercial Nat. Bank, 101 U. S. 143, 25 L. ed. 901, and Cummings v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 101 U. S. 153, 25 L. ed. 903. It is held in these cases that when the inequality any species of property, a court of equity will give appropriate relief; and also where, though the law itself is unobjectionable, the officers who are appointed to make assessments combine together and establish a rule or principle of valuation, the necessary result of which is to tax one species of property higher than others, and higher than the average rate, the court will also give relief. But the bill before us alleges no such agreement or common action of assessors, and no general rule or discriminating rate adopted by a single assessor, but relies on the numerous instances of partial and unequal valuations which establish no rule on the subject."

[114] of valuation is the result of a statute of the state designed to discriminate injuriously against any class of persons or

688

This ruling was somewhat like the action of the court in Stanley v. Schwalby, 162 U. S. 255, 40 L. ed. 960, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 754. That was a case coming from a state court. Ordinarily when the judgment is reversed the order is to remand the case for further proceedings not inconsistent with our opinion, but, in view of action theretofore taken by the state court in the case, we felt constrained to direct the very judgment which should be entered.

In Lander v. Mercantile Nat. Bank, 186 U. S. 458, 46 L. ed. 1247, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 908, a decree dismissing the bill filed by the bank was affirmed. It is true in the opinion the merits of the bill were discussed, and nothing said about the right to maintain a suit in equity. Evidently the matter passed without consideration, and not unnaturally so, as the bill on its merits was dismissed.

In the case before us, whatever may be the effect of the statute in creating or opening the door to discrimination, no one can read it and say that there was an intent on the part of the legislature of California to discriminate injuriously against national banks. The statute is positive in its language that national bank shares shall be taxed and assessed as is other property, and there was beyond doubt an attempt on the part of the California legislature to cast only an equal burden of taxation on such shares. Of course, there ought not to be imputed to this court an intention to favor national *bank property in the matter [115] of taxation, and to lay down a rule for its benefit which is denied to all other property. So, were I wrong in my construction of the state statute, beyond any peradventure the decree of the circuit court of appeals ought to be affirmed and the bank remitted to its legal remedy.

I am authorized to say that the CHIEF JUSTICE, Mr. Justice Brown, and Mr. Justice Peckham concur in this dissent.

197 U. S.

NATIONAL COTTON OIL COMPANY et al., Plffs. in Err.,
v.

STATE OF TEXAS.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 115-133.)

Constitutional law—validity of Texas anti-trust laws—due process of law—equal protection of the laws—conclusiveness of state court's construction of state statutes.

1. The property of a foreign corporation engaged in manufacturing products of cotton seed is not taken without due process of law by the Texas anti-trust laws, under which its license to do business in that state is forfeited for violating those laws by entering into an agreement to regulate or fix the price of cotton seed.
2. The construction given by the state courts to Tex. act of May 25, 1899, as removing the discriminatory features of prior anti-trust laws, is conclusive on the Federal Supreme Court in determining, on writ of error to the state court, whether such statute denies the equal protection of the laws.
3. A foreign corporation whose license to do business in Texas is sought to be forfeited by a suit brought under the anti-trust laws of that state cannot claim to be denied the equal protection of the laws, where the discriminatory features of the prior anti-trust laws have been removed by Tex. act of May 25, 1899, although they may still remain in the Revised Statutes of the state and in the Penal Code, under which certain excepted classes are exempted from indictment and punishment, while the corporation may be subject to both.

[No. 37.]

Argued November 1, 2, 1904. Decided February 27, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Court of Civil Appeals in and for the Third Supreme Judicial District of the State of Texas to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District Court of Travis County, in that State, forfeiting the license of a foreign corporation to do business in that State, because of its violation of the anti-trust laws. Affirmed.

See same case below, 72 S. W. 615.

Statement by Mr. Justice McKenna:

This suit was brought under the anti-trust acts of the state of Texas, to forfeit the license of the National Cotton Oil Company to do business in the state of Texas, for violating those acts. The defense is that they are repugnant to the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States.

The suit was instituted by the attorney general of the state and the district attorney of the twenty-sixth judicial district, and the petition alleged the following facts: The National Cotton Oil Company and the Southern Cotton Oil Company are New Jersey corporations, doing and transacting business in the state of Texas by reason of a permit issued to them respectively on the 2d day of May, 1900, and the 3d day of June, 1897.

The Taylor Cotton Oil Works is a Texas corporation doing business in the state under a charter granted August 25, 1898. The said foreign corporations, from the date of their respective permits and the Taylor Cotton Oil Works from the date of its charter have been and are "engaged in the business of the manufacture and sale of cotton-seed oil, cotton-seed meal, and the other by-products of cotton seed; that the business in which each and all of such corporations were engaged necessitated the purchase of cotton seed from which the products which they manufactured and sold were made, and that said cotton seed was an article and commodity of merchandise."

Each of them on or about the 1st of November, 1901, and on every day prior and subsequently thereto, has been engaged in the business of buying cotton seed in the various counties of the state, and on the 1st of November, 1901, the National Cotton Oil Company made and entered into a combination with each of the other companies, and they with it, and each *of them with va-[117]rious other persons, firms, and corporations, whose names are to the defendant in error unknown, and the said corporations "became members of and parties to a pool, trust, agreement, confederation, and understanding with each of the other of said corporations, firms, and persons, whereby they did each for itself and with each other and all together agree to regulate and fix, and did regulate and fix, the price at which they would buy cotton seed; that they especially regulated and fixed the price of cotton seed throughout the state of Texas at $14.00 per ton, and agreed amongst and with each other that they would not give more than said $14.00 per ton for cotton seed in any of the towns and communities of the state of Texas." Whereby, "and by maintaining the agreement to regulate and fix the price of cotton seed aforesaid, the defendant (the National Cotton Oil Company) was guilty of a violation of the laws of the state of Texas," and in consequence has forfeited its permit to transact business in the state.

NOTE.—On illegal trusts under modern anti-trust laws—see note to Whitwell v. Continental Tobacco Co. 64 L. R. A. 689.

On what questions the Federal Supreme Court will consider in reviewing the judgments of state courts—see note to Missouri ex rel. Hill v. Dockery, 63 L. R. A. 571.

The cancelation and forfeiture of the permit was prayed, and that the oil company be enjoined from transacting business in the state. A demurrer was filed to the petition for insufficiency in law to entitle the state to any relief, and alleged against each of the anti-trust acts of the state and the provisions of the Penal Code based thereon, that they violated § 1, article 14 of the Amendments to the Constitution of the United States, in that the act of March 30, 1889, and the Code provisions based thereon, deprived the company of the equal protection of the laws, because it was provided by § 13 of said act and article 988 of the Penal Code that the said statutes "shall not apply to agricultural products or live stock while in the hands of the producer or raiser." And that the act of April 30, 1895, and certain sections of the Revised Statutes of Texas and of the Penal Code were likewise discriminatory because of the same exceptions, and the further exception that said statutes should not be held to "be understood or considered to prevent the organization of [118] laborers for the *purpose of maintaining any standard of wages;" and the act of May 25, 1899, because it was cumulative and a mere supplement to the others, and carried, therefore, the same unconstitutional discriminations.

All of the acts and Code provisions are charged with depriving the oil company of its property without due process of law and in violation of the 14th Amendment, in that the penalties are excessive and their provisions so vague and uncertain that the company is denied a resort to the tribunals of the country to defend its rights, except on the condition that, if not successful, it shall subject its property to confiscation and forfeit its right to do business in the state.

It is also urged as a ground of demurrer that the act of 1895 violated a provision of the Constitution of the state which prohibited a bill to contain more than one subject.

The demurrer was overruled. The company declined to answer further, and judgment was entered forfeiting the license or permit of the company, and enjoining the company from transacting any business in the state, "except such business as may be and constitute interstate commerce." The judgment was affirmed by the court of civil appeals. A rehearing was denied and a writ of error from the supreme court refused. This writ of error was then granted.

Messrs. William V. Rowe and R. S. Lovett argued the cause, and, with Messrs. 690

Ralph Oakley and James A. Baker, filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

Taking all the statutes together, it is entirely clear that the act of 1899 is a mere addition to the previous acts, and a part of them. The acts being clearly in pari materia, they must, of course, be read together, and treated as parts of one system.

Potter's Dwarrr. Stat. p. 189; Alexander v. Alexandria, 5 Cranch, 1, 3 L. ed. 19; Doe ex dem. Patterson v. Winn, 11 Wheat. 380, 385, 6 L. ed. 500, 501; Ryan v. Carter, 93 U. S. 78, 84, 23 L. ed. 807, 809; Pearce v. Atwood, 13 Mass. 324; Queen v. Tonbridge, L. R. 13 Q. B. Div. 339; Sutherland, Stat. Constr. § 288.

This rule was recognized in Texas from the very first, and has been applied many times by the supreme court of that state.

Cain v. State, 20 Tex. 355; Shelby v. Johnson, Dallam (Tex.) 597; Bryan v. Sundberg, 5 Tex. 418; Selman v. Wolfe, 27 Tex. 68; Hanrick v. Hanrick, 54 Tex. 101.

Where the question is merely one of the construction of a state statute, which does not necessarily involve a Federal question, the determination of the state court is conclusive upon this court.

Osborne v. Florida, 164 U. S. 650, 656, 41 L. ed. 586, 588, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 212.

But it is equally well settled that this court is not bound by state-court decisions construing state statutes, or otherwise, where a Federal question is involved, as, for instance:

1. Where Federal citizenship is claimed.

Boyd v. Nebraska, 143 U. S. 135, 36 L. ed. 103, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 375.

2. Where the question involved relates to the rights of a Federal corporation, or a national highway or post road.

Roberts v. Northern P. R. Co. 158 U. S. 1, 39 L. ed. 873, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 756.

3. Where a state statute is alleged to create a contract, the obligation of which, it is claimed, has been impaired.

Ohio L. Ins. & T. Co. v. Debolt, 16 How. 416, 14 L. ed. 997. See also Bridge Proprietors v. Hoboken Land & Improv. Co. 1 Wall. 116, 145, 17 L. ed. 571, 576; Wright v. Nagle, 101 U. S. 791, 25 L. ed. 921; Douglas v. Kentucky, 168 U. S. 488, 501, 42 L. ed. 553, 557, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 199; Bacon v. Texas, 163 U. S. 207, 41 L. ed. 132, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1023; Louisville Gas Co. v. Citizens' Gaslight Co. 115 U. S. 683, 29 L. ed. 510, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 265; McGahey v. Virginia, 135 U. S. 662, 34 L. ed. 304, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 972; Mobile & O. R. Co. v. Tennessee, 153 U. S. 486, 38 L. ed. 793, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 968; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Nebraska, 170 U. S. 57, 42 L. ed. 948, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 513; McCullough v. Virginia, 172 U. S. 102, 43 L. ed. 382, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 197 U. S.

134; Vicksburg, S. & P. R. Co. v. Dennis, 116 U. S. 665, 29 L. ed. 770, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 625; Bryan v. Kentucky Annual Conference, M. E. Church South Bd. of Edu. 151 U. S. 639, 38 L. ed. 297, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 465; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Palmes, 109 U. S. 244, 27 L. ed. 922, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 193.

4. Similarly, when it is claimed that the state statute and its procedure are not due process of law.

Scott v. McNeal, 154 U. S. 34, 45, 38 L. ed. 896, 901, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1108.

5. Where it is alleged that full faith and credit have not been given to the judgment of a sister state, and it is necessary to determine the nature of the original cause of action, and, in so doing, to construe a state statute.

Huntington v. Attrill, 146 U. S. 657, 683, 36 L. ed. 1123, 1133, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224.

And, generally, wherever a right is set up under the Constitution, which, it is alleged, is violated by a state statute; and where this court differs from the state court as to the meaning and effect of the statute, or it is evident that the state-court decision will impair the efficacy of some provision of the Constitution.

Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 30 L. ed. 220, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Matthews, 174 U. S. 96, 100, 43 L. ed. 909, 911, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609; Norton v. Shelby County, 118 U. S. 425, 439, 30 L. ed. 178, 185, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1121; Gormley v. Clark, 134 U. S. 338, 348, 33 L. ed. 909, 913, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 554; Stutsman County v. Wallace, 142 U. S. 293, 306, 35 L. ed. 1018, 1022, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 227; D. M. Osborne & Co. v. Missouri P. R. Co. 147 U. S. 248, 258, 37 L. ed. 155, 160, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 299.

In view of the foregoing exceptions, the occasional statement that, in considering questions of this nature, decisions involving the impairment of the obligation of contracts are made by this court the sole exception to the rule as to the conclusiveness of state-court decisions, must be deemed to be inadequate and obsolete. The suggestion originated with Jefferson Branch Bank v. Skelly, 1 Black, 436, 17 L. ed. 173, before the 14th Amendment was adopted. One provision of the Constitution is as sacred as another.

The anti-trust laws of Texas make it impossible for two or more persons having a common business lawfully to associate themselves in a partnership, or otherwise, and to carry on any ordinary business in an ordinary way.

2 Eddy, Combinations, §§ 904-907; Parsons, Partn. 3d ed. p. 6; 3 Kent, Com. p. 23; 1 Lindley, Partn. 4th ed. p. 3; Queen Ins. Co. v. State, 86 Tex. 250, 22 L. R. A. 483, 24 S. W. 391; Texas & P. Coal Co. v. Law- son, 89 Tex. 394, 32 S. W. 871, 34 S. W. 919; Matthews v. Associated Press, 136 N. Y. 333, 32 Am. St. Rep. 741, 32 N. E. 981; Re Grice, 79 Fed. 627; Houck v. Anheuser-Busch Brewing Asso. 88 Tex. 184, 30 S. W. 869; Welch v. Phelps & B. Wind Mill Co. 89 Tex. 653, 36 S. W. 71; Gates v. Hooper, 90 Tex. 563, 39 S. W. 1079; Texas Brewing Co. v. Templeman, 90 Tex. 277, 38 S. W. 27; Fuqua v. Pabst Brewing Co. 90 Tex. 298, 35 L. R. A. 241, 38 S. W. 29, 750; Com. v. Bavarian Brewing Co. 112 Ky. 925, 66 S. W. 1016; American Handle Co. v. Standard Handle Co. (Tenn. Ch. App.) 59 S. W. 709; Ertz v. Produce Exch. Co. 82 Minn. 173, 51 L. R. A. 825, 83 Am. St. Rep. 419, 84 N. W. 743; Anderson v. United States, 171 U. S. 604, 43 L. ed. 300, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 50.

The courts construing such statutes have not limited themselves to contracts in restriction of trade. They have practically condemned most of the ordinary contracts which are made in the ordinary course of business.

Williams v. Montgomery, 148 N. Y. 519, 43 N. E. 57; Brown v. Rounsavell, 78 Ill. 589; Newell v. Meyendorff, 9 Mont. 254, 8 L. R. A. 440, 18 Am. St. Rep. 738, 23 Pac. 333.

The liberty of contract, which necessarily includes the right of men to associate in the conduct of their business and to unite their capital, skill, and acts, and carry on their business by making the usual and customary agreements in respect to the amount of their output or the price at which they will buy and sell, has been frequently recognized by this court as a right guaranteed by the 14th Amendment.

Allgeyer v. Louisiana, 165 U. S. 578, 589, 41 L. ed. 832, 835, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427; Butchers' Union S. H. & L. S. L. Co. v. Crescent City L. S. L. & S. H. Co. 111 U. S. 746, 762, 28 L. ed. 585, 588, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 652; Bertholf v. O'Reilly, 74 N. Y. 509, 30 Am. Rep. 323; Re Jacobs, 98 N. Y. 98, 50 Am. Rep. 636; People v. Marx, 99 N. Y. 377, 52 Am. Rep. 34, 2 N. E. 29; People v. Gillson, 109 N. Y. 389, 4 Am. St. Rep. 465, 17 N. E. 343; Forster v. Scott, 136 N. Y. 577, 18 L. R. A. 543, 32 N. E. 976; Purdy v. Erie R. Co. 162 N. Y. 42, 48 L. R. A. 669, 56 N. E. 508; Printing & Numerical Registering Co. v. Sampson, L. R. 19 Eq. 462.

This right or constitutional liberty of contract has been jealously affirmed and constantly guarded in the different states of the Union. In addition to the cases heretofore cited, we find that in Pennsylvania the statute that manufacturers should not pay wages in orders was held unconstitutional as unduly interfering with the liberty of contract.

Godcharles v. Wigeman, 113 Pa. 431, 6 Atl. 354.

In Ohio the same decision was made with reference to a mechanics' lien law.

Palmer v. Tingle, 55 Ohio St. 423, 45 N. E. 313.

In Illinois the so-called truck store act, the coal weighing act, and other similar legislation have been held unconstitutional for the same reason.

Frorer v. People, 141 Ill. 171, 16 L. R. A. 492, 31 N. E. 395; Ramsey v. People, 142 Ill. 380, 17 L. R. A. 853, 32 N. E. 364; Harding v. People, 160 Ill. 459, 32 L. R. A. 445, 52 Am. St. Rep. 344, 43 N. E. 624; Ritchie v. People, 155 Ill. 98, 29 L. R. A. 79, 46 Am. St. Rep. 315, 40 N. E. 454; Braceville Coal Co. v. People, 147 Ill. 66, 22 L. R. A. 340, 37 Am. St. Rep. 206, 35 N. E. 62.

And in other states similar legislation has been pronounced unconstitutional because violating this fundamental constitutional right of freedom of contract.

Kuhn v. Detroit, 70 Mich. 534, 38 N. W. 470; John Spry Lumber Co. v. Sault Sav. Bank Loan & Trust Co. 77 Mich. 199, 6 L. R. A. 204, 18 Am. St. Rep. 396, 43 N. W. 778; State v. Loomis, 115 Mo. 307, 21 L. R. A. 789, 22 S. W. 350; State v. Julow, 129 Mo. 163, 29 L. R. A. 257, 50 Am. St. Rep. 443, 31 S. W. 781; State v. Goodwill, 33 W. Va. 179, 6 L. R. A. 621, 25 Am. St. Rep. 863, 10 S. E. 285; Ex parte Kuback, 85 Cal. 274, 9 L. R. A. 482, 20 Am. St. Rep. 226, 24 Pac. 737; Low v. Rees Printing Co. 41 Neb. 127, 24 L. R. A. 702, 43 Am. St. Rep. 670, 59 N. W. 362; Re Eight Hour Law, 21 Colo. 29, 39 Pac. 328; Com. v. Perry, 155 Mass. 117, 14 L. R. A. 325, 31 Am. St. Rep. 533, 28 N. E. 1126; 2 Eddy, Combinations, §§ 660-673.

Aside from a proper exercise of the police power, and leaving out of view the limitations upon public-service corporations, the property rights of a trading corporation cannot be interfered with to any greater extent than can those of an individual.

Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Smith, 173 U. S. 684, 691, 43 L. ed. 858, 862, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 565; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 161 U. S. 677, 695, 40 L. ed. 857, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 714; Freund, Pol. Power, § 715, p. 736; Ballard v. Mississippi Cotton Oil Co. 81 Miss. 507, 62 L. R. A. 407, 95 Am. St. Rep. 476, 34 So. 533; 2 Eddy, Combinations, §§ 660-673; Re House Bill No. 1230, 163 Mass. 596, 28 L. R. A. 344, 40 N. E. 713.

The legislature cannot, under the pretense of exercising its police power, prohibit harmless acts not immediately concerning the health and welfare of the people; and all such acts are subject to judicial examination and possible condemnation.

Tiedeman, Pol. Power, p. 233; 22 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, pp. 936 et seq.; People v. Gillson, 109 N. Y. 389, 4 Am. St. Rep. 465, 17 N. E. 343; Colon v. Lisk, 153 N. Y. 188, 60 Am. St. Rep. 609, 47 N. E. 302.

There has always been a plain recognition of the right and freedom to form associations and unions of capital and effort.

Anderson v. United States, 171 U. S. 604, 616, 43 L. ed. 300, 306, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 50; United States v. Joint Traffic Asso. 171 U. S. 505, 567, 43 L. ed. 259, 286, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25.

Combinations which restricted competition, and which prevented competition between persons combined, never were illegal by the common law of England.

Mogul S. S. Co. v. McGregor, L. R. 23 Q. B. Div. 598.

Combinations restrictive of competition have always been upheld by law, and the right to combine is to be classed among the most important and least questioned liberties of citizens.

Mitchel v. Reynolds, 1 P. Wms. 181; United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Asso. 24 L. R. A. 73, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 443, 7 C. C. A. 15, 19 U. S. App. 36, 58 Fed. 71; Marsh v. Russell, 66 N. Y. 288; Phippen v. Stickney, 3 Met. 384; Lorillard v. Clyde, 86 N. Y. 384; Central Shade Roller Co. v. Cushman, 143 Mass. 353, 9 N. E. 629; Craft v. McConoughy, 79 Ill. 346, 22 Am. Rep. 171; Diamond Match Co. v. Roeber, 106 N. Y. 473, 60 Am. Rep. 464, 13 N. E. 419; Matthews v. Associated Press, 136 N. Y. 333, 32 Am. St. Rep. 741, 32 N. E. 981; Jones v. Fell, 5 Fla. 510; Railroad Tax Case, 8 Sawy. 238, 13 Fed. 722; Leslie v. Lorillard, 110 N. Y. 519, 1 L. R. A. 456, 18 N. E. 363.

It is not association per se, but only certain forms of association, which have been condemned.

Hooker v. Vandewater, 4 Denio, 349, 47 Am. Dec. 258; People v. Fisher, 14 Wend. 9, 28 Am. Dec. 501; Stanton v. Allen, 5 Denio, 434, 49 Am. Dec. 282; Com. ex rel. Chew v. Carlisle, Brightly (Pa.) 36; Emery v. Ohio Candle Co. 47 Ohio St. 320, 21 Am. St. Rep. 819, 24 N. E. 660; Morris Run Coal Co. v. Barclay Coal Co. 68 Pa. 173, 8 Am. Rep. 159; India Bagging Asso. v. Kock, 14 La. Ann. 164; United States v. Jellico Mountain Coal & Coke Co. 12 L. R. A. 753, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 626, 46 Fed. 432; Santa Clara Valley Mill & Lumber Co. v. Hayes, 76 Cal. 387, 9 Am. St. Rep. 211, 18 Pac. 391; Craft v. McConoughy, 79 Ill. 346, 22 Am. Rep. 171; Gibbs v. Consolidated Gas Co. 130 U. S. 396, 32 L. ed. 979, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 553; United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Asso. 24 L. R. A. 73, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 443, 7 C. C. A. 15, 19 U. S. App. 36, 58 Fed. 58.

All that this court has ever held on this subject of restrictions of competition is limited solely to their effect upon interstate commerce in cases arising under, and requiring a construction of, the Federal anti-trust act. Having declared that Congress intended to prohibit all restraints upon that commerce, whether reasonable or unreasonable, the court has simply held, as to competition, that to destroy or restrict free competition in interstate commerce was to restrain such commerce, within the meaning of the Federal act.

Northern Securities Co. v. United States, 193 U. S. 337, 48 L. ed. 700, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436.

Admitting fully the existence and broad scope of the right to property and the liberty of contract protected by the Constitution in both the 5th and 14th Amendments, the only limitation that this court has ever placed upon the right has grown out of its recognition and assertion of the paramount power of the national government, acting through Congress, to legislate on the subject of interstate commerce, and therefore to limit and restrain the private right and liberty of contract, whenever such private contracts have relation to, or immediately affect and bear upon, interstate commerce.

United States v. Joint Traffic Assn. 171 U. S. 505, 559, 566-572, 43 L. ed. 259, 283, 286-288, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25; Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. v. United States, 175 U. S. 211, 227-235, 44 L. ed. 136, 142-145, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 96; Northern Securities Co. v. United States, 193 U. S. 197, 351, 48 L. ed. 679, 706, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436.

Speaking generally of the right and liberty of contract of corporations as well as of individuals, in their dealings with and use of their property, it is settled that there can be no direct, or other, interference with this right, or with any other vested property right, except in the proper exercise by a state of its police power, which must, in all cases, be limited to matters plainly affecting the life, health, morals, peace, good order, convenience, and general welfare of the community.

Eddy, Combinations, §§ 658, 676-678; 22 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, pp. 936 et seq.

Mr. C. K. Bell argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

The law of 1899 contains no exemption in favor of any class, and this law has been held by the supreme court of Texas, in the case of State v. Laredo Ice Co. 96 Tex. 461, 73 S. W. 951, to be a valid and constitutional enactment.

Conceding that the acts of 1889 and 1895 are not constitutional to the extent of warranting the collection of penalties for a violation of their provisions, it is within the power of the courts to forfeit the permit which authorizes a foreign corporation to transact business in the state of Texas, for committing the acts which by such statutes they are prohibited from committing under penalty of forfeiting such permit.

Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 177 U. S. 28, 44 L. ed. 657, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 518, 19 Tex. Civ. App. 1, 44 S. W. 936; State v. Shippers Compress & Warehouse Co. 95 Tex. 603, 69 S. W. 58.

Mr. Justice McKenna, after stating the case as above, delivered the opinion of the court:

The charges made against the statutes of Texas are that they deny the oil company the equal protection of the law, and take its property without due process of law. The answer to the first depends upon the effect of the statutes. The answer of the second involves their validity and broader considerations. We will deal with it first.

The specification in the demurrer of wherein the statutes deprive the oil company of its property without due process of law is indefinite and peculiar. It may be different from an attack on the validity of the statutes but counsel have treated it as tantamount to such attack, and we will so treat it.

Defendant in error contends that it is not open to the oil company to attack the constitutionality of the statutes, either as discriminating against it or as depriving it of property without due process of law, and cites Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 177 U. S. 28, 44 L. ed. 657, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 518. Counsel for the company contests the application of that case; and we will assume (not decide) with them that it is not determinative of their contention.

The acts of 1889 and 1895 are set out at length in Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas. The act of 1899, so far as the present question is concerned, is substantially the same as they. All of the acts are directed to the prohibition of combinations to restrict trade, or in any way limit competition in the production *or sale of articles, or to increase, 123 or reduce their price in order to preclude a free and unrestricted competition in them. The various ways in which these purposes can be accomplished are enumerated and forbidden. Penalties are affixed to the violation of the acts, offending domestic corporations forfeit their charters, and offending foreign corporations forfeit their privileges to do business in the state.

There was also an act passed in 1903, which repealed all laws or parts of laws in conflict with it, and expressly repealed certain provisions of the Penal Code of the state, and the acts of 1895 and 1899. The right to recover penalties or to forfeit charters of domestic, or the permits of foreign, corporations, for acts committed before the going into effect of the statute, was reserved.

The argument, which is directed against the validity of the statutes, is drawn from extremes. It is difficult to present its elements in a concise way. Its ultimate foundation is the right of individuals and corporations as well, under the Constitution of the United States, to make contracts and combine in business enterprises; and, it is argued, to prohibit them from so doing "in the ordinary way through the making of purchases and sales and the fixing of prices, is clearly to work a deprivation of property without due process of law, and to impair the well-recognized liberty of contract, involved in the acquiring, using, and dealing with property," assured by the Federal Constitution.

To support the argument the usages and necessity of business are adduced, and partnerships and their effect are brought forward as illustrations. There are some things which counsel easily demonstrate. They easily demonstrate that some combination of "capital, skill, or acts" is necessary to any business development, and that the result must inevitably be a cessation of competition. But this does not prove that all combinations are inviolable, or that no restriction upon competition can be forbidden. To contend for these extremes is to overlook the difference in the effect of ac-

[129] tions, and to limit too *much the function and power of government. By arguing from extremes almost every exercise of government can be shown to be a deprivation of individual liberty. It is common-place to say that it is the purpose, and indeed duty, of government, to get all it can of good out of the activities of men, and limit or forbid them when they become or tend to evil. Of course, what is evil may not be always clear; but to be able to dispute the policy of a law is not to establish its invalidity. It is certainly the conception of a large body of public opinion that the control of prices through combinations tends to restraint of trade and to monopoly, and is evil. The foundations of the belief we are not called upon to discuss, nor does our purpose require us to distinguish between the kinds of combinations or the degrees of monopoly. It is enough to say that the idea of monopoly is not now confined to a grant of privileges. It is understood to include a "condition produced by the acts of mere individuals." Its dominant thought now is, to quote another, "the notion of exclusiveness or unity;" in other words, the suppression of competition by the unification of interest or management, or it may be through agreement and concert of action. And the purpose is so definitely the control of prices that monopoly has been defined to be "unified tactics with regard to prices." It is the power to control prices which makes the inducement of combinations and their profit. It is such power that makes it the concern of the law to prohibit or limit them. And this concern and the policy based upon it has not only expression in the Texas statutes; it has expression in the statutes of other states and in a well-known national enactment. According to them, competition, not combination, should be the law of trade. If there is evil in this it is accepted as less than that which may result from the unification of interests, and the power such unification gives. And that legislatures may so ordain this court has decided. United States v. E. C. Knight Co. 156 U. S. 1, 39 L. ed. 325, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249; United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Asso. 166 U. S. 290, 41 L. ed. 1007, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 540; United States v. Joint Traffic Asso. 171 *U. S. 505, [130] 43 L. ed. 259, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25; Northern Securities Co. v. United States, 193 U. S. 197, 48 L. ed. 679, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436; Swift & Co. v. United States, 196 U. S. 375, ante, 518, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 276.

In Smiley v. Kansas, decided at this term, 196 U. S. 447, ante, 546, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289, a statute of Kansas is passed on which is identical in effect, and even in words, in all that concerns the present controversy, with the Texas statutes. The statute was assailed as "an unwarranted attempt upon the part of the legislature to limit the rights of the individual in the matter of contracting and dealing with his fellowmen." The right which Smiley claimed was to combine with certain grain dealers, persons, companies, and corporations, who were competitors, to pool and fix the price of grain in the town of Bison, and to prevent competition in the purchase and sale of grain at that place. We followed the ruling of the supreme court of the state in holding that the combination was within the prohibition of the statute; we concurred with that court in deciding that the prohibition was a valid exercise of the police power of the state.

It follows that the statutes of Texas do not deprive the oil company of its property without due process of law.

Next, as to the effect of the statutes.

The act of May 25, 1899, omits the discriminatory provisions of the prior acts, but, it is contended that, as the latter act is declared to be cumulative of the prior acts, their discriminations are preserved and continued, and that, under the Code provisions, the company may be criminally prosecuted, and that the excepted classes of the acts of 1889 and 1895 are exempt from prosecution. It is further urged, whether such discrimination results from the statutes is for us to determine independently of what views the courts of the state may entertain of them and their relations.

Upon the last contention depends the mode of approaching the other, and we will dispose of it first. We cannot assent to it. There are cases in which we determine for ourselves the meaning of a state law, but this is not one of them. The contention of the company is that the statutes of the state discriminate against it; in other words, deny [131] it the equal protection *of the law, by forbidding it from doing what they permit others to do in similar circumstances,—punish its acts and exempt from punishment the same acts when done by others. But the courts of the state are the tribunals appointed to administer the statutes and impose their penalties, and to do so they must necessarily interpret them. In other words, they are the tribunals to declare the meaning of the statutes, and if in declaring it they make the statutes discriminatory, then may the statutes become unconstitutional. Olsen v. Smith, 195 U. S. 332, ante, 224, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 52.

What has the supreme court of Texas said of the statutes?

The court of civil appeals in the case at bar expressed the following view:

"The trial court did not err in overruling appellant's demurrers. While it has been correctly held that certain provisions of the anti-trust statutes are unconstitutional, the supreme court, in the case of State v. Shippers' Compress & Warehouse Co. 95 Tex. 603, 69 S. W. 61, relying upon the case of Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 177 U. S. 28, 44 L. ed. 657, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 518, holds that so much of these statutes that authorize the canceling and forfeiture of a charter or permit to do business within the state of Texas are valid, and are not in violation of the Constitution."

The supreme court refused a writ of error, and thereby, as we understand the local rule to be, approved the views of the court of civil appeals. Subsequently the supreme court expressed itself explicitly in State v. Shippers' Compress & Warehouse Co. 95 Tex. 603, 69 S. W. 58, and State v. Laredo Ice Co. 96 Tex. 461, 73 S. W. 951.

The object in State v. Shippers' Compress & Warehouse Co. was to forfeit the charter of the compress company for violating the anti-trust law of 1895, in that the incorporators combined "to restrict aids to commerce." The law was attacked as unconstitutional. To the contention the court said:

"The defendant insists that the law is unconstitutional, *therefore void in whole, [132] and will not support the action to forfeit the charter. Upon the same objection we held the anti-trust law of 1889 to be constitutional, and there is no such difference between the two laws as would affect the decision of this question. We believe that our decision is correct; that the law is not in contravention of the Constitution of the state, nor of the United States. Houck v. Anheuser-Busch Brewing Asso. 88 Tex. 189, 30 S. W. 869."

The court then referred to Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540, 46 L. ed. 679, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431, and in submission to its authority held the law of 1895, so far as it came within the terms of that case, invalid, and would not support an action by the state to recover a penalty for a violation of the law; nor would it, in suits between corporations and individuals, support a defense based upon the fact that the right of action originated in violation of the anti-trust law. "But," the court remarked, "to the extent that the statute of this state is not embraced in the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, we shall adhere to our former decision that it is constitutional and valid, and therefore enforceable by the state."

That is, the court decided the act of 1895 was valid to the extent that it authorized the state to revoke the license of a foreign corporation, and to forfeit the charter of a domestic corporation. The other provisions of the act were held invalid, and the right to make this distinction was based on Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas.

State v. Laredo Ice Co. was instituted to recover penalties for the violation of the anti-trust law of 1899. The ice company was a domestic corporation, and it was proceeded against for having formed a combination to regulate and fix prices. In defense, the company asserted the unconstitutionality of the act.

It is provided in § 14 of the act of 1899 that the provisions of preceding sections and the fines and penalties provided for violations of the act shall be held and construed to be cumulative of all laws now in force in the state. It was *contended, as it is con- [133] tended here, that this provision made one law of the act and the act of 1895, and that the exemptions of the latter became part of the former and made it unconstitutional. In other words, the effect was (we quote from the opinion of the court) "thereby to give exemption from prosecution under the law of 1899 to those persons who are exempted by the provisions of the law of 1895." The supreme court of Texas rejected the contention. Its reasoning was not very direct or circumstantial, but it in effect held that the act of 1899 did not continue the provisions of the prior acts, whether constitutional or unconstitutional, merely because it was declared to be cumulative. And the court decided the law of 1899 to be constitutional, because it did not contain the discriminating features of the prior laws. Under the laws of Texas, therefore, combinations of the kind described in the various anti-trust laws, whether by agriculturalists or organized laborers or others, are forbidden and penalized, and the oil company is not discriminated against.

But it may be said that, if the inequalities of prior anti-trust acts have been removed by the act of 1899, they still remain in the Revised Statutes of the state and in the Penal Code, and by those statutes and that Code the excepted classes are exempted from indictment and punishment, while the oil company is subject to both. We need not consider the statutes referred to or consider how far this discrimination can exist, in view of the decision of the supreme court of the state in State v. Laredo Ice Co. Granting it can exist, the case at bar is not a criminal prosecution. It involves only the anti-trust laws and their prohibitions, and penalties. And in them, we have seen, by the effect of the act of 1899 there is no inequality of operation. It is the effect of that decision also that the laws of the state against combinations and trusts are formed into a harmonious system, of which the criminal provisions in other statutes and the Code are a part, and that their provisions can be adjusted and reconciled so as to have constitutional operation.

Judgment affirmed.

[134]*SOUTHERN COTTON OIL COMPANY et al., Plffs. in Err.,

v.

STATE OF TEXAS.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 134, 135.)

Constitutional law—validity of Texas anti-trust laws—due process of law—equal protection of the laws—conclusiveness of state court's construction of state statutes.

This case is governed by the decision in National Cotton Oil Co. v. Texas, ante, 689.

[No. 38.]

Argued November 1, 2, 1904. Decided February 27, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Court of Civil Appeals in and for the Third Supreme Judicial 696

District of the State of Texas to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District Court of Travis County, in that State, forfeiting the license of a foreign corporation to do business in that State, because of its violation of the anti-trust laws. Affirmed.

See same case below, 72 S. W. 1135.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. William V. Rowe and R. S. Lovett argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Ralph Oakley and James S. Baker, filed a brief for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. C. K. Bell argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error.

For contentions of counsel see their briefs as reported in National Cotton Oil Co. v. Texas, ante, 689.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

The Southern Cotton Oil Company is a New Jersey corporation doing business in the state of Texas by virtue of a permit issued June 3, 1897, under the laws of the state. The object of this suit is to forfeit the permit of the company for the violation of the anti-trust statutes of the state. The violation of the statutes alleged against it is the same as that alleged against the National Cotton Oil Company in No. 37. [National Cotton Oil Co. v. Texas, 197 U. S. 115, ante, 689, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 379.] The defenses are the same, and were presented by demurrer. The demurrer was overruled, and, the Southern Cotton Oil Company declining to plead further, judgment was entered forfeiting its permit to do business in the state, except such as might be and constitute interstate commerce. The judgment was affirmed by the court of civil appeals. A *rehearing was denied, and [135] a writ of error from the supreme court refused. This writ of error was then sued out.

The questions are identical with those presented in No. 37, and on its authority the judgment of the Court of Civil Appeals is affirmed.

UNITED STATES, Petitioner,

v.

MORRIS WHITRIDGE and Richard J. White, Trading as Whitridge, White, & Company.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 135-146.)

Duties—value of invoice coin—reliquidation by Secretary of the Treasury.

The reliquidation by the Secretary of the Treasury of the entry of imported gunnies at the exchange value of the invoice rupee, which is also its value as a fraction of a pound, where that value differs by more than 10 per cent from the value of the pure metal therein, as proclaimed by him at the beginning of the quarter year, is authorized by the proviso to the act of August 27, 1894 (28 Stat. at L. 509, 552, chap. 349, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2375), § 25, which empowers him to order the reliquidation of any entry at a different value from that so proclaimed by him, upon satisfactory evidence that the value in United States currency of the foreign money specified in the invoice was, at the date of consular certification of the invoice, at least 10 per cent more or less than the value proclaimed during the quarter.

197 U. S.

[No. 413.]

Argued January 27, 30, 1905. Decided February 27, 1905.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court for the District of Maryland, sustaining the decision of the board of general appraisers that the Secretary of the Treasury was not authorized to reliquidate an entry of imported merchandise at the exchange value of the invoice rupee where that differed by 10 per cent from that of the value of the pure metal therein, as proclaimed by him at the beginning of the quarter year. Reversed.

See same case below, 129 Fed. 33.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Assistant Attorney General McReynolds argued the cause, and, with Solicitor General Hoyt, filed a brief for petitioner.

Messrs. Albert Comstock and William R. Sears argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Aldis B. Browne, Howard T. Walden, and Page, McCutcheon, & Knight, filed a brief for respondents.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

Whitridge, White, & Co., the respondents, on June 18, 1900, imported from India certain gunnies, invoiced in rupees. The invoice contained a certificate from the American consul, dated April 19, 1900, that the exchange value of the rupee at that date was 32 cents, estimated in United States gold dollars. For the purpose of ascertaining the ad valorem duties under the act of July 24, 1897 (30 Stat. at L. 151, chap. 11, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1663), schedule J., clause 341, in July, 1900, the collector of the port of Baltimore estimated the value of the merchandise at the date of the consular certificate by converting the invoice value into dollars, taking the rupees at 32 cents. The importers entered protest and the collector reliquidated the entry, taking the rupee at 20.7 cents. The Secretary of the Treasury, on June 6, 1901, wrote that satisfactory evidence had been produced to him that the value of the rupee was 32 cents at the date of the consul's certificate, and directed a reliquidation at that rate. The collector of the port reliquidated accordingly on June 12, 1901. The importers (respondents) protested, and the matter was submitted to the board of general appraisers in New York. Act of June 10, 1890 (26 Stat. at L. 137, chap. 407, § 14, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1931). The board found that the exchange value of the rupee at the date of certification was 32 cents, but that the metal value was 20.7 cents, as estimated by the Director of the Mint and proclaimed by the Secretary of the Treasury for the quarter year beginning April 1, 1900, and ruled that the latter rate should have been taken, and directed a reliquidation on that footing. The collector appealed to the circuit court and then to the circuit court of appeals, both of which sustained the board of appraisers. 129 Fed. 33. The United States then obtained a writ of *certiorari from [141] this court. The question is whether the Secretary of the Treasury had power to order reliquidation at the rate of 32 cents.

There is, to be sure, a preliminary question as to the conclusiveness of the Secretary's action under the statute. Technically it does not appear that his decision was not based on a finding as to the metal value of the rupee; that is to say, as to the value on April 19, 1900, in fractions of a gold dollar, of the silver contained in the coin. If the decision were based on such a finding we may assume that it would not be open to review. United States v. Klingenberg, 153 U. S. 93, 38 L. ed. 647, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 790. But the greater part, at least, of the argument was made on a different assumption, which, in view of our conclusion, we shall adopt. We do so the more readily because, upon the public and well-known facts, it is not to be supposed that the imagined finding as to the value of silver was made, and the policy of the Treasury Department to adopt the exchange value of rupees was well-known and publicly declared. It would not be consistent with the honor of the government to take the exchange value and then to cover itself from correction, if it was wrong, by suggesting that it had gone upon a different ground, when that ground could not have been taken by anyone knowing the prices of the time. There is another argument for the conclusiveness of the Secretary's action which is so closely connected with the merits that we shall not separate it from our general discussion of the act.

The power of the Secretary depends on the construction of the act of August 27, 1894 (28 Stat. at L. 509, 552, chap. 349, § [142] 25, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2375).† *It is argued for the respondents that the Secretary must derive his power from the proviso, if from anything, that the value dealt with in this section is the same thing throughout, and, being declared to be that of the pure metal of the coin in the body of the section, must be the same in the proviso, and that therefore the Secretary is not authorized to order a reliquidation unless it appears to him that the pure metal in the invoice coin was worth 10 per cent more or less in American gold than the value proclaimed. This argument is thought to derive some support from the history of legislation and from the history of the times, which latter is thought to show that fluctuations of silver bullion, not fluctuations of exchange values, were what Congress was likely to have had in mind. It is suggested further that the government reading makes the proviso revolutionize the body of the section and the practice of a hundred years.

On the other side we start with the consideration that, to an ad valorem tax, it must be an object to ascertain the true value of the thing taxed at the time as of which it is taxed, and that the invoice price is referred to only to that end. The history of the statutes shows a series of continually closer approximations to it, and to our mind helps the contention of the government, not that of the other side. The statutes began by fixing the rates for specified coins absolutely. Then in 1873, they provided in the language of the first part of § 25, quoted above, for an annual estimate by the Director of the Mint, and a proclamation. Act of March 3, 1873 (17 Stat. at L. 602, chap. 268, Rev. Stat. § 3564, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2428). In 1890 the estimate was required to be quarterly, instead of for the year. Act of October 1, [143] 1890. (26 Stat. at L. 567, 624, *chap. 1244, § 52). Finally, on August 27, 1894, the statute received its present form, with the proviso from which the Secretary derives his clearest grant of power. The general purpose of this proviso undeniably is to secure a closer approximation still. In construing it we must bear this obvious purpose in mind. While no doubt the grammatical and logical scope of a proviso is confined to the subject-matter of the principal clause, we cannot forget that in practice no such limit is observed, and when, as here, we are dealing with an addition made in new circumstances to a form of words adopted many years before, the general purpose is a more important aid to the meaning than any rule which grammar or formal logic may lay down. Georgia It. & Bkg. Co. v. Smith, 128 U. S. 174, 181, 32 L. ed. 377, 380, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 47.

If the proviso were a separate subsequent act we should note that the case in which the Secretary is authorized to order a reliquidation is not confined in terms to a difference in the value of standard coins in circulation, but exists whenever there is such a difference in the value of the foreign money specified in the invoice. The invoice is required to be made out in the currency of the country of export or the currency actually paid, which may not be coins at all. Act of June 10, 1890 (26 Stat. at L. 131, chap. 407, § 2, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1886). It is true that the difference referred to in the proviso is a difference from the proclaimed value, and that the proclaimed value has reference to standard coins. Whether, in view of this fact and of Rev. Stat. § 2903 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1922), the words would cover a difference in value between paper expressed in terms of current coin and current coin, if paper were the currency shown by the invoice or the consul's certificate to be the currency to which the invoice referred, need not be considered. That question did not arise in Cramer v. Arthur, 102 U. S. 612, 26 L. ed. 259. However that may be, suppose that the currency mentioned in the invoice, although coined, was a token currency having by legislative fiat the value of a fraction of some current coin of universal worth, but itself having no such worth derived from the metal it contained. Such a *token might[144] vary in value much below or above the fraction of the coin by which it purported to be measured. Suppose that the value of the latter coin only had been proclaimed. It would be going far to say that the Secretary could not order a reliquidation upon a variance of more than 10 per cent between the value of the token currency in the in-

† "That the value of foreign coin as expressed in the money of account of the United States shall be that of the pure metal of such coin of standard value; and the values of the standard coins in circulation of the various nations of the world shall be estimated quarterly by the Director of the Mint, and be proclaimed by the Secretary of the Treasury immediately after the passage of this act, and thereafter quarterly on the first day of January, April, July, and October in each year. And the values so proclaimed shall be followed in estimating the value of all foreign merchandise exported to the United States during the quarter for which the value is proclaimed, and the date of the consular certification of any invoice shall, for the purposes of this section, be considered the date of exportation: Provided, That the Secretary of the Treasury may order the reliquidation of any entry at a different value, whenever satisfactory evidence shall be produced to him showing that the value in United States currency of the foreign money specified in the invoice was, at the date of certification, at least ten per centum more or less than the value proclaimed during the quarter in which the consular certification occurred." voice and the proclaimed value of the governing coin.

The case last put is the case at bar, except that it is not admitted that the rupee was technically a mere token, and that the value of the rupee itself had been proclaimed, subject to a note—"value of the rupee to be determined by consular certificate." At that time, although it was not noted until a little later in the year by the Director of the Mint, India was on a gold basis. As the rupee had a legally fixed ratio to another coin also valued by the Director,—the gold pound,—it is plain that the value of the rupee as so much silver and its value as a fraction of a pound might fall apart, and yet both be given by the Director's tables. It would be giving a very literal construction to the body of § 25 to say that it forbade the Secretary to take the fraction of the pound rather than the silver bullion as the measure of the value of goods, if the former represented the unit of actual cost. But, supposing that the fraction of the pound was the unit of cost, it seems to us that at least under the proviso, if not under the body of the section, the Secretary could order a reliquidation on the basis of the units actually used. It would be simply a correction in conformity with the truth and the actual meaning of the words of the invoice. The other argument for the conclusiveness of the Secretary's action, to which we referred at the outset, was that, for all that appears, this may have been what happened. The gold which the rupee represents is 1 shilling and 4 pence, or about 32 cents. But, as in this case the exchange value and the value as a fraction of a pound were the same, it does not matter to our decision whether we say that in such circumstances the action of the Secretary was conclusive or say that it was right.

[145] *We have shown that, in our opinion, the proviso, if not the body of § 25, would have warranted the action of the Secretary if it had been a later independent statute. We are of opinion that it is not to be construed differently because of its form. In addition to the considerations which we have mentioned, we are confirmed in our view by the facts which were known at the time. It is true that the most conspicuous recent event was the fluctuation in the value of silver. But the movement of silver, especially after the repeal of the Sherman act, on November 1, 1893 (28 Stat. at L. 4, chap. 8, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2355), had been downward, and the proviso contemplated at least equally a possible rise in the foreign money with which it dealt. On the other hand, there was before Congress the Herschell report on the coinage of silver in 1894.

India, of which six thousand copies had been ordered to be printed by a resolve of the Senate, concurred in by the House (28 Stat. at L. Appx. p. 5), and which had been printed in 1893. This report recommended the closing of the mints against the free coinage of silver, and predicted as a consequence the divergence between the intrinsic value of the rupee and the value of its ratio to the pound as fixed, taken hypothetically as 1 shilling and 4 pence. It contemplated even a raising of the ratio as possible. The report was followed by the closing of the mints in the same year, and the result predicted came to pass. However small may have been the imports from India in 1894, the fact predicted by the Herschell report was one of the most striking incidents in the recent financial history of the world, and we cannot suppose that it was not considered when the proviso was passed. Before the date of this export gold was adopted as the standard, and the ratio of the rupee fixed at 15 to 1, or 1 shilling and 4 pence, in 1899. The exchange value did not change very much, remaining at near the conventional ratio, but the decline in bullion made the divergence referred to more marked. It was objected that some of the facts which we have mentioned were not proved in the case, but they are public facts, and when we are asked to declare that the Secretary *exceeded his powers we have to [146] consider what might have been before his mind.

As we have said, it would be only by a very literal construction of the earlier part of § 25 that the collectors would be bound to estimate the value of a cargo invoiced in rupees by the bullion of the rupee when, in the invoice, rupee meant a certain fraction of a pound. But, however that may be, we are of opinion that when the Secretary has satisfactory evidence of that state of facts, under the proviso he is authorized to order a reliquidation in order to make the value in United States currency correspond with the actual value of the goods. It is not necessary to consider any wider problems as to the power of the Secretary. We confine our decision to the particular case.

Decree reversed.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, Appt.,
v.

ELIAS E. BARNES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 146-154.)

Court of claims — equitable jurisdiction to reform contract — compensation for extra work.

1. Equitable jurisdiction to reform a contract for street improvements in the District of Columbia, in order to determine the amount due under such contract to the claimant, was conferred on the court of claims by the District of Columbia claims act of June 16, 1880, giving the court of claims original legal and equitable jurisdiction of claims arising out of contracts for public work in the District.

2. Compensation for work done outside of the original contract may be awarded by the court of claims under the District of Columbia claims act of June 16, 1880, giving it original equitable and legal jurisdiction of all claims for work done by the order and direction of the commissioners of the District, and accepted by them for the use, purposes, or benefit of the District.

[No. 143.]

Argued January 23, 1905. Decided February 27, 1905.

A PPEAL from the Court of Claims to review an award under the District of Columbia claims act. Affirmed.

See same case below, 37 Ct. Cl. 342.

Statement by Mr. Justice Day:

The action now appealed was brought under the act of June 16, 1880, known as the District of Columbia claims act. 21 Stat. at L. 284, chap. 243. The original petition was filed August 4, 1880. At subsequent stages of the case amended petitions were filed. On October 1, 1887, the court of claims decided the case in favor of the District of Columbia, giving judgment against the claimant for the sum of $11,074.11. 22 Ct. Cl. 366. On November 18, 1887, the claimant filed a motion for a new trial, which was submitted on March 28, 1895, and allowed on April 1, 1895. The case was then referred, as provided in the act, and upon report and hearing judgment was rendered on November 11, 1895, against the District for the claimant in the sum of $31,754.57; being rendered for Barnes in the sum of $22,350.54, and for Ritchie, assignee, in the sum of $9,404.03, both sums due and payable as of January 1, 1876. On April 20, 1896, the defendant filed its motion for a new trial, which was granted on May 18, 1896. On March 31, 1902, the court rendered a judgment in favor of the claimant and his assignee, in the sum of $23,694.47, due and payable as of March 1, 1876. 37 Ct. Cl. 342. On April 22, 1902, an appeal was taken by the District from the judgment of March 31, 1902, to this court. This appeal was dismissed for want of jurisdiction. District of Columbia v. Barnes, 187 U. S. 638, 47 L. ed. 344, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 846.

Under the act of March 3, 1903 (32 Stat. at L. 1070, chap. 1006), this appeal from the judgment of March 31, 1902, was taken by the District, bringing the case in review before this court.

Mr. Robert A. Howard argued the cause, and, with Assistant Attorney General Pradt, filed a brief for appellant.

Mr. John C. Fay argued the cause and filed a brief for appellee.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

We deem it unnecessary, in the view taken of this case, to set forth the voluminous findings of fact made upon the trial in the court of claims. So much of the findings will be commented on as is necessary to a determination of the legal questions involved, which are within a narrow compass. Nor do we find it necessary to consider the alleged discrepancies between the judgment of the court of claims, when the judgment was in favor of the District (22 Ct. Cl. 366), and the findings and conclusions when the judgment was rendered which is now appealed to this court. 37 Ct. Cl. 342. [150]

This court does not sit to review findings of fact made in the court of claims. They are regarded as conclusive here, and our jurisdiction is limited to a determination of such questions of law as are properly brought to our attention upon the record. United States v. Smith, 94 U. S. 214-218, 24 L. ed. 115.

The original action was brought in part on two contracts, which were in writing, duly executed by the claimant and in behalf of the District of Columbia, and known as Nos. 264 and 413, and were for certain street improvements in the city of Washington. These contracts were entered into on April 29 and July 23, 1872, respectively, under authority of the act of February 21, 1871. 16 Stat. at L. 427, chap. 62. Certain verbal agreements are also set up as having been entered into between the claimant and the commissioners of the District.

The court of claims, under the proofs, heard the parties upon the question as to the right to reform the two written contracts. It refused to reform contract No. 413, and decreed in favor of the District in the sum $13,039.79 for over payments made upon that contract. The court did reform contract No. 264, finding that, by mistake in the drafting of the contract, "the rate of 40 cents for grading old gravel streets to a depth of 2 feet" was omitted therefrom by mutual mistake of the parties, and that the written contract was executed without observing the omission. Upon the contract as reformed, the claimant was permitted to recover for work done. Much of the discussion in the oral argument and the brief of the learned counsel for the government is directed to the authority of the court of claims to reform a written contract in the exercise of the jurisdiction of a court of equity for that purpose, and much discussion was had as to the various acts conferring jurisdiction upon that court. But we think a construction of the act under cover of which this suit was prosecuted is all that is necessary to determine the question. The act of June 16, 1880, as appears by its title, [151] was intended *to confer on the court of claims jurisdiction to hear and determine all outstanding claims against the District of Columbia. For that purpose it was recited in the 1st section of the act that the jurisdiction of the court should extend to, and it should have original legal and equitable jurisdiction of claims arising out of, the contracts made by the board of public works and extensions made thereof by the commissioners of the District of Columbia, and also of the claims arising out of the contracts made by the commissioners since the act of June 20, 1874 [18 Stat. at L. 116, chap. 337], and broadly for all claims for work done by order or direction of the commissioners, and accepted by them for the use, purposes, or benefit of the District of Columbia, and prior to the 14th day of March, 1876.

The language used is of the most comprehensive character, and confers, for the purposes stated, original legal and equitable jurisdiction.

It is true that the purpose of the various acts conferring jurisdiction upon the court of claims has been held to be to permit the adjudication of money demands against the United States, and it may be that under this act, as under others, there was no intention to confer equity jurisdiction beyond that which is required to enable a court to determine whether money relief should be granted. The intent of the act was to enable parties to submit the justice of their claims against the United States to adjudication in a competent court. For that purpose the act conferred in terms, equitable as well as legal jurisdiction.

The province of the court of claims is to pass upon the justice of the claim, and adjudge accordingly. And it is obviously intended that, when necessary to adjudicate claims against the District, the court shall be unhampered in the exercise of jurisdiction, and, as in many courts of this country having a civil code, there has been conferred upon the same tribunal the power to grant the necessary legal and equitable relief. One who has the right to money relief upon a contract mistakenly omitted to [152] be reduced to writing, in accordance *with the true agreement of the parties, has a claim of equitable cognizance, for the contract must be reformed to meet the intention of the parties, and, when corrected, may be adjudged a valid claim.

For the purpose of adjudicating such claims, this statute gives to the court equitable jurisdiction in order that it may determine what the District ought to pay to the claimant. Although unable to grant a decree for specific performance, or exercise the peculiar powers of a court of equity, the court of claims may determine the money relief to which the claimant is entitled, whether arising out of an equitable or legal demand. This principle was recognized in United States v. Jones, 131 U. S. 1-18, 33 L. ed. 90-92, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 669. The court of claims in other cases has exercised the equitable jurisdiction conferred in the act of June 16, 1880 (Cullinane v. District of Columbia, 18 Ct. Cl. 577, 594), and like jurisdiction to reform contracts under the act of March 3, 1887, 24 Stat. at L. 505, chap. 359, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 752; South Boston Iron Co. v. United States, 34 Ct. Cl. 174.

We think that the court had jurisdiction to reform the contract upon the facts found.

It is objected that the court of claims awarded relief for certain "stiff clay" excavated under claimant's contract. The findings show that this work was not specifically covered by the original agreement, and that the work was accepted by the commissioners, and the District received the benefit thereof; and the court finds that the excavation of the stiff clay was done under a verbal agreement with the commissioners after the performance of the original contract, and that the claimant was entitled to the rate established therefor, as paid to other contractors for like work.

The act of June 16, 1880, permits a recovery for work done by order and direction of the commissioners, and accepted by them for the benefit of the District. While it has been held that this would not authorize a recovery for work done under the original contract, at higher prices than had been agreed upon, yet, where there was a revival of the contract for distinct *work, there [153] might be a recovery at higher rates, which entered into the terms of renewal as understood by the parties, notwithstanding the pre-existing contract. Campbell v. District of Columbia, 18 Ct. Cl. 193.

The act of 1874 gave limited power to the commissioners, and in the act of February 21, 1871 (16 Stat. at L. 419, chap. 62), providing for contracts of the board of public works, it was distinctly provided that all contracts should be in writing and signed by the parties making the same. And it was held that this statute requires contracts to be actually signed, and that mere entries on the journals of the board would not satisfy the statute. Barnard v. District of Columbia, 127 U. S. 409-411, 32 L. ed. 207, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1202.

But, under the statute (June 16, 1880) now under consideration, the intention is manifest to permit the court of claims to adjudicate claims for all work done by the order and direction of the commissioners, and accepted by them for the use, purpose, and benefit of the District. For this purpose this is a remedial statute, and it is intended to permit parties to have an adjudication upon their demands where the District had been benefited by work actually done under the order and direction of the commissioners and duly accepted. And the findings of fact show that the claimant was only permitted to recover for work so performed and accepted. As we have said, this right of recovery might not revive claims for work completed under former contracts, but here the finding is that the new agreement applied to a distinct subject-matter, and not to work covered by and performed under the original agreement. We find no error in the judgment of the court of claims in this regard. And so as to various sums awarded under findings of fact, establishing that more work was made necessary by reason of the change of grade on North Carolina avenue by the commissioners in 1874, the change of grade making it necessary to further grade Third street and to do work for that purpose. The findings show that this was done by the direction of the commissioners, and upon terms mutually agreed upon. Under finding XIV., where the work is found [154] not to *have been done under the original contract, it is found that it was admitted by the defendant to be correct, and is work of which the District has received the full benefit. So, as to other findings to which exceptions are made, there is no dispute that the work was actually done to the satisfaction of the commissioners upon terms agreed upon and the work duly accepted.

As we construe the statute, we think it affords ample authority to grant relief upon the facts found, which findings are conclusive upon us.

It is further urged by counsel for the government that the pleadings are not sufficient to authorize the judgment, but we think that, under the original petition and various amendments thereto, the court was authorized to grant the relief adjudged.

The court of claims is not bound by special rules of pleading. The main purpose is to arrive at and adjudicate the justice of alleged claims against the United States. United States v. Burns, 12 Wall. 246-254, 20 L. ed. 388-390; United States v. Behan, 110

U. S. 338-347, 28 L. ed. 168-171, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 81.

On the whole record we find no error of law to the prejudice of the District.

Judgment affirmed.

ADOLPHUS F. McCLAIN, Plff. in Err.,
v.

GEORGE C. RANKIN, as Receiver of the First National Bank of South Bend, Washington.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 154-169.)

Limitation of actions—enforcement of statutory liability of shareholders in national banks.

The personal liability of shareholders in a national bank, under U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5151 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3465), for the contracts, debts, and engagements of the bank, cannot be regarded as a contract liability, for the purpose of making applicable the limitation prescribed by Bail. (Wash.) Code, § 4800, subd. 3, for an "action upon a contract or liability, express or implied, which is not in writing, and does not arise out of any written instrument."

[No. 58.]

Argued November 10, 1904. Decided March 6, 1905.

IN ERROR to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit to review a judgment affirming, on a second writ of error, a judgment of the Circuit Court for the District of Washington, overruling a demurrer setting up the statute of limitations in an action to enforce the statutory liability of a shareholder in a national bank. Judgments of both courts reversed, and cause remanded to the Circuit Court, with directions to sustain the demurrer, and enter judgment for defendant.

See same case below, 56 C. C. A. 160, 119 Fed. 110.

Statement by Mr. Chief Justice Fuller:

The First National Bank of South Bend, Washington, became insolvent and was closed August 10, 1895, and on the seventeenth day of the same month one Heim was appointed receiver, who was succeeded by Aldrich, and Aldrich by George C. Rankin.

August 17, 1896, the acting Comptroller of the Currency levied an assessment against the shareholders of the bank in enforcement of their statutory liability. Adolphus F. McClaine was one of the stockholders, was notified of the levy, and demand was duly made of him to pay the assessment on or before September 17, 1896, and shortly thereafter an action was commenced against him by the receiver to recover the same. Pending the action, efforts to settle the claim were made. Subsequently, the action was dismissed. Thereupon the receiver brought an action against McClaine upon an alleged contract of compromise, which went to trial, and the receiver took a nonsuit. The present action was then brought on the assessment, August 15, 1899, and McClaine set up the statute of limitations by demurrer, which the circuit court sustained, and dismissed the action. 98 Fed. 378. The cause was taken to the circuit court of appeals, and the judgment of the circuit court reversed. 45 C. C. A. 631, 106 Fed. 791.

NOTE.—On the enforcement of statutory liability of stockholders in national banks—see note to Williamson v. American Bank, 52 C. A. 6.

The case having been remanded, the circuit court overruled the demurrer, McClaine answered, and a trial was had, resulting in judgment for the receiver, which was [156] affirmed by *the circuit court of appeals. 56 C. C. A. 160, 119 Fed. 110. This writ of error was then brought.

The following are sections of the statutes of Washington in relation to limitations, as found in Ballinger's Code:

"§ 4796. Actions can only be commenced within the periods herein prescribed after the cause of action shall have accrued, except when in special cases, a different limitation is prescribed by statute; but the objection that the action was not commenced within the time limited can only be taken by answer or demurrer.

"§ 4797. The period prescribed in the preceding section for the commencement of actions shall be as follows: . . .

"§ 4798. Within six years: 1. An action upon a judgment or decree of any court of the United States, or of any state or territory within the United States.

"2. An action upon a contract in writing, or liability, express or implied, arising out of a written agreement.

"3. An action for the rents and profits or for the use and occupation of real estate."

"§ 4800. Within three years: 1. An action for waste or trespass upon real property.

"2. An action for taking, detaining, or injuring personal property, including an action for the specific recovery thereof, or for any other injury to the person or rights of another not hereinafter enumerated.

"3. An action upon a contract or liability, express or implied, which is not 197 U. S. in writing and does not arise out of any written instrument.

"4. An action for relief upon the ground of fraud, the cause of action in such case not to be deemed to have accrued until the discovery by the aggrieved party of the facts constituting the fraud.

"5. An action against a sheriff, coroner, or constable upon a liability incurred by the doing of an act in his official capacity, and by virtue of his office, or by the omission of an official duty, including the non-payment of money collected upon *an execution; but this subdivision shall not apply to action for an escape. [157]

"6. An action upon a statute for penalty or forfeiture, where an action is given to the party aggrieved, or to such party and the state, except when the statute imposing it prescribed a different penalty [limitation].

"7. An action for seduction and breach of promise of marriage."

"§ 4805. An action for relief, not hereinbefore provided for, shall be commenced within two years after the cause of action shall have accrued."

Mr. T. O. Abbott argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

In Washington there is no statute relating in express language to a liability created by statute, "except for a forfeiture or penalty." An action to enforce such a liability, therefore, comes within the provision of Ballinger's Anno. Codes & Statutes (Wash.) § 4805, because it is an action upon a liability for which no relief is "hereinbefore provided."

Spokane v. Stevens, 12 Wash. 667, 42 Pac. 123; Ballard v. West Coast Improv. Co. 15 Wash. 572, 46 Pac. 1055; State ex rel. Hemen v. Ballard, 16 Wash. 418, 47 Pac. 970; Seattle v. De Wolfe, 17 Wash. 349, 49 Pac. 553.

The words "or liability," in § 4800, subd. 3, do not include a "statutory liability."

Hawkins v. Iron Valley Furnace Co. 40 Ohio St. 507.

The learned court below having ascertained that the obligation was contractual for some purposes, it concluded that it was contractual for all purposes. It relied largely upon the decision of this court in First Nat. Bank v. Hawkins, 174 U. S. 364, 43 L. ed. 1007, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 739. But the statute of limitations was not involved in that case. That action was upon an original subscription, and the sole question was whether one banking association possessed the right to subscribe for and hold the stock of another banking association. The obligation was declared to be contractual for that purpose.

See Aldrich v. McClaine, 45 C. C. A. 631, 106 Fed. 791.

But since First Nat. Bank v. Hawkins and the case at bar were decided this court has had occasion to consider the direct question in issue here, and has adopted the rule contended for by plaintiff in error.

McDonald v. Thompson, 184 U. S. 71, 46 L. ed. 437, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 297.

A liability may be at the same time a statutory and a contract liability; and so it has been held by this court with respect to the liability of stockholders. It is a statutory liability as to the statute of limitations (Moore v. Boyd, 74 Cal. 167, 15 Pac. 670), and a contract liability as to the right of attachment (Kennedy v. California Sav. Bank, 97 Cal. 93, 33 Am. St. Rep. 163, 31 Pac. 846), and as to the law defining the jurisdiction of justices of the peace (Dennis v. Superior Court, 91 Cal. 548, 27 Pac. 1031).

Bliss v. Sneath, 119 Cal. 530, 51 Pac. 848.

The liability is not on, but for, the contract, debt, or agreement.

Wilson v. Book, 13 Wash. 676, 43 Pac. 939.

Without the aid of a statute, the creditor has no remedy directly against the stockholder. It is therefore a statutory remedy, and is governed by the statute of limitations applicable to such remedies, and not by the statute applicable to actions upon contracts.

Thomp. Corp. § 1991. See also Wood, Limitation of Actions, 3d ed. §§ 36, 39; Robertson v. Blaine County, 47 L. R. A. 459, 32 C. C. A. 512, 61 U. S. App. 242, 90 Fed. 63.

An action to enforce this liability is certainly not a case of express contract; and the most that can, by the utmost straining, be asserted, is, that it is a case arising quasi ex contractu. It is in truth, however, a mere legal liability created by statute, which may furnish the foundation or consideration of a contract, express or implied, but it is not of itself a contract.

Bullard v. Bell, 1 Mason, 243, Fed. Cas. No. 2,121.

Statutes in derogation of the common law are not presumed to make any alteration in the common law further than the clear import of the language necessarily requires.

Shaw v. North Pennsylvania R. Co. (Shaw v. Merchants' Nat. Bank) 101 U. S. 557, 25 L. ed. 892; Johnson v. Southern P. Co. 54 C. C. A. 508, 117 Fed. 462.

Mr. Francis F. Oldham argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

The liability of the plaintiff in error as a stockholder of a national bank must be held to be, not only statutory, but contractual as well.

Aldrich v. McClaine, 45 C. C. A. 631, 106 Fed. 791; First Nat. Bank v. Hawkins, 174

U. S. 364, 43 L. ed. 1007, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 739; McDonald v. Thompson, 184 U. S. 71, 46 L. ed. 437, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 297.

In Metropolitan R. Co. v. District of Columbia, 132 U. S. 1, 13, 33 L. ed. 231, 235, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 19, the court said that the fact that the duty which the defendant failed to perform was a statutory one does not make the action one upon the statutes. The action is clearly one of those described in the statute of limitations.

Carrol v. Green, 92 U. S. 509, 23 L. ed. 738, is strongly in point. There the action was brought against shareholders of an insolvent bank to enforce their liability for double the amount of their stock according to the provisions of the charter. It was held by this court that the liability of the shareholders arose from their acceptance of the charter and their implied promises to fulfil its requirements, and that the legal remedy to enforce it was an action on the case to which the statute of limitations would apply; and hence, that it applied to a bill in equity founded on the same application.

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the opinion of the court:

It is conceded that, in the absence of any provision of the act of Congress creating the liability, fixing a limitation of time for commencing actions to enforce it, the statute of limitations of the particular state is applicable. Rev. Stat. 721, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 581; Campbell v. Haverhill, 155 U. S. 610, 39 L. ed. 280, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 217. If, then, this action was barred by the statute of limitations of the state of Washington, that ended it, and both judgments below must be reversed and the cause remanded to the circuit court, with a direction that judgment be entered for defendant.

Reference to the state statutes shows that subd. 2 of § 4798 relates to "an action upon a contract in writing, or liability, express or implied, arising out of a written agreement;" while subd. 3 of § 4800 relates to "an action upon a contract or liability, express or implied, which is not in writing, and does not arise out of any written instrument." The one relates to contracts or liabilities growing out of contracts in writing, and the other to contracts or liabilities growing out of contracts not in writing. The receiver's contention is that the case falls within subd. 3 of § 4800, imposing the limitation of three years. If it does not, it is not otherwise provided for, and falls within § 4805, which fixes the limitation at two years.

And as this action was commenced within three years, but not within two years, after the assessment became due and payable, the question is whether subd. 3 of § 4800 applies.

It is contended that the meaning of the word "liability" as used in that subdivision is not restricted to contract liabilities, but, reading it with subd. 2 of § 4798, and [159] in *view of the enumeration of other actions to enforce liabilities, we think that this cannot be so, and, indeed, the subdivision has been construed by the supreme court of Washington as applicable only to contracts. Suter v. Wenatchee Water Power Co. 35 Wash. 1, 76 Pac. 298; Sargent v. Tacoma, 10 Wash. 212, 38 Pac. 1048. The circuit court was of that opinion when the case was originally disposed of, and held that the cause of action arose by force of the statute, and did not spring from contract. 98 Fed. 378. But that judgment was reversed by the circuit court of appeals on the ground that the liability was not only statutory, but contractual as well, and that the limitation of three years applied in the latter aspect. 45 C. C. A. 631, 106 Fed. 791. Conceding that a statutory liability may be contractual in its nature, or more accurately, quasi-contractual, does it follow that an action given by statute should be regarded as brought on simple contract, or for breach of a simple contract, and, therefore, as coming within the provision in question?

The national bank act provides that "the shareholders of every national banking association shall be held individually responsible, equally and ratably, and not one for another, for all contracts, debts, and engagements of such association, to the extent of the amount of their stock therein, at the par value thereof, in addition to the amount invested in such shares." Rev. Stat. § 5151, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3465.

And under other sections the duty is imposed on the Comptroller of the Currency to give the creditors of an insolvent national bank the benefit of the enforcement of this personal liability, and to decide whether the whole, or a part, and, if only a part, how much, shall be collected, he being also authorized to make more than one assessment, as circumstances may require. Kennedy v. Gibson, 8 Wall. 498, 19 L. ed. 476; Studebaker v. Perry, 184 U. S. 258, 46 L. ed. 528, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 463, and cases cited. But even his decision does not determine the liability except as to contracts, debts, and engagements of the bank lawfully incurred. Schrader v. Manufacturers' Nat. Bank, 133 U. S. 67, 33 L. ed. 564, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 238.

[160] *The liability is conditional, and statutes of limitation do not commence to run until after assessment has been made. McDonald 197 U. S.

v. Thompson, 184 U. S. 71, 46 L. ed. 437, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 297.

In the latter case the statute of Nebraska provided (§ 10) that actions must be commenced within five years, "upon a specialty, or any agreement, contract, or promise in writing, or foreign judgment;" and (§ 11) within four years "upon a contract not in writing, express or implied; an action upon a liability created by statute other than a forfeiture or penalty."

The action was brought on an assessment upon the stockholders of a national bank to the amount of the par value of the shares, and not to recover an amount unpaid on the original subscription, and it was held that the five-year limitation did not apply, because the cause of action was not upon a written contract, but that the four-year limitation applied, "whether the promise raised by the statute was an implied contract not in writing or a liability created by statute," no distinction between them as to the limitation being made by the state statute. And Mr. Justice Brown, speaking for the court, said: "Whether the promise raised by the statute was an implied contract, not in writing, or a liability created by statute, it is immaterial to inquire. For the purposes of this case it may have been both. The statute was the origin of both the right and the remedy, but the contract was the origin of the personal responsibility of the defendant. Did the statute make a distinction between them with reference to the time within which an action must be brought, it might be necessary to make a more exact definition; but, as the action must be brought in any case within four years, it is unnecessary to go farther than to declare what seems entirely clear to us, that it is not a contract in writing within the meaning of § 10 of the Nebraska act." And it was also said: "Granting there was a contract with the creditors to pay a sum equal to the value of the stock taken, in addition to the sum invested in the shares, this was a contract created by the statute, and obligatory upon the stockholders by reason of *the statute existing at the time [161] of their subscription; but it was not a contract in writing within the meaning of the Nebraska act, since the writing—that is, the subscription—contained no reference whatever to the statutory obligation, and no promise to respond beyond the amount of the subscription. In none of the numerous cases upon the subject in this court is this obligation treated as an express contract, but as one created by the statute and implied from the express contract of the stockholders to take and pay for shares in the association."

In the present case the limitation imposed on an action upon a statute for penalty or forfeiture, where an action was given, was three years (subd. 6, § 4800), and on any other action to enforce a statutory liability was two years, because not otherwise provided for, and, therefore, the question must be met whether this is an action brought on a contract or not. But it is an action to recover on an assessment levied by the Comptroller of the Currency by virtue of the act of Congress, and although the shareholder, in taking his shares, subjected himself to the liability prescribed by the statute, the question still remains whether that liability constituted a contract within the meaning of the statute of limitations of the state of Washington.

Some statutes imposing individual liability are merely in affirmation of the common law, while others impose an individual liability other than that at common law. If § 5151 had provided that subscribing to stock or taking shares of stock amounted to a promise directly to every creditor, then that liability would have been a liability by contract. But the words of § 5151 do not mean that the stockholder promises the creditor, as surety for the debts of the corporation, but merely impose a liability on him as secondary to those debts, which debts remain distinct, and to which the stockholder is not a party. The liability is a consequence of the breach by the corporation of its contract to pay, and is collateral and statutory. Brown v. Eastern Slate Co. 134 [162] Mass. *590; Platt v. Wilmot, 193 U. S. 402, 48 L. ed. 809, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 542. In Matteson v. Dent, 176 U. S. 521, 44 L. ed. 571, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 419, the stock still stood in the name of the decedent, and it was decided that the statutory liability was a debt within the state law, but not that it was a true contract.

It is true that in particular cases the liability has been held to be, in its nature, contractual, yet, it is nevertheless conditional, and enforceable only according to the Federal statute, independent of which the cause of action does not exist; so that the remedy at law in effect given by that statute is subject to the limitations imposed by the state statute on such actions.

Cases such as Carrol v. Green, 92 U. S. 509, 23 L. ed. 738, and Metropolitan R. Co. v. District of Columbia, 132 U. S. 1, 33 L. ed. 231, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 19, are not controlling, for in them the right to recover was direct and immediate, and not secondary and contingent. In Metropolitan R. Co. v. District of Columbia, the charter of the company provided "that the said corporation hereby created shall be bound to keep said tracks, and for the space of 2 feet beyond the outer rail thereof, and also the space between the tracks, at all times well paved and in good order, without expense to the United States or to the city of Washington." The declaration set out a large amount of paving done by the city, which it was averred should have been done by the company. The action was based on the implied obligation on the part of defendant to reimburse plaintiff for moneys expended in performing the duty which the statute imposed on defendant. In Carrol v. Green it was said: "According to the statute, the liability of 'each stockholder' arose upon 'the failure of the bank.' The liability gave at once the right to sue; and, by necessary consequence, the period of limitation began at the same time."

But here the right to sue did not obtain until the Comptroller of the Currency had acted, and his order was the basis of the suit. The statute of limitations did not commence to run until assessment made, and then it ran as against an action *to enforce [163] the statutory liability, and not an action for breach of contract.

We think that subd. 3 of § 4800 did not apply, and that § 4805 did.

The judgment of the Circuit Court of Appeals is reversed; the judgment of the Circuit Court is also reversed, and the cause remanded to that court with a direction to sustain the demurrer and enter judgment for defendant.

Mr. Justice White, with whom concur Mr. Justice Brown and Mr. Justice McKenna, dissenting:

The statutes of the state of Washington limit to three years the right to bring "an action upon a contract or liability, express or implied, which is not in writing, and does not arise out of any written instrument." The cause of action here involved is now held not to be embraced within this statute, and therefore barred by the following provision: "An action for relief, not hereinbefore provided for, shall be commenced within two years after the cause of action shall have accrued."

The liability sought to be enforced is the obligation of a shareholder of a national bank to pay an amount equal to the par of his shares of stock. The circuit court held the action not to be one upon contract, but to enforce a conditional liability imposed by the law as an incident to ownership of bank stock, and therefore barred by two years. 98 Fed. 378. The circuit court of appeals reversed this judgment, and decided that the period of limitation was three years, because the liability was contractual. 45 C. C. A. 631, 106 Fed. 791.

In Suler v. Wenatchee Water Power Company, decided April 18, 1904, 35 Wash. 1, 197 U. S.

76 Pac. 298, the supreme court of Washington construed the provision of the statutes of limitation here involved, providing that an action might be brought within three years "upon a contract or liability, express or implied, which is not in writing," and held that it did not embrace torts, "but was evidently intended to refer to a contractual *liability." The court, in its opinion, among other authorities, referred to this case as decided below, saying:

"Such, in effect, was the decision in Sargent v. Tacoma, 10 Wash. 212, 215, 38 Pac. 1048. The same statute was construed by the United States circuit court, district of Washington, in Aldrich v. Skinner, 98 Fed. 375, and also in Aldrich v. McClaine, 98 Fed. 378. The last-named case was, on appeal to the United States circuit court of appeals, reversed. Aldrich v. McClaine, 45 C. C. A. 631, 106 Fed. 791. The reversal was, however, upon the ground that the liability involved was a contractual one, the lower court having held otherwise. The appellate court construed the statute itself as did the lower court."

It might well be considered that the supreme court of Washington regarded the interpretation of the court of appeals as harmonizing with its own views of the meaning of the provision in question. But be this as it may, the prior decisions of this court to me seem conclusive, since, in deciding various questions concerning the liability of stockholders in national banks to pay the double liability, this court has expressly held that such liability is contractual. Matteson v. Dent, 176 U. S. 521, 525, 526, 44 L. ed. 571, 573, 574, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 419; First Nat. Bank v. Hawkins, 174 U. S. 364, 372, 43 L. ed. 1007, 1011, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 739; Richmond v. Irons, 121 U. S. 27, 55, 56, 30 L. ed. 864, 873, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 788. In Richmond v. Irons the court said (pp. 55, 56, L. ed. p. 873, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 801):

"Under that [the national banking] act the individual liability of the stockholders is an essential element in the contract by which the stockholders became members of the corporation. It is voluntarily entered into by subscribing for and accepting shares of stock. Its obligation becomes a part of every contract, debt, and engagement of the bank itself; as much so as if they were made directly by the stockholder, instead of by the corporation. There is nothing in the statute to indicate that the obligation arising upon these undertakings and promises should not have the same force and effect, and be as binding in all respects, as any other contracts of the individual stockholder. We hold, therefore, that the obligation personal representatives. Flash v. Conn, 109 U. S. 371, 27 L. ed. 966, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 221; Hobart v. Johnson, 19 Blatchf. 359, 8 Fed. 493. In Massachusetts it was held, in Grew v. Bred, 10 Met. 569, that administrators of deceased stockholders were chargeable in equity, as for other debts of their intestate, in their representative capacity."

[165] of the stockholder survives as *against his 197 U. S.

In Matteson v. Dent the evidence showed that at the time of the death of Matteson he was the owner of ten shares of stock in a national bank,—a going concern. His widow and heirs, by the decree of a probate court of Minnesota, became the joint and undivided owners of the stock, which continued, however, to stand in the name of Matteson. Thereafter the bank failed, and, on the ground that they had received assets of the estate, a suit was brought against the widow and heirs for the amount of an assessment made by the Comptroller against the stock. The suit was defended on two grounds: First, that the assessment was not binding, because the bank had not failed at the time of Matteson's death, and at the time when, by the decree of the probate court, the widow and heirs had become the owners in indivision of the stock; and, second, that under the national banking law they could only be made liable, in any event, each in proportion to his or her interest in the stock. In considering the first ground the court, approvingly citing the passage from Richmond v. Irons, above quoted, said (p. 524, L. ed. p. 573, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 420):

"Because the insolvency of the bank took place after the death of Matteson, did it result that the assessment, which was predicated upon the insolvency, was not a debt of his estate? To so decide, the statute must be construed as imposing the liability on the shareholder for the amount of his subscription when necessary to pay debts only in case insolvency arises during the lifetime of the shareholder. In other words, that all liability of shareholders to contribute to pay debts ceases by death. This construction, however, would be manifestly unsound. The obligation of a subscriber to stock to contribute to the amount of his subscription *for the purpose of the pay-[166] ment of debts is contractual, and arises from the subscription to the stock. True, whether there is to be a call for the performance of this obligation depends on whether it becomes necessary to do so in consequence of the happening of insolvency. But the obligation to respond is engendered by, and relates to, the contract from which it arises. This contract obligation, existing during life, is not extinguished by death, but, like other contract obligations, survives, and is enforceable against the estate of the stockholder."

And the same principle has been applied to similar liabilities imposed upon stockholders in state corporations, the court uniformly holding that the liability, although statutory in its origin, was contractual in its nature, and therefore the cause of action was transitory. Whitman v. National Bank, 176 U. S. 559, 44 L. ed. 587, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 477; Flash v. Conn., 109 U. S. 371, 27 L. ed. 966, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 263.

In Whitman v. National Bank, discussing a statute of the state of Kansas, the court, through Mr. Justice Brewer, said (p. 563, L. ed. p. 590, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 478):

"The liability which, by the Constitution and statutes, is thus declared to rest upon the stockholder, though statutory in its origin, is contractual in its nature. It would not be doubted that, if the stockholders in this corporation had formed a partnership, the obligations of each partner to the others and to creditors would be contractual, and determined by the general common law in respect to partnerships. If Kansas had provided for partnerships with limited liability, and these parties, complying with the provisions of the statute, had formed such a partnership, it would also be true that their obligations to one another and to creditors would be contractual, although only in the statute was to be found the authority for the creation of such obligations. And it is none the less so when these same stockholders organized a corporation under a law of Kansas which prescribed the nature of the obligations which each thereby assumed to the others and to the creditors. While the statute of Kansas permitted the forming of the corporation [167] under certain conditions, the action *of these parties was purely voluntary. In other words, they entered into a contract authorized by statute."

And the principle sustained by the previous decisions of this court is also supported by the decisions of state courts of last resort. Thus, the supreme judicial court of Maine in Pulsifer v. Greene, 96 Me. 438, 52 Atl. 921, held the doctrine to be consonant with reason and natural justice and sustained by the weight of authority, the court citing not only the decisions of this court previously referred to, but also decisions of the courts of California, Connecticut, Illinois, Kansas, Massachusetts, and Michigan. And the decisions of the state courts of last resort thus referred to were, in many cases, in part rested upon the previous adjudications of this court to which I have referred, those decisions being considered as conclusive on the subject of the contract nature of the liability. My mind sees no reason for saying that the doctrine thus settled is not applicable to a statute of limitations, for if the liability of the stockholder be contractual, for the purpose of enforcing the obligation, it is not by me perceived upon what principle it can be held that it is not contractual, but purely statutory, for the purpose of determining whether an action to enforce the liability is barred by a statute of limitations. But the unsoundness of the distinction as an original question in my opinion does not require to be demonstrated, since it is absolutely foreclosed by previous decisions of this court. Thus, in Carrol v. Green, 92 U. S. 509, 23 L. ed. 738,—an action against stockholders of a South Carolina bank to enforce a double liability provided for in the act of incorporation,—it was expressly held that, as the liability was contractual, it was barred by a statute of limitations applicable to simple contract indebtedness. Reference was made to decisions of the courts of New York and Massachusetts, holding the same doctrine in analogous cases (pp. 514, 515, L. ed. p. 740), and, in concluding the opinion, the court expressly noticed and overruled the contention "that the liability here in question, being created by a statute, is to be regarded as a debt by specialty."

Carrol v. Green* was subsequently approved and followed in Metropolitan R. Co. v. District of Columbia, 132 U. S. 1, 23 L. ed. 231, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 19. The action was to recover the cost of certain street paving, the liability being recited in the act of incorporation. The trial court overruled demurrers to pleas of the statute of limitations, among other reasons, upon the ground that the action was founded on a statute, and that the statute of limitations did not apply to actions founded on statutes or other records or specialties. This ruling was held to be erroneous, the court saying (p. 12, L. ed. p. 235, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 23):

"It is an action on the case upon an implied assumpsit arising out of the defendant's breach of a duty imposed by statute, and the required performance of that duty by the plaintiff in consequence. This raised an implied obligation on the part of the defendant to reimburse and pay to the plaintiff the moneys expended in that behalf. The action is founded on this implied obligation, and not on the statute, and is really an action of assumpsit. The fact that the duty which the defendant failed to perform was a statutory one does not make the action one upon the statute. The action is clearly one of those described in the statute of limitations."

To avoid the controlling effect of these rulings upon this case, on the theory that, by virtue of the statutes which were considered in Carrol v. Green, and the Metropolitan Railroad Case, the right to recover was direct and immediate, whilst in the case at bar, in consequence of provisions of the national banking act, the right to recover is secondary and contingent, is, in effect, in my opinion, to overrule the cases in this court determining that the liability of a stockholder in a national bank is contractual. This becomes apparent when the ground of the alleged distinction is considered. That ground is this, that, as the national banking act empowers the Comptroller to determine the necessity for an assessment on the stockholders of national banks, and to make a call for such assessment, thereby the obligation of the stockholder becomes secondary and contingent, and hence statutory, and not contractual.

[169]*To me it seems that this interpretation, whilst overruling the previous cases also originally considered, gives to the national banking act an erroneous construction. The mere fact that the act gives to the Comptroller the power of making a call on stockholders for the purpose of enforcing their contract liability, in my judgment, lends no support to the proposition that the ministerial duty created to better enforce the contract must be considered as destroying the contract itself. The consequences which must arise from the new construction now placed upon the national banking act, it seems to me, will be of the most serious nature; and being unable to agree with such construction, I cannot concur in the opinion and judgment of the court.

I am authorized to say that Mr. Justice Brown and Mr. Justice McKenna join this dissent.

HENRY DALLEMAGNE, Consul General of the Republic of France, Appt.,

v.

JEAN FRANÇOIS MOISAN.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 169-178.)

Constitutional law—validity of arrest by state officer under Federal treaty—due process of law—treaties—arrest of insubordinate seamen on foreign vessel—habeas corpus—right to discharge for unauthorized arrest—time-limit of imprisonment.

1. A state police officer is not forbidden to make an arrest on the requisition of a consul of a foreign nation, charging a seaman on a vessel of that nation with insubordination, conformably to a treaty provision, because of the guaranty of the state Constitution against the deprivation of personal liberty without due process of law.

2. Only a Federal marshal can make an arrest on the requisition of a French consul, charging a seaman on a French vessel with insubordination, conformably to art. 8 of the treaty with France of August 12, 1853 (10 Stat. at L. 992, 996), since this, being the mode of arrest specified by the act of Congress of June 11, 1864 (13 Stat. at L. 121, chap. 116), enacted to provide for the execution of treaties respecting consular jurisdiction over the crews of foreign vessels in the waters and ports of the United States, and re-enacted in substance in U. S. Rev. Stat. §§ 4079-4081 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2766), must be regarded as the only means proper to be adopted for this purpose.
3. An unauthorized arrest by a state official on a requisition of a French consul, charging a seaman on a French vessel with insubordination, conformably to art. 8 of the treaty with France of August 12, 1853 (10 Stat. at L. 992, 996), does not entitle the seaman to his discharge on habeas corpus when brought before a Federal district court, since the objection to the irregularity of the arrest is obviated by the action of that court in examining into the case under the authority conferred upon it by the act of June 11, 1864 (13 Stat. at L. 121, chap. 116), carried forward in substance as U. S. Rev. Stat. §§ 4079-4081 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2766), enacted to provide for the execution of treaties respecting consular jurisdiction over the crews of foreign vessels in the waters and ports of the United States.
4. The imprisonment of an insubordinate seaman on a French vessel, pursuant to art. 8 of the treaty with France of August 12, 1853 (10 Stat. at L. 992, 996), providing that such persons may be arrested on the written requisition of the consul, "supported by an official extract from the register of the ship or the list of the crew, and shall be held, during the whole time of their stay in the port, at the disposal of the consuls," need not end with the departure of the vessel from the port at which the seaman was taken from the vessel, but may last until the expiration of the two months, which is the limit prescribed by the act of June 11, 1864 (13 Stat. at L. 121, chap. 116), carried forward in substance as U. S. Rev. Stat. §§ 4079-4081 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2766), enacted to provide for the execution of treaties respecting consular jurisdiction over the crews of foreign vessels in the waters and ports of the United States.

[No. 104.]

Submitted December 15, 1904. Decided
March 13, 1905.

APPEAL from the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of California, to review a discharge, on habeas corpus, of an insubordinate seaman on a French vessel, arrested on the requisition of the French consul. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

Statement by Mr. Justice Peckham:

This is an appeal on the part of the consul general of the Republic of France from the judgment of the district court of the United States for the northern district of California, discharging the defendant Moisan from imprisonment.

The proceeding arises on habeas corpus, to inquire into the validity of the detention of defendant in the city prison of San Francisco, in the state of California. His application for the writ was addressed to the district court of the United States for the northern district of California, and it showed that he was a citizen of France, and was imprisoned by virtue of a requisition in writing, signed by the French consul general residing in San Francisco, and addressed to the chief of police of San Francisco, California, requiring his arrest as one of the crew of the French ship Jacques, then in that port, on account of his insubordinate conduct as one of such crew. (The requisition contained all the averments of fact which would warrant the arrest of the petitioner under the provisions of the treaty of 1853 between the United States and France.) The petitioner also averred that, at the time of the making of his application for the writ, the ship was not in the port of San Francisco, but had departed therefrom some time before. The petitioner was arrested by the chief of police, under such requisition, on the 1st day of May, 1903, and since that time had been confined in the city prison of San Francisco. He asserted that his imprisonment was illegal, because the facts set forth did not confer jurisdiction upon the consul or the chief of police, or either of them, to restrain complainant from his liberty, or to imprison him.

[171] *The petition was dated the 26th day of May, 1903, and the writ was issued, returnable before the district court on the 28th day of May, 1903. The chief of police produced the body of the defendant, pursuant to the command of the writ, and justified the imprisonment, under the requisition referred to.

The district court, after hearing counsel, made an order discharging the defendant from arrest, on the ground that it appeared to the court that the bark Jacques, of the crew of which the defendant was a member, had departed from the port of San Francisco, and was no longer in that port. It was further ordered that the execution of the order should be stayed for the term of one day. Immediately thereon the consul general filed with the district court his petition for appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States from the judgment discharging the defendant from imprisonment, which appeal was duly allowed, and thereupon the petitioner was admitted to bail by the district court.

Messrs. Walter V. R. Berry and Benjamin S. Minor submitted the cause for appellant:

The language of the treaty is so plain and unambiguous that there is no room for interpretation or construction.

17 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 4, Interpretation and Construction; 28 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, pp. 488, 489; 2 Phillimore, International Law, § 70; 1 Halleck, International Law, p. 297, chap. 8, § 39; 2 Vattel, Le Droit des Gens, § 263; Calvo, Droit International, § 1650; Bate Refrigerating Co. v. Sulzberger, 157 U. S. 1, 39 L. ed. 601, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 508; 26 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 598, Statutes; Tucker v. Alexandroff, 183 U. S. 424, 437, 46 L. ed. 264, 270, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 195.

A treaty should be carried out in a spirit of uberrima fides, and construed so as to give effect to the object designed.

Re Ross (Ross v. McIntyre) 140 U. S. 453, 475, 35 L. ed. 581, 589, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 897.

The court should find an interpretation, if it can be done, which will involve no violation of the pledged faith of the government of the United States to the government of another country, and should give that interpretation without hesitation.

Ropes v. Clinch, 8 Blatchf. 304, Fed. Cas. No. 12,041.

Mr. William Denman submitted the cause for appellee:

Congress could not impose a tax on the salary of a judicial officer of the state.

The Collector v. Day (Buffington v. Day) 11 Wall. 113, 20 L. ed. 122.

In an attempt by a state to tax the salary of a Federal officer the converse was held to be true.

Dobbins v. Erie County, 16 Pet. 435, 10 L. ed. 1022.

Any instrumentality employed for carrying on the operation of state government is beyond the reach of Federal interference.

United States v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 17 Wall. 329, 21 L. ed. 600; Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 157 U. S. 583, 39 L. ed. 820, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673.

The same principle of the inviolability of the machinery of a state from Federal interference has been laid down where national stamp duties were attempted to be imposed upon the process of state courts.

Warren v. Paul, 22 Ind. 279; Jones v. Keep, 19 Wis. 390; Fifield v. Close, 15 Mich. 505; Smith v. Short, 40 Ala. 385.

The state official cannot be granted a function the exercise of which is forbidden by the laws of his state.

Prigg v. Pennsylvania, 16 Pet. 539, 10 L. ed. 1060; Robertson v. Baldwin, 165 U. S. 275, 41 L. ed. 715, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 326.

A Federal treaty is of no higher sanction than Federal legislation.

Chae Chan Ping v. United States, 130 U. S. 600, 32 L. ed. 1073, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 623; Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U. S. 698, 37 L. ed. 905, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1016.

A state cannot enforce the criminal laws of a foreign government.

Huntington v. Attrill, 146 U. S. 657, 36 L. ed. 1123, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224.

Extradition as a part of the criminal procedure of a foreign nation is no exception to the general rule.

Holmes v. Jennison, 14 Pet. 540, 10 L. ed. 579; Ex parte Holmes, 12 Vt. 631; People ex rel. Barlow v. Curtis, 50 N. Y. 321, 10 Am. Rep. 483.

Mr. Justice Peckham, after making the foregoing statement of the facts, delivered the opinion of the court:

This case involves the construction of certain language in the 8th article of the consular convention between the United States and France, concluded on the 23d day of February, 1853, and proclaimed by the President of the United States on the 12th day of August, 1853, the whole convention being still in full force and effect. 10 Stat. at L. 992, 996. The article is reproduced in the margin.†

The first objection made by the defendant is to the validity of the requisition of the consul general, because it was directed to the chief of police of San Francisco, he being an officer of the state, as distinguished from a Federal officer, the defendant contending that a Federal treaty cannot impose on a state officer, as such, a function [174] violating the Constitution of the *state which he represents in his official character. It has long been held that power may be conferred upon a state officer, as such, to execute a duty imposed under an act of Congress, and the officer may execute the same, unless its execution is prohibited by the Constitution or legislation of the state. Prigg v. Pennsylvania, 16 Pet. 539, 622, 10 L. ed. 1060, 1091; Robertson v. Baldwin, 165 U. S. 275, 41 L. ed. 715, 17 Sup. Ct.

Rep. 326. As to the objection that there was any statute, or any constitutional provision of the state, prohibiting the execution of the power conferred by the treaty upon the state officer, we think it unfounded. We find nothing in the Constitution or in the statutes of California which forbids or would prevent the execution of the power by a state officer, in case he were willing to execute it. The provisions in the Constitution of the state, cited by counsel for defendant, relate, in substance, only to the general proposition that no person should be deprived of his liberty without due process of law. The execution of a treaty between the United States and a foreign government, such as the one in question, would not violate any provision of the California Constitution; the imprisonment is not pursuant to a conviction of crime, but is simply a temporary detention of a sailor, whose contract of service is an exceptional one (Robertson v. Baldwin, 165 U. S. 275, 41 L. ed. 715, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 326), for the purpose of securing his person during the time, and under the circumstances, provided for in the treaty, as concerning the internal order and discipline of the vessel. The murder on a foreign vessel, while in one of the ports of this country, of one of the crew of such vessel by another member of that crew, has been held not to come within the terms of a somewhat similar treaty with Belgium, because the crime charged concerned more than the internal order or discipline of the foreign vessel. Wildenhus's Case (Mali v. Keeper of Common Jail), 120 U. S. 1, 30 L. ed. 565, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 385.

The chief of police voluntarily performed the request of the consul as contained in the written requisition, and the arrest was, therefore, not illegal so far as this ground is concerned.

There is another difficulty, however, and that is founded upon the provisions of the statutes of the United States. By *the act [175] of Congress, approved June 11, 1864 (13 Stat. at L. 121, chap. 116), entitled "An Act to Provide for the Execution of Treaties between the United States and Foreign Nations, Respecting Consular Jurisdiction over the Crews of Vessels of Such Foreign Na-

†Article VIII. The respective consuls general, consuls, vice consuls, or consular agents, shall have exclusive charge of the internal order of the merchant vessel of their nation, and shall alone take cognizance of differences which may arise, either at sea or in port, between the captain, officers, and crew, without exception, particularly in reference to the adjustment of wages and the execution of contracts. The local authorities shall not, on any pretext, interfere in these differences, but shall lend forcible aid to the consuls when they may ask it, to arrest and imprison all persons composing the crew whom they may deem it necessary to confine. Those persons shall be arrested at the sole request of the consuls, addressed in writing to the local authority, and supported by an official extract from the register of the ship or the list of the crew, and shall be held, during the whole time of their stay in the port, at the disposal of the consuls. Their release shall be granted at the mere request of the consuls, made in writing. The expenses of the arrest and detention of those persons shall be paid by the consuls.
197 U. S.

tions in the Waters and Ports of the United States," full provision was made for the execution of such treaties. It was therein provided (§ 2) that application for the arrest might be made "to any court of record of the United States, or any judge thereof, or to any commissioner appointed under the laws of the United States." The act then provided for the issuing of a warrant for the arrest of the individual complained of, directed to the marshal of the United States, and requiring him to arrest the individual, and bring him before the court or person issuing the warrant for examination; and if, on such examination, it appeared that the matter complained of concerned only the internal order or discipline of the foreign ship, the court should then issue a warrant committing such person to prison, etc. It was further provided that no person should be detained more than two months after his arrest, but at the end of that time he should be allowed to depart, and should not again be arrested for the same cause. The act was carried forward, in substance, into the Revised Statutes of the United States, as §§ 4079, 4080, 4081. See also U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2766. This statute, having been passed by the United States for the purpose of executing the treaties it had entered into with foreign governments, must be regarded as the only means proper to be adopted for that purpose. Consequently, the requisition of the consul general should have been presented to the district court or judge, etc., pursuant to the act of Congress, and the arrest should have been made by the marshal, as therein provided for. Therefore the arrest of the seaman by the chief of police was unauthorized. When, however, the defendant was brought before the district court of the United States upon the writ of habeas corpus, that court being mentioned in the statute as one of the authorities to issue war-

[176]rants for the arrest of the *individual complained of, and having power under the statute to examine into the question, and to commit the person thus arrested to prison, according to the provisions of the act, it would have been the duty of the court, under such circumstances, upon the production of the defendant under the writ, and upon the request of the consul, to have made an examination, and to have committed the defendant to prison if he were found to come under the terms of the treaty. It was, therefore, but a formal objection to the regularity of the arrest, which would have been obviated by the action of the court in examining into the case, and the defendant would not have been entitled to discharge merely because the person executing the warrant was not authorized so to do.

The important question remains as to the true construction of the 8th article of the treaty, with reference to the limitation of the imprisonment of the person coming within its terms. The district court has held that the imprisonment must end with the departure of the vessel from the port at which the seaman was taken from the vessel. This we regard as an erroneous construction of the terms of the article.

The provisions of that article seem to us plain, and they refer to the imprisonment of the seaman and his detention during the time of his stay in port, and the language does not refer, in that respect, to the stay of the ship in port. The treaty provides that the local authorities shall lend forcible aid to the consuls when they may ask for the arrest and imprisonment of persons composing the crew, whom they may deem it necessary to confine. The language has no reference whatever to the ship, and they (the persons arrested) are held during their stay in the port "at the disposal of the consul." Surely the ship is not held at the disposal of the consul. It is the persons arrested who are held, and they are to be released at the mere request of the consul, made in writing, and the expenses of the arrest and detention of the persons arrested are to be paid by the consul. From the language of the treaty the departure of the ship from the port need have no effect *whatever upon the imprisonment of the [177] persons arrested. The statute (Rev. Stat. § 4081, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2767) provides that the imprisonment shall in no case last longer than two months, and at the end of that time the person arrested is to be set at liberty, and shall not again be arrested for the same cause. The statute makes no reference to the stay of the vessel in port, and the legislative construction of the treaty is that the imprisonment is not limited by the departure of the ship. Therefore the statute provides that such imprisonment shall not last, in any event, longer than two months. That term might end while the vessel was still in port. This construction not only carries out the plain language of the treaty, but, it seems to us, it is its reasonable interpretation. A vessel may arrive in port with a mutinous sailor, whose arrest is asked for under the treaty. When imprisoned pursuant to the terms of the treaty, he ought not to be discharged without the request of the consul while within the limit of the term of imprisonment provided by the statute, simply because the vessel from which he was taken has left the port. If that were so, the result would be either that the sailor would be discharged as soon as the ship left the port, or, in order to prevent such discharge, he would be taken on board the ship again, and probably be placed in irons. The ship might then continue a voyage which would not bring it back to France for months. During this time the sailor might be kept in irons and in close confinement on board ship, or else the discipline and safety of the ship might be placed in peril. By the other construction, although the ship had left the port without the mutinous sailor, he would not be entitled to his discharge from imprisonment within the two months provided for by the statute, and this would give an opportunity to the consul to send the sailor back to France, at the earliest opportunity, and at the expense of the French government, by a vessel which was going directly to that country.

The district court erred in discharging the defendant before the expiration of the [178] two months provided for in the act of *Congress, and against the protest of the French consul. Less than one of the two months of imprisonment permitted by the statute had expired when the defendant was discharged. The order discharging him must be reversed, and the defendant remanded to imprisonment in a prison where prisoners under sentence of a court of the United States may be lawfully committed (Rev. Stat. § 4081), subject to the jurisdiction of the French consular authority of the port of San Francisco; but such imprisonment must not exceed, when taken with the former imprisonment of the defendant, the term of two months in the aggregate.

Reversed, and remanded for further proceedings consistent with this opinion.

Mr. Justice Harlan dissented.

CITY OF DAWSON, Appt.,
v.

COLUMBIA AVENUE SAVING FUND, SAFE DEPOSIT, TITLE, & TRUST COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 178-182.)

Jurisdiction of Federal courts—diversity of citizenship—suits under Federal Constitution.

1. A Federal circuit court has no jurisdic-

NOTE.—As to diverse citizenship as ground of Federal jurisdiction—see Shipp v. Williams, 10 C. C. A. 247, and note; Mason v. Dufflagham, 27 C. C. A. 296, and note; Seddon v. Virginia T. & C. Steel & I. Co. 1 L. R. A. 108, and note; Myers v. Murray, N. & Co. 11 L. R. A. 216, and note. And see note to Roberts v. Lewis, 36 L. ed. U. S. 579.

197 U. S. U. S., Book 49.

tion, on the ground of diversity of citizenship, of a suit brought against a municipality by the mortgagee of a waterworks company, to enforce the municipality's contract with that company, where there is no diversity of citizenship between the municipality and the waterworks company, and the interests of the latter and its mortgagee are not antagonistic, it obviously being made a defendant instead of plaintiff solely for the purpose of reopening, in the Federal courts, a controversy which had been decided against the waterworks company in the state court.

2. The formal repudiation by a municipality of its contract with a waterworks company, and its refusal to perform its obligations under it, cannot give rise to a suit under the Federal Constitution, of which a Federal circuit court can take jurisdiction without reference to the citizenship of the parties.

[No. 154.]

Argued January 26, 27, 1905. Decided March 6, 1905.

A PPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Georgia, to review a decree in favor of complainant, in a suit brought against a municipality by the mortgagee of a waterworks company, to enforce a contract between that company and the municipality. Reversed, and remanded with instructions to dismiss the bill for want of jurisdiction.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Charles A. Douglass and Dupont Guerry argued the cause, and, with Mr. Homer Guerry, filed a brief for appellant:

If the water company is the real party, and complainant's interest nominal, the bill should have been dismissed.

Smith v. Kernochen, 7 How. 216, 12 L. ed. 673.

A mortgage given by a water company covering rentals accruing under a contract with a city cannot clothe the mortgagee with the right to maintain an action against the city in a Federal court, where the mortgagor and the city are both corporations of the same state.

American Waterworks & G. Co. v. Home Water Co. 115 Fed. 171; New York Guaranty & Indemnity Co. v. Memphis Water Co. 107 U. S. 205, 27 L. ed. 484, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 279; Eau Claire v. Payson, 46 C. C. A. 466, 107 Fed. 552, 48 C. C. A. 608, 109 Fed. 676.

It was the duty of the court below to have ascertained the matter in controversy, and to have arranged the parties according to interest; and, when so arranged, if it appeared that citizens of the same state were parties on both sides of the controversy, the court had no jurisdiction.

As to Federal question as conferring jurisdiction on United States courts—see notes to Montana Ore-Purchasing Co. v. Boston & M. Consol. Copper & S. Min. Co. 35 C. C. A. 7; and Bailey v. Mosher, 11 C. C. A. 308; and Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884.

Pacific R. Co. v. Ketchum, 101 U. S. 298, 25 L. ed. 936; Barney v. Latham, 103 U. S. 211, 26 L. ed. 516; Removal Cases (Meyer v. Delaware R. Constr. Co.) 100 U. S. 457, 25 L. ed. 593; Walsh v. Memphis, C. & N. W. R. Co. 2 McCrary, 156, 6 Fed. 797; Saginaw Gaslight Co. v. Saginaw, 28 Fed. 529; Covert v. Waldron, 33 Fed. 312; Pittsburgh, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 10 C. C. A. 20, 22 U. S. App. 359, 61 Fed. 709; Tug River Coal & Salt Co. v. Brigel, 14 C. C. A. 577, 31 U. S. App. 665, 67 Fed. 629; Oberlin College v. Blair, 70 Fed. 414; First Nat. Bank v. Radford Trust Co. 26 C. C. A. 1, 47 U. S. App. 692, 80 Fed. 572.

A breach is not the impairment of the binding force of a valid contract within the inhibition of the Federal Constitution, and the remedy therefor and for refusal to pay accrued rentals would be a suit at law.

Texas & P. R. Co. v. Marshall, 136 U. S. 393, 34 L. ed. 385, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 846; Rutland Marble Co. v. Ripley, 10 Wall. 358, 19 L. ed. 961; St. Paul Gaslight Co. v. St. Paul, 181 U. S. 142, 45 L. ed. 788, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 575; Raton Waterworks Co. v. Raton, 174 U. S. 360, 43 L. ed. 1005, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 719; Lehigh Water Co. v. Easton, 121 U. S. 392, 30 L. ed. 1060, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 916; Fergus Falls v. Fergus Falls Water Co. 19 C. C. A. 212, 36 U. S. App. 480, 72 Fed. 873.

A right of action against a city to recover water rentals claimed to be due under a contract is at law, and a Federal court of equity is without jurisdiction to enforce the payment of such rentals, even where it has acquired jurisdiction to determine other matters in controversy between the parties.

American Waterworks & G. Co. v. Home Water Co. 115 Fed. 172.

The general rule that a court of equity, having once obtained jurisdiction of a cause, should retain it, does not apply in causes of this kind in the Federal courts.

Ibid.

The Constitution used the word "obligation" advisedly (Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. 197, 4 L. ed. 549; Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 269, 6 L. ed. 625), and mere annulments or breaches of contract were not within its purview.

A contract is the meeting of the minds, but the obligation resulting therefrom does not depend upon the will of the parties, but upon the law and its remedies as they existed when the contract was entered into.

Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 317, 6 L.

ed. 641; Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. 197, 4 L. ed. 549.

The Constitution intended to protect the obligation as it existed and was recognized by the laws in force when the contract was made.

Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 327, 6 L. ed. 645; McCraeken v. Hayward, 2 How. 612, 11 L. ed. 399; Bronson v. Kinzie, 1 How. 317, 11 L. ed. 145.

The obligation, then, protected by the Constitution, is the binding force of any contract as recognized and sustained by the law when incurred, since it is the law and its remedies which obligate a person to perform his agreement.

McCraeken v. Hayward, 2 How. 612, 11 L. ed. 399; Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 302, 6 L. ed. 636; Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. 403.

The means for the enforcement of the obligations of the contract, viz., the laws and remedies which existed when the contract was made, constitute the breach of the contract (Edwards v. Kearzey, 96 U. S. 600, 24 L. ed. 796), and they have remained unchanged.

So long as the state law has not destroyed or diminished the legal duty to fulfil the obligation of a contract it cannot be said that there has been any state impairment of such obligation, and the issues raised by complainant do not arise under the Constitution (Fergus Falls v. Fergus Falls Water Co. 19 C. C. A. 212, 36 U. S. App. 480, 72 Fed. 873), and to entertain jurisdiction would constitute an encroachment upon the province and prerogatives of the state courts.

St. Paul Gaslight Co. v. St. Paul, 181 U. S. 142, 45 L. ed. 788, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 575; Lehigh Water Co. v. Easton, 121 U. S. 392, 30 L. ed. 1060, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 916.

Mr. Olin J. Wimberly argued the cause, and, with Mr. John I. Hall, filed a brief for appellee:

There is no improper joinder or arrangement of parties, and jurisdiction may properly be invoked on the ground of diversity of citizenship.

Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 38 L. ed. 1014, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Seymour v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 128 Fed. 907; Bowdoin College v. Merritt, 63 Fed. 213; Belding v. Gaines, 37 Fed. 817; Omaha Hotel Co. v. Wade, 97 U. S. 13, 24 L. ed. 917; Farmers' Loan & T. Co. v. Sioux Falls, 131 Fed. 890.

If the present suit were an action at law, brought by the trustee for the recovery of the hydrant rentals, we think, even in that case, that the fact that in the waterworks contract the city undertakes and agrees to pay the hydrant rentals either to the waterworks company or to the trustee for bondholders, as alternative payees, would give the trustee the right to sue in a Federal court.

Seymour v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 128 Fed. 907.

The city being one of the properly constituted instrumentalities of the state, the ordinances of the municipality are the acts of the state, and their unconstitutionality is the unconstitutionality of a state law, within the meaning of the Constitution and acts of Congress touching the jurisdiction of the Federal courts.

Walla Walla v. Walla Walla Water Co. 172 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 341, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; Davis & F. Mfg. Co. v. Los Angeles, 189 U. S. 207, 47 L. ed. 778, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 498; St. Paul Gaslight Co. v. St. Paul, 181 U. S. 142, 45 L. ed. 788, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 575.

The jurisdiction of the circuit court is established when it is shown that the company had, or claimed to have, a contract with a state or municipality which the latter had attempted to impair; and so long as the claim was apparently made in good faith, and is not frivolous, the case can be heard and decided on the merits.

Pacific Electric R. Co. v. Los Angeles, 194 U. S. 112, 48 L. ed. 896, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 586; City R. Co. v. Citizens' Street R. Co. 166 U. S. 557, 41 L. ed. 1114, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 653; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Adams, 180 U. S. 28, 45 L. ed. 410, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 251.

The ordinances impair the obligation of the contract.

Vicksburg Waterworks Co. v. Vicksburg, 185 U. S. 68, 46 L. ed. 809, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585; Walla Walla v. Walla Walla Water Co. 172 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 341, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; City R. Co. v. Citizens' Street R. Co. 166 U. S. 557, 41 L. ed. 1114, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 653.

It is for the protection and furtherance of the interest of the complainant as trustee that this bill is filed, and the fact that it may result in a benefit to the water company is in no sense a reason why the company should not be made a party defendant.

Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 38 L. ed. 1014, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047.

The United States courts would have jurisdiction of a suit brought by the waterworks company seeking the relief that is sought in the original and amended bill in this case to the extent of enjoining the city of Dawson from breaking its contract, for a Federal question is raised by the pleadings, and the pleadings are supported by the evidence.

Defiance Water Co. v. Defiance, 90 Fed. 753; Walla Walla v. Walla Walla Water Co. 197 U. S.

172 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 341, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77.

The action of the mayor and council of the city of Dawson in proceeding by an election for the issue of water bonds to build its own waterworks, and notice to the water company that it would not carry out the contract with the water company, is a distinct effort to revoke the same and erect waterworks of its own; thus bringing the contract in this case squarely in line with the contract between the city of Walla Walla and the Walla Walla Waterworks Company.

Walla Walla v. Walla Walla Water Co. 172 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 341, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a bill in equity, brought in the circuit court by the appellee, the trust company, as mortgagee of the Dawson Waterworks Company, to restrain the city of Dawson from taking measures to build a new set of waterworks, and to compel it specifically to perform a contract made with the waterworks company in 1890, to pay that company or its mortgagee a certain sum for the use of its water for twenty years. The trust company is a Pennsylvania corporation, and the only ground of jurisdiction for the bill as originally filed was diversity of citizenship. The bill, after stating the contract, set up a formal repudiation of the same by the city on June 27, 1894, refusals to pay for the water from that time, and attempts to collect taxes which, by the contract, were to be satisfied by the furnishing of water, but alleged a continued use of the water by the city. It further stated the calling of an election for December 12, 1894, to see if the city should issue bonds to erect or buy waterworks or electric lights, a vote in favor of the issue, an issue of $10,000 for the erection of an electric-light plant, and a present intent to sell the residue for the purpose of erecting new waterworks. It also alleged that the waterworks company, recognizing the plaintiff's right to be paid the rentals for the water, in the events which had happened, which had made the waterworks *company unable to pay the interest on the[180] mortgage, had yielded to the plaintiff's demand that it should collect the rentals, and that the plaintiff had notified the city, and had made demand, but that the city refused to pay. Other details are immaterial. The waterworks company was made a party defendant, and was served with process. An answer was served, although not filed, by the defendants other than the waterworks company, setting up, among other things, that the waterworks company was the real plaintiff, and was made defendant solely to avoid the effect of a decision by the supreme court of the state in a suit by the waterworks company against the city, to the effect that the contract relied on was void. 106 Ga. 696, 32 S. E. 907. The answer, on this ground, denied the jurisdiction of the court. After service of this answer the bill was amended so as to allege that the acts of the city impaired the obligation of its contract, and deprived the plaintiff of its property without due process of law, contrary to the Constitution of the United States. A prayer was added, also, that the waterworks company be decreed to perform its contract with the city, that thereby the rights of bondholders might be saved. The further proceedings do not need mention. They ended in a decree in accordance with the prayer, and the city appealed to this court. Davis & F. Mfg. Co. v. Los Angeles, 189 U. S. 207, 216, 47 L. ed. 778, 780, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 498.

We are of opinion that the bill should have been dismissed for want of jurisdiction. The waterworks company is admitted to have been a necessary party, and it, like the defendant city, was a Georgia corporation. It was made a defendant, but the court will look beyond the pleadings, and arrange the parties according to their sides in the dispute. When that is done, it is obvious that the waterworks company is on the plaintiff's side, and was made a defendant solely for the purpose of reopening, in the United States court, a controversy which had been decided against it in the courts of the state. There was a pretense of asking relief against it, as we have stated, but no foundation for the prayer was laid in the [181] allegations of the bill. On the contrary, it appears from those allegations that the waterworks company insisted on its contract with the city, and did everything in its power to carry the contract out. It also recognized the plaintiff's right to receive the rentals, and yielded to its demand. No difference or collision of interest or action is alleged or even suggested. If we assume that the plaintiff is more than an assignee of the city's contract to pay (which we do not intimate), still, when the arrangement of the parties is merely a contrivance between friends for the purpose of founding a jurisdiction which otherwise would not exist, the device cannot be allowed to succeed. See Removal Cases (Meyer v. Delaware R. Constr. Co.), 100 U. S. 457, 469, 25 L. ed. 593, 598; Hawes v. Oakland (Hawes v. Contra Costa Water Co.), 104 U. S. 450, 453, 26 L. ed. 827, 829; Detroit v. Dean, 106 U. S. 537, 541, 27 L. ed. 300, 302, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 560; Doctor v. Harrington, 196

U. S. 579, ante, 606, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 355. Act March 3, 1875 (18 Stat. at L. 472, chap. 137, § 5, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 508).

The attempt, by an afterthought, to give jurisdiction by setting up constitutional rights, must fail also. The bill presents a naked case of breach of contract. The first step of the city was to repudiate the contract and to refuse to pay. Whatever it may have done subsequently, its wrong, if contrary to the decision of the supreme court of the state, there was a wrong, was complete then. The repudiation and refusal were kept up until the bill was filed, and the other acts were subsequent, subordinate to, and in aid of, them. The mere fact that the city was a municipal corporation does not give to its refusal the character of a law impairing the obligation of contracts, or deprive a citizen of property without due process of law. That point was decided in St. Paul Gaslight Co. v. St. Paul, 181 U. S. 142, 150, 45 L. ed. 788, 792, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 575.

Undoubtedly the decisions on the two sides of the lines are very near to each other. But the case at bar is governed by the one which we have cited, and not by Walla Walla v. Walla Walla Water Co. 172 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 341, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77, which is cited and distinguished in St. Paul Gaslight Co. v. St. Paul. In Vicksburg Waterworks Co. v. Vicksburg, 185 U. S. 65, 46 L. ed. 808, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585, the city had made a contract with the waterworks company, and afterwards a law was passed [182] authorizing the city to build new works. The city, acting under this law, denied liability, and took steps to build the works, whereupon the waterworks company filed its bill, alleging the law to be unconstitutional. The bill was held to present a case under the Constitution. In the case before us there was no legislation subsequent to the contract, and it is not even shown that there is color of previous legislation for the city's acts. Those acts are alleged to be unlawful, and the allegation would be maintained by showing that they were not warranted by the laws of the state. See Hamilton Gaslight & Coke Co. v. Hamilton, 146 U. S. 258, 266, 36 L. ed. 963, 967, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; Lehigh Water Co. v. Easton, 121 U. S. 388, 392, 30 L. ed. 1059, 1060, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 916. We repeat that something more than a mere refusal of a municipal corporation to perform its contract is necessary to make a law impairing the obligation of contracts, or otherwise to give rise to a suit under the Constitution of the United States. The decree of the circuit court must be reversed, and the cause remanded with instructions to dismiss the bill. Newburyport Water Co. v. Newburyport, 193 U. S. 561, 576, 48 L. ed. 795, 799, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 553.

Decree reversed.

Mr. Justice Brewer and Mr. Justice McKenna dissented.

Mr. Justice White, not having been present at the argument, took no part in the decision.

[183] *WINFIELD S. GREGG, Petitioner,

METROPOLITAN TRUST COMPANY et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 183-197.)

Railroad mortgages—preference for supplies over lien of mortgage.

A claim for the ties necessary to the preservation of a railroad, furnished within six months of the appointment of a receiver, is not, in the absence of any special circumstances other than the receiver's use of those ties on hand at the time of his appointment, in the maintenance of the railroad as a going concern, entitled to preference over a lien expressly created by a mortgage of the railroad property, recorded before the contract under which the ties were furnished was made.

[No. 141.]

Argued January 20, 23, 1905. Decided March 6, 1905.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit to review a decree affirming a decree of the Circuit Court for the Southern District of Ohio, denying preference of a claim for supplies over the lien of a railroad mortgage. Affirmed.

See same case below, 59 C. C. A. 637, 124 Fed. 721.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Harlan Cleveland argued the cause and filed a brief for petitioner:

The diversion of current earnings for the benefit of first-mortgage bondholders was not a condition precedent to the payment of Gregg as a supply claimant out of the proceeds of the sale of the mortgaged property.

Central Trust Co. v. East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. 26 C. C. A. 30, 47 U. S. App. 663, 80 Fed. 624; New England R. Co. v. Carnegie Steel Co. 21 C. C. A. 219, 33 U. S. App. 491, 75 Fed. 54; Wood v. New York & N. E.

NOTE.—On priority of claims against a receiver over the lien of a railroad mortgage—see notes to Manchester Locomotive Works v. Truesdale, 9 L. R. A. 140; Decker v. Gardner, 11 L. R. A. 480.

197 U. S.

R. Co. 70 Fed. 741; Finance Co. v. Charleston, C. & C. R. Co. 10 C. C. A. 323, 8 U. S. App. 547, 62 Fed. 205; St. Louis Trust Co. v. Riley, 30 L. R. A. 456, 16 C. C. A. 610, 36 U. S. App. 100, 70 Fed. 32; Central Trust Co. v. Clark, 26 C. C. A. 397, 49 U. S. App. 453, 81 Fed. 269; New York Guaranty & Indemnity Co. v. Tacoma R. & Motor Co. 27 C. C. A. 550, 48 U. S. App. 668, 83 Fed. 365; Miltenberger v. Logansport, C. & S. W. R. Co. 106 U. S. 286, 27 L. ed. 117, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 140; Union Trust Co. v. Illinois Midland R. Co. 117 U. S. 434, 29 L. ed. 963, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 809.

The only cases in this court in which a charge against the corpus of the property has been denied are the following:

Fosdick v. Schall, 99 U. S. 235, 25 L. ed. 339; Huidekoper v. Hinckley Locomotive Works, 99 U. S. 258, 25 L. ed. 344; Penn. v. Calhoun, 121 U. S. 251, 30 L. ed. 915, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 906; St. Louis, A. & T. H. R. Co. v. Cleveland, C. C. & I. R. Co. 125 U. S. 658, 31 L. ed. 832, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1011; Kneeland v. American Loan & T. Co. 136 U. S. 89, 34 L. ed. 379, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 950; Morgan's L. & T. R. & S. S. Co. v. Texas C. R. Co. 137 U. S. 171, 34 L. ed. 625, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 61; Louisville, E. & St. L. R. Co. v. Wilson, 138 U. S. 501, 34 L. ed. 1023, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 405; Thomas v. Western Car Co. 149 U. S. 95, 37 L. ed. 663, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 824.

None of these cases involved claims for supplies furnished or labor rendered to a railroad company necessary to maintain the railroad from day to day as a going concern.

Equity requires that the claims of the supply claimants should be put upon an equal footing with those of the laborers who have been paid.

New England R. Co. v. Carnegie Steel Co. 21 C. C. A. 219, 33 U. S. App. 491, 75 Fed. 54.

Even had the orders not been originally made directing the payment of the claims at bar, still the court might have subsequently provided for their payment.

Fosdick v. Schall, 99 U. S. 235-253, 25 L. ed. 339-342; Wood v. New York & N. E. R. Co. 70 Fed. 741; Finance Co. v. Charleston, C. & C. R. Co. 10 C. C. A. 323, 8 U. S. App. 547, 62 Fed. 205.

A fortiori, should such an order which has been partly carried out have been enforced by the court below as to all claimants of the same class. The trustee of the bondholders should not be allowed to change its attitude, and switch the proceeds of receivers' certificates to the permanent improvement of the property.

The purchase of the ties by the railroad company at a time when it was, as it knew, hopelessly insolvent, and had no reasonable expectation of paying therefor, and after it had defaulted on the interest due upon its bonds, was a fraudulent purchase which would have entitled Gregg, had the ties not been in the possession of the court, to have retaken them, and which would have entitled and justified the court to order their redelivery to him, or, in default thereof, payment therefor.

Donaldson v. Farwell, 93 U. S. 631, 23 L. ed. 993; Wilmot v. Lyon, 49 Ohio St. 296, 34 N. E. 720; Talcott v. Henderson, 31 Ohio St. 162, 27 Am. Rep. 501; Morrow Shoe Mfg. Co. v. New England Shoe Co. 24 L. R. A. 417, 6 C. C. A. 508, 18 U. S. App. 256, 57 Fed. 693; Davis v. Stewart, 3 McCrary, 174, 8 Fed. 803; Jaffrey v. Brown, 29 Fed. 476.

This court has recognized special equities entirely apart from any question of diversion.

St. Louis, A. & T. H. R. Co. v. Cleveland, C. C. & I. R. Co. 125 U. S. 658, 673, 31 L. ed. 832, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1011; Union Trust Co. v. Souther, 107 U. S. 591, 27 L. ed. 488, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 295; Morgan's L. & T. R. & S. S. Co. v. Texas C. R. Co. 137 U. S. 171, 197, 34 L. ed. 625, 634, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 61.

Mr. Herbert Parsons argued the cause and filed a brief for respondents:

While this court may sometimes have permitted the payment of a current claim out of the proceeds of sale without proof of diversion, those were exceptional instances.

Miltenberger v. Logansport, C. & S. W. R. Co. 106 U. S. 286, 27 L. ed. 117, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 140; Union Trust Co. v. Illinois Midland R. Co. 117 U. S. 434, 29 L. ed. 963, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 809.

In order to entitle such a claim as that of the petitioner to payment, the petitioner must prove that current earnings were diverted for the benefit of mortgage creditors, and that there has been no restoration of the diverted fund.

St. Louis, A. & T. H. R. Co. v. Cleveland, C. C. & I. R. Co. 125 U. S. 673, 31 L. ed. 837, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1011; Kneeland v. American Loan & T. Co. 136 U. S. 97, 34 L. ed. 383, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 950; Southern R. Co. v. Carnegie Steel Co. 176 U. S. 284, 44 L. ed. 470, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 347.

Mr. Lawrence Maxwell, Jr., also argued the cause for respondents.

[186] *Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a petition against a receiver appointed in proceedings for the foreclosure of two railroad mortgages. The petitioner, in pursuance of a contract made on December 1, 1896, with the Columbus, Sandusky, & Hocking Railroad Company, the mortgagor, delivered railroad ties to the value of $4,709.53 in May and on June 1, 2, and 3, 1897. The receiver was appointed on June 1, 1897. After his appointment there was found on hand a part of the above ties, to the value of $3,200, and these ties were used in the maintenance of the railroad as a going concern. The petitioner makes a claim on the body of the fund in the receiver's hands, for these and other necessary supplies furnished within six months, amounting in all to $6,804.49. The claim for the ties, at least, is admitted to have been "a necessary operating expense in keeping and using said railroad, and preserving said property in a fit and safe condition as such." The petitioner waives a special claim against the receiver for $863.39 for the ties received June 2 and 3, but does claim a lien for $3,200, for ties on hand and not returned to him after the receiver's appointment, in case his whole claim is not allowed. The circuit court of appeals affirmed a decree of the circuit court establishing this claim as a six months' claim, but denying the right to go against the body of the fund, whereupon a certiorari was allowed by this court. 48 C. C. A. 318, 109 Fed. 220, 59 C. C. A. 637, 124 Fed. 721.

The case stands as one in which there has been no diversion of income by which the mortgagees have profited, or otherwise, and the main question is the general one, whether, in such a case, a claim for necessary supplies furnished within six months before the receiver was appointed should be charged on the corpus of the fund. There are no special circumstances affecting the claim as a whole, and if it is charged on the corpus it can be only by laying down a general rule that such claims for supplies are entitled to precedence over a lien *ex-[187] pressly created by a mortgage recorded before the contracts for supplies were made. An impression that such a general rule was to be deduced from the decisions of this court led to an evidently unwilling application of it in New England R. Co. v. Carnegie Steel Co. 21 C. C. A. 219, 33 U. S. App. 491, 75 Fed. 54, 58, and perhaps in other cases. But we are of opinion, for reasons that need no further statement (Kneeland v. American Loan & T. Co. 136 U. S. 89, 97, 34 L. ed. 379, 383, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 950), that the general rule is the other way, and has been recognized as being the other way by this court.

The case principally relied on for giving priority to the claim for supplies is Miltenberger v. Logansport, C. & S. W. R. Co. 106 U. S. 286, 27 L. ed. 117, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 140. But while the payment of some pre-existing claims was sanctioned in that case, it was expressly stated that "the payment of such debts stands, prima facie, on a different basis from the payment of claims arising under the receivership." The ground of such allowance as was made was not merely that the supplies were necessary for the preservation of the road, but that the payment was necessary to the business of the road,—a very different proposition. In the later cases the wholly exceptional character of the allowance is observed and marked. Kneeland v. American Loan & T. Co. 136 U. S. 89, 97, 98, 34 L. ed. 379, 383, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 950; Thomas v. Western Car Co. 149 U. S. 95, 110, 111, 37 L. ed. 663, 668, 669, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 824; Virginia & A. Coal Co. v. Central R. & Bkg. Co. 170 U. S. 355, 370, 42 L. ed. 1068, 1073, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 657. In Union Trust Co. v. Illinois Midland R. Co. 117 U. S. 434, 465, 29 L. ed. 963, 973, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 809, labor claims accruing within six months before the appointment of the receiver were allowed without special discussion, but the principles laid down in the Miltenberger Case had been repeated in the judgment of the court, and the allowance was said to be in accordance with them. It would seem from St. Louis, A. & T. H. R. Co. v. Cleveland, C. C. & I. R. Co. 125 U. S. 658, 673, 674, 31 L. ed. 832, 837, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1011, that in both those cases there was a diversion of earnings. But the payment of the employees of the road is more certain to be necessary in order to keep it running than the payment of any other class of previously incurred debts.

Cases like Union Trust Co. v. Souther, 107 U. S. 591, 27 L. ed. 488, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. [188] 295, where *the order appointing the receiver authorized him to pay debts for labor or supplies furnished within six months out of income, stand on the special theory which has been developed with regard to income, and afford no authority for a charge on the body of the fund. Fosdick v. Schall, 99 U. S. 235, 25 L. ed. 339; Burnham v. Bowen, 111 U. S. 776, 28 L. ed. 596, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 675; Morgan's Louisiana & T. R. & S. S. Co. v. Texas C. R. Co. 137 U. S. 171, 34 L. ed. 625, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 61; Virginia & A. Coal Co. v. Central R. & Bkg. Co. 170 U. S. 355, 42 L. ed. 1068, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 657; Southern R. Co. v. Carnegie Steel Co. 176 U. S. 257, 44 L. ed. 458, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 347. It is agreed that the petitioner may have a claim against surplus earnings, if any, in the hands of the receiver, but that question is not before us here.

The order appointing the receiver did not go beyond the distinction which we have mentioned, and gave the petitioner no new or higher right than he had before. After directing him to do certain things, it gave him authority, but did not direct him, to make various payments. It gave him authority, among other things, "to pay the employees, officials, and other persons having claims for wages, services, materials, and supplies due and to become due, and unpaid, growing out of the operation of the railroad of the defendant, including current and unpaid vouchers; to settle accounts incurred in the operation of the railroad of the defendant company; to pay any and all obligations accrued or accruing upon any equipment trust made by the defendant railroad company; and for such purpose, as well as for the purpose of meeting the obligations of the pay rolls," he was authorized, "in his discretion, to borrow such sums of money as may be necessary for such purpose, not exceeding $35,000. But said receiver will pay no claims against the said railroad company which have accrued due more than six months prior to the date of this order." It is questionable whether the purposes for which the $35,000 might be borrowed were other than paying equipment trust debts and pay rolls. But even if any words in the order authorized a charge on the corpus in order to pay claims like that of the petitioner, or a payment of them *except from income,[189] certainly there are none requiring it, or going beyond giving authority to the receiver if, for instance, he thought payments of previous debts necessary to the continued operation of the road. A strict construction of the decree is warranted by the previous decision of the same circuit court of appeals in International Trust Co. v. T. B. Townsend Brick & Contracting Co. 37 C. C. A. 396, 95 Fed. 850.

A few days later, on June 7, 1897, the receiver applied for and received leave to issue certificates up to $200,000, "for the purpose of paying car trusts, maturing and matured, pay rolls, interest on terminal property, traffic balances, taxes, and sundry other obligations created in and about the maintenance and operation of said railroad within six months next preceeding and following the appointment of a receiver herein." By a further decree on July 7, $30,000 of these certificates were applied to payment for land bought by the company, $135,000 to car trust obligations, current pay rolls, necessary repairs, and expenses of operating the road, and $35,000 to the pay rolls for the previous April and May. The petitioner suggested that the latter decree was a diversion of funds in which, by the terms of the order authorizing the certificates, he was entitled to share, and that the payment of the $35,000 for the April and May labor entitles him to come in on principles of equality. It is not necessary to answer this contention at length. The original order gave the petitioner no such rights as he asserts. It would have been a stretch of authority for the receiver, in his discretion, to apply the borrowed money to this debt. At least, he was not bound to do so. The petition on which the original order was made stated that the money was wanted to pay certain obligations, "or so much thereof as may be necessary," embodying the distinction which we have drawn from the cases. We already have intimated that the payment of railroad hands might stand on stronger grounds than the payment for past supplies; and, if the payment was wrong, it would not be righted by making another, less obviously within the scope of the decree.

[190] *We are of opinion, finally, that there is no special equity with regard to the $3,200 worth of ties on hand and used by the receiver after his appointment. It is said that the purchase by the railroad company after it had defaulted, as it had, in the interest of its bonds, was fraudulent, and that the petitioner would have been entitled to take back the ties but for the appointment of the receiver. The answers to the contention again are numerous. It does not appear that the purchase of the ties was fraudulent. Donaldson v. Farwell, 93 U. S. 631, 23 L. ed. 993. It does not appear, and is not likely, that the company bought with the intention not to pay the price. It does not appear that it concealed its insolvency. The default in the interest of the bonds was a public fact. Again, it is a mere speculation whether the petitioner, if he had had the right, would have demanded back the ties. He did not demand them of the receiver. It is quite as likely that, if he had known the whole truth, he would have taken his chances. The thing that he is least likely to have known is the form of the appointment of the receiver, and, therefore, it is probably a fiction that that encouraged him to wait. It should not have encouraged him, because, as we have said, it gave him no rights. The fact that the receiver used the ties is of no importance. They already were the property of the road, and it was his business to use them. The material point is not the time when they were used, but the time when they were acquired.

Decree affirmed.

Mr. Justice McKenna, with whom concur Mr. Justice Harlan and Mr. Justice White, dissenting:

I am unable to concur in the opinion of the court, and the importance of the questions involved justifies an expression of the ground of my dissent.

The controversy arises from a claim, to quote from the circuit court of appeals, "for cross ties essential to the replacement of ties decayed in current operation of the railroad. *A large proportion were on hand [191] when the receiver was appointed, and were used by him in the maintenance of the roadway. They were all purchased within six months before the receivership, and under circumstances indicating an expectation that they would be paid for out of current income. The claim is, in every respect, a highly meritorious one."

This description is supplemented by stipulation of counsel that the claim is for "necessary operating expenses in keeping and using said railroad and preserving said property in a fit and safe condition." The claim is denied, affirming the judgment of the lower court, payment out of the body of the fund in the hands of the receiver; and why? That the decisions of this court may be construed as extending the equity of claims for supplies so far is conceded. It is said: "An impression that such a general rule was to be deduced from the decisions of this court led to an evidently unwilling application of it in New England R. Co. v. Carnegie Steel Co. 21 C. C. A. 219, 33 U. S. App. 491, 75 Fed. 54, 58, and perhaps in other cases."

The concession hardly exhibits the strength of the sanction which the rule has received at circuit, and, apparently, neither willingly nor unwillingly, but in the desire only to ascertain what this court has decided, and to follow it. I may refer to St. Louis Trust Co. v. Riley, decided by the circuit court of appeals of the eighth circuit (30 L. R. A. 456, 16 C. C. A. 610, 36 U. S. App. 100, 70 Fed. 32), Finance Co. v. Charleston, C. & C. R. Co. in circuit court of appeals of the fourth circuit (10 C. C. A. 323, 8 U. S. App. 547, 62 Fed. 205), New York Guaranty & Indemnity Co. v. Tacoma R. & Motor Co. in the circuit court of appeals of the ninth circuit (27 C. C. A. 550, 48 U. S. App. 668, 83 Fed. 365). See also 36 Fed. 808; Farmers' Loan & T. Co. v. Kansas City, W. & N. W. R. Co. 53 Fed. 182; Farmers' Loan & T. Co. v. Northern P. R. Co. 68 Fed. 36; Atlantic Trust Co. v. Woodbridge & Irrig. Co. 79 Fed. 39. And even the sixth circuit, from whence the pending case now comes. Central Trust Co. v. East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. 26 C. C. A. 30, 47 U. S. App. 663, 80 Fed. 624.

*There is strength in this agreement at [192] circuit, and much that was said could be quoted with advantage; but, as my ultimate reliance must be the decisions of this court, I shall proceed immediately to an examination of them.

Miltenberger v. Logansport, C. & S. W. R. Co. 106 U. S. 286, 27 L. ed. 117, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 140, is one of the most important of the cases. Indeed, it is the leading case, and is carried into and approved in a number of subsequent cases. The decisions which precede it, including Fosdick v. Schall, 99 U. S. 235, 25 L. ed. 339, I assume, are understood. Wallace v. Loomis, 97 U. S. 146, 24 L. ed. 895, may, however, be noticed. It was a suit to foreclose a mortgage on a railroad, in which suit a receiver was appointed. The receivers were authorized to raise money by loan upon certificates to be issued by them, "to put the road and property in repair, and to complete any uncompleted portions thereof, and to procure rolling stock, and to manage and operate the road to the best advantage, so as to prevent the property from further deteriorating, and to save and preserve the same for the benefit and interest of the first mortgage bondholders, and all others having an interest therein." The receivers obeyed the order, and the decree of the court "declared the amount due on the receiver's certificates to be a lien on the property in their hands prior to that of the first mortgage bonds." This court sustained the decree as follows:

"The power of a court of equity to appoint managing receivers of such property as a railroad, when taken under its charge as a trust fund for the payment of encumbrances, and to authorize such receivers to raise money necessary for the preservation and management of the property, and make the same chargeable as a lien thereon for its repayment, cannot at this day be seriously disputed. It is a part of that jurisdiction, always exercised by the court, by which it is its duty to protect and preserve the trust funds in its hands. It is, undoubtedly, a power to be exercised with great caution; and, if possible, with the consent or acquiescence of the parties interested in the fund."

[193] "The principle expressed was applied in the Miltenberger Case. The receiver appointed in that case was empowered by the court to purchase four engines, four passenger cars, and one hundred new coal cars; also to adjust certain indebtedness of connecting lines, not exceeding $10,000, and to expend $30,000 to complete 5 miles of road, and build a bridge, and to enter into the contracts required therefor. With the expenditure, the earnings of the road were charged "as with a first lien, prior to all encumbrances upon such road." The legality of this was contested. Speaking of the order this court said: The authority conferred by it "was intended to benefit the res in the hands of the court, which was the entire mortgaged property as covered by both mortgages, and not merely the equity of redemption of the mortgagor as against the mortgagee." And the power to make it was decided, the court quoting from Wallace v. Loomis as above, and observing "the principle thus recognized covers most of the objections here urged." The payment of $10,000 due to connecting lines of road for materials and repairs, etc., was also sustained. It thus appears that not only expenditures made after the appointment of the receiver, but debts incurred prior to the appointment, were directed to be paid out of the corpus of the property. Justifying its decision, the court said:
197 U. S.

"It cannot be affirmed that no items which accrued before the appointment of a receiver can be allowed in any case. Many circumstances may exist which may make it necessary and indispensable to the business of the road and the preservation of the property, for the receiver to pay pre-existing debts of certain classes, out of the earnings of the receivership, or even the corpus of the property, under the order of the court, with a priority of lien. Yet the discretion to do so should be exercised with very great care. The payment of such debts stands, prima facie, on a different basis from the payment of claims arising under the receivership, while it may be brought within the principle of the latter by special circumstances. It is easy to see that the payment *of unpaid debts for operating[194] expenses, accrued within ninety days, due by a railroad company suddenly deprived of the control of its property, due to the operatives in its employ, whose cessation from work simultaneously is to be deprecated, in the interests both of the property and of the public, and the payment of the limited amounts due to other and connecting lines of road for materials and repairs and for unpaid ticket and freight balances, the outcome of indispensable business relations, where a stoppage of the continuance of such business relations would be a probable result in case of nonpayment, the general consequence involving largely also the interests and accommodation of travel and traffic, may well place such payments in the category of payments to preserve the mortgaged property in a large sense, by maintaining the goodwill and integrity of the enterprise, and entitle them to be made a first lien. This view of the public interest in such a highway for public use as a railroad is, as bearing on the maintenance and use of its franchises and property in the hands of a receiver, with a view to public convenience, was the subject of approval by this court, speaking through Mr. Justice Woods, in Barton v. Barbour, 104 U. S. 126, 26 L. ed. 672. The appellants furnish no basis for questioning any specific amounts allowed in respect to the arrears referred to, but object to the allowance of anything out of the sale of the corpus for such expenditures. Under all the circumstances of this case, we see no valid objection to the provisions of the orders complained of."

The case is not overruled; it is distinguished, and the distinction seems to be based upon the difference between supplies for preservation of the road and payments necessary to the business of the road. Is not the distinction questionable? Can anything be done for the preservation of a road that is not done for its business? If a distinction can be made, how immediate to the business must the supplies be? Is not a bridge across a stream as indispensable to the "accommodation of travel and traffic" as "unpaid ticket and freight balances?" *Or (as in the case at bar) is not "the replacement of ties decayed in current operation" as indispensable as the payment of laborers? It is conceded that labor claims were decreed to be paid in Union Trust Co. v. Illinois Midland R. 117 U. S. 434, 29 L. ed. 963, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 809. Then why not the other? What distinction in principle can there be in expenditures for any of the many things which are necessary to keep a railroad a going concern? Let all the expenditures be declared subordinate which are subsequent to the mortgage, and it can be understood. But how can a distinction be made in value and preferential payment between equally indispensable things?

It is said, however, that the later cases have observed and marked "the wholly exceptional character of the allowance" made in the Miltenberger Case. Kneeland Case, 136 U. S. 89, 34 L. ed. 379, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 950, Thomas Case, 149 U. S. 95, 37 L. ed. 663, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 824, and Virginia & A. Coal Co. v. Central R. & Bkg. Co. 170 U. S. 355, 42 L. ed. 1068, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 657, are cited. Two deductions may be made. If it is meant that the instances were exceptional, I am not at present concerned with it. If it is meant that the principle was, I cannot assent. Admonition to care in the application of a principle is one thing: its overthrow another; and the principle of the Miltenberger Case has never been overthrown. Virginia & A. Coal Co. v. Central R. & Bkg. Co. explains the other two cases. It involved the payment for coal supplied before the appointment of a receiver. There was surplus income during the receivership, and the point under discussion in the case at bar was not directly presented. But there were some observations made which are of value. They remove diversion of income as an element of decision or confusion. It was declared to be immaterial to the equity invoked for the claim whether there had been diversion of income by the company before the appointment of the receiver or afterwards by the receiver; and it is only necessary to consider whether the equity was confined to surplus earnings. I think that it was not so confined. There were surplus earnings, and the principle which established an equity in them was alone contested, *and[196] was alone necessary to be decided. The decision was carefully made upon a review and an estimate of prior cases. The admonitions of the Kneeland Case and the Thomas Case were not overlooked. Regarding them, and in connection with them, the Miltenberger Case was quoted from, and not only left undisturbed, but approved; and from it, as well as from other cases, was deduced the principle which was applied in the judgment. And that principle has its foundation in the public interests. A railroad, from its nature and public responsibilities, must be kept a going concern. This is the supreme necessity, and affords the test of the equity invoked for the claims for supplies. It cannot depend upon diversion of income or upon the existence of income. It cannot be confined to debts contracted during the receivership. It may extend to debts contracted before the appointment of the receiver. But, recognizing that there must be some limitation of time, the courts have fixed six months as the period within which preferential claims may accrue. And there is no infringement of the rights of mortgagees. Their interests are served, as those of the public are, by keeping the railroad in operation. The limitations of the rule dependent upon the conditions under which supplies are furnished are expressed in Virginia & A. Coal Co. v. Central R. & Bkg. Co. 170 U. S. 355, 42 L. ed. 1068, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 657, and in Southern R. Co. v. Carnegie Steel Co. 176 U. S. 257, 44 L. ed. 458, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 347.

The claim in controversy is manifestly within the rule. It is, as we have seen, "for cross ties essential to the replacement of ties decayed in current operation." In other words, used in and necessary for the business of the road, and comes even within the limitation which the court implies may put on the Miltenberger Case. There is another consideration which may be urged in addition to or independently of the general rule. Ties of the value of $3,200 were used by the receiver after his appointment. This circumstance is too summarily dismissed from consideration. "The material point is," it is said, "not the time when they were used, but the time when *they[197] were acquired." A broad declaration, and seems to make all claims accruing before the receivership nonpreferential. This probably is not intended; and, not extending the remark so far, is not the time of use important if we regard the substance of things? It must not be overlooked that we are dealing with equitable considerations. What would be said of an expenditure by the receiver for ties to displace decaying ones, if those furnished by petitioner had not been at hand? Was it not, at least, competent for a court of equity to have restored the ties upon the application of the petitioner? It is said, however, "it is mere speculation if he would have demanded back the ties." He was not given an opportunity. But suppose "he would have taken his chance?" Of what and upon what assurance? Certainly upon the assurance, in addition to his general equity, that a court of equity would not deliberately use his property through its officer, the receiver, in the interest of the business of the road, whose affairs it was administering, and not find in its powers the means and right to order payment for the property so used.

J. B. CARO et al., Plffs. in Err.,
v.

W. H. DAVIDSON et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 197-200.)

Error to state court—Federal question—decision by necessary intendment.

A decision sustaining the validity, under the ex post facto clause of the Federal Constitution, of Fla. act of May 30, 1901, amending Fla. Rev. Stat. § 970, so as to prevent collateral attack of a judgment for a disqualification which does not appear of record in the cause, is not so necessarily involved in the denial by the highest state court of a petition to vacate a decree entered before the amendment, for the relationship existing between the judges and one of the parties, which was not known at the time, as to sustain the exercise by the Federal Supreme Court of its appellate jurisdiction over state courts.

[No. 196.]

Submitted January 23, 1905. Decided March 13, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Florida to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court of Escambia County, in that state, denying a petition to vacate certain decrees for the relationship existing between the judge and one of the parties. On motion to dismiss for want of jurisdiction, dismissed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. H. A. Herbert and Benjamin Micou submitted the cause for plaintiffs in error. Messrs. E. T. Davis and Simeon S. Belden were on the brief.

Messrs. William A. Blount and A. C. Blount, Jr., submitted the cause for defendants in error.

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the opinion of the court:

Plaintiffs in error filed their petition in the circuit court *of Escambia county, Flor-[199]ida, in April, 1901, for the vacation of certain interlocutory and final decrees rendered March 5, 1887, April 4, 1887, and January 17, 1889, in favor of complainants, in a certain cause theretofore pending, on the ground that the said orders and decrees were null and void because the judge by whom they were entered was the husband of the sister of one of the complainants, having at the time living children, the issue of their marriage, it being also averred that the relationship was not known until February, 1901.

Defendants in error set up by answer two defenses: (1) That the original cause was carried to the supreme court of Florida, and there examined upon its merits, and a decree rendered affirming the decree below. (2) That the wife of the circuit judge had died ten years prior to the bringing of that suit.

The petition to vacate the decree was denied July 13, 1901, by the circuit court, and its decree to that effect was affirmed by the supreme court, November 17, 1903 (the case having been submitted March 31, 1902), whereupon this writ of error was allowed, and comes before us on a motion to dismiss for want of jurisdiction.

The state supreme court delivered no opinion in affirming the decree denying the petition to vacate, and the record discloses no title, right, privilege, or immunity spe-

NOTE.—On the general subject of writs of error from United States Supreme Court to state courts—see Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 287; Kipley v. Illinois, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998, and Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884.

On what adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts—see note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L. R. A. 513.

On how and when questions must be raised and decided in a state court in order to make a case for a writ of error from the Supreme
197 U. S.

Court of the United States—see note to Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L. R. A. 33.

On what the record must show respecting the presentation and decision of a Federal question in order to confer jurisdiction on the Supreme Court of the United States on a writ of error to a state court—see note to Hooker v. Los Angeles, 63 L. R. A. 471.

As to what is the record for the purpose of showing the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of the United States of a writ of error to a state court—see note to Home for Incurables v. New York, 63 L. R. A. 329.

cially set up or claimed under the Constitution or any law of the United States, which was denied by the decision; nor any assertion of an infraction of the 14th Amendment, or any provision of the Constitution. But it is said that, by necessary intentment the validity of an act of the general assembly of Florida of May 30, 1901, was drawn in question as repugnant to the Constitution of the United States, and its validity sustained. The act referred to provided that § 970 of the Revised Statutes of Florida was thereby amended so as to read: "Any and all judgments, decrees, and orders heretofore or hereafter rendered in causes where the disqualifications appear of record in the cause, shall be void; but where the [200] disqualification *does not so appear, they shall not be subject to collateral attack." Fla. Sess. Laws, 1901, p. 39.

The contention is that the judgment of the supreme court proceeded upon this act, which was invalid, if so applied, because ex post facto, and that, therefore, this court has jurisdiction, inasmuch as the validity of the act was thus drawn in question, and its validity sustained. Yet no definite issue as to the validity of that statute was distinctly deducible from the record, no decision in favor of its validity appeared therefrom, and the judgment might have rested on grounds not involving its validity.

Whether the supreme court of Florida, if it sustained the decree of the circuit court in denying the petition on either of the grounds set up in defense, committed error cognizable here, or whether the act referred to was applied, as asserted, in contravention of the Constitution of the United States, we are not called on to consider; since we do not find that any Federal question was so raised, on the petition or in the proceedings thereunder, at the proper time and in the proper way, as to give us jurisdiction under § 709 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575). Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 188 U. S. 291, 307, 308, 47 L. ed. 480, 485, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 375; Powell v. Brunswick County, 150 U. S. 433, 37 L. ed. 1134, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 166; Sayward v. Denny, 158 U. S. 180, 39 L. ed. 941, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 777.

Writ of error dismissed.

UNITED STATES, Appt.,

v.

JAMES STINSON and Henry J. Stinson, and Michael S. Bright, as Receiver of James Stinson.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 200-207.)

Appeal—review of finding as to fraud.

The concurrent findings of the two lower courts that a patentee of lands conveyed to him by the entrymen immediately after entry under the pre-emption laws was not guilty of fraud in acquiring the title, so as to permit the United States to maintain an action to set aside the patents, will not be disturbed by the Federal Supreme Court, where the suit was begun forty years after the alleged fraud, when the property had passed into the possession of the receiver of the patentee, appointed at the instance of his creditors, and the testimony of those of the still living pre-emptors who were called to testify on the question of fraud was conflicting.

[No. 153.]

Argued January 25, 26, 1905. Decided March 13, 1905.

A PPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court for the Western District of Wisconsin, dismissing a bill to set aside patents for certain sections of land, alleged to have been fraudulently acquired. Affirmed.

See same case below, 60 C. C. A. 615, 125 Fed. 907.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brewer:

This suit was commenced in the circuit court of the United States for the western district of Wisconsin, on February 25, 1895, to set aside the patents for fourteen quarter sections of land, charged to have been fraudulently acquired by the defendant James Stinson. The lands were entered under the pre-emption laws, in 1854-55, by different individuals, and immediately thereafter conveyed by them to James Stinson. The government, as admitted, received $1.25 per acre, the statutory price for lands so entered. The frauds charged are that the entrymen did not occupy and improve the lands as required by law, and did not enter them for their own benefit, but were employed by James Stinson to make the entries; that he paid the purchase price to the government, and also paid the entrymen for their services, and thus, in defiance of the provisions of the statutes, obtained title to the lands. James Stinson, in his answer, under oath, denied specifically the alleged frauds. Quite a volume of testimony was taken. Upon this the circuit court found that it was not true, as alleged, that James Stinson had been guilty of fraud in obtaining the title to the lands, and dismissed the bill. This dismissal was affirmed by the circuit court of appeals (60 C. C. A. 615, 125 Fed. 907), from whose decree the United States appealed to this court.

Messrs. Marsden C. Burch and John B. Simmons argued the cause, and, with Solicitor General Hoyt, filed a brief for appellant.

Mr. R. M. Bashford argued the cause, and, with Messrs. John C. Spooner and A. L. Sanborn, filed a brief for appellees.

Messrs. William E. Church, Robert McMurdy, and Roger Sherman filed a special brief for appellees.

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

While the government, like an individual, may maintain any appropriate action to set aside its grants and recover property of which it has been defrauded, and while laches or limitation do not of themselves constitute a distinct defense as against it, yet certain propositions in respect to such an action have been fully established. First, the respect due to a patent,—the presumption that all the preceding steps required by law have been observed before its issue. The immense importance and necessity of the stability of titles depending upon these official instruments demand that suits to set aside and annul them should be sustained only when the allegations on which this is attempted are clearly stated and fully sustained by proof. Maxwell Land-Grant Case (United States v. Maxwell Land-Grant Co.), 121 U. S. 325, 30 L. ed. 949, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1015; Colorado Coal & I. Co. v. United States, 123 U. S. 307, 31 L. ed. 182, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131; United States v. San Jacinto Tin Co. 125 U. S. 273, 31 L. ed. 747, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 850; United States v. Des Moines Nav. & R. Co. 142 U. S. 510, 35 L. ed. 1099, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 308; United States v. Budd, 144 U. S. 154, 36 L. ed. 384, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 575; United States v. American Bell Teleph. Co. 167 U. S. 224, 42 L. ed. 144, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 809.

[205] *Second. The government is subjected to the same rules respecting the burden of proof, the quantity and character of evidence, the presumptions of law and fact, that attend the prosecution of a like action by an individual. "It should be well understood that only that class of evidence which commands respect, and that amount of it which produces conviction, shall make such an attempt successful." Maxwell Land-Grant Case (United States v. Maxwell Land-Grant Co.), 121 U. S. 325, 381, 30 L. ed. 949, 959, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1015; United States v. Iron Silver Min. Co. 128 U. S. 673, 677, 32 L. ed. 571, 573, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 195; United States v. Des Moines Nav. & R. Co. 142 U. S. 510, 541, 35 L. ed. 1099, 1108, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 308.

Third. It is a good defense to an action to set aside a patent that the title has passed to a bona fide purchaser, for value, without notice. And, generally speaking, equity will not simply consider the question whether the title has been fraudulently obtained from the government, but also will protect the rights and interests of innocent parties. United States v. Burlington & M. River R. Co. 98 U. S. 334, 342, 25 L. ed. 198, 200. Colorado Coal & I. Co. v. United States, 123 U. S. 307, 313, 31 L. ed. 182, 185, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131,—a case in which, as here, suit was brought to set aside land patents on the ground that they had been obtained by fraud, and in which we said:
197 U. S.

"But it is not such a fraud as prevents the passing of the legal title by the patents. It follows that, to a bill in equity to cancel the patents upon these grounds alone, the defense of a bona fide purchaser for value, without notice, is perfect." United States v. Marshall Silver Min. Co. 129 U. S. 579, 589, 32 L. ed. 734, 738, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 343; United States v. California & O. Land Co. 148 U. S. 31, 41, 37 L. ed. 354, 359, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 458; United States v. Winona & St. P. R. Co. 165 U. S. 463, 479, 41 L. ed. 789, 796, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 368.

Waiving any inquiry as to the claim of ignorance on the part of the government, in respect to the matters complained of, until shortly before suit, and simply noting the fact that there was fragmentary testimony tending to show notice at about the time of the entries, sufficient to put upon the government the duty of inquiry, we pass to consider the merits of the case. Forty years intervened between the time of the alleged fraud and the commencement of [206] this suit. Six, at least of the fourteen pre-emptors, were then dead. One of the living was shown to be quite old, and to have failed in health and memory. Only four were called as witnesses: two by the government and two by the defendant. The evidence of the former tended to sustain the allegations of fraud, and that of the latter supported the denial of the defendant. At such a lapse of time it is not strange that the memory of all the witnesses should be of doubtful reliability. They might remember the general fact that they entered the land, and that they received some money out of the transaction, but the details—the various acts and conversations—might well be forgotten. There is nothing to show that their attention was ever called to the matter during the intervening time; nothing transpired which would induce them to fix their memories upon any particular facts. Even the testimony on behalf of the government shows that they believed that they were engaged in a legitimate effort to obtain title to the lands, and expected to make profit out of them. They naturally took the steps in reference to occupation and improvement which they were advised were sufficient, and, having paid for the land, supposed that everything was rightfully done. The conduct of defendant Stinson does not indicate a consciousness of wrongdoing. He remained a resident of the locality, the title was not transferred, there was no attempt to place it in the hands of a bona fide purchaser,—no such conduct as would ordinarily characterize a conscious wrongdoer. He came to Superior when it was a mere village, interested himself with others in the building up of a city, having faith in its future. The money which was invested in these lands was his father's, and he took the title in his own name, but really in trust for his father. Subsequently he became the owner of part or all, and retained the title until after this suit was brought. The lands, at the time of the entry, were in the forest, with only scanty population within a reasonable distance, and apparently were worth no more than [207] the purchase price. *Now that Superior has grown to be a city, they have increased largely in value. He engaged in financial operations, contracted debts on the strength of a responsibility based upon the ownership of these lands, and finally became so deeply in debt that the property passed into the possession of a receiver, appointed at the instance of his creditors. Although the latter may not be technically a bona fide purchaser, yet he holds the lands for those who have dealt with the defendant Stinson on the faith of his ownership, and they are equitably entitled to protection.

Further, the circuit court, on its review of the testimony, found that there was no fraud, and decreed a dismissal, and that finding and decree were approved by the court of appeals. While such a finding is not conclusive upon this court, yet it is entitled to great consideration, and should not be disturbed unless plainly against the testimony.

Putting all these things together, we are of the opinion that the decree of the circuit court was right, and it is affirmed.

SAMUEL M. CLYATT

v.

UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 207-223.)

Constitutional law—validity of congressional legislation against peonage—scope of statute—evidence to sustain conviction—appeal—sufficiency of bill of exceptions.

1. The enactment of the prohibition against peonage in any state or territory of the United States, contained in U. S. Rev. Stat. §§ 1990, 5526 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 1266, 3715), was authorized by the provisions of U. S. Const. 13th Amend., forbidding slavery or involuntary servitude within the United States or any place subject to their jurisdiction, and granting to Congress the power to enforce the prohibition by appropriate legislation.

2. The holding of another in a state of peonage, whether sanctioned or not by municipal or state law, is included in the prohibition against peonage in any state or territory of the United States, contained in U. S. Rev. Stat. §§ 1990, 5526 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 1266, 3715), enacted by Congress in the exercise of its power, under U. S. Const. 13th Amend., to enforce, by appropriate legislation, the provision of that amendment forbidding slavery or involuntary servitude within the United States or in any place subject to their jurisdiction.
3. Evidence of a prior condition of peonage, to which the persons so held were returned by the acts of the defendant, is essential to support a conviction under an indictment charging him with returning certain designated persons to a condition of peonage.
4. The lack of an affirmative statement in the bill of exceptions, in a criminal case, that it contains all the testimony, is not fatal, where the recitals in such bill sufficiently show that fact.
5. The failure to request that the jury be instructed to find for the defendant will not prevent the Federal Supreme Court, in reviewing a conviction of crime, from examining the record to see if there was any proof of a material element of the crime charged.

[No. 235.]

Argued December 13, 14, 1904. Decided March 13, 1905.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit, bringing up for review a judgment of the Circuit Court for the Northern District of Florida, convicting defendant of returning certain specified persons to a condition of peonage, which judgment had been taken to the Circuit Court of Appeals by a writ of error to the Circuit Court. Reversed and the cause remanded for a new trial.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brewer:

Sections 1990 and 5526, Rev. Stat. (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 1266, 3715), read:

"Sec. 1990. The holding of any person to service or labor under the system known as peonage is abolished and forever prohibited in the territory of New Mexico, or in any other territory or state of the United States; and all acts, laws, resolutions, orders, regulations, or usages of the territory of New Mexico, or of any other territory or state, which have heretofore established, maintained, or enforced, or by virtue of which any attempt shall hereafter be made to establish, maintain, or enforce, directly or indirectly, the voluntary or involuntary service or labor of any persons as peons, in liquidation of any debt or obligation, or otherwise, are declared null and void."

"Sec. 5526. Every person who holds, arrests, returns, or causes to be held, arrested, or returned, or in any manner aids in the arrest or return of any person to a condition of peonage, shall be punished by a [209] fine of not less than one thousand nor more than five thousand dollars, or by imprisonment not less than one year nor more than five years, or by both."

On November 21, 1901, the grand jury returned into the circuit court of the United States for the northern district of Florida an indictment in two counts, the first of which is as follows:

"The grand jurors of the United States of America impaneled and sworn within and for the district aforesaid, on their oaths present, that one Samuel M. Clyatt, heretofore, to wit: on the eleventh day of February, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and one, in the county of Levy, state of Florida, within the district aforesaid, and within the jurisdiction of this court, did then and there unlawfully and knowingly return one Will Gordon and one Mose Ridley to a condition of peonage, by forcibly and against the will of them, the said Will Gordon and the said Mose Ridley, returning them, the said Will Gordon and Mose Ridley, to work to and for Samuel M. Clyatt, D. T. Clyatt, and H. H. Tift, copartners doing business under the firm name and style of Clyatt & Tift, to be held by them, the said Clyatt & Tift, to work out a debt claimed to be due to them, the said Clyatt & Tift, by the said Will Gordon and Mose Ridley; contrary to the form of the statute in such case made and provided, and against the peace and dignity of the United States."

The second count differs only in charging that defendant caused and aided in returning Gordon and Ridley. A trial resulted in a verdict of guilty, and thereupon the defendant was sentenced to confinement at hard labor for four years. The case was taken on appropriate writ to the court of appeals for the fifth circuit, which certified to this court three questions. Subsequently the entire record was brought here on a writ of certiorari, and the case was heard on its merits.

197 U. S.

Messrs. William G. Brantley and A. O. Bacon argued the cause, and, with Mr. W. M. Hammond, filed a brief for Clyatt:

To apply the congressional legislation to the acts of individuals in a state where no law or usage exists to justify them would be to confer upon Congress a power not only prohibited to Congress, but specifically reserved to the states.

Moore v. Illinois, 14 How. 17, 14 L. ed. 307; United States v. Dewitt, 9 Wall. 41, 19 L. ed. 593; Martin v. Hunter, 1 Wheat. 324, 326, 4 L. ed. 102, 103; Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall. 82, 21 L. ed. 410; United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 23 L. ed. 588; Coffee v. Groover, 123 U. S. 31, 31 L. ed. 63, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; United States v. Fox, 95 U. S. 672, 24 L. ed. 539; United States v. Harris, 106 U. S. 629, 27 L. ed. 290, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 601; Re Rahrer (Wilkinson v. Rahrer) 140 U. S. 554, 35 L. ed. 574, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 865; Cooley, Const. Lim. 704, 706; Pom. Constitutional Law, p. 154.

Before Congress could inflict punishment on a citizen of a state for the offense of slavery or involuntary servitude the penalty would have to be directed against those who practised slavery or involuntary servitude by virtue of some law or license of their state, for in no other way could the slavery or involuntary servitude referred to in U. S. Const., 13th Amend., exist.

Plessy v. Ferguson, 163 U. S. 542, 41 L. ed. 257, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1138; Cleland v. Waters, 16 Ga. 505; Civil Rights Cases, 109 U. S. 20, 27 L. ed. 842, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18; 25 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 1089; Jones v. Vanzandt, 2 McLean, 601, Fed. Cas. No. 7,501; Miller v. McQuerry, 5 McLean, 469, Fed. Cas. No. 9,583; Williams v. Johnson, 30 Md. 500, 96 Am. Dec. 613; Lemmon v. People, 20 N. Y. 563.

The only peonage affected by the 13th Amendment is that which develops or amounts to slavery or involuntary servitude.

Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall. 72, 21 L. ed. 407.

The same rule applies to peonage that applies to slavery; and, the rule as to slavery being, if there is no law to authorize it there is no slavery, it necessarily follows, if there is no law to authorize peonage there is no peonage.

The 13th Amendment in its prohibitory feature is aimed solely at the states.

Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall. 69, 21 L. ed. 406; Le Grand v. United States, 12 Fed. 577; People v. Brady, 40 Cal. 198, 6 Am. Rep. 604; Re Parrott, 6 Sawy. 349, 1 Fed. 481; Re Turner, 1 Abb. (U. S.) 84, Fed. Cas. No. 14,247; United States v.

Cruikshank, 1 Woods, 308, Fed. Cas. No. 14,897.

The 13th Amendment in its declaratory phase does apply to individuals.

Civil Rights Cases, 109 U. S. 20, 27 L. ed. 842; Re Turner, 1 Abb. (U. S.) 84, Fed. Cas. No. 14,247; Re Sah Quah, 31 Fed. 327.

The decisions under the 14th Amendment give no intimation or suggestion that the power of Congress over the citizens of the states, or over the police power of the states, was broadened by the 13th Amendment.

Coffee v. Groover, 123 U. S. 31, 31 L. ed. 63, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; United States v. Stanley, 109 U. S. 17, 27 L. ed. 841, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18; Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall. 78, 21 L. ed. 409; United States v. Harris, 106 U. S. 629, 27 L. ed. 290, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 601; United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 23 L. ed. 588; Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339, 25 L. ed. 676; Re Kemmler, 136 U. S. 436, 34 L. ed. 519, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 930; Re Converse, 137 U. S. 624, 34 L. ed. 796, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 191; Powell v. Pennsylvania, 127 U. S. 678, 32 L. ed. 253, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 992, 1257; Leeper v. Texas, 139 U. S. 463, 35 L. ed. 225, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 577; Claybrook v. Owensboro, 16 Fed. 301; United States v. Washington, 4 Woods, 351, 20 Fed. 630.

The 15th Amendment is also limited to state action.

James v. Bowman, 190 U. S. 136, 47 L. ed. 981, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 678.

These Amendments, together with the 13th, being one general scheme to confer civil rights upon the negro, it would seem that, reasoning by analogy alone, the prohibition feature or part of the 13th Amendment is, likewise, limited to state action.

The power, duty, and responsibility to protect the citizens of a state and to enforce their rights under any amendment to the United States Constitution rest with the state, and not with the United States, government.

Neal v. Delaware, 103 U. S. 370, 26 L. ed. 567.

The statute has no application to Georgia, there being no peonage in Georgia.

United States v. Eberhart, 127 Fed. 252.

There is no concurrent jurisdiction of the state and of the United States to punish the same criminal offense.

United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 550, 23 L. ed. 590; Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 234, 6 L. ed. 79; Fox v. Ohio, 5 How. 434, 12 L. ed. 223; United States v. Marigold, 9 How. 560, 13 L. ed. 257; Cross v. United States, 132 U. S. 131, 33 L. ed. 287, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 47.

No rights not granted or secured by the Constitution can be protected by act of Congress.

United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 550, 23 L. ed. 590.

The right to personal liberty is not granted by the 13th Amendment, or by any other part of the Constitution, but is a right inherent in the people, and to be protected against lawless violence by the state.

United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 553, 23 L. ed. 591.

The right to personal liberty is secured against violation by the United States in the 5th Amendment, and against violation by the state in the 14th Amendment. We are, therefore, at once to understand that it is a right not created or conferred by the Constitution, and that the affirmative enforcement of the right belongs to the state as a part of its residuary sovereignty.

United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 554, 23 L. ed. 592, 1 Woods, 308, Fed. Cas. No. 14,897; Logan v. United States, 144 U. S. 293, 36 L. ed. 439, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 617; Re Kemmler, 136 U. S. 448, 34 L. ed. 524, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 930; Re Converse, 137 U. S. 632, 34 L. ed. 799, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 191.

A ground in a motion for a new trial or in arrest of judgment, of an entire absence of evidence on a material point, raises purely a question of law.

Metropolitan R. Co. v. Moore, 121 U. S. 567, 30 L. ed. 1024, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1334.

Attorney General Moody argued the cause, and, with Assistant Attorney General Purdy, filed a brief for the United States:

Under the 13th Amendment Congress has the power, so far as is necessary and proper, to eradicate all forms of slavery and involuntary servitude; and such legislation may be direct and primary, operating upon the acts of individuals, whether sanctioned by state legislation or not.

Plessy v. Ferguson, 163 U. S. 537, 542, 41 L. ed. 256, 257, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1138; Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall. 36, 67, 68, 72, 21 L. ed. 394, 405, 407; Civil Rights Cases, 109 U. S. 3, 20, 23, 27 L. ed. 836, 842, 843, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18; Robertson v. Baldwin, 165 U. S. 275, 280, 41 L. ed. 715, 717, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 326.

The system of Mexican peonage and the holding of a person to a condition of peonage is involuntary servitude within the meaning of the Constitution.

Jaremillo v. Romero, 1 N. M. 190.

Enforced labor on the part of the servant under a contract with the master for personal services has never been regarded as sanctioned either by the laws of England or America.

Robertson v. Baldwin, 165 U. S. 275, 41 L. ed. 715, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 326; Smith, Mast. & S. chap. 9, p. 273. See also 1 Bl. Com. chap. 14; 2 Kent, Com. 7th ed. p. 282;

Clark's Case, 1 Blackf. 122, 12 Am. Dec. 213; Reeve, Dom. Rel. 4th ed. p. 418.

So far as the enforcement and operation of this statute are concerned, the question of the existence of a state law or usage creating or sanctioning peonage or a system of peonage is entirely immaterial.

Peonage Cases, 123 Fed. 671.

Where the whole of the evidence is not preserved in the bill of exceptions or some other part of the record, the appellate court will not review objections based upon the insufficiency of the evidence. The record must expressly show that it contains all the evidence, and the presumption will not be indulged in that the record contains all the evidence. It has even been held that an express statement in the bill of exceptions that it contains all the evidence is not conclusive if it clearly shows that it does not.

Marshall v. State, 32 Fla. 462, 14 So. 92; Carmichael v. State, 111 Ga. 653, 36 S. E. 872; Griffin v. State, 116 Ga. 562, 42 S. E. 752; Pace v. State, 152 Ind. 343, 53 N. E. 183; State v. Sexauer, 88 Iowa, 722, 54 N. W. 431; State v. Reilly, 37 La. Ann. 5; State v. Clarkson, 96 Mo. 364, 9 S. W. 925; State v. Gardner, 33 Or. 149, 54 Pac. 809; Griggs v. State, 58 Ala. 425, 29 Am. Rep. 762; Tarble v. People, 111 Ill. 120; Siple v. State, 154 Ind. 647, 57 N. E. 544; State v. French, 96 Iowa, 255, 65 N. W. 156; People v. Bradner, 44 Hun, 233; McAllister v. State, 112 Wis. 496, 88 N. W. 212; Gill v. State, 43 Ala. 38; Herzinger v. State, 70 Md. 278, 17 Atl. 81; State v. Carey, 4 Wash. 424, 30 Pac. 729; Morrow v. State, 48 Ind. 432.

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

The constitutionality and scope of §§ 1990 and 5526 present the first questions for our consideration. They prohibit peonage. What is peonage? It may be defined as a status or condition of compulsory service, based upon the indebtedness of the peon to the master. The basal fact is indebtedness. As said by Judge Benedict, delivering the opinion in Juremillo v. Romero, 1 N. M. 190, 194: "One fact existed universally: all were indebted to their masters. This was the cord by which they seemed bound to their master's service." Upon this is based a condition of compulsory service. Peonage is sometimes classified as voluntary or involuntary; but this implies simply a difference in the mode of origin, but none in the character of the servitude. The one exists where the debtor voluntarily contracts to enter the service of his creditor. The other is forced upon the debtor by some provision of law. But peonage, however created, is compulsory service,—involuntary servitude. The peon can release himself therefrom, it is true, by the payment of the debt, but otherwise the service is enforced. A clear distinction exists between peonage and the voluntary performance of labor or rendering of services in payment of a debt. In the latter case the debtor, though contracting to pay his indebtedness by labor or service, and subject, like any other contractor, to an action for damages for breach of that contract, can elect at any time to break it, and no law or force compels *performance or a continuance of the service. We need not stop to consider any possible limits or exceptional cases, such as the service of a sailor (Robertson v. Baldwin, 165 U. S. 275, 41 L. ed. 715, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 326), or the obligations of a child to its parents, or of an apprentice to his master, or the power of the legislature to make unlawful, and punish criminally, an abandonment by an employee of his post of labor in any extreme cases. That which is contemplated by the statute is compulsory service to secure the payment of a debt. Is this legislation within the power of Congress? It may be conceded, as a general proposition, that the ordinary relations of individual to individual are subject to the control of the states, and are not intrusted to the general government; but the 13th Amendment, adopted as an outcome of the Civil War, reads:

"Sec. 1. Neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime whereof the party shall have been duly convicted, shall exist within the United States, or any place subject to their jurisdiction.

"Sec. 2. Congress shall have power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation."

This amendment denounces a status or condition, irrespective of the manner or authority by which it is created. The prohibitions of the 14th and 15th Amendments are largely upon the acts of the states; but the 13th Amendment names no party or authority, but simply forbids slavery and involuntary servitude, grants to Congress power to enforce this prohibition by appropriate legislation. The differences between the 13th and subsequent amendments have been so fully considered by this court that it is enough to refer to the decisions. In the Civil Rights Cases, 109 U. S. 3, 20, 23, 27 L. ed. 835, 842, 843, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18, 28, 30, Mr. Justice Bradley, delivering the opinion of the court, uses this language:

"This amendment, as well as the 14th, is undoubtedly self-executing without any ancillary legislation, so far as its terms are applicable to any existing state of circumstances. By its own unaided force and effect it abolished slavery, and *established[217] universal freedom. Still, legislation may be necessary and proper to meet all the various cases and circumstances to be affected by it, and to prescribe proper modes of redress for its violation in letter or spirit. And such legislation may be primary and direct in its character; for the amendment is not a mere prohibition of state laws establishing or upholding slavery, but an absolute declaration that slavery or involuntary servitude shall not exist in any part of the United States. . . .

"We must not forget that the province and scope of the 13th and 14th Amendments are different; the former simply abolished slavery: the latter prohibited the states from abridging the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; from depriving them of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, and from denying to any the equal protection of the laws. The amendments are different, and the powers of Congress under them are different. What Congress has power to do under one, it may not have power to do under the other. Under the 13th Amendment, it has only to do with slavery and its incidents. Under the 14th Amendment, it has power to counteract and render nugatory all state laws and proceedings which have the effect to abridge any of the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States, or to deprive them of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, or to deny to any of them the equal protection of the laws. Under the 13th Amendment, the legislation, so far as necessary or proper to eradicate all forms and incidents of slavery and involuntary servitude, may be direct and primary, operating upon the acts of individuals, whether sanctioned by state legislation or not; under the 14th, as we have already shown, it must necessarily be, and can only be, corrective in its character, addressed to counteract and afford relief against state regulations or proceedings."

[218] *In Plessy v. Ferguson, 163 U. S. 537, 542, 41 L. ed. 256, 257, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1138, 1140, Mr. Justice Brown, delivering the opinion of the court, said:

"That it does not conflict with the 13th Amendment, which abolished slavery and involuntary servitude except as a punishment for crime, is too clear for argument. Slavery implies involuntary servitude,—a state of bondage; the ownership of mankind as a chattel, or at least the control of the labor and services of one man for the benefit of another, and the absence of a legal right to the disposal of his own person, property, and services. This amendment was said in the Slaughter House Cases, 16 Wall. 36, 21 L. ed. 394, to have been intended primarily to abolish slavery, as it had been previously known in this country, and that it equally forbade Mexican peonage or the Chinese coolie trade, when they amounted to slavery or involuntary servitude, and that the use of the word 'servitude' was intended to prohibit the use of all forms of involuntary slavery, of whatever class or name."

Other authorities to the same effect might be cited. It is not open to doubt that Congress may enforce the 13th Amendment by direct legislation, punishing the holding of a person in slavery or in involuntary servitude except as a punishment for crime. In the exercise of that power Congress has enacted these sections denouncing peonage, and punishing one who holds another in that condition of involuntary servitude. This legislation is not limited to the territories or other parts of the strictly national domain, but is operative in the states and wherever the sovereignty of the United States extends. We entertain no doubt of the validity of this legislation, or its applicability to the case of any person holding another in a state of peonage, and this whether there be a municipal ordinance or state law sanctioning such holding. It operates directly on every citizen of the Republic, wherever his residence may be.

Section 5526 punishes "every person who holds, arrests, returns, or causes to be held, arrested, or returned." Three distinct acts are here mentioned,—holding, arresting, returning. *The disjunctive "or" indicates the [219] separation between them, and shows that either one may be the subject of indictment and punishment. A party may hold another in a state of peonage without ever having arrested him for that purpose. He may come by inheritance into the possession of an estate in which the peon is held, and he simply continues the condition which was existing before he came into possession. He may also arrest an individual for the purpose of placing him in a condition of peonage, and this whether he be the one to whom the involuntary service is to be rendered or simply employed for the purpose of making the arrest. Or he may, after one has fled from a state of peonage, return him to it, and this whether he himself claims the service or is acting simply as an agent of another to enforce the return.

The indictment charges that the defendant did "unlawfully and knowingly return one Will Gordon and one Mose Ridley to a condition of peonage, by forcibly, and against the will of them, the said Will Gordon and the said Mose Ridley, returning them, the said Will Gordon and the said Mose Ridley, to work to and for Samuel M. Clyatt."

Now a "return" implies the prior existence of some state or condition. Webster defines it "to turn back; to go or come again to the same place or condition." In the Standard dictionary it is defined "to cause to take again a former position; put, carry, or send back, as to a former place or holder." A technical meaning in the law is thus given in Black's Law Dictionary: "The act of a sheriff, constable, or other ministerial officer, in delivering back to the court a writ, notice, or other paper."

It was essential, therefore, under the charge in this case, to show that Gordon and Ridley had been in a condition of peonage, to which, by the act of the defendant, they were returned. We are not at liberty to transform this indictment into one charging that the defendant held them in a condition or state of peonage, or that he arrested them with a view of placing them in such condition or state. The pleader [220] has seen *fit to charge a return to a condition of peonage. The defendant had a right to rely upon that as the charge, and to either offer testimony to show that Gordon and Ridley had never been in a condition of peonage, or to rest upon the government's omission of proof of that fact.

We must, therefore, examine the testimony; and the first question that arises is whether the record sufficiently shows that it contains all the testimony. The bill of exceptions, after reciting the impaneling of the jury, proceeds in these words:

"And thereupon the plaintiff, to maintain the issues upon its part, produced and offered as a witness, James R. Dean, who, being first duly sworn, did testify as follows."

That recital is followed by what purports to be the testimony of the witness. Then follows in succession the testimony of several witnesses, each being preceded by a statement in a form similar to this: "The plaintiff then introduced and offered as a witness, H. S. Sutton, who, being first duly sworn, did testify as follows." At the close of the testimony of the last witness named is this statement:

"Whereupon the plaintiff rests its case.

"Defendant rests—introduces no testimony.

"And the said judge, after charging the jury on the law in the case, submitted the said issues and the evidence so given on the trial, to the jury, and the jury aforesaid then and there gave their verdict for the plaintiff."

It is true there is no affirmative statement in the bill of exceptions that it contains all the testimony, but such omission is not fatal. This question was presented in Gunnison County v. E. H. Rollins & Sons, 173 U. S. 255, 43 L. ed. 689, 19 Sup. Ct. 197 U. S.

Rep. 390, a civil case, brought to this court on certiorari to the circuit court of appeals, which court had held that the bill of exceptions did not purport to contain all the evidence adduced at the trial, and for that reason did not consider the question whether error was committed in instructing the jury to find for the defendant. Mr. Justice Harlan, delivering the unanimous opinion *of the court, disposed of that question in [221] these words (p. 261, L. ed. p. 693, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 392):

"We are of opinion that the bill of exceptions should be taken as containing all the evidence. It appears that as soon as the jury was sworn to try the issues in the cause 'the complainants, to sustain the issues on their part, offered the following oral and documentary evidence.' Then follow many pages of testimony on the part of the plaintiffs, when this entry appears: 'Whereupon complainants rested.' Immediately after comes this entry: 'Thereupon the defendants, to sustain the issues herein joined on their part, produced the following evidence.' Then follow many pages of evidence given on behalf of the defendant, and the evidence of a witness recalled by the defendant, concluding with this entry: 'Whereupon the further proceedings herein were continued until the 20th day of May, 1896, at 10 o'clock A. M.' Immediately following this entry: 'Wednesday, May 20th, at 10 o'clock, the further trial of this cause was continued as follows.' The transcript next shows some discussion by counsel as to the exclusion of particular evidence, after which is this entry: 'Thereupon counsel for defendant made a formal motion under the evidence on both sides that the court instruct the jury to return a verdict for the defendant.' Although the bill of exceptions does not state, in words, that it contains all the evidence, the above entries sufficiently show that it does contain all the evidence."

The present case is completely covered by that decision. If, in a civil case, such recitals in the bill of exceptions are sufficient to show that it contains all the testimony, a fortiori should this be the rule in a criminal case, and the defendant therein should not be deprived of a full consideration of the question of his guilt by an omission from the bill of the technical recital that it contains all the evidence.

While no motion or request was made that the jury be instructed to find for defendant, and although such a motion is the proper method of presenting the question whether there is evidence to sustain the verdict, yet Wiborg v. United States, *163 U. S. 632, 658, [222] 41 L. ed. 290, 298, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1127, 1197, justifies us in examining the question in case a plain error has been committed in a matter so vital to the defendant.

The testimony discloses that the defendant, with another party, went to Florida, and caused the arrest of Gordon and Ridley on warrants issued by a magistrate in Georgia for larceny; but there can be little doubt that these criminal proceedings were only an excuse for securing the custody of Gordon and Ridley, and taking them back to Georgia to work out a debt. At any rate, there was abundant testimony from which the jury could find that to have been the fact. While this is true, there is not a scintilla of testimony to show that Gordon and Ridley were ever theretofore in a condition of peonage. That they were in debt, and that they had left Georgia and gone to Florida without paying that debt, does not show that they had been held in a condition of peonage, or were ever at work, willingly or unwillingly, for their creditor. We have examined the testimony with great care to see if there was anything which would justify a finding of the fact, and can find nothing. No matter how severe may be the condemnation which is due to the conduct of a party charged with a criminal offense, it is the imperative duty of a court to see that all the elements of his crime are proved, or at least that testimony is offered which justifies a jury in finding those elements. Only in the exact administration of the law will justice in the long run be done, and the confidence of the public in such administration be maintained.

We are constrained, therefore, to order a reversal of the judgment, and remand the case for a new trial.

Mr. Justice McKenna concurs in the judgment.

Mr. Justice Harlan: I concur with my brethren in holding that the statutes in question relating to peonage are valid under the Constitution of the United States. I agree, also, that the record sufficiently shows that it contains all the evidence introduced at the trial.

[223] *But I cannot agree in holding that the trial court erred in not taking the case from the jury. Without going into the details of the evidence, I care only to say that, in my opinion, there was evidence tending to make a case within the statute. The opinion of the court concedes that there was abundant testimony to show that the accused, with another, went from Georgia to Florida to arrest the two negroes, Gordon and Ridley, and take them, against their will, back to Georgia to work out a debt. And they were taken to Georgia by force. It is conceded that peonage is based upon the indebtedness of the peon to the master. The accused admitted to one of the witnesses that the negroes owed him. In any view, there was no motion or request to direct a verdict for the defendant. The accused made no objection to the submission of the case to the jury, and it is going very far to hold in a case like this, disclosing barbarities of the worst kind against these negroes, that the trial court erred in sending the case to the jury.

732

UNITED STATES, Appt.,

v.

STEPHEN C. MILLS.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 223-229.)

Army—increased pay for service in the Philippines—"pay proper" includes longevity pay.

The "pay proper" on which the percentage of increased pay to an Army officer serving in the Philippine Islands is to be computed, under acts of May 26, 1900 (31 Stat. at L. 211, chap. 586), and March 2, 1901 (31 Stat. at L. 903, chap. 803, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 896), includes the longevity pay to which he is entitled, under U. S. Rev. Stat. § 1262 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 896), as well as the minimum pay prescribed by § 1261 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 893) for his grade.

[No. 509.]

Submitted February 20, 1905. Decided March 13, 1905.

A PPEAL from the Court of Claims to review a judgment sustaining the claim of an Army officer that the percentage of increased pay due him for his service in the Philippine Islands should be computed on the minimum pay of his grade, enlarged by the longevity pay to which he was entitled. Affirmed.

Statement by Mr. Justice Peckham:

This is an appeal from a judgment of the court of claims in favor of the appellee. The question relates to the amount of compensation payable to him under the acts of May 26, *1900, and March 2, 1901, making [224] appropriations for the Army. The particular provisions of these acts are set forth in the margin.†

†Act of May 26, 1900 (31 Stat. at L. 211, chap. 586).

"That hereafter the pay proper of all officers and enlisted men serving in Porto Rico, Cuba, the Philippine Islands, Hawaii, and in the territory of Alaska shall be increased ten per centum for officers, and twenty per centum

197 U. S.

The court gave judgment in favor of appellee upon the authority of its opinion in Irwin v. United States, 38 Ct. Cl. 87.

The facts found by the court are as follows:

"The claimant, Stephen C. Mills, entered the military service of the United States as a cadet at the Military Academy, July 1, 1873, was commissioned second lieutenant June 15, 1877, and by successive promotions became major and inspector general July 25, 1888, and lieutenant colonel and inspector general February 2, 1901, and still holds the last-named rank and office.

"The claimant was, by proper military orders, on duty with the Army of the United States in the Philippine Islands from a date prior to May 26, 1900, continuously until April 15, 1902, when, in accordance with orders, he arrived at San Francisco, California, on his return from said Philippine Islands. During all of that period he was serving in the Philippine Islands, and beyond the limits of the states comprising the Union, and the territories of the United States contiguous thereto.

[225] "During the entire period from May 26, 1900, to April 15, 1902, named in the next preceding finding, the claimant, while *holding the rank of major, was paid at the rate of $2,500 a year, the minimum pay of the grade of major, established by § 1261 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 893); $1,000 longevity increase, established by § 1262 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 896), and $250 a year as the increase of 10 per cent upon his pay proper, provided by the act of May 26, 1900 (31 Stat. at L. 211, chap. 586), but calculated only upon the minimum or grade pay fixed by said § 1261.

"While holding the rank of lieutenant colonel during said period the claimant was paid at the rate of $3,000 a year, the minimum pay of that grade, as provided by § 1261 of the Revised Statutes, $1,000 longevity increase, provided by § 1262, and $300 a year as 10 per cent increase on his pay proper, as provided by the acts of May 26, 1900, and March 2, 1901 (31 Stat. at L. 211, chap. 586, 31 Stat. at L. 903, chap. 803, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 896), but computed only on the minimum pay of the grade.

"If said 10 per cent increase should be calculated upon the total pay of $3,500 received by the claimant while in the rank of major, his increase would be at the rate of $350 a year instead of $250, and, if so calculated while he was in the rank of lieutenant colonel, the increase would be at the rate of $400 a year instead of $300, making a difference of $100 a year for the period covered by the claim, and aggregating for the entire period $188.87."

Assistant Attorney General Pradt and Mr. John Q. Thompson submitted the cause for appellant.

Messrs. George A. King and William B. King submitted the cause for appellee.

Mr. Justice Peckham, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

The question is, upon what principal sum the 10 per cent increase of compensation, to which the government concedes the appellee is entitled, is to be computed. The appellee, as *major, was entitled, by § 1261 of [226] the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 893), to the pay of $2,500 a year. Subsequently, as lieutenant colonel, he was entitled, by the same section, to the pay of $3,000 per year. By the following section (1262, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 896) it is provided that there shall be paid to the officers below the rank of brigadier general "10 per centum of their current yearly pay for each term of five years of service," and by § 1263 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 897), the total amount of such increase for length of service cannot exceed, in any case, "40 per centum on the yearly pay of the grade as provided by law." Under § 1262 the appellee had become entitled to pay to the amount of $1,000 a year in addition to the pay provided for in § 1261; thus, as major, he was entitled to $2,500 per year, and under § 1262, $1,000 more, or $3,500 under these two sections; as lieutenant colonel he was paid $3,000 per year under § 1261 and $1,000 more under § 1262, or $4,000 under these two sections. He contended that the additional 10 per cent under the acts of 1900 and 1901 should be computed on the respective sums of $3,500 and $4,000, the total compensation granted by the two sections, while the government insists that the percentage must be computed upon the sums of $2,500 and $3,000, respectively, the minimum pay for enlisted men, over and above the rates of pay proper as fixed by law in time of peace."

Act of March 2, 1901 (31 Stat. at L. 903, chap. 803, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 896).

"That hereafter the pay proper of all officers and enlisted men serving beyond the limits of the states comprising the Union, and the territories of the United States contiguous thereto, shall be increased ten per centum for officers, and twenty per centum for enlisted men, over and above the rates of pay proper as fixed by law for time of peace, and the time of such service shall be counted from the date of departure from said states to the date of return thereto."

granted to the grades of major and lieutenant colonel.

The court of claims directed the computation to be made on the total of the sums given by the two sections, and, in our opinion, that court was right in so doing. The term "pay proper" used in the acts of May 26, 1900, and March 2, 1901, includes, in our opinion, the longevity pay under § 1262 as well as the sum named as pay under § 1261, the latter being the minimum sum for the grade. Every five years of service, under § 1262, up to a certain percentage of the yearly pay of the grade, as provided by law (§ 1263), entitles the officer to be paid 10 per centum of his yearly pay. The term "current yearly pay" (§ 1262) was the subject of examination as to its meaning in [227] United States v. Tyler, *105 U. S. 244, 26 L. ed. 985. That case related to the claim of a retired officer, and the question was whether he was entitled to the benefit of the section (1262) after his retirement; and also, if he were so entitled, how was the computation to be made. The court held that he was entitled to the benefit of the section, and that the percentage was to be computed on the total amount of the pay of the officer, increased as it might be by the periods of five years of service. Thus, the increased pay derived from additional periods of five years' service was added to the minimum pay of the grade, and 10 per centum of that total was held to be the proper compensation.

The government, however, contends that the term "current yearly pay," mentioned in § 1262, has a different meaning from the term "pay proper," contained in the acts under discussion, and it insists that the latter term is not as comprehensive as the former. We do not think that there is any such material difference between the two expressions as in this case to demand their different construction. "Current yearly pay" and "pay proper," as used in the sections, mean the regular, ordinary pay which an officer may be entitled to under the facts in his case; and if, by virtue of length of service, he is entitled to receive the compensation provided for in § 1262, that compensation is his "pay" or his "pay proper," as distinguished from possible other compensation by any allowances or commutation or otherwise. The method of computation adopted herein by the court of claims is the same as that adopted in United States v. Tyler, 105 U. S. 244, 26 L. ed. 985; that method has therefore received the approval of this court, or, at least, it has been held that the 10 per centum of the current yearly pay is to be calculated upon the aggregate pay provided for in the two sections (1261 and 1262), and not merely upon the minimum pay granted by § 1261.

In regard to retired officers, Congress subsequently provided otherwise. 22 Stat. at L. 118, chap. 254.

The words, "pay proper," we see no reason to think are to be construed differently from the word "pay." The term *means com-[228] pensation, which may properly be described or designated as "pay," as distinguished from allowances, commutations for rations, or other methods of compensation, not specifically described as pay.

The government refers to the act of Congress approved March 15, 1898 (Army appropriation act, 30 Stat. at L. 318, chap. 69), as giving some ground for the contention it makes in this case, because, as is stated, Congress itself therein distinguishes between "pay proper," and "additional pay for length of service," and it is urged that pay proper does not include longevity pay in the opinion of Congress, as expressed in the act. The provision of the act is as follows:

"For pay proper of enlisted men of all grades, four million two hundred and ninety thousand dollars.

"Additional pay for length of service, including hospital corps, six hundred and seventy-one thousand, one hundred and seventy-two dollars."

The act cited by the government, it will be seen, refers to enlisted men, and not to officers at all. In that same act of 1898 a provision for the payment of officers is in the following language (30 Stat. at L. 318, chap. 69):

"For pay of officers of the line, two million eight hundred sixty-five thousand dollars.

"For pay of officers for length of service, to be paid with their current monthly pay, seven hundred and ninety thousand dollars."

And in the appropriation act of March 3, 1899, the appropriation for enlisted men was changed so that it reads as follows (30 Stat. at L. 1065, chap. 423):

"Pay of enlisted men of all grades, including recruits, thirteen million, five hundred thousand dollars.

"For additional pay for length of service, seven hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars."

Under the language of the act of March 15, 1898, the Comptroller of the United States had held that the language used in that act showed that the compensation of enlisted men, *upon which the per centum[229] provided for was to be computed, was the minimum pay, not enlarged by any longevity pay to which the person was entitled. At the very next session of Congress the form of the appropriation was changed, as we have seen. That change has been continued since. See acts of May 26, 1900 (31 Stat. at L. 206, chap. 586), March 2, 1901 (31 Stat. at L. 896, chap. 803, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 919), June 30, 1902 (32 Stat. at L. 508, chap. 1328), March 2, 1903 (32 Stat. at L. 929, chap. 975), and April 23, 1904 (33 Stat. at L. 260).

The ground for arguing that the term "pay proper" does not include the "additional pay for length of service" was thus taken away by a change in the form of the appropriation in all the acts subsequent to that of 1898. As we have already stated, however, that particular form in regard to enlisted men in the act of 1898 was never adopted providing for the pay of officers. Their regular compensation and their compensation by reason of longevity services are both spoken of in that act as "pay."

We have no doubt that the pay of the officer under the statutes of 1900 and 1901, in connection with the Revised Statutes referred to, consists of the amount granted for longevity service as well as of the amount provided in § 1261, and that the total is "pay proper," upon which total the percentage is to be computed provided for in the acts of 1900 and 1901. Our attention has not been called to any decision of this court looking to the contrary principle.

The judgment of the Court of Claims is right and must be affirmed.

only where there is no collector at the place of location of a public work.

[No. 259.]

Submitted February 27, 1905. Decided March 13, 1905.

APPEAL from the Court of Claims to review a judgment rejecting a claim of a disbursing clerk of the Treasury Department to compensation for services performed by him under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury as disbursing agent of the funds appropriated for a postoffice at Washington. Affirmed.

See same case below, 39 Ct. Cl. 338.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. J. M. Vale submitted the cause for appellant.

Assistant Attorney General Pradt and Mr. Frederick De Courcy Faust submitted the cause for appellee.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an appeal from a judgment of the court of claims rejecting the claim of the appellant. 39 Ct. Cl. 338. The claimant, while a disbursing clerk of the Treasury Department, received a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, as follows: "George A. Bartlett, disbursing clerk, Treasury Department, Washington, D. C. Sir: You are hereby appointed disbursing agent for such funds as may be advanced to you from time to time on account of the appropriation for postoffice, Washington, D. C. You will be entitled to such compensation for the services named as is provided by law, and the same rate of compensation will be allowed on all amounts disbursed by you since October 15, 1891, on account of the appropriation named." Directions followed.

The claimant gave no new bond and took no additional oath of office. He proceeded to disburse nearly two and a half millions of dollars, and claims $\frac{3}{4}$ of 1 per cent upon the sum disbursed.

The claimant puts his right to compensation on two grounds: the general powers of the Secretary of the Treasury, apart from statute, and Rev. Stat. § 3658 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2430). As to the former, it is enough to say that whatever power the Secretary might have in the absence of legislation, Congress has dealt with the subject so fully that it is plain that we must look to the statutes alone. Rev. Stat. §§ 1760-1765, 3657, 3658, 255 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 1204-1207, 2430, 141); act of August 7, 1882 (22 Stat. at L. 306, chap. 433; U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2428). Looking to the statutes, the claimant relies

[230] *GEORGE A. BARTLETT, Appt.,

v.

UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 230-234.)

Officers—disbursing agent—right to compensation.

1. The right of a disbursing clerk of the Treasury Department to compensation for services performed by him under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, as disbursing agent of the funds appropriated for a postoffice at Washington, depends solely upon the congressional legislation on that subject.
2. The existence of a collector of customs, under U. S. Rev. Stat. § 2550 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1745), for the Georgetown district, which is defined in § 2550 as comprising "all the waters and shores of the Potomac river within the state of Maryland and the District of Columbia, from Pomonkey creek to the head of the navigable waters of that river," precludes the Secretary of the Treasury from appointing, with a right to compensation, a disbursing agent for the funds appropriated for a postoffice at Washington, under § 3658 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2430), which authorizes such appointments on Rev. Stat. § 3658: "Where there is no collector at the place of location of any public work specified in the preceding section [which section specifies postoffices], the Secretary of the Treasury may appoint a [233] disbursing agent *for the payment of all moneys appropriated for the construction of any such public work, with such compensation as he may deem equitable and just." It is urged that there is no collector at Washington, the place of location of the public work concerned.

The statutes as to the collector for Washington are as follows: Rev. Stat. § 2550 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1745): "There shall be, in the District of Columbia, one collection-district, as follows: The district of Georgetown; to comprise all the waters and shores of the Potomac river within the state of Maryland and the District of Columbia, from Pomonkey creek to the head of the navigable waters of that river; in which Georgetown shall be the port of entry." § 2551 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1745): "There shall be in the district of Georgetown a collector." It appears from § 2550 that the collection district of Georgetown is more extensive than the city of Georgetown. And this is not changed by the later statute making Georgetown a part of Washington. Act of February 11, 1895 (28 Stat. at L. 650, chap. 79). We do not perceive on what ground it is denied that the Washington postoffice is within this district. The words, "shores of the Potomac river," seem to us broad enough to include the whole of a city on those shores and within the other limits named. "Waters and shores" is the usual phrase in Rev. Stat. Title 34, chap. 1, §§ 2517-2607 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 1711-1800). The words "in which" assume that Georgetown is embraced within the district. If within the district, it is so simply because it is on the shores, as that word is used in § 2550; and if Georgetown is within it, Washington is in it also, on the same ground. The same form of expression and the same assumption constantly recur in other sections. To show still further that collection districts run inland, and are not limited to the mathematical line which bounds the water, it may be observed that, while "waters and shores" is the most common expression, a district frequently is declared to include towns; e. g. § 2517, Seventh, Thirtieth; § 2522; § 2531, First, Second; § 2533, First. It may include lands (§ 2519), or embrace a county [234] (§ 2517, First, Sixth), or *even a state (§ 2522). If Washington is within the collection-district, then there was a collector at the place of location of the Washington postoffice (see § 3657), and the authority of the Secretary to appoint a disbursing agent under § 3658 was excluded by its very words.

The claimant does not contend that his case gets any appreciable help from the act of August 7, 1882 (22 Stat. at L. 306, chap. 433, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2428). That gives the compensation allowed by law to collectors of customs to disbursing agents appointed to disburse any appropriation for any United States postoffice or other buildings, "not located within the city of Washington." No other statute is relied upon. No doubt the Secretary was under the impression, when the letter was written, that he was making an appointment which would entitle the claimant to distinct compensation for new work and responsibility. He did not regard the claimant as designated to be disbursing agent within the claimant's district under Rev. Stat. § 255, and therefore as not entitled to any additional pay. Rev. Stat. §§ 1764, 1765 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 1206, 1207). But we do not see how the case can be put any higher. It is agreed that the claimant was not appointed to a new office by the Secretary's letter. Therefore, no help is to be got from United States v. Saunders, 120 U. S. 126, 129, 30 L. ed. 594, 595, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 467. The case is a hard one, but we are of opinion that the decision of the court of claims was right.

Judgment affirmed.

*GREER COUNTY, Oklahoma Territory, [235]
Plff. in Err.,

v.

STATE OF TEXAS.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 235-243.)

Public lands—Texas school grant—succession in foreign corporation—rights of Greer county, Oklahoma, under grant to Greer county as Texas corporation.

The legal title to the Texas lands patented to Greer county, under the mistaken supposition that this county was Texas territory, and was, therefore, entitled to share in the grant of lands for school purposes to each county in the state, made by Tex. Gen. Laws 1883, chap. 55, did not pass to the corporation subsequently organized out of the same territory as Greer county, Oklahoma, by the act of Congress of May 4, 1896 (29 Stat. at L. 113, chap. 155), but, upon the disappearance of the de facto Texas county, such title vested in the state of Texas.

[No. 160.]

Submitted March 6, 1905. Decided March 20, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Court of Civil Appeals for the Third Supreme Judicial District of the State of Texas, to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District Court of Travis County, in that state, in favor of the state in an action to recover lands for which patents were issued to Greer county, Texas, under the mistaken supposition that this county was Texas territory, and as such entitled to share in the grant of lands to each county in the state, for school purposes. Affirmed.

See same case below, 31 Tex. Civ. App. 223, 72 S. W. 104.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. George Clark and H. N. Atkinson submitted the cause for plaintiff in error. Mr. D. C. Bolinger was on the brief:

When a grant is made by a state to an individual or municipal corporation, and the grant is accepted, the contract is complete; and any action by the state through either its legislative, executive, or judicial department, which tends to impair the obligation of such contract, is in violation of U. S. Const. art. 1, § 10.

Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch, 87-148, 3 L. ed. 162-181; Baltimore Trust & G. Co. v. Baltimore, 64 Fed. 153; Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 4 L. ed. 629; Chicago v. Sheldon, 9 Wall. 50, 19 L. ed. 594.

When the land in controversy was patented to Greer county as a part of Texas, such county took title to the land.

Cameron v. State, 95 Tex. 551, 68 S. W. 508.

The grants evidenced by the patents issued by the state of Texas vested title in Greer county, which title, so vested, was beyond recall by the state through any department of its government, executive, legislative, or judicial.

Cameron v. State, 95 Tex. 545, 68 S. W. 508; Milam County v. Bateman, 54 Tex. 166; Palo Pinto County v. Gano, 60 Tex. 251.

The rights of private property are never affected, either by cession, conquest, change of sovereignty, or otherwise, and the change in such sovereignty never divests rights of property. The decision of this court in 1895 that Greer county did not belong to Texas, but was a part of the domain of the United States, can, therefore, have no effect upon the rights of property or grants hitherto made to Greer county by the state of Texas.

United States v. Roselius, 15 How. 36, 14 L. ed. 590; Townsend v. Greely, 5 Wall. 326, 18 L. ed. 547; Dent v. Emmeger, 14 Wall. 308, 20 L. ed. 838; Hardy v. De Leon, 5 Tex. 234; Musquis v. Blake, 23 Tex. 466; Kil- patrick v. Sisneros, 23 Tex. 124; Maxey v. O'Connor, 23 Tex. 242; United States v. Percheman, 7 Pet. 51, 8 L. ed. 604; Strother v. Lucas, 12 Pet. 410, 9 L. ed. 1137; Airhart v. Massieu, 98 U. S. 496, 25 L. ed. 215.
197 U. S.

When the state enters her courts as a suitor or the same law applies to it as to citizens. The undisputed evidence demonstrates that the state of Texas, through all its departments, executive, legislative, and judicial, at the time the lands were granted to Greer county, was fully aware of the controversy then existing between the United States and the state of Texas as to the ownership of the county, and perfected the grants to Greer county with such knowledge. And, where the means of inquiry or knowledge are equally open to both parties, if a mistake occurs without fraud or falsehood, neither party is entitled to relief.

Fristoe v. Blum, 92 Tex. 80, 45 S. W. 998; Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Van Alstyne, 56 Tex. 448; Galveston County v. Gorham, 49 Tex. 303; Gilliam v. Alford, 69 Tex. 271, 6 S. W. 757; Farnsworth v. Duffner, 142 U. S. 43, 35 L. ed. 931, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 164; Baltzer v. Raleigh & A. Air Line R. Co. 115 U. S. 634, 29 L. ed. 505, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 216; May v. Le Claire, 11 Wall. 217, 20 L. ed. 50; Adams, Eq. 7th ed. 166 et seq., and notes; Fonblanque, Eq. 116, and notes.

Mr. C. K. Bell submitted the cause for defendant in error. Mr. T. S. Reese was on the brief:

The grants of 4 leagues of land for school purposes was not to the territory embraced within the limits of Greer county, nor to the inhabitants thereof, but to Greer county as a political subdivision and municipal corporation of the state of Texas, in trust for the benefit of the public free schools of the county as such, and to be administered under the general control and supervision of the legislature.

Palo Pinto County v. Gano, 60 Tex. 251; Worley v. State, 48 Tex. 12.

Upon the decision of this court in the Greer County Case (United States v. Texas, 162 U. S. 1, 40 L. ed. 867, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 725), and the surrender by the political department of the state government of all claim to, or right of control over, the territory formerly embraced in the geographical limits of Greer county, Texas, the title to the lands involved in this suit was extinguished, and the lands reverted to the state.

1 Dill. Mun. Corp. § 169a; Meriwether v. Garrett, 102 U. S. 472, 512, 513, 26 L. ed. 197, 204; Bass v. Fontleroy, 11 Tex. 698.

The grant was not a contract within the meaning of U. S. Const. art. 1, § 10.

East Hartford v. Hartford Bridge Co. 10 How. 511, 13 L. ed. 518; Newton v. Mahoning County, 100 U. S. 548, 25 L. ed. 710.

There is no question presented in the record of legislation impairing the obligation of a contract.

Central Land Co. v. Laidley, 159 U. S. 103-109, 40 L. ed. 91-93, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80.

Mr. C. A. Culberson also submitted the cause for defendant in error. Messrs. R. V. Davidson and T. S. Reese were on his brief.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a suit brought by the state of Texas to recover certain lands in Hockley and Cochran counties, Texas, for which patents were issued to Greer county, Texas, on July 18, 1887, under color of the general laws of the state granting four leagues of land to each county of the state for school purposes. Texas Gen. Laws, 1883, chap. 55. Greer county, Texas, was created by an act of February 8, 1860, and was organized as a county in 1886. In March, 1896, it was decided by this court that the territory known as Greer county belonged to the United States, and not to the state of Texas. United States v. Texas, 162 U. S. 1, 40 L. ed. 867, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 725. Thereupon, by act of Congress of May 4, 1896, chap. 155, the same territory was organized as Greer county, Oklahoma,—the present defendant, plaintiff in error. 29 Stat. at L. 113, chap. 155. On April 13, 1897, Texas passed a law purporting to set aside the land in controversy for the support of [241] schools in *Texas, and directing proceedings to recover the land against all adverse claims. Gen. Laws, 1897, chap. 72. Then this suit was brought. The defendant, among other things, set up that the state was attempting to impair the obligation of its grant.

The case was heard on agreed facts, and the state district court decided in favor of the state, on the ground that the general laws of Texas authorized patents to be issued to the counties of Texas only, and that therefore the patents were void. Another suit was brought against a purchaser from the de facto Texas county of a part of the land, in which the supreme court of the state decided that the purchaser got a good title, holding that the action of the state legislature still was conclusive on the court, notwithstanding the decision in United States v. Texas. Cameron v. State, 95 Tex. 545, 68 S. W. 508. The present cause was taken to the court of civil appeals, which distinguished Cameron v. State, and affirmed the judgment on the different ground that the grant was for public school purposes within the state of Texas; and, as the defendant could not and would not use the land for such purposes, the state was entitled to have the patents canceled and to recover the land. 31 Tex. Civ. App. 223, 72 S. W. 104. Then a writ of error was obtained from this court to enforce the constitutional right alleged by the defendant, as stated above.

The decision below and in Cameron v. Texas suggest interesting questions, which it is not necessary to answer. It may be doubted how far any court can be bound by legislation after this court has declared such legislation beyond the power of the state, any more than it would be if the law had been held unconstitutional. It would be curious to consider whether the mutual mistake in a matter which, on the face of the transaction, obviously went to the root of the gift, was of such a nature as to warrant an avoidance when the mistake was discovered, including the question whether the mistake was one of law or fact. See Bispham v. Price, 15 How. 162, 170, 171, 14 L. ed. 644, 648; Upton v. Tribilcock, 91 U. S. 45, 23 L. ed. 203; Snell v. Atlantic F. & M. Ins. Co. 98 U. S. 85, 90-92, 25 L. ed. 52, 55; Griswold v. Hazard, 141 U. S. 260, 284, 35 L. ed. 678, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 972, 999; *Hirschfield v. London, B. & S. C. R. Co. L. [242] R. 2 Q. B. Div. 1. There is the further consideration whether the gift created a public charity, as contended by the plaintiff in error, and if so, or, whatever the nature of the trust, whether there is such a failure of the donee as to invalidate the gift and to destroy the legal title of the defendant, if otherwise good. See Stratton v. Physio-Medical College, 149 Mass. 505, 508, 5 L. R. A. 33, 14 Am. St. Rep. 442, 21 N. E. 874, and cases cited.

We shall consider none of these questions, because we are of opinion that the plaintiff in error must fail on the short ground that it is a stranger to the gift. The plaintiff in error treats the change brought about by the decision in 162 U. S. 1, 40 L. ed. 867, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 725, as if it had been a cession of territory, or mere transfer of sovereignty by that or other means. It was nothing of the sort. It was a discovery that the state of Texas never had had a title to the land known as Greer county. The United States found itself at liberty to do what it chose with that land. It could have done nothing. It could have subdivided it at will. It could have made it part of some existing county. The land and its inhabitants retained no legal personality, least of all that personality with which Texas had purported to endow them. The United States, it is true, very properly did what it could to preserve the former condition of things. By § 1 of the act of May, 1896 (29 Stat. at L. 113, chap. 155), it provided that "all public buildings and property of every description heretofore belonging to Greer county, Texas, or used in the administration of the public business thereof, is hereby declared to be the property of said Greer county, Oklahoma;" and otherwise it did all in its power to keep up the legal continuity of the county with the supposed old one. But some things were not within its power, and one thing which it could not do was to make an artificial creation of its own successor to the title to lands in Texas, supposing that title to have been parted with, by its independent fiat. Without the consent of Texas no corporation created by another sovereignty could succeed to Texas lands.

[243] *Greer county, Oklahoma, being a corporation created by a different sovereignty from that which purported to create Greer county, Texas, is technically a different person. It can claim the legal title, which Texas purported to convey to a creation of its own, only by succession, or that feigned identity familiar in the cases of executor and heir. See Day v. Worcester, N. & R. R. Co. 151 Mass. 302, 307, 308, 23 N. E. 824; 2 Co. Litt. § 337; North v. Butts, 2 Dyer, 139b, 140a; Oates v. Frith, Hobart, 130a. But succession to land is governed wholly by the law of the place where the land lies. De Vaughn v. Hutchinson, 165 U. S. 566, 570, 41 L. ed. 827, 829, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 461. The land in controversy was no part of Greer county, but lies in Texas; and Texas, so far from having assented to the succession of the defendant, has assumed to deal with the land as its own, by legislation, and has directed this suit to be brought to recover it. The legal title of the state is clear; for, on the disappearance of the de facto county, the state took whatever title that county had. See Meriwether v. Garrett, 102 U. S. 472, 26 L. ed. 197. The legal title is what is in question before us, and the actual continuity of the inhabitants of the county could be recognized only by way of trust. But it would be wrong to encourage the notion that the title still may be charged with a trust in favor of schools in Greer county. The aim of the statute, under which the patents were made out, was the support of Texas schools. That was its dominant purpose. We think it unlikely that any court of equity would deem it equitable to direct the fund to any other trust.

Judgment affirmed.

197 U. S.

*EDWARD H. HARRIMAN, Winslow S. [244]
Pierce, Oregon Short Line Railroad Company, and the Equitable Trust Company of New York, Petitioners,

v.

NORTHERN SECURITIES COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 244-299.)

Certiorari — finality of decree below — final disposition by direction to lower court — judgments — questions not determined by — stare decisis — evidence — sufficiency to establish trust or bailment — contracts — rescission for illegality — in pari delicto — laches and acquiescence.

1. The lack of finality in a decree reversing an order of a circuit court granting a preliminary injunction will not prevent a review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of certiorari issued to a circuit court of appeals, where the record presented the whole case to that court so that it might properly have been finally disposed of in terms by its decree.
2. The Supreme Court of the United States will, by its direction to the circuit court, finally dispose of a cause brought before it on writ of certiorari to a circuit court of appeals, where the record presented the whole case to that court so that it might properly have been finally disposed of by its decree, although it did nothing more than to reverse the decree of the circuit court granting a preliminary injunction.
3. The question whether a corporation organized pursuant to a combination of stockholders in two competing interstate railway companies to acquire a controlling interest in their capital stock holds the same as absolute owner, or as trustee or bailee, was not determined by a decree adjudging the combination to be illegal, enjoining the new corporation from acquiring any further stock, from voting such stock as it then held or might subsequently acquire, and from exercising any control over the railway companies by virtue of its holdings, and restraining the railway companies from permitting or suffering any such action on the part of the new corporation, and from paying any dividends on account of the stock held by it, and providing that nothing therein shall be construed as prohibiting the new corporation

NOTE.—On certiorari in the Federal courts—see notes to Clark v. Hackett, 17 L. ed. U. S. 69, and Lau Ow Bew v. United States, 1 C. C. A. 5.

On obiter dicta—see note to Union P. R. Co. v. Mason City & Ft. D. R. Co. 64 C. C. A. 361.

On the rights of parties in in pari delicto—see notes to Austin v. Davis, 12 L. R. A. 121; Kirkpatrick v. Clark, 8 L. R. A. 511; Richardson v. Buhl, 6 L. R. A. 458; and McClintock v. Loiseau, 2 L. R. A. 817.

As to laches as a defense—see notes to Hammond v. Hopkins, 36 L. ed. U. S. 135; Felix v. Patrick, 36 L. ed. U. S. 720; Middletown v. Newport Hospital, 1 L. R. A. 191; Calhoun v. Dehl & M. R. Co. 8 L. R. A. 248; and Coffey v. Emigh, 10 L. R. A. 125.

from returning the railway shares to the original stockholders, or to the holders and owners of its own stock issued in exchange for these shares.

4. General expressions in an opinion which are not essential to the disposition of the case cannot control the judgment in subsequent suits.
5. A clear preponderance of proof is essential to establish that the parties to a transaction by which a corporation, formed for the purpose, acquired, in exchange for its own capital stock, a controlling interest in the capital stock of two competing interstate railway companies, pursuant to a combination of the stockholders in those companies, agreed that the new corporation should hold such stock as trustee or bailee for the railway stockholders, where the transaction on its face was one of purchase and sale.
6. The rule that property delivered under an illegal contract cannot be recovered back by parties in pari delicto prevents the original stockholders in two competing interstate railway companies from reclaiming the specific shares of stock which they delivered to a stockholding corporation in exchange for its capital stock, pursuant to a combination subsequently adjudged illegal, under which the corporation was to acquire a controlling interest in the capital stock of each of such railway companies; and they must be content with the ratable distribution of the corporate assets resolved upon by the stockholding corporation.
7. Laches and acquiescence would themselves defeat any right of the original stockholders in two competing interstate railway companies to rescind the contract under which they had delivered their stock to a corporation formed in pursuance of a combination under which such corporation was to acquire a controlling interest in the capital stock of the railway companies in exchange for its own capital stock, where such stockholders stood upon their rights as shareholders in the new corporation until nearly a year after the Supreme Court of the United States had adjudged the combination to be illegal, and until the directors of the new corporation resolved upon a ratable distribution of its corporate assets, during which time stock in the new corporation had passed into many hands.
8. Parties to a transaction adjudged to violate the anti-trust act of July 2, 1890 (26 Stat. at L. 209, chap. 647, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3200), are not exempt from the doctrine in pari delicto on the theory that they acted in good faith and without intent to violate the law, where, with knowledge of the facts and of the statute, they acted under the mistaken supposition that the statute would not be held applicable to the facts.

[No. 512.]

Argued March 1, 2, 1905. Decided March 6, 1905.

ON WRIT of certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit to review a judgment which reversed an order of the Circuit Court for the District of New Jersey enjoining the Northern Securities Company from making the ratable distribution of its corporate assets resolved upon by its directors. Affirmed, and the cause remanded to the Circuit Court, with directions to dismiss the bill.

See same case below, 134 Fed. 331.

Statement by Mr. Chief Justice Fuller:
Edward H. Harriman, Winslow S. Pierce, Oregon Short *Line Railroad Company, and [246] the Equitable Trust Company of New York exhibited their bill against the Northern Securities Company in the circuit court of the United States for the district of New Jersey April 20, 1904, on which, with accompanying affidavits and exhibits, a restraining order was issued, pending an application for an injunction as prayed in the bill. April 26 an amended bill was filed, and the application for a preliminary injunction was heard May 20, 21, and 23 by Bradford, J., holding the circuit court.

On the 4th day of June a second amended bill was filed, and on July 15, 1904, Judge Bradford delivered an opinion sustaining the application. 132 Fed. 464.

The order for injunction was entered August 18, 1904, and an appeal therefrom was prosecuted to the circuit court of appeals for the third circuit, which, on January 3, 1905, reversed the order. 134 Fed. 331.

Thereupon complainants applied to this court for the writ of certiorari, which was granted January 30, and the matter advanced for hearing, and heard March 1 and 2. The affirmance of the decree of the circuit court of appeals was announced March 6, it being added that an opinion would be filed afterwards.

The Northern Pacific Railway Company was the successor, through reorganization, of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, and by its charter it was provided that its capital stock might be increased from time to time by a vote of a majority of the stockholders, and that the company might, by a like vote, classify its stock into common and preferred, and might "make such preferred stock convertible into common stock upon such terms and conditions as may be fixed by the board of directors." On July 1, 1896, by the unanimous vote of its then stockholders, the capital stock was increased to $155,000,000, divided into $80,000,000 of common stock and $75,000,000 of preferred stock, and it was resolved "that such preferred stock shall be issued upon the condition that, at its option, the company *may [247] retire the same, in whole or in part, at par, from time to time, on any 1st day of January prior to 1917." The plan of reorganization which was adopted provided that, as to the new company, which it was contemplated should acquire the properties and franchises of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, and the issue of preferred stock by it, "the right will be reserved by the new company to retire this stock, in whole or in part, at par, from time to time, upon any 1st day of January during the next twenty years."

All the certificates of stock, whether common or preferred, at that time or subsequently issued, contained this clause: "The company shall have the right, at its option, and in such manner as it shall determine, to retire the preferred stock, in whole or in part, at par, from time to time, upon any 1st day of January prior to 1917."

The reorganization had been managed by J. P. Morgan & Company, and the directory of the Northern Pacific Railway Company were friendly to that firm. During the same period the president of the Great Northern Railway Company was James J. Hill, and its directors were friendly to him.

The two companies were friendly to each other, and in April, 1901, acquired the shares of the Chicago, Burlington, & Quincy Railroad Company.

At this time the Union Pacific Railway system included the Union Pacific Railway, the railroad of the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company, and the railroad of the Oregon Railroad and Navigation Company. The Union Pacific Company was practically the owner of the entire capital stock of the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company, and the latter company was the owner of practically the entire capital stock of the Oregon Railway & Navigation Company. The interests in control of the Union Pacific system might properly be called the Harriman interests. Shortly thereafter, at the instance of the Union Pacific Railway Company and with money furnished by that company, the Oregon Short Line company purchased Northern Pacific preferred stock to [248] the amount of $41,085,000, *and common stock to the amount of $37,023,000, aggregating $78,100,000 of stock, being a majority of the $155,000,000, total capital stock of the Northern Pacific company as then outstanding. But the preferred stock was subject to retirement at par at the option of the company, and the 370,230 shares of common stock was less than a majority of the total common stock, which majority was held by the Morgan-Hill party.

In October, 1901, complainant Harriman was elected a member of the board of directors of the Northern Pacific Railway Company and James Stillman was re-elected. They were also directors of the Union Pacific Railway Company. They both attended a meeting of the Northern Pacific board on November 13, 1901, and Harriman was chosen a member of the executive committee. At this meeting resolutions were adopted providing for and resulting in the retirement of the preferred stock on January 1, 1902, by the payment of $100 cash for each and every share to each and every holder of record on that day.
197 U. S.

These resolutions declared that the company thereby determined to exercise its right to retire the preferred stock; provided that, for the purpose of raising the funds necessary to do so, the company should issue its negotiable bonds for $75,000,000, convertible at par into shares of the common stock of the company at par; authorized the making of a contract for the sale of all of such bonds at par and accrued interest, the contract to contain a provision giving to the holder of every share of the common stock the opportunity to receive from the contract purchaser, at par and interest, such bonds to an amount equal to seventy-five eightieths of the par amount of said common stock at such time owned by such holder, and arranged for the retirement from and after December 31, 1901, of the $75,000,000 preferred stock, by the payment to each and every holder of record thereof on January 1, 1902, of $100 cash for each and every share.

On November 15, the executive committee of the Northern *Pacific company authorized [249] the execution of a contract with the Standard Trust Company of New York for the sale and delivery of the convertible certificates for $75,000,000 provided for in the resolutions.

The preferred stock was subsequently taken up in accordance with the plan resolved upon.

The Northern Securities Company was incorporated under the laws of New Jersey in November, 1901, its articles of association having been filed at Trenton on the 13th day of that month, with a capital stock of $400,000,000, divided into 4,000,000 shares of the par value of $100 each, and its objects being certified to be:

"(1.) To acquire by purchase, subscription, or otherwise, and to hold as investment, any bonds or other securities or evidences of indebtedness, or any shares of capital stock created or issued by any other corporation or corporations, association, or associations, of the state of New Jersey, or of any other state, territory, or country.

"(2.) To purchase, hold, sell, assign, transfer, mortgage, pledge, or otherwise dispose of, any bonds or other securities or evidences of indebtedness created or issued by any other corporation or corporations, association or associations, of the state of New Jersey, or of any other state, territory, or country, and, while owner thereof, to exercise all the rights, powers, and privileges of ownership.

"(3.) To purchase, hold, sell, assign, transfer, mortgage, pledge, or otherwise dispose of, shares of the capital stock of any other corporation or corporations, association or associations, of the state of New Jersey, or of any other state, territory, or country; and, while owner of such stock, to exercise all the rights, powers, and privileges of ownership, including the right to vote thereon.

"(4.) To aid in any manner any corporation or association of which any bonds or other securities or evidences of indebtedness or stock are held by the corporation; and to do any acts or things designed to protect, [250] preserve, improve, or enhance *the value of any such bonds or other securities or evidences of indebtedness or stock.

"(5.) To acquire, own, and hold such real and personal property as may be necessary or convenient for the transaction of its business.

"The business or purpose of the corporation is from time to time to do any one or more of the acts and things herein set forth.

"The corporation shall have power to conduct its business in other states and in foreign countries, and to have one or more offices out of this state and to hold, purchase, mortgage, and convey real and personal property out of this state."

On the 14th day of November, 1901, fifteen gentlemen, including complainant Harriman and two other directors of the Union Pacific, James J. Hill, president of the Great Northern, and two members of J. P. Morgan & Company, were elected directors of the Northern Securities Company. Complainant Harriman took his seat at the board, and an executive committee of five was elected, of which he was one.

November 15 resolutions were passed authorizing the purchase of the Northern Pacific stock held by Harriman and Pierce, as follows:

"The president stated that he now had an opportunity of acquiring $37,023,000 par value of the common stock, and $41,085,000 par value of the preferred stock, of the Northern Pacific Railway Company, at an aggregate price of $91,407,500, payable, as to $82,491,871, in the fully paid-up and non-assessable shares of this company at par, and, as to the remaining $8,915,629, in cash.

"On motion, and by affirmative vote of all the directors present, it was—

"Resolved, That the president be, and hereby he is, authorized, in behalf of this company, to purchase said stock—namely, $37,023,000 par value of the common stock, and $41,085,000 par value of the preferred stock of the Northern Pacific Railway Company—at an aggregate price of $91,407,500, *payable, as to $82,491,871 thereof, in the [251] fully paid-up and non-assessable shares of the capital stock of this company at par, and, as to $8,915,629, in cash; and that the officers of this company be, and hereby they are, authorized to issue fully paid-up and non-assessable shares of stock of this company to the amount of $82,491,871, and to pay $8,915,629 in cash, in consideration of such $37,023,000 of the common stock and $41,085,000 of the preferred stock of the Northern Pacific Railway Company.

"Resolved, That the president be, and hereby he is, authorized at any time to retire at par, for cash, any and all preferred stock of the Northern Pacific Railway Company that may be acquired by this company, and in case such retirement shall be effected prior to January 1, 1902, to allow interest up to January 1, 1902, at the rate of 4 per cent per annum on the sum receivable for such preferred stock.

"Resolved, That the president be, and hereby he is, authorized in behalf of this company to purchase at their par value an amount of the convertible certificates of the Northern Pacific Railway Company, to be issued pursuant to the resolutions of the board of directors of the Northern Pacific Railway Company, passed November 13, 1901, equal to seventy-five eightieths of the par amount of any and all common stock of the Northern Pacific Railway Company that shall have been acquired by this company.

"Resolved, That the president be, and hereby he is, authorized, in case of the purchase by this company of any of the convertible certificates of the Northern Pacific Railway Company, to convert the same into common stock of the Northern Pacific Railway Company whenever such conversion may be effected.

"Resolved, That the president be, and hereby he is, authorized to borrow, on such terms as he may arrange, any moneys required for the purpose of carrying out the foregoing resolutions, and to make all financial arrangements, *and to do all acts and [252] things, which he may deem needful in the premises."

Complainant Harriman and his codirectors of the Union Pacific were not present at this meeting, but were present at the next meeting of the board on November 19, at which the minutes of the meeting of November 15 were read and on motion were approved.

At a subsequent meeting of the executive committee, in which Mr. Harriman participated, the form of the company's permanent stock certificate, being the usual form, was unanimously approved.

In the meantime, and on November 18, Harriman and Pierce had delivered their Northern Pacific stock to the Northern Securities Company, and that company had delivered to them the 824,000 shares of its stock and $8,915,629 in cash.

The Northern Pacific stock certificates received from Harriman and Pierce were surrendered by the Securities company to the Northern Pacific Railway Company. The certificates for the 370,230 shares of common stock were exchanged for 370,230 shares of common stock issued in the name of the Northern Securities Company. The certificates for the 410,580 shares of preferred stock were surrendered to the Northern Pacific Railway Company for retirement, and paid for and retired as provided, the transaction resulting in the receipt by the Northern Securities Company of certificates for 347,090 shares of new common stock. This made 717,320 shares, and the Securities company also acquired 820,270 shares, from a large number of separate individual owners. And from a large number of stockholders of the Great Northern 1,181,242 shares of the stock of the latter company.

At a meeting of the board of directors of the Northern Securities Company on January 22, 1903, at which complainant Harriman was present, the sale by the company of 75,000 shares of its own stock for cash was approved. The second amended bill says $7,522,000 "was issued for cash used for the purchase of other property, and for corporate purposes."

[253] *From the organization of the Securities company until the affirmance of the decree in the government suit, hereafter mentioned, complainants continued to exercise the right of holders of 824,000 shares of stock in the Securities company; received their share of dividends, and gave their proxy to vote at the annual meetings of 1902 and 1903.

July 17, 1902, Harriman and Pierce and the Oregon Short Line Company pledged the 824,000 shares of Northern Securities Company stock to the Equitable Trust Company, the Short Line Company executing a trust indenture, which contained this clause: "The deposit and pledge hereunder of said shares of stock, or of any other securities which shall become subject to this indenture, shall not prevent the consolidation, union, or merger with any other corporation of the Securities company, or of any other corporation by which said securities shall have been issued, or the sale of its property or the distribution of its assets. In any such case the trustee shall receive such amounts of stock, bonds, or other securities, or money, or of either or all of them, as the holders of the pledged shares of stock of the Securities company, or other pledged securities, as the case may be, shall be entitled to receive, and, upon receipt thereof, shall surrender the deposited stock certificates or other securities."

March 10, 1902, a bill was exhibited in the circuit court of the United States for the district of Minnesota by the United States against the Northern Securities Company, the Northern Pacific Railway Company, the Great Northern Railway Company, James J. Hill, William P. Clough, D. Willis James, John S. Kennedy, J. Pierpont Morgan, Robert Bacon, George F. Baker, and Daniel S. Lamont, to restrain the violation of the act of Congress of July 2, 1890, 26 Stat. at L. 209, chap. 647 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3200), entitled "An Act to Protect Trade and Commerce against Unlawful Restraints and Monopolies," which resulted April 9, 1903, in a decision in favor of complainants (120 Fed. 721), and a decree as follows:

"That the defendants above named have heretofore entered *into a combination or [254] conspiracy in restraint of trade and commerce among the several states, such as an act of Congress, approved July 2, 1890, entitled 'An Act to Protect Trade and Commerce against Unlawful Restraints and Monopolies,' denounces as illegal; that all of the stock of the Northern Pacific Railway Company and all the stock of the Great Northern Railway Company, now claimed to be held and owned by the defendant, the Northern Securities Company, was acquired and is now held by it in virtue of such combination or conspiracy in restraint of trade and commerce among the several states; that the Northern Securities Company, its officers, agents, servants, and employees, be, and they are hereby, enjoined from acquiring, or attempting to acquire, further stock of either of the aforesaid railway companies; that the Northern Securities Company be enjoined from voting the aforesaid stock which it now holds or may acquire, and from attempting to vote it, at any meeting of the stockholders of either of the aforesaid railway companies, and from exercising, or attempting to exercise, any control, direction, supervision, or influence whatsoever over the acts and doings of said railway companies, or either of them, by virtue of its holding such stock therein; that the Northern Pacific Railway Company and the Great Northern Railway Company, their officers, directors, servants, and agents, be, and they are hereby, respectively and collectively enjoined from permitting the stock aforesaid to be voted by the Northern Securities Company, or in its behalf, by its attorneys or agents, at any corporate election for directors or officers of either of the aforesaid railway companies, and that they, together with their officers, directors, servants, and agents, be likewise enjoined and respectively restrained from paying any dividends to the Northern Securities Company on account of stock in either of the aforesaid railway companies which it now claims to own and hold; and that the aforesaid railway companies, their officers, directors, servants, and agents, be enjoined from permitting or suffering the Northern Securities Company, or *any of its officers or agents as such officers or agents, to exercise any control whatsoever over the corporate acts of either of the aforesaid railway companies. But nothing herein contained shall be construed as prohibiting the Northern Securities Company from returning and transferring to the stockholders of the Northern Pacific Railway Company and the Great Northern Railway Company, respectively, any and all shares of stock in either of said railway companies which said the Northern Securities Company may have heretofore received from such stockholders in exchange for its own stock; and nothing herein contained shall be construed as prohibiting the Northern Securities Company from making such transfer and assignments of the stock aforesaid to such person or persons as may now be the holders and owners of its own stock originally issued in exchange or in payment for the stock claimed to have been acquired by it in the aforesaid railway companies."

The case was brought to this court, and March 14, 1904, the decree was affirmed. 193 U. S. 197, 48 L. ed. 679, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436.

March 22, 1904, the board of directors of the Northern Securities Company adopted the following preamble and resolutions:

"Whereas, in the course of its business, this company has acquired, and now holds, 1,537,594 shares in the capital stock of the Northern Pacific Railway Company; and 1,181,242 shares in the capital stock of the Great Northern Railway Company; and

"Whereas, in a suit brought by the United States against this company, the said railway companies, and others, this company has been enjoined from voting upon the shares of either of the said railway companies, and each of the said railway companies has been enjoined from paying to this company any dividends upon any of the shares of such railway company held by this company; and

"Whereas, this company has issued, and there are now outstanding, 3,954,000 shares of its own capital stock; and [256] "Whereas, this company desires and intends to comply with the decree in the said suit, fully and unreservedly, and without delay:

"Resolved, In consideration of the premises, it is declared necessary and desirable for this company so to reduce its present stock as will enable it, without delay, in connection with such reduction, to distribute among its shareholders the shares of capital stock of said railroad companies held by it.

"Resolved, That the board of directors of this company hereby declares it advisable that article (4th) of this company's certificate of incorporation be amended, so as to read as follows:

"Fourth. The capital stock of this company is hereby reduced to three million nine hundred and fifty-four thousand dollars ($3,954,000), and shall hereafter be three million nine hundred and fifty-four thousand dollars ($3,954,000), divided into thirty-nine thousand five hundred forty (39,540) shares of one hundred dollars ($100) each. Such reduction of capital stock shall be accomplished by each holder of outstanding shares of this company's stock surrendering to the company, for retirement, ninety-nine (99) per centum of the shares held by him.

"Upon the surrender to this company, by any shareholder, of the entire number of shares, and parts of shares, of this company's stock, which he is hereby required to surrender, this company will assign to him, for each share so surrendered, thirty-nine dollars and twenty-seven cents ($39.27) of the stock of the Northern Pacific Railway Company, and thirty dollars and seventeen cents ($30.17) of the preferred stock of the Great Northern Railway Company, and proportional amounts thereof for fractional shares of the stock of this company.

"The board of directors or executive committee from time to time shall make such rules and regulations as it shall deem necessary or convenient for carrying out the provisions hereof, and all matters pertaining to the surrender and retirement *of the stock [257] of this company, or to the assignment and transfer of the stocks of the said railway companies, hereby contemplated, shall be under the direction of the board. For the purposes hereof, the stockholders of this company, and the number of shares held by them, respectively, shall be determined from the stock transfer books of the company, which, for such determination, shall be closed at a day and hour to be determined by resolution of the board.

"Resolved, That a meeting of the stockholders of this company, for the purpose of taking action upon the said alteration of the certificate of incorporation of this company, and also upon such other business as may come before the meeting, be, and is hereby called, to be held at the general offices of this company in the city of Hoboken, county of Hudson, and state of New Jersey, at 11 o'clock A. M., on April 21, A. D. 1904."

Notice was accordingly given that the meeting of the stockholders would be held on April 21, and a copy of the resolutions and an explanatory letter were sent to the Attorney General of the United States. Early in April the three principal complainants in the present suit presented to the circuit court for the district of Minnesota their petition for leave to intervene in the suit of the United States against the Northern Securities Company, setting up substantially the same grounds as in this suit, and seeking similar relief. This application was heard at St. Paul April 12 and 13. The government appeared by the Attorney General, and filed a declaration that it was satisfied with the relief granted. April 19, 1904, the court rendered its decision, denying leave to intervene. 128 Fed. 808.

Up to April 18, 1904, the Securities Company had issued 86,945 certificates of stock and there had been 16,000 transfers registered on the books of the company. At the closing of the transfer books on that day there were 3,953,971 shares of stock outstanding in the hands of 2,531 separate holders.

[258] *The meeting of the stockholders of the Northern Securities Company was duly held April 21, 1904; and at that meeting the stock of the company was reduced 99 per cent, and the proposed pro rata distribution of the stock of the Northern Pacific Railway Company and of the preferred stock of the Great Northern Railway Company, to and amongst the shareholders of the Northern Securities Company, was assented to. Two million nine hundred and forty-four thousand seven hundred and forty shares were represented, and all voted for the plan adopted by the directors.

As has been stated, the second amended bill was filed after the hearing on the application for the preliminary injunction, and it was therein alleged, among other things, that the Northern Securities Company was incorporated and organized in pursuance of a combination in restraint of trade and commerce among the several states; that the said company was to "acquire and permanently hold a majority of the shares of the capital stock of said Great Northern and Northern Pacific companies and control the operation and management thereof in perpetuity, and that the then existing holders of such railway shares should deposit the same with said holding company and receive in lieu thereof share certificates of said holding company upon the basis of $180 par value of its stock for each share of Great Northern stock and $115 par value of its stock for each share of Northern Pacific stock, and that said holding company should act as custodian, depository, or trustee of said railway shares on behalf of the existing stockholders of said railway companies and their assigns.

"That prior to the incorporation of said Northern Securities Company your orator Oregon Short Line Railroad Company had acquired, and at the time of the incorporation and organization of said Securities company owned, $37,023,000 par value of the common stock and $41,085,000 par value of the preferred stock of the defendant Northern Pacific Railway Company represented by certificates issued to and registered in the name of your orators Harriman and Pierce; and that after *the incor-[259] poration of the said Northern Securities Company had been resolved upon as aforesaid, your orators Harriman, Pierce, and Oregon Short Line Railroad Company agreed with the promoters and incorporators of said Northern Securities Company to transfer to and deposit with said Northern Securities Company, under the terms and conditions aforesaid, the said shares of said Northern Pacific Railway Company of the aggregate par value of $78,108,000 owned by said Oregon Short Line Railroad Company as aforesaid, and to receive in exchange therefor certificates of said Northern Securities Company representing an interest therein of $82,491,871 par value and $8,915,629 in cash, and in pursuance of said agreement your orators Harriman and Pierce, acting for your orator Oregon Short Line Railroad Company, did, on or about the 18th day of November, 1901, transfer and deliver to said Northern Securities Company certificates for $37,023,000 par value of the common stock and $41,085,000 par value of the preferred stock of said Northern Pacific Railway Company owned by your said orator as aforesaid, and received in exchange therefor certificates of said Northern Securities Company representing an interest in $82,491,871 par value and said cash. . . ."

"That at the time of such exchange, on said 18th of November, 1901, it was agreed between said Harriman and Pierce and said defendant, Northern Securities Company, that the said $41,085,000 par value of said preferred stock of the said Northern Pacific Railway Company should be converted into common stock of said Northern Pacific Railway Company; that said preferred stock was subsequently and in or about the month of December, 1901, converted by said defendant Northern Securities Company into common stock of said Northern Pacific Railway Company of the same par value; that certificates for $34,709,062 par value of such common stock registered in its name on the books of said railway company were substituted in lieu and place of the certificates for said preferred stock; that said Northern Securities Company *caused said original common stock to be transferred into its name upon the books of said railway company, and that said Northern Securities Company now holds within the jurisdiction of this court certificates registered in its name on the books of the Northern Pacific Company for said common stock so originally received from your orators Harriman and Pierce, and for said common stock into which said preferred stock was so converted and certificates substituted as aforesaid.”

“Your orators are advised by counsel, and, therefore, aver, that the effect of said decree of April 9, 1903, as affirmed by the Supreme Court of the United States, was to adjudge that the Northern Securities Company was not a purchaser or owner, but simply a custodian, of the shares of stock of said railway company acquired and held by it as aforesaid; that it acquired and held possession thereof in violation of said anti-trust act; that it acquired no title thereto, and cannot transfer any rights in respect thereof; and that the legal and equitable owners of said shares of the stock of said railway companies were and are the several parties who originally exchanged the same for stock of the Northern Securities Company or their assigns.”

The prayer of the bill was “that it be decreed that said proposed plan of distribution is illegal and contrary to law and in violation of the rights and equities of your orators, and that the complainants are entitled to the return and transfer to them by the defendant Northern Securities Company of the shares of common stock of said Northern Pacific Railway Company which were so delivered by said Harriman and Pierce, and the shares of common stock into which the preferred stock of the Northern Pacific Railway Company, delivered by them, were converted, in exchange for the certificates of stock of the Northern Securities Company so issued to and now held by your orators, and such sum in cash as may be just; and that the said defendant, Northern Securities Company, its directors, officers, and agents, may be ordered and [261] directed to indorse *the certificates now held by it for said stock of the Northern Pacific Railway Company to your said orator Oregon Short Line Railroad Company or in blank, and deliver the same to your orator the Equitable Trust Company of New York in exchange for the stock of the Northern Securities Company now held by it, to be held subject to its rights and lien as trustee aforesaid; and that the defendant Northern Securities Company, its directors, officers, agents, and employees, be perpetually enjoined and restrained from in any manner parting with, disposing of, transferring, assigning, or distributing, any part of said stock of the Northern Pacific Railway Company so received from your orators Harriman and Pierce as aforesaid, or any common stock into which the preferred stock received from them may have been converted, or the certificates now representing the same or any part thereof, except to return the same to your orators in exchange for its own stock so issued as aforesaid and said cash; and that your orators have such other or further or general relief against said Northern Securities Company as shall be proper and just under the circumstances of the case.

“Your orators further pray that the defendant, Northern Securities Company, may be enjoined and restrained from parting with, disposing of, transferring, assigning, or distributing, said stock of the Northern Pacific Railway Company, or any part thereof, during the pendency of this suit, or any certificates now representing the same.”

The proofs embraced the pleadings and decrees in the suit of United States v. Northern Securities Company; the ex parte affidavits of Harriman, Hill, and others; the deposition of Harriman taken before the Interstate Commerce Commission at Chicago in January, 1902; the deposition of Harriman taken in the suit of Minnesota v. Northern Securities Company in December, 1902; extracts from the minutes of proceedings of the board of directors of the Northern Pacific Railway Company, and of the executive committee and board of directors of the Northern Securities Company.

Messrs. William D. Guthrie and D. T. Watson argued the cause, and, with Messrs. R. S. Lovett, Maxwell Evarts, John F. Dillon, R. V. Lindabury, and Bainbridge Colby, filed a brief for petitioners:

The practice of granting an injunction to stay a threatened disposition of property pendente lite, which, if not restrained, would render a final judgment wholly ineffectual, is firmly established.

Georgia v. Brailsford, 2 Dall. 402, 1 L. ed. 433; Glascott v. Lang, 3 Mylne & C. 451; Great Western R. Co. v. Birmingham & O. J. R. Co. 2 Phill. Ch. 597; Casey v. Cincinnati Typographical Union No. 3, 12 L. R. A. 193, 45 Fed. 135; Blount v. Societe Anonyme, 3 C. C. A. 455, 6 U. S. App. 335, 53 Fed. 98;

Newton v. Levis, 25 C. C. A. 161, 49 U. S. App. 266, 79 Fed. 715; Southern P. Co. v. Earl, 27 C. C. A. 185, 48 U. S. App. 716, 82 Fed. 690; Allison v. Corson, 33 C. C. A. 12, 60 U. S. App. 387, 88 Fed. 581; Denver & R. G. R. Co. v. United States, 59 C. C. A. 579, 124 Fed. 156; Atlanta, K. & N. R. Co. v. Southern R. Co. 131 Fed. 657; Harriman v. Northern Securities Co. 132 Fed. 464; Bloxam v. Metropolitan R. Co. L. R. 3 Ch. 337; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 120 Fed. 981; Cartersville Light & P. Co. v. Cartersville, 114 Fed. 699; Utah, N. & C. R. Co. v. Utah & C. R. Co. 110 Fed. 879; Cohen v. Delavina, 104 Fed. 946; United States v. Duluth, 1 Dill. 469, Fed. Cas. No. 15,001; Andrae v. Redfield, 12 Blatchf. 407, Fed. Cas. No. 367; Charles v. Marion, 98 Fed. 166; Jensen v. Norton, 12 C. C. A. 608, 29 U. S. App. 121, 64 Fed. 662.

The several circuit courts of appeals are justified in reversing orders of the circuit courts granting preliminary injunction, only when the discretion of the latter has been improperly exercised or abused.

Rahley v. Columbia Phonograph Co. 58 C. C. A. 639, 122 Fed. 623; United States Gramophone Co. v. Seaman, 51 C. C. A. 419, 113 Fed. 745; Railroad Commission v. J. Rosenbaum Grain Co. 64 C. C. A. 444, 130 Fed. 110; Massie v. Buck, 62 C. C. A. 535, 128 Fed. 27; Kerr v. New Orleans, 61 C. C. A. 450, 126 Fed. 920; Workingmen's Amalgamated Council v. United States, 6 C. C. A. 258, 13 U. S. App. 426, 57 Fed. 85; Louisville Home Teleph. Co. v. Cumberland, Telcph. & Teleg. Co. 49 C. C. A. 524, 111 Fed. 663; Loew Filter Co. v. German-American Filter Co. 47 C. C. A. 94, 107 Fed. 949; Paris Medicine Co. v. W. H. Hill Co. 42 C. C. A. 227, 102 Fed. 148; Proctor & G. Co. v. Globe Ref. Co. 34 C. C. A. 405, 92 Fed. 357; Societe Anonyme v. Allen, 33 C. C. A. 282, 61 U. S. App. 734, 90 Fed. 815; Thomson-Houston Electric Co. v. Ohio Brass Co. 26 C. C. A. 107, 54 U. S. App. 1, 80 Fed. 712; Carrett v. T. H. Garrett & Co. 24 C. C. A. 173, 47 U. S. App. 250, 78 Fed. 472; Thompson v. Nelson, 18 C. C. A. 137, 37 U. S. App. 478, 71 Fed. 339; Duplex-Printing-Press Co. v. Campbell Printing-Press & Mfg. Co. 16 C. C. A. 220, 37 U. S. App. 250, 69 Fed. 250; New Albany Waterworks v. Louisville Bkg. Co. 58 C. C. A. 576, 122 Fed. 776; F. C. Austin Mfg. Co. v. American Wellworks, 57 C. C. A. 330, 121 Fed. 76; Chickering v. Chickering & Sons, 56 C. C. A. 475, 120 Fed. 69; Bartholomew v. Union Paper & Bag Co. 51 C. C. A. 250, 113 Fed. 289; Terre Haute v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 40 C. C. A. 117, 99 Fed. 838; Bradshaw v. Miners' Bank, 23 C. C. A. 578, 46 U. S. App. 663, 77 Fed. 932; Denver & R. G. R. Co. v. United States, 59 C. C. A. 579, 124 Fed. 156; Stearns-
197 U. S.

Roger Mfg. Co. v. Brown, 52 C. C. A. 559, 114 Fed. 939; Higginson v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. 42 C. C. A. 254, 102 Fed. 197; Dimick v. Shaw, 36 C. C. A. 347, 94 Fed. 266; Newton v. Levis, 25 C. C. A. 161, 49 U. S. App. 266, 79 Fed. 715; Empire State-Idaho Min. & Developing Co. v. Bunker Hill & S. Min. & Concentrating Co. 58 C. C. A. 311, 121 Fed. 973; Murray v. Vender, 48 C. C. A. 555, 109 Fed. 585; Pacific Steam Whaling Co. v. Alaska Packers' Asso. 40 C. C. A. 494, 100 Fed. 462; Southern P. Co. v. Earl, 27 C. C. A. 185, 48 U. S. App. 716, 82 Fed. 690; Shea v. Nilima, 133 Fed. 209.

The appellate tribunal will not assume the determination of the whole controversy without a proper prior adjudication by the court of first instance.

Webster v. Cooper, 10 How. 54, 55, 13 L. ed. 325, 326; Jewell v. Knight, 123 U. S. 426, 433, 31 L. ed. 190, 192, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 193; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Tompkins, 176 U. S. 167, 179, 44 L. ed. 417, 422, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336.

Such a course of procedure would give a defendant an unfair and unwarranted advantage, and completely overturn the fundamental principles upon which the courts have heretofore proceeded in granting preliminary injunctions.

Brill v. Peckham Motor Truck & Wheel Co. 189 U. S. 57, 63, 47 L. ed. 706, 709, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 562.

The original contract being for an illegal purpose could confer no rights of ownership; and the corporation had no legal right or power to make the acquisition for any such illegal purpose. The whole transaction was illegal, ultra vires, and void from the beginning to the end.

Ashbury R. Carriage & Iron Co. v. Riche, L. R. 7 H. L. 653; Thomas v. West Jersey R. Co. 101 U. S. 71, 80, 83, 25 L. ed. 950, 951, 952; Oregon R. & Nav. Co. v. Oregonian R. Co. 130 U. S. 1, 22, 32 L. ed. 837, 840, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 409; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. St. Louis, A. & T. H. R. Co. 118 U. S. 290, 308, 317, 30 L. ed. 83, 91, 94, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1194; Jacksonville, M. P. R. & Nav. Co. v. Hooper, 160 U. S. 514, 524, 40 L. ed. 515, 523, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 379; Dwight v. Brewster, 1 Pick. 50, 11 Am. Dec. 133.

The settled rule is that such a contract is wholly void and of no effect for any purpose. The objection is not merely that the corporation ought not to have made it, but that it could not make it. The contract cannot be ratified or confirmed by the stockholders because it could not have been authorized by them. And no performance can give the unlawful agreement any validity by way of estoppel or otherwise, or be the foundation of any right.

Thomas v. West Jersey R. Co. 101 U. S.

71, 86, 25 L. ed. 950, 953; Scovill v. Thayer, 105 U. S. 143, 149, 26 L. ed. 968, 971; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. St. Louis, A. & T. R. Co. 118 U. S. 290, 310, 30 L. ed. 83, 92, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1194; Oregon R. & Nav. Co. v. Oregonian R. Co. 130 U. S. 1, 38, 32 L. ed. 837, 846, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 409; Central Transp. Co. v. Pullman's Palace Car Co. 139 U. S. 24, 60, 35 L. ed. 55, 68, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478; McCormick v. Market Nat. Bank, 165 U. S. 538, 550, 41 L. ed. 817, 821, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 433; California Nat. Bank v. Kennedy, 167 U. S. 362, 368, 42 L. ed. 198, 200, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 831; Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Central Transp. Co. 171 U. S. 138, 43 L. ed. 108, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808.

It is also the settled doctrine of this court that any contract made in violation of a statute is void.

Gibbs v. Consolidated Gas Co. 130 U. S. 396, 410, 32 L. ed. 979, 984, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 553; Miller v. Ammon, 145 U. S. 421, 426, 36 L. ed. 759, 762, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 884; Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540, 548, 46 L. ed. 679, 685, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431.

No right can be acquired under such a contract.

Montgomery v. United States, 15 Wall. 395, 399, 21 L. ed. 97, 98. To the same effect, see Dcsmare v. United States, 93 U. S. 605, 612, 23 L. ed. 959, 960; Sprott v. United States, 20 Wall. 459, 461, 22 L. ed. 371; United States v. Lapene, 17 Wall. 601-603, 21 L. ed. 693, 694; United States v. Grossmayer, 9 Wall. 72, 76, 19 L. ed. 627, 629; The Ouachita Cotton (Whitenbury v. United States) 6 Wall. 521, 532, 18 L. ed. 935, 939; Bank of United States v. Owens, 2 Pet. 527, 541, 7 L. ed. 508, 513.

The law implies that when property is transferred for an illegal purpose which has been terminated, prevented, or abandoned, the holder will return the property on demand.

Chapman v. Douglas County, 107 U. S. 348, 355, 27 L. ed. 378, 381, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62; American Tube Works v. Boston Mach. Co. 139 Mass. 5, 29 N. E. 63; Louisiana v. Wood, 102 U. S. 294, 299, 26 L. ed. 153, 155; Parkersburg v. Brown, 106 U. S. 487, 503, 27 L. ed. 238, 245, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 442; Davis v. Old Colony R. Co. 131 Mass. 258, 41 Am. Rep. 221; White v. Franklin Bank, 22 Pick. 181; Lacaussade v. White, 7 T. R. 535.

The present suit is in no sense whatever an action on an illegal contract, or to enforce an illegal agreement. On the contrary, it is brought on repudiation thereof by both parties.

National Bank & Loan Co. v. Petrie, 189 U. S. 423, 425, 47 L. ed. 879, 880, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 512.

No precedents in support of the right to recover could be stronger than the series of decisions in the long controversy between the Pullman Palace Car Company and Central Transportation Company, where, although the contract was illegal and the parties in pari delicto, return of the property delivered under the illegal lease, or its value, was ultimately decreed.

Central Transp. Co. v. Pullman's Palace Car Co. 139 U. S. 24, 35 L. ed. 55, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478, 65 Fed. 158, 171 U. S. 138, 43 L. ed. 108, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808.

The defense that a lessee could retain the leased property by pleading illegality after the illegal lease had come to an end by the expiration of the time fixed by the parties was interposed in the case of Sittel v. Wright, 58 C. C. A. 416, 122 Fed. 434, but it was overruled as utterly untenable.

See Manchester & L. R. Co. v. Concord R. Corp. 66 N. H. 100, 9 L. R. A. 689, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 319, 49 Am. St. Rep. 582, 20 Atl. 383.

The settled rule as to the invalidity and nullity of contracts entered into in violation of statutes or public policy has been uniformly applied in analogous cases arising out of contracts relating to illegal combinations or trusts.

Langdon v. Central R. & Bkg. Co. 2 L. R. A. 120, 37 Fed. 449; State ex rel. Watson v. Standard Oil Co. 49 Ohio St. 137, 15 L. R. A. 145, 34 Am. St. Rep. 541, 30 N. E. 279; People ex rel. Peabody v. Chicago Gas Trust Co. 130 Ill. 268, 8 L. R. A. 497, 17 Am. St. Rep. 319, 22 N. E. 798; People v. North River Sugar Ref. Co. 121 N. Y. 582, 9 L. R. A. 33, 18 Am. St. Rep. 843, 24 N. E. 834; Cameron v. Havemeyer, 25 Abb. N. C. 438, 12 N. Y. Supp. 126; Unckles v. Colgate, 148 N. Y. 529, 43 N. E. 59; State v. Nebraska Distilling Co. 29 Neb. 700, 46 N. W. 155.

The cases holding that a bona fide purchaser may acquire a good title from one holding possession under an illegal contract are obviously distinguishable, because in such cases the doctrine of estoppel operates to prevent the real owner from asserting his title, or the right of the custodian as his agent, against the innocent third party, but not to affirm any title in the one having such illegal possession, or in anyone acquiring with full notice.

Cowdrey v. Vandenburg, 101 U. S. 572, 575, 576, 25 L. ed. 923, 924, 925; Anderson v. Armstead, 69 Ill. 452.

The ownership of the railroad stocks remains in the original depositors as the necessary and logical result of the adjudication that the Northern Securities Company had acquired and held property as a mere "holding" company, in violation of the act of Congress, and could return the stocks to the original stockholders of the respective railway companies, because no performance on either side can give the unlawful contract any validity, or be the foundation of any right of action upon it.

Central Transp. Co. v. Pullman's Palace Car Co. 139 U. S. 24, 60, 35 L. ed. 55, 68, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478.

The extent and effect of the decision of any court as res judicata or as a judicial precedent must be ascertained not merely from the decree or mandate, but also from the pleadings and the opinions delivered by the court. It is likewise proper to refer to the evidence before the court and to the arguments of counsel whenever necessary, in order to determine exactly what points the court has ruled upon. The court is always at liberty to refer to its own records.

Dimmick v. Tompkins, 194 U. S. 540, 548, 48 L. ed. 1110, 1113, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 780; Bienville Water Supply Co. v. Mobile, 186 U. S. 212, 217, 46 L. ed. 1132, 1134, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 820; Butler v. Eaton, 141 U. S. 240, 243, 35 L. ed. 713, 714, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 985.

Every question directly presented by the issues, and discussed and passed upon in the opinions, is as much a part of the decision and judgment of the court as if it had been expressly recited in its decree or mandate. So the mandate of this court is always to be read in the light of its opinion; and it has never been the practice to recite in the mandate any of the points decided, but simply to declare the ultimate conclusion of affirmation, reversal, dismissal, or qualification of the decree below.

Last Chance Min. Co. v. Tyler Min. Co. 157 U. S. 683, 690, 39 L. ed. 859, 862, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 733; Re Sanford Fork & Tool Co. 160 U. S. 247, 256, 40 L. ed. 414, 416, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 291; Re Potts, 166 U. S. 263, 265, 41 L. ed. 994, 995, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 520; Baker v. Cummings, 181 U. S. 117, 126, 45 L. ed. 776, 780, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 578; National Foundry & Pipe Works v. Oconto Water Supply Co. 183 U. S. 216, 234, 46 L. ed. 157, 169, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111.

All identified in interest and in privity with one of the litigating parties are concluded by a judgment and entitled to invoke its effect.

New Orleans v. Citizens' Bank, 167 U. S. 371, 396, 42 L. ed. 202, 210, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 905.

Even if the decision in the government suit does not constitute res judicata in the strict technical sense which we earnestly claim it does, it undoubtedly should have been regarded as a controlling judicial precedent on the same facts sufficient to establish prima facie all that the complainants were called upon to show on the motion for a preliminary injunction.

Brill v. Peckham Motor Truck & Wheel Co. 189 U. S. 57, 59-63, 47 L. ed. 706, 707-709, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 562; American Bell Teleph. Co. v. National Improved Teleph. Co. 27 Fed. 663; Kerr v. New Orleans, 61 C. C. A. 450, 126 Fed. 920.

A stockholder is so far an integral part of the corporation that he is considered privy to any legal proceedings touching its status and powers. His stock may not be fully paid up or issued for a legal consideration, but nevertheless he is a stockholder so long as he stands registered as such on the books of the company. The real parties in interest behind the corporations are always the stockholders. Thus if a corporation has been adjudged insolvent in legal proceedings, this adjudication of its status is binding upon every stockholder for reasons quite applicable to the question now being considered.

Sanger v. Upton, 91 U. S. 56, 59, 23 L. ed. 220, 221. See also Hawkins v. Glenn, 131 U. S. 319, 329, 33 L. ed. 184, 191, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 739; Glenn v. Liggett, 135 U. S. 533, 544, 34 L. ed. 262, 267, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 867; Great Western Teleg. Co. v. Purdy, 162 U. S. 329, 337, 40 L. ed. 986, 990, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 810; 3 Cook, Corp. 5th ed. § 750; Herman, Estoppel & Res Adjudicata, 154, 165; Hale v. Hardon, 37 C. C. A. 240, 95 Fed. 747; Hendrickson v. Bradley, 29 C. C. A. 303, 55 U. S. App. 715, 85 Fed. 508; Wilson v. Seymour, 22 C. C. A. 477, 40 U. S. App. 567, 76 Fed. 678; National Foundry & Pipe Works v. Oconto Water Co. 68 Fed. 1006; Secor v. Singleton, 41 Fed. 725.

Moreover, the Securities company, the custodian or trustee of the railway shares deposited with it, represented the complainants as cestuis que trust. It is a familiar rule that in suits respecting trust property all the cestuis que trust are fully represented by the trustee and bound by the decree. The reason is that through the trustee their rights are deemed to have been fully and effectually presented and protected.

Kerrison v. Stewart, 93 U. S. 155, 160, 23 L. ed. 843, 845; Graham v. Boston, H. & E. R. Co. 118 U. S. 161, 179, 30 L. ed. 196, 205, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1009; McCampbell v. Mason, 151 Ill. 500, 38 N. E. 672; McElrath v. Pittsburg & S. R. Co. 68 Pa. 37.

Mr. Harriman's testimony in the government suit does not estop the complainants from showing the real facts, and operates to validate the contract and to vest legal title in the Securities company.

Sturm v. Boker, 150 U. S. 312, 336, 37 L. ed. 1093, 1102, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 99; Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. Phinney, 178 U. S. 327, 342, 343, 44 L. ed. 1088, 1095, 1096, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 906.

Whatever the parties may think, their legal relations are to be determined by the legal consequences of their acts.

Towle v. White, 29 L. T. N. S. 78.

This court has often pointed out that, although parties may industriously and repeatedly call a transaction what it is not, even in the most formal instruments, the words, as well as the form or the name, are of little account, but that it is the legal effect of the whole transaction which is to be sought for and gathered from the acts of the parties.

Heryford v. Davis, 102 U. S. 235, 243, 244, 246, 26 L. ed. 160, 162, 163; Chicago R. Equipment Co. v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 136 U. S. 268, 280, 34 L. ed. 349, 352, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 999; McGourkey v. Toledo & O. C. R. Co. 146 U. S. 536, 569, 36 L. ed. 1079, 1091, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 170.

In a word, equity looks behind the mask at the true face; behind the form to the fact.

McNamara v. Culver, 22 Kan. 661; Peugh v. Davis, 96 U. S. 332, 336, 24 L. ed. 775, 776.

The failure of Mr. Hill and Mr. Clough to deny or controvert the fundamental material allegations of the bill as to the objects for which their company had been organized by them and their associates is equivalent to an admission of the truth of the allegations.

Young v. Grundy, 6 Craneh. 51, 3 L. ed. 149; Agawan Woollen Co. v. Jordan, 7 Wall. 583, 609, 19 L. ed. 177, 184; Brown v. Pacific Mail S. S. Co. 5 Blatchf. 525, 530, 532, Fed. Cas. No. 2,025; Christensen v. Kellogg Switchboard & Supply Co. 110 Ill. App. 61.

The suggestion that this court should treat as material the fact that the promoters and original holders have induced the public to buy or take some of their stock is answered by the verified allegation of the bill that every holder acquired the stock with full knowledge, and by the notorious facts of the case, as well as by the language of Mr. Justice Brown, speaking for the court in Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 161 U. S. 677, 691, 40 L. ed. 849, 856, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 714. See also Scovill v. Thayer, 105 U. S. 143, 151, 26 L. ed. 968, 972; Central Transp. Co. v. Pullman's Palace Car Co. 139 U. S. 24, 60, 35 L. ed. 55, 68, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478; Tilton v. Cofield, 93 U. S. 163, 168, 23 L. ed. 858, 859.

The fact that Mr. Harriman participated in any acts attending the issue of the stock to third parties, or ratified the sale of the cash stock, even if unexplained, would not estop him from showing the truth and that they all bought with notice. Illegal acts cannot be given validity by assenting to them or acting under them, for otherwise persons or corporations could easily abrogate a statute by simply contracting to do and doing the prohibited act.

Thomas v. West Jersey R. Co. 101 U. S. 71, 86, 25 L. ed. 950, 953; Scovill v. Thayer, 105 U. S. 143, 149, 26 L. ed. 968, 971; Central Transp. Co. v. Pullman's Palace Car Co. 139 U. S. 24, 60, 35 L. ed. 55, 68, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478; Veeder v. Mudgett, 95 N. Y. 295.

The pendency of the government suit since early in 1902 constituted a full excuse for delay, and precludes the defense of laches.

Illinois Grand Trunk R. Co. v. Wade, 140 U. S. 65, 67-70, 35 L. ed. 342, 343, 344, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 709; Boardman v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 84 N. Y. 157; Cox v. Stokes, 156 N. Y. 491, 51 N. E. 316.

It is better to yield to the force of truth and conscience than to any reverence for maxims.

Northrop v. Graves, 19 Conn. 548, 50 Am. Dec. 264. See also Yarmouth v. France, L. R. 19 Q. B. Div. 647; 2 Stephen, History of Crim. Law, p. 4, note 1.

A person does not become an outlaw and lose all rights by doing an illegal act.

National Bank & Loan Co. v. Petrie, 189 U. S. 423, 425, 47 L. ed. 879, 880, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 512.

The rule as to parties in pari delicto contemplates the existence of a delictum, that is, a wrongful act knowingly done, an intentional "transgression against positive law." It cannot be reasonably said that parties are in pari delicto when there is concededly no intentional wrongdoing or crime. Even in criminal cases, satisfactory proof of a mistake of the law, honestly held in consequence of a reasonable, but erroneous, construction of a doubtful statute, often operates to prevent a conviction.

Queen v. Tolson, L. R. 23 Q. B. Div. 168; Taylor v. Newman, 4 Best & S. 89; Reg. v. Allday, 8 Car. & P. 136; Reg. v. Twose, 14 Cox, C. C. 327; Reg. v. Sleep, 8 Cox, C. C. 472; Reg. v. Tinkler, 1 Fost. & F. 513; Rider v. Wood, 2 El. & El. 338; Buckmaster v. Reynolds, 13 C. B. N. S. 62; United States v. Conner, 3 McLean, 573, Fed. Cas. No. 14,847; United States v. Pearce, 2 McLean, 14, Fed. Cas. No. 16,020; Halsted v. State, 41 N. J. L. 552, 32 Am. Rep. 247; Cutter v. State, 36 N. J. L. 125; Stone v. United States, 167 U. S. 178, 188, 42 L. ed. 127, 131, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 178; Hedden v. Iselin, 31 Fed. 266; State v. Sheeley, 15 Iowa, 404; Com. v. Bradford, 9 Met. 268; State v. Hause, 71 N. C. 518; Dotson v. State, 6 Coldw. 545.

It would be carrying the punishment beyond what any legislator would impose if it were now to be held that one party to a contract, which was subsequently held to be in violation of a statute, rendered himself not only liable to the punishment prescribed by the lawmakers, but, in addition, forfeited all his legal rights, however innocent he might have been of unlawful intent, and that the party in possession of property transferred under a mistake could retain it free from any accountability whatever, and thus enrich himself at the expense of an innocent man acting in good faith. No conceivable public policy could require or sanction such a monstrous result.

Congress & E. Spring Co. v. Knowlton, 103 U. S. 49, 26 L. ed. 347; St. Louis, V. & T. H. R. Co. v. Terre Haute & I. R. Co. 145 U. S. 393, 36 L. ed. 748, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 953; Detroit v. Detroit City R. Co. 60 Fed. 161; Pullman Palace-Car Co. v. Central Transp. Co. 65 Fed. 158.

The general rule need not be challenged that a mistake of law, stripped of all other circumstances and considerations, will not alone afford a ground for relief, but it has been established by innumerable decisions that relief will be granted from the consequences of a mistake of law, whenever the mistake is clearly proved or admitted, and, by reason of such mistake, the party against whom relief is sought would otherwise secure an unfair advantage. Such is the doctrine of the English cases extending back to the time of Lord Mansfield.

Moses v. Macferlan, 2 Burr. 1005; Farmer v. Arundel, 2 W. Bl. 824; Bingham v. Bingham, 1 Ves. Sr. 126, Belt's Supp. 79; Bize v. Dickason, 1 T. R. 285; Beauchamp v. Winn, L. R. 6 H. L. 223; Re Saxon Life Assur. Soc. 2 Johns. & H. 408; Jones v. Clifford, L. R. 3 Ch. Div. 779; Allcard v. Walker [1896] 2 Ch. 369.

This is also the established law in this country, and the right to relief from the consequences of a mistake of law under the principles above stated has been fully recognized by this court in—

Griswold v. Hazard, 141 U. S. 260, 284, 35 L. ed. 678, 688, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 972, 999; Congress & E. Spring Co. v. Knowlton, 103 U. S. 49, 60, 26 L. ed. 347, 350; Snell v. Atlantic F. & M. Ins. Co. 98 U. S. 85, 90, 91, 25 L. ed. 52, 54, 55; Hunt v. Rousmanier, 8 Wheat. 174, 215, 5 L. ed. 589, 599; Hunt v. Rhodes, 1 Pet. 1, 17, 7 L. ed. 27, 34. See also State v. Paup, 13 Ark. 129, 56 Am. Dec. 303; Griffith v. Sebastian County, 49 Ark. 24, 3 S. W. 886; Northrop v. Graves, 19 Conn. 548, 50 Am. Dec. 264; Stedwell v. Anderson, 21 Conn. 139; Culbreath v. Culbreath, 7 Ga. 64, 50 Am. Dec. 375; Underwood v. Brockman, 4 Dana, 309, 29 Am. Dec. 407; Ray v. Bank of Kentucky, 3 B. 197 U. S.

Mon. 510, 39 Am. Dec. 479; Stockbridge Iron Co. v. Hudson Iron Co. 102 Mass. 45; Lowndes v. Chisolm, 2 M'Cord, Eq. 455, 16 Am. Dec. 667; Mortimer v. Pritchard, Bail. Eq. 505; Hopkins v. Mazyck, 1 Hill, Eq. 242; MacKay v. Smith, 27 Wash. 442, 67 Pac. 982.

When an illegal contract is sought to be specifically enforced, or when damages are claimed for its breach, undoubtedly the sound rule is that the difference between malum prohibitum and malum in se is immaterial.

Gibbs v. Consolidated Gas Co. 130 U. S. 396, 412, 32 L. ed. 979, 985, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 553.

But the distinction between malum prohibitum and malum in se has been often recognized by the courts when considering the right to recover property transferred under an illegal contract, upon disaffirmance or termination of the illegal transaction, under circumstances which result in a failure of consideration.

Pratt v. Short, 79 N. Y. 437, 35 Am. Rep. 531; Union Stock Yards Co. v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. 196 U. S. 217, ante, 453, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 226.

In the case at bar it is difficult to perceive how the defendant Securities company can consistently urge that the transaction involved moral turpitude and was therefore malum in se, in view of the conceded fact and its own declaration that the parties acted in good faith and in the full belief that they were not violating the law. The transaction clearly was not forbidden by the common law.

Re Greene, 52 Fed. 104; Mogul S. S. Co. v. McGregor, L. R. 23 Q. B. Div. 598 [1892] A. C. 25; United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Asso. 166 U. S. 290, 334, 335, 41 L. ed. 1007, 1025, 1026, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 540; United States v. Joint Traffic Asso. 171 U. S. 505, 572, 573, 43 L. ed. 259, 288, 289, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25.

It was also apparently legal according to the law of New Jersey, where it occurred.

Dill. Mun. Corp. pp. 88, 93; Trenton Potteries Co. v. Oliphant, 58 N. J. Eq. 507, 46 L. R. A. 255, 78 Am. St. Rep. 612, 43 Atl. 723.

Except for the provisions of the Federal anti-trust act, there could have been no contention that the transaction was criminal in any sense, and the punishment provided by that act does not make a violation of its provisions an infamous crime.

Ansbros v. United States, 159 U. S. 695, 697, 40 L. ed. 310, 311, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 187.

The distinction between malum prohibitum and malum in se, when the action is brought to recover property or money after the illegal transaction has come to an end, or has been put at an end by the parties or by the courts, has been often recognized by the Federal courts.

Congress & E. Spring Co. v. Knowlton, 103 U. S. 49, 26 L. ed. 347; McCutcheon v. Merz Capsule Co. 31 L. R. A. 415, 19 C. C. A. 108, 37 U. S. App. 586, 71 Fed. 787; Parkersburg v. Brown, 106 U. S. 487, 27 L. ed. 238, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 442; Logan County Nat. Bank v. Townsend, 139 U. S. 67, 75, 35 L. ed. 107, 111, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 496; Central Transp. Co. v. Pullman's Palace-Car Co. 139 U. S. 24, 60, 35 L. ed. 55, 68, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478, 65 Fed. 158, 171 U. S. 138, 151, 43 L. ed. 108, 114, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808; Tappenden v. Randall, 2 Bos. & P. 467; Ex parte Bulmer, 13 Ves. Jr. 313; White v. Franklin Bank, 22 Pick. 181; Lowell v. Boston & L. R. Corp. 23 Pick. 24, 34 Am. Dec. 33; Washington Gaslight Co. v. District of Columbia, 161 U. S. 316, 327, 328, 40 L. ed. 712, 718, 719, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564; Hanauer v. Doane, 12 Wall. 342, 348, 20 L. ed. 439, 441; Douglass v. Kavanaugh, 33 C. C. A. 107, 62 U. S. App. 38, 90 Fed. 373.

There is a striking analogy between the case at bar and those cases where money or property has been deposited with a depositary, stakeholder, trustee, or agent, with authority to apply it to an illegal purpose, and the property remains in the hands of such depositary, stakeholder, trustee, or agent after the illegal purpose has come to an end, either by reason of enforced abandonment, voluntary repudiation, or failure to dispose of the property or money in consummation of the illegal purpose. In all such cases, it has been held that the maxim concerning parties in pari delicto does not apply at all, that the property or money legally belongs to the depositor and is held by the other without consideration, and that it best comports with sound principles of public policy, as well as natural justice, to compel restitution.

Dwight v. Brewster, 1 Pick. 50, 11 Am. Dec. 133; Sampson v. Shaw, 101 Mass. 145, 3 Am. Rep. 327; Morgan v. Beaumont, 121 Mass. 7; Clarke v. Brown, 77 Ga. 606, 4 Am. St. Rep. 98; Shannon v. Baumer, 10 Iowa, 210; Taylor v. Bowers, L. R. 1 Q. B. Div. 291; Congress & E. Spring Co. v. Knowlton, 103 U. S. 49, 57, 26 L. ed. 347, 349; Re Cronmire [1898] 2 Q. B. 383.

Courts of justice will not permit a mere custodian, depositary, trustee, or agent to take advantage of the alleged illegality of the transaction, but will compel him to return or account for the property to the owners. The books will be searched in vain for any authority tending to support the extraordinary contention that, after the courts have once expressly adjudicated that a custodian under an illegal contract might return to the original depositors or their assigns the property received by him from them, nevertheless, the custodian, when sued by a depositor, could interpose as a defense the maxim, in pari delicto potior est conditio possidentis, and therefore refuse to return the property.

Kinsman v. Parkhurst, 18 How. 289, 293, 15 L. ed. 385, 387; Brooks v. Martin, 2 Wall. 70, 80, 17 L. ed. 732, 735; Planters' Bank v. Union Bank, 16 Wall. 483, 500, 21 L. ed. 473, 480; Block v. Darling, 140 U. S. 234, 239, 35 L. ed. 476, 478, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 832; Pointer v. Smith, 7 Heisk. 137; Manchester & L. R. Co. v. Concord R. Corp. 66 N. H. 100, 9 L. R. A. 689, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 319, 49 Am. St. Rep. 582, 20 Atl. 383; Newbold v. Sims, 2 Serg. & R. 317; Jeffrey v. Ficklin, 3 Ark. 227, 36 Am. Dec. 456; Barrett v. Neill, Wright (Ohio) 472; Skinner v. Henderson, 10 Mo. 205; Walker v. Chapman, Loft, 342; Wassermann v. Sloss, 117 Cal. 425, 38 L. R. A. 176, 59 Am. St. Rep. 209, 49 Pac. 566; Morgan v. Groff, 4 Barb. 524; Bernard v. Taylor, 23 Or. 416, 18 L. R. A. 859, 37 Am. St. Rep. 693, 31 Pac. 968; Kiewert v. Rindskopf, 46 Wis. 481, 32 Am. Rep. 731, 1 N. W. 163; Douville v. Merrick, 25 Wis. 688; Bone v. Ekless, 5 Hurlst. & N. 925; Wright v. Stewart, 130 Fed. 905; Dauler v. Hartley, 178 Pa. 23, 35 Atl. 857; Mallory v. Hanaur Oil Works, 86 Tenn. 598, 8 S. W. 396.

It is also a universally recognized exception to the rule concerning parties in pari delicto, that the courts will permit the recovery of property delivered and held under an illegal contract which has been terminated in fieri, when the public interests will be advanced thereby. In the case at bar, the public policy evidenced by the act of Congress in question requires that the Securities company shall not be permitted to retain in its possession "in one ownership" the railway shares, and that it shall not continue to hold the same. If this be so, then the rule denying relief to parties in pari delicto does not apply, for the superior interest or concern of the public is to break up such combinations, and not to permit them to continue in any form.

Starke v. Littlepage, 4 Rand. (Va.) 368; O'Conner v. Ward, 60 Miss. 1025; 5 Thomp. Corp. § 6410; 2 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 941; Story's Eq. Jur. § 298.

If it be held that complainants are not entitled to recover the Northern Pacific stock deposited by them and that such stock has become an asset of the Northern Securities Company as claimed by the defendant, or if for any reason the restoration of the status quo be found impracticable, which they deny, then the only lawful and equitable method is to sell the railroad shares held by the Northern Securities Company, or such as may not be traceable, and thus convert the same into cash and distribute the proceeds ratably among the stockholders. Such is the settled law of this court, and such is the settled law of New Jersey.

Mason v. Pewabic Min. Co. 133 U. S. 50, 63, 33 L. ed. 524, 530, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224; Kean v. Johnson, 9 N. J. Eq. 401; Coler v. Tacoma R. & Power Co. 64 N. J. Eq. 117, 53 Atl. 680, Reversed in 65 N. J. Eq. 347, 54 Atl. 413.

Mr. D. T. Watson also filed a separate brief for petitioners:

By the affirmance of this court the decree in the government case became the decree of the Supreme Court of the United States, and binding upon all parties and privies and other courts.

The meaning of the decree is to be ascertained from its words and the opinion of the Supreme Court, and the only liberty or authority any lower court has is "to proceed in the execution thereof."

Re Potts, 166 U. S. 265, 41 L. ed. 995, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 520; Durant v. Essex Co. (Durant v. Storrow) 101 U. S. 555, 25 L. ed. 961; Re Sanford Fork & Tool Co. 160 U. S. 247, 40 L. ed. 414, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 291.

The opinion of the Supreme Court is part of the record, and may be freely resorted to to determine what this court has decided.

Re Potts, 166 U. S. 265, 41 L. ed. 995, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 520; National Foundry & Pipe Works v. Oconto Water Supply Co. 183 U. S. 217, 46 L. ed. 158, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111; Baker v. Cummings, 181 U. S. 124, 46 L. ed. 779, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 578; Last Chance Min. Co. v. Tyler Min. Co. 157 U. S. 683-690, 39 L. ed. 859-862, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 733; Southern P. R. Co. v. United States, 183 U. S. 519-532, 46 L. ed. 307-314, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154; United States ex rel. Coffman v. Norfolk & W. R. Co. 114 Fed. 686; Russell v. Russell, 129 Fed. 434; West v. Brashear, 14 Pet. 52, 10 L. ed. 350; De Sollar v. Hanscome, 158 U. S. 221, 39 L. ed. 959, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 816; Cromwell v. Sac County, 94 U. S. 359, 24 L. ed. 200; Strong v. Grant, 2 Mackey, 222, 223; Fulton v. Pomeroy, 111 Wis. 668, 87 N. W. 831; Barton, Suit in Equity, p. 150; Putnam v. Day, 22 Wall. 66, 22 L. ed. 766.

The decree is res judicata in this case.

Cromwell v. Sac County, 94 U. S. 352, 24 L. ed. 197; Mason Lumber Co. v. Buchtel, 101 U. S. 638, 639, 25 L. ed. 1074; Southern P. R. Co. v. United States, 168 U. S. 48, 42 L. ed. 376, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18; 2 Black, Judgm. § 610; Burlen v. Shannon, 99 Mass. 202, 96 Am. Dec. 733.

Even if the prior case was actually decided on another ground, which made unimportant the point or question passed on, yet this point or question raised by the pleadings and once passed on is conclusive.

Florida C. R. Co. v. Schutte, 103 U. S. 143, 26 L. ed. 336; 2 Black, Judgm. § 609.

The former decree is not conclusive of any matter which was merely incidentally cognizable in the former action or of any matter to be only inferred by argument.

Duchess of Kingston's Trial, 20 How. St. Tr. 538.

But it is conclusive, says the supreme court of Massachusetts, in Burlen v. Shannon, 99 Mass. 200, 96 Am. Dec. 733, on "all facts involved in it as necessary steps or the ground work upon which it was founded."

It is conclusive on whatever was the matter in issue or points in controversy upon the determination of which the finding or verdict was rendered.

Black, Judgm. § 614.

Whenever a final decree is entered, especially by the court of last resort, every party to that decree, whether plaintiff or defendant, whether personally present or merely by representation, is of right entitled to set up and plead that decree in all subsequent litigation between the same parties affecting the same property. The decree fixes and forever settles certain questions, and such judgment it is the right of each party or privy to set up as between himself and the plaintiff, and also between himself and any codefendant.

Story, Eq. Pl. § 372; 2 Dan. Ch. Pl. & Pr. p. *1539; Winton's Appeal, 97 Pa. 393; Griffin v. Spence, 69 Ala. 397.

It is not material whether the scope of the former action was wider or narrower than that of the present suit. The fact that additional stocks were involved in the former action does not affect the conclusiveness of the finding in the former action on the present Northern Pacific stock now in dispute and which was also in dispute in the former action.

Black, Judgm. ¶ 609, § 1.

The former judgment is still conclusive though the evidence in the subsequent case may be different. If the question was once in issue and was actually determined by a competent court, it cannot be further litigated, and it is equally conclusive when given in evidence as if it was specially pleaded by way of estoppel.

Black, Judgm. ¶ 609, § 2; Last Chance Min. Co. v. Tyler Min. Co. 157 U. S. 691, 39 L. ed. 863, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 733; Southern P. R. Co. v. United States, 168 U. S. 48, 42 L. ed. 376, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18.

The only thing required is that the parties in the second litigation were parties to the litigation the decree in which is relied upon. If this were not so, the effect of a former recovery could always be avoided by adding a new party.

Thompson v. Roberts, 24 How. 240, 16 L. ed. 649; Smith v. Kernochen, 7 How. 217, 12 L. ed. 674; Wilson v. Buell, 117 Ind. 315, 20 N. E. 231; Wells, Res Adjudicata & Stare Decisis, § 35; Lawrence v. Hunt, 10 Wend. 80, 25 Am. Dec. 539.

This includes all persons who are privies and in whose interest the suit is brought or defended.

Freeman, Judgm. § 154; 1 Greenl. Ev. § 523.

It is immaterial that a different form or measure of relief is asked in the second action.

Green v. Bogue, 158 U. S. 478-502, 39 L. ed. 1061-1069, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 975.

Where there are several grounds of recovery or defense on which the decree may have been rested, said decree will be conclusive on the specific findings which led up to the proposition on which the court decided the case, and what that ground was may be determined by evidence aliunde if the decree itself is silent on it.

Russell v. Place, 94 U. S. 606, 24 L. ed. 214; De Sollar v. Hanscome, 158 U. S. 216, 221, 39 L. ed. 956, 959, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 816; First Nat. Bank v. Covington, 129 Fed. 798; Hawes v. Contra Costa Water Co. 5 Sawy. 287, Fed. Cas. No. 6,235.

The conclusions of this court in the government case were as conclusive between the codefendants—the stockholders of the Northern Securities Company and that company itself, as if these stockholders had individually been parties plaintiff or defendant to the litigation.

Corcoran v. Chesapeake & O. Canal Co. 94 U. S. 741-744, 24 L. ed. 190, 191.

The former opinion and decree of this court is conclusive even on this court when the same case comes back here, and certainly so where that former opinion and decree is set up as conclusive in another litigation where the parties are not all the same, and where the complainant in the former case, the United States, is not a party to the second.

Roberts v. Cooper, 20 How. 467-481, 15 L. ed. 969-973; Barney v. Winona & St. P. R. Co. 117 U. S. 231, 29 L. ed. 859, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 654; United States v. Camou, 184 U. S. 574, 46 L. ed. 695, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 515. To the same effect are Thompson v. Maxwell Land Grant & R. Co. 168 U. S. 456, 42 L. ed. 542, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 121; Yazoo & M. Valley R. Co. v. Adams, 180 U. S. 7, 45 L. ed. 401, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 240; Great Western Teleg. Co. v. Burnham, 162 U. S. 343, 41 L. ed. 993, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 850; Chaffin v. Taylor, 116 U. S. 567, 29 L. ed. 727, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 518; Clark v.

Keith, 106 U. S. 464, 27 L. ed. 302, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 568; Wayne County v. Kennicott, 94 U. S. 498, 24 L. ed. 260; Tyler v. Magwire, 17 Wall. 283, 21 L. ed. 583.

The complainants were by representation parties and privies in the government case, and therefore are in their own right entitled to set up the findings and conclusions of this court in that case as res judicata in any subsequent litigation between themselves and the Northern Securities Company so far as regards the issues raised and decided in that case.

Hendrickson v. Bradley, 29 C. C. A. 303, 55 U. S. App. 715, 85 Fed. 516; National Foundry & Pipe Works v. Oconto Water Co. 68 Fed. 1007; Wilson v. Seymour, 22 C. C. A. 477, 40 U. S. App. 567, 76 Fed. 681; Herman, Estoppel & Res Adjudicata, pp. 154-165; Secor v. Singleton, 41 Fed. 725; Great Western Teleg. Co. v. Purdy, 162 U. S. 329, 40 L. ed. 986, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 810; Hawkins v. Glenn, 131 U. S. 319, 33 L. ed. 184, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 739; Glenn v. Williams, 60 Md. 93; Hancock Nat. Bank v. Farnum, 176 U. S. 640, 44 L. ed. 619, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 506; Whitman v. National Bank, 176 U. S. 560, 44 L. ed. 587, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 477; Flash v. Conn, 109 U. S. 371, 27 L. ed. 966, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 263; Halc v. Hardon, 37 C. C. A. 240, 95 Fed. 759; Central Trust Co. v. Western N. C. R. Co. 89 Fed. 24.

Even where one is a party only in one capacity, yet, if his interests in both capacities are before the court, the decree will bind him in both and can be pleaded in both. If this court in the government case had before it the rights of the Northern Securities Company, as trustee, and also of the Securities company as a corporation representing the stockholders, the decree would conclude and could be used by complainants both as cestuis que trust and as stockholders.

Black, Judgm. § 536; Corcoran v. Chesapeake & O. Canal Co. 94 U. S. 741, 24 L. ed. 190.

The Northern Securities Company in the government case was in court not only as a corporation, representing as such all its stockholders, but in addition as trustee, and the present complainants were in court as stockholders and as cestuis que trust, and they were represented in each capacity by the corporation.

McElrath v. Pittsburg & S. R. Co. 68 Pa. 40; Shaw v. Little Rock & Ft. S. R. Co. 100 U. S. 605, 25 L. ed. 757; Kerrison v. Stewart, 93 U. S. 160, 23 L. ed. 845; Vetterlein v. Barnes, 124 U. S. 169, 31 L. ed. 400, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441; Beals v. Illinois, M. & T. R. Co. 133 U. S. 290, 33 L. ed. 608, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 314; Kent v. Lake Superior Ship Canal R. & Iron Co. 144 U. S. 90, 36 L. ed. 358, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 650; Manson v. Dun-

canon, 166 U. S. 542, 41 L. ed. 1108, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 647.

The reasoning in the familiar cases of litigation by or against property owners affected by special taxes or assessments is also pertinent to the question now before the court.

McIntosh v. Pittsburg, 112 Fed. 705.

The stockholders of a corporation upon dissolution cannot be compelled to accept a distribution of their share of the assets in kind.

Post v. Beacon Vacuum Pump & Electrical Co. 28 C. C. A. 431, 50 U. S. App. 271, 84 Fed. 371; Mason v. Tewabic Min. Co. 133 U. S. 50, 58, 33 L. ed. 524, 529, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224.

Mr. Elihu Root argued the cause, and, with Mr. Francis Lynde Stetson, filed a brief for respondent:

The propriety of a review of the case as a whole is established by many decisions, but it is sufficient to refer by title to only a few.

Green v. Mills, 30 L. R. A. 90, 16 C. C. A. 516, 25 U. S. App. 383, 69 Fed. 852; Knowlton v. Africa, 23 C. C. A. 252, 47 U. S. App. 74, 246, 77 Fed. 501; Smith v. Vulcan Iron Works, 165 U. S. 518-525, 41 L. ed. 810-812, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 407; Mast, F. & Co. v. Stover Mfg. Co. 177 U. S. 485-494, 44 L. ed. 856-860, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 708; Castner v. Coffman, 178 U. S. 168, 183, 44 L. ed. 1021, 1027, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 842.

The decree in the statutory proceeding wherein the government was petitioner, and the Securities company, its organizers, and the two railway companies were respondents, could not adjudicate that the Securities company was a bailee or a trustee for the complainants in the present suit, since the complainants were not parties upon the record, nor yet by representation. Upon their theory, at all times as well as now, the particular rights and claims now asserted by them conflicted and could not harmonize with those of any defendant in the government proceeding, and therefore they could not have been represented by any such defendant.

Weidenfeld v. Northern P. R. Co. 129 Fed. 305.

Of course the decree of the circuit court as affirmed "is conclusive upon any matter directly in question before it, even when coming incidentally in question in another court for a different purpose between the same parties."

Duchess of Kingston's Trial, 20 How. St. Tr. 538, 2 Smith, Lead. Cas. 8th ed. 784.

But neither the judgment of a concurrent or exclusive jurisdiction is evidence of any matter which came collaterally in question, though within their jurisdiction, nor of any matter incidentally cognizable, nor of any matter to be inferred by argument from the judgment.

Hopkins v. Lee, 6 Wheat. 109, 5 L. ed. 218; Coit v. Tracy, 8 Conn. 268, 20 Am. Dec. 110; Manny v. Harris, 2 Johns. 24, 3 Am. Dec. 386; People ex rel. Reilly v. Johnson, 38 N. Y. 63, 97 Am. Dec. 770; Stokes v. Foote, 172 N. Y. 327, 65 N. E. 176.

Incidental and illustrative expressions in a court's opinion do not partake of the character of a judgment.

Carroll v. Carroll, 16 How. 275, 287, 14 L. ed. 936, 941; Union P. R. Co. v. Mason City & Ft. D. R. Co. 64 C. C. A. 348, 128 Fed. 230; Cohen v. Virginia, 6 Wheat. 264, 399, 5 L. ed. 257, 290.

Even though the contract were deemed to have been executory, it would be executory solely as to its continuing purpose. As alleged, such purpose was to continue to do something now finally enjoined. In such case, the effect of the court's decree would be to execute the contract by rendering impossible any executory results, and by concluding the term of the contract.

Jones v. Judd, 4 N. Y. 411; Heine v. Meyer, 61 N. Y. 171; Lorillard v. Clyde, 142 N. Y. 456, 24 L. R. A. 113, 37 N. E. 489.

The Securities company has not repudiated or abandoned any contract with the complainants.

2 Parsons, Contr. 674; People v. Globe Mut. L. Ins. Co. 91 N. Y. 174.

The complainants are estopped from asserting that the Securities company is a trustee or bailee. They have publicly held out the Securities company to be the owner of the railway stocks, and have induced innocent third persons to acquire interests in the corporation in reliance thereupon.

Central Transp. Co. v. Pullman's Palace Car Co. 139 U. S. 24, 35 L. ed. 55, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478; Cranson v. Goss, 107 Mass. 439, 9 Am. Rep. 45.

But whether the Securities company be a vendee or a custodian, the complainants are not entitled to recover the Northern Pacific stock. The transaction was in contravention of public policy and a penal statute, and their demand for the return of the stock by them delivered for such illegal purpose is barred by the rule in pari delicto potior est conditio defendentis et possidentis.

First. The complainants cannot avoid the bar of the rule, if the Securities company be regarded as vendee.

1. The complainants and the Securities company are in pari delicto.

Irwin v. Curie, 171 N. Y. 409, 58 L. R. A. 830, 64 N. E. 161; Leonard v. Poole, 114 N. Y. 371, 4 L. R. A. 728, 11 Am. St. Rep. 667, 21 N. E. 707; White v. Hunter, 23 N. H. 128; Worcester v. Eaton, 11 Mass. 368.

2. The complainants transferred property to the Securities company for a purpose forbidden by law and in exchange received shares of stock and cash. The illegal contract has been executed in full, or in any event to such a degree as to bar this suit for its rescission and the recovery of the property transferred.

a. It is executed to such a degree as to bar rescission, even though the contractual obligations of the corporation to its stockholders be regarded as continuing.

St. Louis, V. & T. H. R. Co. v. Terre Haute & I. R. Co. 145 U. S. 393, 36 L. ed. 738, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 953; McIntosh v. Wilson, 81 Iowa, 339, 46 N. W. 1003; Kearley v. Thomson, L. R. 24 Q. B. Div. 742; White v. Hunter, 23 N. H. 128; Miller v. Larson, 19 Wis. 463; Martin v. Wade, 37 Cal. 168; Worcester v. Eaton, 11 Mass. 368; Atwood v. Fisk, 101 Mass. 363, 100 Am. Dec. 124; Traders' Nat. Bank v. Steere, 165 Mass. 389, 43 N. E. 187; Adams v. Barrett, 5 Ga. 405; Rock v. Mathews, 35 W. Va. 531, 14 L. R. A. 508, 14 S. E. 137; Ward v. Hartley, 178 Mo. 135, 77 S. W. 302.

b. It is executed to such a degree as to bar rescission, even though the decree in the government suit prevents the corporation from collecting moneys applicable to the payment of dividends to its stockholders.

McIntosh v. Wilson, 81 Iowa, 339, 46 N. W. 1003; Re Great Berlin S. B. Co. L. R. 26 Ch. Div. 616; Shattuck v. Watson, 53 Ark. 147, 7 L. R. A. 551, 13 S. W. 516; Compton v. Bunker Hill Bank, 96 Ill. 301, 36 Am. Rep. 147.

c. It is executed to such a degree as to bar rescission, even if the proposed pro rata distribution of corporate assets would violate some term of the contract between the corporation and the complainants, which, in fact, it would not.

Bruer v. Kansas Mut. L. Ins. Co. 100 Mo. App. 540, 75 S. W. 380; Hooker v. De Palos, 28 Ohio St. 251; Scott v. Brown [1892] 2 Q. B. 724; Markley v. Mineral City, 58 Ohio St. 430, 65 Am. St. Rep. 776, 51 N. E. 28; Thompson v. Williams, 58 N. H. 248; Kinney v. McDermot, 55 Iowa, 674, 39 Am. Rep. 191, 8 N. W. 656; Smith v. Bean, 15 N. H. 577; Cohn v. Heimbauch, 86 Wis. 176, 56 N. W. 638; Linness v. Hesing, 44 Ill. 113, 92 Am. Dec. 153; Black v. Oliver, 1 Ala. 449, 35 Am. Dec. 38; St. Louis, J. & C. R. Co. v. Mathers, 104 Ill. 259, 71 Ill. 592, 22 Am. Rep. 122; Patterson v. Donner, 48 Cal. 369.

Second. Neither can the complainants avoid the operation of the rule by treating the Securities company merely as custodian to hold a deposited stock, to collect dividends, etc.

1. The Securities company is in pari delicto with the complainants. It was an active party to the illegality.

Leonard v. Poole, 114 N. Y. 371, 4 L. R. A. 728, 11 Am. St. Rep. 667, 21 N. E. 707; Harse v. Pearl Life Assur. Co. [1904] 1 K. B. 558; Gibbs v. Consolidated Gas Co. 130 U. S. 396, 32 L. ed. 979, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 553; Herman v. Jeuchner, L. R. 15 Q. B. Div. 561; Equitable Life Assur. Soc. use of Reilly v. Wetherill, 62 C. C. A. 579, 127 Fed. 947; McIntosh v. Wilson, 81 Iowa, 339, 46 N. W. 1003; Re Great Berlin S. B. Co. L. R. 26 Ch. Div. 616; White v. Hunter, 23 N. H. 128; St. Louis, J. & C. R. Co. v. Mathers, 104 Ill. 259, 71 Ill. 592, 22 Am. Rep. 122; Patterson v. Donner, 48 Cal. 369; Rock v. Mathews, 35 W. Va. 531, 14 L. R. A. 508, 14 S. E. 137.

2. The complainants assisted in placing the control of the railway companies in the hands of the Securities company, and in maintaining that status until the decree in the government suit was affirmed by the Supreme Court. This executed the illegal purpose to such a degree as to bar the assertion of any right to withdraw the property deposited.

a. The assertion of any right to withdraw is barred, even though the decree in the government suit prevents profitable (or any) continuance of the holding of the railway stocks.

McIntosh v. Wilson, 81 Iowa, 339, 46 N. W. 1003; Re Great Berlin S. B. Co. L. R. 26 Ch. Div. 616; Standard Furniture Co. v. Van Alstine, 22 Wash. 670, 51 L. R. A. 889, 79 Am. St. Rep. 960, 62 Pac. 145.

b. The assertion of any right to withdraw is barred, even if the alleged purpose of the deposit has not been wholly accomplished, and even though it were the fact (which it is not) that the custodian still holds the deposit intact.

Herman v. Jeuchner, L. R. 15 Q. B. Div. 561; Taylor v. Chester, L. R. 4 Q. B. 309, 6 English Ruling Cases, 488; Rock v. Mathews, 35 W. Va. 531, 14 L. R. A. 508, 14 S. E. 137; Griffin v. Piper, 55 Ill. App. 213; Re Great Berlin S. B. Co. L. R. 26 Ch. Div. 616; St. Louis, J. & C. R. Co. v. Mathers, 104 Ill. 259, 71 Ill. 592, 22 Am. Rep. 122; Patterson v. Donner, 48 Cal. 369; Sedalia Bd. of Trade v. Brady, 78 Mo. App. 585; Johnson v. Douglas, 32 Wash. 293, 73 Pac. 374.

3. The deposit of the property in the hands of the alleged custodian was part of the illegality which distinguishes the present case from the stakeholder, agency, and third-party cases.

a. In the stakeholder cases the illegality consists in the wager, and not in any sense in the deposit subsequent to, though for the purpose of, the wager contract.

b. Likewise in the agency and third-party cases the holding by the agent or third party was perfectly lawful; the illegality lay in some precedent transaction from which arose the fund in the defendant's hands. The relief given involved neither the enforcement nor the rescission of the unlawful contract.

McMullen v. Hoffman, 174 U. S. 639, 43 L. ed. 1117, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 839; Smith v. Richmond, 114 Ky. 303, 102 Am. St. Rep. 283, 70 S. W. 846.

c. Even in the stakeholder cases it is recognized that the depositor loses the right to recover after the stakeholder has paid over the fund. By selling shares of its stock, and issuing and reissuing certificates in the usual form—all being done with the assent of complainants—the Securities company has legally transferred vast interests in the railway shares to innocent third persons.

Ball v. Gilbert, 12 Met. 397; Thornhill v. O'Rear, 108 Ala. 299, 31 L. R. A. 792, 19 So. 382; Nudd v. Burnett, 14 Ind. 25.

d. And in agency or third-party cases the owner cannot obtain a return of the property if, to give such relief, the court would have to give effect to any part of the illegal contract. In seeking to recover certain of the shares of the Northern Pacific stock the complainants rely upon a material term of the agreement alleged by them though denied by defendant.

Leonard v. Poole, 114 N. Y. 371, 4 L. R. A. 728, 11 Am. St. Rep. 667, 21 N. E. 707.

The doctrine of an implied agreement to return property transferred under an illegal agreement is applicable only to cases wherein there exists under special considerations of public policy, equity or justice.

1. No public policy will be promoted by granting the prayer of complainants. Furthermore, considerations of public policy in the Northern Securities transaction can be invoked only by the Attorney General of the United States.

Minnesota v. Northern Securities Co. 194 U. S. 48, 48 L. ed. 870, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 598.

2. It is difficult to conceive of a case where equity and justice would require the implication of an agreement to return, except under circumstances such as existed in Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Central Transp. Co. 171 U. S. 138, 43 L. ed. 108, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808, or in the repudiated bond cases cited in Central Transp. Co. v. Pullman's Palace Car Co. 139 U. S. 24, 35 L. ed. 55, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478, or where stock paid for was not issued because ultra vires the corporation, as in Congress & E. Spring Co. v. Knowlton, 103 U. S. 49, 26 L. ed. 347. Certainly no such considerations prevail in the present instance.

Higgins v. McCrea, 116 U. S. 671, 29 L. ed. 764, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 557; Re Great Berlin S. B. Co. L. R. 26 Ch. Div. 616; Chicago, I. & L. R. Co. v. Southern Indiana R. Co. (Ind. App.) 70 N. E. 843.

But in any event any equitable rights of the complainants have been lost through their laches and the acquisition by innocent third persons of interests adverse to their claim. Locus pœnitentiæ must be sought seasonably.

St. Louis, V. & T. H. R. Co. v. Terre Haute & I. R. Co. 145 U. S. 393, 36 L. ed. 738, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 953; Union Trust Co. v. Illinois Midland R. Co. 117 U. S. 434, 29 L. ed. 963, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 809; Re Great Berlin S. B. Co. L. R. 26 Ch. Div. 616.

No right of action accrues to complainants because the Securities company has been compelled to abandon the illegal project by force of the decree in the government suit.

Central Transp. Co. v. Pullman's Palace Car Co. 139 U. S. 24, 35 L. ed. 55, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478; People v. Globe Mut. L. Ins. Co. 91 N. Y. 174.

It is not understood that complainants contend that there was any contract on the part of the Securities company to return the stocks to the depositors. But if the complainants do so contend, the relief now asked for would be an enforcement of part of the contract. As well might a usury-exacting lender recover the principal of his loan by disaffirming the contract.

McMullen v. Hoffman, 174 U. S. 639, 43 L. ed. 1117, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 839; Ellicott v. Chamberlain, 38 N. J. Eq. 604, 48 Am. Rep. 327; St. Louis, J. & C. R. Co. v. Mathers, 104 Ill. 259, 71 Ill. 592, 22 Am. Rep. 122; Patterson v. Donner, 48 Cal. 369; Black v. Oliver, 1 Ala. 449, 35 Am. Dec. 38; Singer Mfg. Co. v. Draper, 103 Tenn. 262, 52 S. W. 879; Standard Furniture Co. v. Van Alstine, 22 Wash. 670, 51 L. R. A. 889, 79 Am. St. Rep. 960, 62 Pac. 145.

After delivery of the property for an accepted consideration, the contract has ceased to be executory, even though it was entered into with the expectation of a continuity of benefits no longer susceptible of complete realization.

Kearley v. Thomson, L. R. 24 Q. B. Div. 742; Herman v. Jeuchner, L. R. 15 Q. B. Div. 561; Harse v. Pearl Life Assur. Co. [1904] 1 K. B. 558; St. Louis, V. & T. H. R. Co. v. Terre Haute & I. R. Co. 145 U. S. 393, 36 L. ed. 738, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 953; Equitable Life Assur. Soc. use of Reilly v. Wetherill, 62 C. C. A. 579, 127 Fed. 947; McIntosh v. Wilson, 81 Iowa, 339, 46 N. W. 1003; Atwood v. Fisk, 101 Mass. 363, 100 Am. Dec. 124; Bruer v. Kansas Mut. L. Ins. Co. 100 Mo. App. 540, 75 S. W. 380; Ellicott v. Chamberlain, 38 N. J. Eq. 604, 48 Am. Rep. 327; Pollock, Principles of Contract, 4th ed. *pp. 253, 322-327, 329, 338.

The indisposition of the court to grant relief is not limited to the cases in which the plaintiff is endeavoring to enforce the contract; a party exhibiting the contract merely to denounce it as illegal will be denied judicial assistance.

Taylor v. Chester, L. R. 4 Q. B. 309; Brindley v. Lawton, 53 N. J. Eq. 259, 31 Atl. 394; Hope v. Linden Park Blood Horse Asso. 58 N. J. L. 627, 55 Am. St. Rep. 614, 34 Atl. 1070; Herman v. Juchner, L. R. 15 Q. B. Div. 561; Kearley v. Thomson, L. R. 24 Q. B. Div. 742; Harse v. Pearl Life Assur. Co. [1904] 1 K. B. 558; Hill v. Freeman, 73 Ala. 200, 49 Am. Rep. 48; Watkins v. Nugen, 118 Ga. 372, 45 S. E. 262; McIntosh v. Wilson, 81 Iowa, 339, 46 N. W. 1003; Atwood v. Fisk, 101 Mass. 363, 100 Am. Dec. 124; Myers v. Meinrath, 101 Mass. 366, 3 Am. Rep. 368; Bagg v. Jerome, 7 Mich. 145; Block v. McMurry, 56 Miss. 217, 31 Am. Rep. 357; White v. Hunter, 23 N. H. 128; Ellicott v. Chamberlin, 38 N. J. Eq. 604, 48 Am. Rep. 327; Markley v. Mineral City, 58 Ohio St. 430, 65 Am. St. Rep. 776, 51 N. E. 28; Moore v. Kendall, 2 Pinney (Wis.) 99, 52 Am. Dec. 145; Equitable Life Assur. Soc. use of Reilly v. Wetherill, 62 C. C. A. 579, 127 Fed. 947.

In all such cases the defendant's possession is a sufficient answer to the plaintiff's demand; both (a) because such possession stands as the equivalent of a title in the defendant, and (b) because to discourage such transactions courts will be deaf to the clamor of a complainant in pari delicto.

Myers v. Meinrath, 101 Mass. 366, 3 Am. Rep. 368; Horton v. Buffington, 105 Mass. 399; Bagg v. Jerome, 7 Mich. 145; Block v. McMurry, 56 Miss. 217, 31 Am. Rep. 357; Foster v. Wooten, 67 Miss. 540, 7 So. 501; Smith v. Bean, 15 N. H. 577; Watkins v. Nugen, 118 Ga. 372, 45 S. E. 262; McIntosh v. Wilson, 81 Iowa, 339, 46 N. W. 1003; Traders' Nat. Bank v. Steere, 165 Mass. 389, 43 N. E. 187; Harris, Sunday Laws, § 169.

The condition of the possessor is so much better than that even of the original owner that the possessor can recover the property, not only from a stranger, but from such original owner, if by chance the latter has been able to repossess himself of the property.

Kinney v. McDermot, 55 Iowa, 674, 39 Am. Rep. 191, 8 N. W. 656; Smith v. Bean, 15 N. H. 577; Thompson v. Williams, 58 N. H. 248; Cohn v. Heimbauch, 86 Wis. 176, 56 N. W. 638.

The distinction between mala in se and mala prohibita has been abandoned, but, were this otherwise, there is authority for regarding as malum in se any act contravening public policy and a penal statute.

Irwin v. Curie, 171 N. Y. 409, 58 L. R. A. 830, 64 N. E. 161; Gibbs v. Consolidated Gas Co. 130 U. S. 396, 32 L. ed. 979, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 553; McMullen v. Hoffman, 174 U. S. 639, 43 L. ed. 1117, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 839; Equitable Life Assur. Soc. use of Reilly v. Wetherill, 62 C. C. A. 579, 127 Fed. 947.

The doctrine of locus pœnitentiæ is available only to those who seasonably seek to make restitution and to withdraw from their illegal executory contract. Laches is a fatal vice.

St. Louis, V. & T. H. R. Co. v. Terre Haute & I. R. Co. 145 U. S. 393, 36 L. ed. 738, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 953; Union Trust Co. v. Illinois Midland R. Co. 117 U. S. 434, 29 L. ed. 963, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 809; Re Great Berlin S. B. Co. L. R. 26 Ch. Div. 616. See also Hardwood v. Cincinnati & C. Air-Line R. Co. 17 Wall. 80, 21 L. ed. 558; Twin-Lick Oil Co. v. Marbury, 91 U. S. 587, 23 L. ed. 328; Grymes v. Sanders, 93 U. S. 55, 23 L. ed. 798; Hayward v. Eliot Nat. Bank, 96 U. S. 611, 617, 24 L. ed. 855, 857; McLean v. Clapp, 141 U. S. 429, 432, 36 L. ed. 804, 806, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 29; Hoyt v. Latham, 143 U. S. 553, 567, 36 L. ed. 259, 264, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 568; Townsend v. Vanderwerker, 160 U. S. 171, 40 L. ed. 383, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 258; Ward v. Sherman, 192 U. S. 168, 48 L. ed. 391, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 227; Rugan v. Sabin, 10 U. S. App. 519, 53 Fed. 415; Kinne v. Webb, 4 C. C. A. 170, 12 U. S. App. 137, 54 Fed. 34; Boston & P. R. Corp. v. New York & N. E. R. Co. 13 R. I. 264; Kitchen v. St. Louis, K. C. & N. R. Co. 69 Mo. 224; Peabody v. Flint, 6 Allen, 56; Dunphy v. Traveller Newspaper Asso. 146 Mass. 495, 16 N. E. 426; Graham v. Birkenhead, L. & C. J. R. Co. 2 Macn. & G. 156.

The rigor of the rule against the complainant is never relaxed out of consideration for him, but only when necessary to promote equity and justice.

Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Central Transp. Co. 171 U. S. 138, 43 L. ed. 108, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808; Congress & E. Spring Co. v. Knowlton, 103 U. S. 49, 26 L. ed. 347.

In cases presenting no such special considerations of equity, justice, or public policy, a party even to an unexecuted illegal contract cannot recover back money paid or property delivered thereunder.

Scott v. Brown [1892] 2 Q. B. 724; Re Great Berlin S. B. Co. L. R. 26 Ch. Div. 616; McIntosh v. Wilson, 81 Iowa, 339, 46 N. W. 1003; Bruer v. Kansas Mut. L. Ins. Co. 100 Mo. App. 540, 75 S. W. 380; Markley v. Mineral City, 58 Ohio St. 430, 65 Am. St. Rep. 776, 51 N. E. 28; Storz v. Finklestein, 46 Neb. 577, 30 L. R. A. 644, 65 N. W. 195; Thompson v. Williams, 58 N. H. 248.

Mr. John G. Johnson also argued the cause, and, with Messrs. John W. Griggs and W. P. Clough, filed a brief for respondent:

The right to grant an injunction is always dominated by the nature of the case disclosed by the motion papers. It is elementary law that a plaintiff cannot have a special injunction where, on the face of the motion papers, it appears he will not succeed in finally establishing the claim he asserts.

1 High, Inj. 3d ed. § 7.

If, nevertheless, the injunction be granted on such a showing, and be appealed from, not only is it the duty of the appellate court to vacate the injunction, but it may properly include in its mandate to the lower court a direction to dismiss the bill. The appellate court is charged with doing what the court below should have done in the first instance.

Knoxville v. Africa, 23 C. C. A. 252, 47 U. S. App. 74, 77 Fed. 501; Mast F. & Co. v. Stover Mfg. Co. 177 U. S. 485, 494, 495, 44 L. ed. 856, 860, 861, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 708.

The fact that ratable distribution of the Northern Pacific stock among all stockholders of the Securities company will leave a majority of the total Northern Pacific stock in the ownership of those who will at the same time become distributees of a majority of the Great Northern stock forms no legal objection to the pro rata plan. After pro rata distribution has been effected, the stocks of both railway companies will be held separately by the individuals who have thereby received them.

Pearsall v. Great Northern R. Co. 161 U. S. 646, 40 L. ed. 838, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 705; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 161 U. S. 677, 40 L. ed. 849, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 714.

Where a corporation, like a railroad company, has granted to it by charter a franchise intended in large measure to be exercised for the public good, the due performance of those functions being the consideration of the public grant, any contract which disables the corporation from performing those functions—which undertakes, without consent of the state, to transfer to others the rights and powers conferred by the charter, and to relieve the grantee of the burden it imposes—is a violation of the contract with the state, and is void as against public policy.

Thomas v. West Jersey R. Co. 101 U. S. 71, 25 L. ed. 950.

The Vandalia Case and the Sleeping Car Cases established these propositions:

1. A transfer of property or money made contrary to law and public policy is irrevocable by the transferrer, after execution by him, as long as the promises made by the transferee in consideration of the transfer are kept by him.

2. An illegal contract of transfer is executed within the meaning of the foregoing rule, when the transferrer has delivered possession of the subject of the contract to the transferee, i. e., to the party to whom the title is ultimately intended to go, regardless of whether, under the contract, anything remains to be done by the latter. In other words, although the illegal contract remains wholly executory on the part of the transferee, the transferrer is bound from the time of execution on his part, and remains bound until repudiation by the transferee.

3. None of the executory features of an illegal contract are enforceable in the courts, in favor of either party.

See also Gilbert v. American Surety Co. 61 L. R. A. 253, 57 C. C. A. 619, 121 Fed. 499.

Mr. Thomas Thacher also filed a brief for respondent:

It is the approved practice on appeals from injunction orders, not only to consider the merits, but to dismiss the bill if the court can see that the complainant is not entitled to final decree.

Smith v. Vulcan Iron Works, 165 U. S. 518, 41 L. ed. 810, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 407; Mast F. & Co. v. Stover Co. 177 U. S. 485, 44 L. ed. 856, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 708; Castner v. Coffman, 178 U. S. 168, 44 L. ed. 1021, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 842; Knoxville v. Africa, 23 C. C. A. 252, 47 U. S. App. 74, 246, 77 Fed. 501; Bissell Carpet-Sweeper Co. v. Goshen Sweeper Co. 19 C. C. A. 25, 43 U. S. App. 47, 72 Fed. 545.

The transaction was not void because illegal.

Harris v. Runnels, 12 How. 79, 13 L. ed. 901; Union Gold Min. Co. v. Rocky Mountain Nat. Bank, 96 U. S. 641, 24 L. ed. 649; Union Nat. Bank v. Matthews, 98 U. S. 621, 25 L. ed. 188; National Bank v. Whitney, 103 U. S. 99, 26 L. ed. 443; Logan County Nat. Bank v. Townsend, 139 U. S. 67, 76, 35 L. ed. 107, 111, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 496; Thompson v. St. Nicholas Nat. Bank, 146 U. S. 240, 36 L. ed. 956, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 66; Scott v. Deweese, 181 U. S. 202, 211, 45 L. ed. 822, 827. See also Burck v. Taylor, 152 U. S. 634, 648, 38 L. ed. 578, 583, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 696; Fritts v. Palmer, 132 U. S. 282, 33 L. ed. 317, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 93; McBroom v. Scottish Mortg. & Land Invest. Co. 153 U. S. 318, 38 L. ed. 729, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 852; Jarvis-Conklin Mortg. Trust Co. v. Willhoit, 84 Fed. 514; Central Trust Co. v. Columbus, H. V. & T. R. Co. 87 Fed. 815; Sioux City Terminal R. & Warehouse Co. v. Trust Co. of N. A. 82 Fed. 134; Chattanooga, R. & C. R. Co. v. Evans, 14 C. C. A. 116, 31 U. S. App. 432, 66 Fed. 809.

The transaction was not void because ultra vires.

Central Transp. Co. v. Pullman's Palace Car Co. 139 U. S. 24, 35 L. ed. 55, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478; Camden & A. R. Co. v. May's Land-ing & E. H. City R. Co. 48 N. J. L. 530, 7 Atl. 523; Whitney Arms Co. v. Barlow, 63 N. Y. 62, 20 Am. Rep. 504; Woodruff v. Erie R. Co. 93 N. Y. 609; Rider Life Raft Co. v. Roach, 97 N. Y. 378; Bath Gaslight Co. v. Claffy, 151 N. Y. 24, 36 L. R. A. 664, 45 N. E. 390; Vought v. Eastern Bldg. & L. Asso.

172 N. Y. 508, 92 Am. St. Rep. 761, 65 N. E. 496.

Even if the transactions in which the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company parted with the stock were void because illegal or ultra vires, nevertheless the complainants could not recover.

Equitable Life Assur. Soc. use of Reilly v. Wetherill, 62 C. C. A. 579, 127 Fed. 947; Smith v. Bean, 15 N. H. 577; Myers v. Meinrath, 101 Mass. 366, 3 Am. Rep. 368; St. Louis, V. & T. H. R. Co. v. Terre Haute & C. R. Co. 145 U. S. 393, 36 L. ed. 738, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 953; Higgins v. McCrea, 116 U. S. 671, 29 L. ed. 764, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 557; White v. Barber, 123 U. S. 392, 31 L. ed. 243, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 221; Horton v. Buffington, 105 Mass. 399.

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the opinion of the court:

In applying to this court for the writ of certiorari counsel for complainants insisted that the circuit court of appeals had practically disposed of the entire controversy [287] on the *merits, although its decree only reversed the order of the circuit court granting the preliminary injunction. We accepted that view and granted the writ, in the circumstances, notwithstanding the decree was not final. In our opinion the record presented the whole case to that court in such wise that it might properly have been finally disposed of in terms by its decree, in accordance with the well-settled rule upon that subject. Mast, F. & Co. v. Stover Mfg. Co. 177 U. S. 495, 44 L. ed. 860, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 708; Castner v. Coffman, 178 U. S. 183, 44 L. ed. 1027, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 842; Knoxville v. Africa, 77 Fed. 501.

In Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 195 U. S. 540, 547, ante, 312, 315, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 133, the circuit court had granted a preliminary injunction (120 Fed. 981), which was reversed by the circuit court of appeals. 59 C. C. A. 113, 123 Fed. 33. The telegraph company moved that the decree be modified so as to direct the dismissal of the bill. The motion was denied, and the telegraph company took an appeal to this court. Subsequently the circuit court sua sponte entered an order dismissing the bill, and the telegraph company appealed therefrom to the circuit court of appeals. 195 U. S. 547, ante, 315, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 133. We then granted a certiorari, and, considering both appeals together, affirmed the decree of dismissal.

In the present case we granted the certiorari, at the instance of complainants, before the case had gone back to the circuit court, and shall do what the circuit court of appeals might have done,—that is, finally dispose of the case by our direction to the circuit court.

Complainants deny that the Securities company became the owner of the Northern Pacific Railway shares, and assert, to the contrary, that the company held the shares as a trustee or a bailee for complainants.

And the principal ground on which this contention is rested is that it was so adjudicated by the circuit court for the district of Minnesota in the government suit, by the decree of April 9, 1903, affirmed by this court.

It may be said in passing that complainants were not parties *of record to that suit, [288] and that they were not parties by representation, if the effect of the transfers as between the parties thereto had been in issue and the vital conflict between complainants and the corporation, now set up, then existed which would destroy the community of interest on which the rule of representation is founded. And, on the other hand, in that suit the Northern Securities Company, at a time when complainant Harriman was a director, answered that "every share of the Great Northern company and the Northern Pacific company, acquired by this defendant, has been, and so long as it remains the property of the defendant will continue to be, held and owned by it in its own right, and not under any agreement, promise, or understanding on its part, or on the part of its stockholders and officers, that the same shall be held, owned, or kept, by it for any period of time whatever, or under any agreement that in any manner restricts or controls to any extent any use of the same which might lawfully be exercised by any other owner of said stocks."

But we are of opinion that the circuit court did not determine the quality of the transfer as between the defendants themselves, nor was that the purpose of the government proceedings.

The decree of April 9, 1903, adjudged that defendants had theretofore entered into a combination or conspiracy in restraint of trade and commerce; that all stock of either of the railway companies then held or owned by the Securities company was acquired and held in virtue of such combination; and enjoined the Securities company and the two railway companies from receiving, or permitting the exercise of, any control by the Securities company over either railway, or any exercise of the voting power of the railway shares, and the payment or reception of dividends upon the railway shares held by the Securities company; and the Securities company was forbidden from acquiring further stock of either of the railway companies.

And it was provided that nothing should [289] be construed as *prohibiting the Securities company from returning and transferring the railway shares to the original railway stockholders who had delivered their shares to the Securities company for shares of its stock; or to such person or persons as might be the holders and owners of its own stock originally issued in exchange or in payment for the stock claimed to have been acquired by it in the railway companies.

This did not involve a decision that any original vendor of the railway shares was entitled to a judicial restitution thereof, and such was the view of the circuit court itself, for in its opinion of April 19, 1904, the court said:

"The decree was wholly prohibitory. It enjoined the doing of certain threatened acts, and so long as these acts are not done it enforces itself, and no further action looking to its enforcement is deemed essential. In its bill of complaint the United States prayed, among other things, for a mandatory injunction against the Securities company requiring it to recall and cancel the certificates of stock which it had issued, and to surrender the stock of the two railway companies in exchange for which its stock had been issued. This prayer for relief was denied. The court doubted its power to compel stockholders of the Securities company, who had not been served with process, and were not before the court otherwise than by representation (if, indeed, they were present by representation), to surrender stock which was in their possession, and to take other stock in lieu thereof. It accordingly contented itself with an order which rendered the stock of the two railway companies, so long as it was in the hands of the Securities company, valueless for the purpose of carrying out the objects of the unlawful combination in restraint of interstate trade. The government was satisfied with the relief obtained, and expresses itself as fully satisfied therewith at the present time. When the decree was entered it was assumed by the court that when the stock was thus rendered valueless in the hands of the Securities company the stockholders of [290] that *company would be able, and likewise disposed, to make a disposition of the stock which, under all the circumstances of the case, would be fair and just, and would restore it to the markets of the world, where it would have some value, instead of being a worthless commodity. It was thought that the duty of thus disposing of it could be safely left to the stockholders of the Securities company, and that, if any controversy arose in the discharge of this function, in view of the situation that had been created by the decree, it would be a controversy that would properly form the subject-matter of an independent suit between the parties immediately interested. It is true that the decree contained a provision, in substance, that nothing therein contained should be construed as prohibiting the Securities company from returning to the stockholders of the Northern Pacific Railway Company and the Great Northern Railway Company any and all shares of stock in either of said railway companies which the Northern Securities Company had acquired in exchange for its own stock, and that nothing therein contained should be construed as prohibiting the Securities company from making such transfer of the stock aforesaid to such person or persons as had become owners of its own stock originally issued in exchange for the stock in the two railway companies; but this provision was purely permissive. It did not command that the stock should be so returned or to exclude other methods of disposition of it that, in view of all the circumstances, might appear to be more equitable. The fact that the directors of the Securities company have proposed to its stockholders a plan of distributing the stock of the two railway companies in a manner somewhat different from that which was tentatively suggested by the decree, but not commanded, cannot be regarded as a failure to obey the decree. It was said in argument that one purpose of the intervention is to have that clause of the decree which is now merely permissive made mandatory. But this would be to modify the provisions of a decree which has become final by affirmance, and make an *order [291] which we expressly and on full consideration declined to make when the decree was entered. This we must decline to do."

197 U. S. U. S., Book 49.

The decree of April 9, 1903, was affirmed by the judgment of this court, which, of course, went no further than the decree itself. We did, indeed, by our judgment leave the circuit court at liberty "to proceed in the execution of its decree as the circumstances may require," but this did not operate to change the decree, or import a power to do so not otherwise possessed.

Counsel argue, however, that certain expressions in the opinion of Mr. Justice Harlan so enlarged the scope of the decree as to give it the effect now attributed to it by complainants.

This suggestion is inconsistent with the settled rule that general expressions in an opinion, which are not essential to dispose of a case, are not permitted to control the judgment in subsequent suits. Cohen v. Virginia, 6 Wheat. 399, 5 L. ed. 290; Carroll v. Carroll, 16 How. 279, 14 L. ed. 938. But we do not think that the opinion of Mr. Justice Harlan is open to the construction put upon it. In speaking of the situation as between the government and the defendants, the Securities company is sometimes referred to as the custodian of the shares and sometimes as the absolute owner, but in the sense that in either view the combination was illegal. For the purposes of that suit it was enough that in any capacity the Securities company had the power to vote the railway shares and to receive the dividends thereon. The objection was that the exercise of its powers, whether those of owner or of trustee, would tend to prevent competition, and thus to restrain commerce.

Some of our number thought that, as the Securities company owned the stock, the relief sought could not be granted; but the conclusion was that the possession of the power, which, if exercised, would prevent competition, brought the case within the statute, no matter what the tenure of title was.

[292] *Treating the question as an open one, it seems to us indisputable that, as between these parties, the transaction was one of purchase and sale. The situation is thus well put by Dallas, J.:

"The resolution which authorized the acquisition of the railway stock on behalf of the Securities company was adopted by its board of directors at a meeting at which Mr. Harriman was present as a member of the board, and the only authority it conferred was 'to purchase said stock . . . at an aggregate price of $91,407,500, payable, as to $82,491,871 thereof, in the fully paid-up and non-assessable shares of the capital stock of this company at par, and, as to $8,915,629, in cash.' It is obvious that this resolution contemplated a 'purchase,' and not a bailment or trust; and that it accurately stated the nature and terms of the contract which was actually made by and with the Securities company is unequivocally shown by what was done in pursuance of it. The railway shares were unconditionally assigned to that company. The price specified in the resolution was paid by it, and this payment was made partly in cash and partly in shares of its own stock, for which corporate certificates in the ordinary form were delivered and accepted. . . . The complainants received dividends upon the stock that was issued to them, which were paid out of the general funds of the Securities company; and by its indenture to the Equitable Trust Company of New York the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company irrefutably asserted its ownership of the Securities company stock which it thereby pledged."

And the Securities company sold 75,000 shares of its stock for $7,522,000 cash, "used," as stated in the bill, "for the purchase of other property and for corporate purposes."

But, assuming that the transaction was in form, and at least prima facie in substance, one of purchase and sale, it is denied that the equitable title vested, because, as alleged in the second amended bill, there was an agreement by the promoters of the Securities company, carried out by that *company, that the latter should "acquire[293] and hold the shares of said railway stocks, as aforesaid, as custodian, depository, or trustee, and to issue in exchange therefor its own share certificates upon said agreed basis." And here, again, we concur in the views of the circuit court of appeals as expressed by Judge Dallas.

"The agreement thus set up is not in accord with the documentary evidence which has been referred to, and to establish its existence a clear preponderance of proof should at least be required; whereas, in our opinion it conclusively appears that no such agreement was ever made. Mr. Harriman himself has distinctly testified that the Northern Pacific stock in question was sold; that the transaction was not an exchange; that he, principally, negotiated the sale; and that there was not attached to the negotiations any condition except as to price. And to the same effect is his affidavit in this case, in which he deposed that he was urged by Messrs. Morgan & Company to dispose of the Northern Pacific stock held by the Oregon Short Line Company, and that 'they further stated that, upon the organization of the proposed holding company,' not that it would take as custodian or trustee, but that 'they would be prepared to purchase the holdings of stock of the Northern Pacific owned by the Oregon Short Line, and pay therefor in the stock of the holding company.' These statements of that one of the complainants, having most knowledge of the subject, confirmed, as they are, by the other evidence, make it quite impossible to believe that the railway stock was received by the Securities company merely as a custodian or depository. The only agreement upon which it was transferred was an unqualified agreement of sale, and the fact that the design with which the Securities company was organized has been compulsorily abandoned has not divested, or in any way affected, the absolute title which, by executed contract of purchase, it acquired. Undoubtedly, it was anticipated by the complainants, as by all concerned, that the rights ordinarily incident to the ownership of stock, including the right to vote and *to[294] receive dividends, would be exercisable as to this stock by the Securities company. But expectation is not contract, and therefore the frustration of this anticipation cannot be said to have occasioned a failure of consideration. The only consideration agreed upon was payment of the price, and admittedly that payment was made."

Complainants' counsel say, in respect of Mr. Harriman's testimony that the transaction was an unconditional purchase and sale, that he only swore to his opinion on a question of law. This will hardly do when applied to testimony as to what was said and done in conference with the alleged promoters of the Securities company. When Mr. Harriman testified that he attached to his negotiations in the sale of Northern Pacific stock no other condition than that of the price, and that the transaction was completed, how can complainants be permitted to deny that this was a statement of fact? And how can the establishment of the contract and its terms as embodied in the resolutions of November 15, 1901, approved at the succeeding meeting by the vote of Mr. Harriman, and which appeared to be, and were testified to by Mr. Hill, president of the Securities company, as constituting, the only contract which was made and authorized, be overthrown in the absence of any evidence to the contrary?

The consideration received by complainants consisted of money and Northern Securities stock certificates. Those certificates were in common form, and each was a muniment of the holder's title to a proportionate interest in the corporate estate vested in the corporation. By the provisions of the corporation act of New Jersey, and its certificate of incorporation, the Securities company had power to acquire and to hold, and at any time to sell, the shares of other corporations. And under that act it had power, in the discretion of its directors and of the holders of two thirds of its capital stock, at any time, on notice, to dissolve and to wind up the corporation and distribute its assets. Complainants subjected themselves to this power in [295] accepting the shares of the *Northern Securities Company, and their unqualified transfer of their railway stock was inconsistent with any obligation of the Securities company to retain the railway shares for any particular period.

In acquiring the Securities stock, complainants acquired the ordinary rights of stockholders in New Jersey business corporations, including the right to receive dividends, and to share in the distribution of the assets of the corporation on its dissolution, or of any surplus of assets on reduction of its capital stock. In view of the decree of the circuit court for the district of Minnesota in the government's suit the continued ownership of the railway shares became useless to the stockholders of the Securities company, and accordingly the directors decided to reduce the capital stock and distribute the surplus of assets created by that reduction, and the resolutions to that end were ratified by a vote of more than two thirds of the Securities shares.

By the transfer of the Northern Pacific shares and the payment therefor as agreed the contract was executed, and the implied obligations resulting from the relation of corporation and stockholder alone remained executory. And when the Securities company resolved to distribute these railway shares ratably among all its stockholders, it did this in performance of its contract with them, and not in repudiation of it. It is the complainants who are seeking the termination and repudiation of the contract. Their final contention in that regard is that they are entitled to a decree rescinding the contract of purchase and sale, and directing the return of the railway shares parted with by them thereunder, because of the illegality of the transaction as adjudged in the Federal courts.

And this in defiance of the settled rule that property delivered under an illegal contract cannot be recovered back by any party in pari delicto. "The general rule, in equity, as at law," said Mr. Justice Gray in *St. Louis, V. & T. H. R. Co. v. Terre Haute & I. R. Co. 145 U. S. 393, 36 L. ed. [296] 748, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 953, "is, In pari delicto potior est conditio defendentis; and therefore neither party to an illegal contract will be aided by the court, whether to enforce it or to set it aside. If the contract is illegal, affirmative relief against it will not be granted, at law or in equity, unless the contract remains executory, or unless the parties are considered not in equal fault, as where the law violated is intended for the coercion of the one party, and the protection of the other, or where there has been fraud or oppression on the part of the defendant. Thomas v. Richmond, 12 Wall. 349, 355, 20 L. ed. 453, 456; Congress & E. Spring Co. v. Knowlton, 103 U. S. 49, 26 L. ed. 347; Story Eq. Jur. § 298. . . . When the parties are in pari delicto, and the contract has been fully executed on the part of the plaintiff, by the conveyance of property, or by the payment of money, and has not been repudiated by the defendant, it is now equally well settled that neither a court of law nor a court of equity will assist the plaintiff to recover back the property conveyed or money paid under the contract. Thomas v. Richmond, 12 Wall. 349, 355, 20 L. ed. 453, 456; Ayerst v. Jenkins, L. R. 16 Eq. 275, 284."

That was a suit in equity by the maker of an unauthorized lease of a railway and franchises, against the lessee, to enforce an attempted repudiation of the lease by the former, on the ground of the illegality. The lease was for nine hundred and ninety-nine years, of which but a few years had elapsed at the date of the attempted rescission.

The illegality of the lease and the consequent breach of public duty were manifest, but the right of the lessor, therefore, to maintain the suit was denied by this court.

In the present case complainants seek the return of property delivered to the Securities company pursuant to an executed contract of sale on the ground of the illegality of that contract, but the record discloses no special considerations of equity, justice, or public policy, which would justify the courts in relaxing the rigor of the rule which bars a recovery.

[297] The circuit court decrees put at rest any question that the *ratable distribution resolved upon was in violation of public policy.

And it is clear enough that the delivery to complainants of a majority of the total Northern Pacific stock and a ratable distribution of the remaining assets to the other Securities stockholders would not only be in itself inequitable, but would directly contravene the object of the Sherman law and the purposes of the government suit.

The Northern Pacific system, taken in connection with the Burlington system, is competitive with the Union Pacific system, and it seems obvious to us, the entire record considered, that the decree sought by complainants would tend to smother that competition.

While the superior equities, as against complainants' present claim, of the many holders of Securities shares who purchased in reliance on the belief that they thereby acquired a ratable interest in all of the assets of the Securities company, are too plain to be ignored.

The illegal contract could not be made legal by estoppel, but the ownership of the assets, unaffected by a special interest in complainants, could be placed beyond dispute on their part by their conduct in holding the Securities company out to the world as unconditional owner.

And, without repeating in detail what has been already set out, it is plain that right of rescission of the executed contract of November 18, 1901, even if rescission could have otherwise been sustained, had been lost by acquiescence and laches at the time this bill was filed.

Since the transfer of that date Securities stock had passed into the hands of more than 2,500 holders, many of them in Great Britain, France, and other parts of Europe; nearly a year after the filing of the government bill 75,000 shares were sold for cash, complainant Harriman concurring; some months after, Harriman and Pierce and the Oregon Short Line Company pledged their 824,000 shares to the Equitable Trust Company; notwithstanding the decree of April 9, 1903, they *stood upon their rights as [298] shareholders; and it was not until after March 22, 1904, when defendant's board of directors resolved upon a ratable distribution, that complainants undertook to change an election already so pronounced as to be irrevocable in itself in view of the rights of others.

We regard the contention that complainants are exempt from the doctrine in pari delicto because the parties acted in good faith and without intention to violate the law as without merit. With knowledge of the facts and of the statute, the parties turned out to be mistaken in supposing that the statute would not be held applicable to the facts. Neither can plead ignorance of the law as against the other, and defendant secured no unfair advantage in retaining the consideration voluntarily delivered for the price agreed.

Perhaps it should be noticed that the bill sought the return of two parcels of Northern Pacific common stock, the 370,230 shares delivered to the Securities company, November 18, 1901, and the 347,090 shares received December 27, 1901, from the Northern Pacific company on the retirement of preferred stock.

Early in 1901 the Hill-Morgan party held a majority of the common stock, and had asserted the intention to retire the preferred stock, "without," as Mr. Harriman testified, "affording the holders of the preferred stock the right to participate in any new securities that might be issued."

With full knowledge of that intention, the proceedings of the two companies followed in November, 1901, and the absolute and unconditional sale and purchase, as we hold the transaction to have been.

We find no evidence of any express agreement that complainants should be entitled to the new common stock, and it was certainly not the natural increase of the old stock, but the result of the exercise of the right of subscription. The purchase by the Securities company was on its own account, and not in trust, and cannot be disturbed because of illegal purpose at the clamor of parties in pari delicto. And there is *here [299] no offer of the restoration of the status quo, if that were practicable.

Doubtless it became the duty of the Securities company to end a situation that had been adjudged unlawful, and this could be effected by sale and distribution in cash, or by distribution in kind, and the latter method was adopted, and wisely adopted, as we think, for the forced sale of several hundred millions of stock would have manifestly involved disastrous results.

In fine, the title to these stocks having intentionally been passed, the former owners, or part of them, cannot reclaim the specific shares, and must be content with their ratable proportion of the corporate assets.

Decree affirmed; cause remanded to Circuit Court with a direction to dismiss the bill.

WESTERN ELECTRICAL SUPPLY COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

ABBEVILLE ELECTRIC LIGHT & POWER COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 299-303.)

Error to state court—Federal question—how raised and decided.

The highest court of a state may decline to reopen, on a second appeal, a question of the validity of the service of summons, which it had upheld on the first appeal, without thereby making a case for a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States, where the claim that such service was invalid under the Federal Constitution was first set up on the second hearing in the trial court.

[No. 178.]

Argued and submitted March 14, 1905. Decided April 3, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of South Carolina to review a judgment which, on a second appeal, affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court of Abbeville County, in that state, sustaining the validity of the service of the summons and complaint on an agent of a non-resident corporation. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

See same case below, 66 S. C. 328, 44 S. E. 952.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Lee W. Grant submitted the cause for plaintiff in error. Messrs. Ralston & Siddons were on the brief.

Mr. William N. Graydon argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error.

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the opinion of the court:

The Abbeville Electric Light & Power Company, a corporation of South Carolina, brought this action in the circuit court of Abbeville county, South Carolina, against the Western Electrical Supply Company, a corporation of Missouri, by service of summons and complaint on one George F. Schminke, as agent of the defendant. The complaint alleged that "the cause of action set forth herein arose in this state," and set up the breach of a contract of guaranty in respect of a machine for generating electricity, sold by defendant to plaintiff. Defendant appeared specially, and moved "to set aside the service of the summons herein on the ground that the party served with the summons and complaint herein on the seventh day of November, 1900, was not an agent of the defendant." The motion was heard on affidavits at the February term, 1901, of the circuit court, the service set aside, and the case dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

The circuit judge was of opinion that Schminke was not "an agent in the sense in which 'any agent' is used in the Code." The case was then carried by appeal to the supreme court of South Carolina, and the judgment below was reversed, and the cause remanded for further proceedings. 61 S. C. 361, 55 L. R. A. 146, 85 Am. St. Rep. 890, 39 S. E. 559.

The court held, speaking through Mr. Chief Justice McIver, that under the second paragraph of § 155 of the Code, *as [302] amended by an act approved March 2, 1899, the facts being considered in connection with § 1466 of the Revised Statutes of 1893, as amended by an act of 1897, the service was good and valid.

In this view the court said: "The case must be regarded as a case in which a domestic corporation, having, as it supposed, a claim against a foreign corporation doing business in this state, arising out of a contract made and to be performed in this state, has undertaken to commence its action against such foreign corporation by serving, personally, within the limits of this state, an agent of such foreign corporation with a copy of the summons; and in such a case we do not think that any authority has been or can be cited, which

NOTE.—On the general subject of writs of error from United States Supreme Court to state courts—see notes to Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 267; Kipley v. Illinois, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998; and Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884.

On what adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court 197 U. S. of the United States by writ of error to those courts—see note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L. R. A. 513.

On how and when questions must be raised and decided in a state court in order to make a case for a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States—see note to Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L. R. A. 33.

holds that the state court had not thereby acquired jurisdiction of the foreign corporation."

On the other hand, the court held that if the case were one in which the plaintiff, a domestic corporation, had brought its action on a contract not made, and not to be performed, in the state, against the defendant, a foreign corporation, and had undertaken to obtain jurisdiction by the personal service of the defendant's agent within the limits of the state, even then, as it appeared upon the facts that the agent was a representative of the defendant corporation in respect of the transaction out of which the suit arose, and was served while within the state for the purpose of attending to the business of the corporation, the service was a good service.

[303] The case having gone back to the circuit court, defendant, by demurrer, renewed its objection to the jurisdiction, this time "on the ground that subd. 1 of § 155 of the Code, providing for service upon a foreign corporation, and the act of the general assembly of South Carolina amending the said section of the Code by striking out the word 'resident,' approved 2nd March, 1899, are in contravention of the 5th and 14th Amendments to the Constitution of the United States, and on the further ground that the act of the general assembly of South Carolina, entitled 'An Act to *Further Prescribe the Terms and Conditions upon which Foreign Corporations May Do Business within this State,' approved the 2nd day of March, A. D. 1897, is in contravention of the 5th and 14th Amendments to the Constitution of the United States."

The demurrer was overruled, and the case went to verdict and judgment on the merits, whereupon it was again taken by appeal to the supreme court. That court declined to express any opinion on the constitutional questions, and affirmed the judgment. 66 S. C. 328, 44 S. E. 952. The court held the question of jurisdiction had already been determined, and that it was not bound to re-examine it. This was, of course, a ground broad enough to sustain the judgment, and as the objection that the state statutes were inconsistent with the Federal Constitution was not raised until the case came on for the second hearing, it is plain that the supreme court could, in its discretion, treat it as coming too late to call for decision. Had that objection been raised in the first instance, and been disposed of, then, inasmuch as the judgment of the circuit court was, at that time, reversed on plaintiff's appeal, the adherence by the supreme court to its prior adjudication as the law of the case, on defendant's appeal, would not, in itself, have cut off consideration of the Federal questions; but it was not so raised, and, as the case stands, we are of opinion that our jurisdiction cannot be maintained.

Writ of error dismissed.

*WALTER S. McMICHAEL, Lillian M. Harris, Lulu F. McGee, et al., Plffs. in Err. and Appts.,

v.

SAMUEL MURPHY, Louisa Murphy, His Wife, Ferdinand Batchelder, et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 304-313.)

Public lands—effect of uncanceled prima facie valid entry.

A homestead entry on land in Oklahoma territory, which is valid upon its face, although made by one in fact personally disqualified to make a valid entry, prevents the initiation of homestead rights by another while it remains uncanceled of record by some direct action of the Land Office or by relinquishment.

[No. 166.]

Submitted March 7, 1905. Decided April 3, 1905.

IN ERROR to and Appeal from the Supreme Court of the Territory of Oklahoma to review a judgment which affirmed the dismissal on demurrer in the District Court of Oklahoma County of a petition to have the patentee of public lands declared to hold the legal title in trust for plaintiffs' use and benefit. Affirmed.

See lower court report, 12 Okla. 155, 70 Pac. 189.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Joseph K. McCammon and James H. Hayden submitted the cause for plaintiffs in error and appellants. Mr. Frank Clark was on the brief:

By his settlement and residence upon the land in dispute, McMichael acquired preferential rights therein, and his applications to enter the said land were entitled to priority over the application of the defendant Murphy.

Marks v. Bray, 1 Land Dec. 424; Banks v. Smith, 2 Land Dec. 44; Ward v. Gann, 2 Land Dec. 630; Meisner's Case, 8 Land Dec. 227.

If McMichael had, in fact, been absent from the land at the time of White's relinquishment and Murphy's entry, he would NOTE.—On rights acquired by homestead settlements and entries on public lands of the United States—see note to McCune v. Essig, 59 C. C. A. 434.

nevertheless have been entitled to priority over Murphy by virtue of his settlement and residence.

Dorgan v. Pitt, 6 Land Dec. 616; Fister v. Boyer, 19 Land Dec. 178; Arnold v. Cooley, 10 Land Dec. 551; Smith v. Place, 13 Land Dec. 214; Reedhead v. Hauenstine, 15 Land Dec. 554; Kinman v. Appleby, 32 Land Dec. 526.

This court in recent opinions has reviewed the homestead laws, considering their purpose and policy. Several of these deal with the rights of bona fide settlers as against those of mere entrymen, even such as Murphy. They show that McMichael gained the right to enter and acquire the land, and of that right was wrongfully deprived.

Moss v. Dowman, 176 U. S. 413, 44 L. ed. 526, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 429; Bohall v. Dilla, 114 U. S. 47, 29 L. ed. 61, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 782; Quinby v. Conlan, 104 U. S. 420, 26 L. ed. 800; Stone v. Cowles, 14 Land Dec. 90; Hunter v. Blodgett, 20 Land Dec. 452; Rickers v. Tisher, 19 Land Dec. 421.

The acceptance of Murphy's entry, contemporaneously with the filing of White's relinquishment, amounted to a total disregard of the preferential rights which McMichael had acquired.

McClung v. Penny, 189 U. S. 143, 147, 47 L. ed. 751, 754, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 589.

McMichael's remedy was by petition to a court of equity for the securing and protection of his rights which were not cognizable by a court of law. He was entitled (1) to have it adjudged that Murphy and his grantees took title as trustees for him, (2) to a decree compelling the defendants to convey the land to him, and (3) to an injunction restraining the execution of the judgments of ejectment.

Johnson v. Towsley, 13 Wall. 72, 20 L. ed. 485; Moore v. Robbins, 96 U. S. 530, 24 L. ed. 848; Warren v. Van Brunt, 19 Wall. 646, 22 L. ed. 219; Re Emblen, 161 U. S. 52, 40 L. ed. 613, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 487; Stark v. Starr, 6 Wall. 402, 18 L. ed. 925; Lytle v. Arkansas, 22 How. 193, 16 L. ed. 306; Garland v. Wynn, 20 How. 6, 15 L. ed. 801; Lindsey v. Hawes, 2 Black. 554, 17 L. ed. 265; Brush v. Ware, 15 Pet. 93, 10 L. ed. 672; Bodley v. Taylor, 5 Cranch. 191, 3 L. ed. 75; Polk v. Wendell, 5 Wheat. 293, 5 L. ed. 92; Maxwell Land Grant Case (United States v. Maxwell Land-Grant Co.) 121 U. S. 325, 30 L. ed. 949, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1015; Sanford v. Sanford, 139 U. S. 642, 35 L. ed. 290, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666.

Frauds such as those specifically disclosed by the petition vitiate all transactions based thereon, and destroy any asserted title to property, no matter in what form the evidence of such title may exist, even though the same be a patent issued by the United States.

United States v. Steenerson, 1 C. C. A. 552, 4 U. S. App. 332, 50 Fed. 507; American Mortg. Co. v. Hopper, 12 C. C. A. 293, 29 U. S. App. 12, 64 Fed. 558.

A patent procured by perjury such as that of the defendant Murphy when he falsely declared that he had resided upon and improved the land, and so complied with the homestead laws, is sufficient ground for the vacation and annulling of his patent in the manner prayed by McMichael.

United States v. Minor, 114 U. S. 233, 29 L. ed. 110, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 836.

Mr. J. H. Everest submitted the cause for defendants in error and appellees:

The facts as found by the Secretary in the proceeding before the Interior Department are final, conclusive, and binding upon the parties, and the courts will not undertake to retry such questions of fact.

Lee v. Johnson, 116 U. S. 48, 29 L. ed. 570, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249; Johnson v. Towsley, 13 Wall. 72, 20 L. ed. 485; Marquez v. Frisbie, 101 U. S. 473, 25 L. ed. 800; Quinby v. Conlan, 104 U. S. 420, 26 L. ed. 800; Baldwin v. Stark, 107 U. S. 463, 27 L. ed. 526, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 473.

Homestead entry once made on public lands of the United States under the provisions of §§ 2289 and 2290 of the Revised Statutes of the United States (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 1388, 2290) segregates such lands until finally canceled, and unless the act of March 2, 1889, operates to change the ordinary rule with respect to the effect of a homestead entry, these decisions by this court apply to the case at bar.

Chotard v. Pope, 12 Wheat. 586, 6 L. ed. 737; Wilcox v. Jackson, 13 Pet. 498, 10 L. ed. 264; Carroll v. Safford, 3 How. 441, 11 L. ed. 671; Witherspoon v. Duncan, 4 Wall. 210, 18 L. ed. 339; Kansas P. R. Co. v. Dunmeyer, 113 U. S. 629, 28 L. ed. 1122, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 566; Hastings & D. R. Co. v. Whitney, 132 U. S. 357, 33 L. ed. 363, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 112; Sturr v. Beck, 133 U. S. 541, 33 L. ed. 761, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350; Sioux City & I. F. Town Lot & Land Co. v. Griffey, 143 U. S. 40, 36 L. ed. 66, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 362; Whitney v. Taylor, 158 U. S. 85, 39 L. ed. 906, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 796.

The Land Department of the United States has repeatedly passed upon the same question, and has in all cases held that a homestead entry prima facie valid segregates the tract of land therein described, until such entry is canceled, either by relinquishment or by the government.

Graham v. Hastings & D. R. Co. 1 Land Dec. 362; Whitney v. Maxwell, 2 Land Dec. 98; Leary v. Manucl, 12 Land Dec. 345; Vidal v. Bennis, 22 Land Dec. 124; Cowles v. Huff, 24 Land Dec. 81.

In Hodges v. Colcord, 193 U. S. 192, 193, 48 L. ed. 677, 678, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 433, this court passes squarely upon this identical proposition.

One who makes settlement on a tract of land while it is covered by the homestead entry of another is a mere intruder,—a naked, unlawful trespasser,—and no right either in law or equity can be founded thereon.

Atherton v. Fowler, 96 U. S. 513-520, 24 L. ed. 732-734.

A settlement cannot be made upon public land already occupied. As against existing occupants the settlement of another is ineffectual to establish a pre-emptive right.

Quinby v. Conlan, 104 U. S. 420-427, 26 L. ed. 800-802; Hudson v. Docking, 4 Land Dec. 501; Turner v. Bumgardner, 5 Land Dec. 377; Dutcher v. Tillinghast, 13 Land Dec. 209; Lewis v. Nuckolls, 18 Land Dec. 326; Tustin v. Adams, 22 Land Dec. 266.

To entitle a party to relief in equity against a patent of the government, he must show a better right to the land than the patentee. It must appear by the law properly administered that title should have been awarded to the claimant.

Sparks v. Pierce, 115 U. S. 408, 29 L. ed. 428, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 102; Bohall v. Dilla, 114 U. S. 47, 29 L. ed. 61, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 782; Lee v. Johnson, 116 U. S. 48, 29 L. ed. 570, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249.

The filing of a contest confers no vested interest in the land involved.

Parker v. Lynch, 7 Okla. 634, 56 Pac. 1082; Emblen v. Lincoln Land Co. 184 U. S. 661-663, 46 L. ed. 736, 737, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 523.

Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion of the court:

The facts in this case may be summarized as follows:

On April 23d, April 24th, and May 1st, 1889, White, Blanchard, and Cook, respectively and in the order named, applied, at the United States land office in Guthrie, Oklahoma territory, to make a homestead entry on certain lands, being part of the southwest $\frac{1}{4}$ of section 27, township 12, north of range 3 west. The applications of Blanchard and Cook were each rejected, as being in conflict with White's entry. On April the 27th, 1889, Blanchard filed his affidavit of contest, charging that White entered the territory prior to 12 o'clock noon of April the 22d, 1889, in violation of the act of Congress approved March 2d, 1889 (25 Stat. at L. 1004, chap. 412), and the President's proclamation issued under that act. 26 Stat. at L. 1544. On May 1st, 1889,

Cook also filed an affidavit of contest against White, alleging the latter's disqualification, as above stated, to enter the land, and also that Blanchard was also disqualified upon the same grounds as those alleged in reference to White.

The contest having been tried before the local land office,—each party charging that the other two had entered the territory *prior to noon of April 22d, 1889,—the register and receiver recommended the cancellation of White's entry, and dismissed the contest of both Blanchard and Cook. From this decision all parties appealed to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, and on March 7th, 1890, the decision of the local office was affirmed. An appeal was then taken to the Secretary of the Interior. While the case was pending before that officer, namely, on November 29th, 1890, White relinquished of record his entry, and Murphy, the defendant, on the same day, entered the land. The Secretary of the Interior, July 21st, 1891, affirmed the decision of the Commissioner of the General Land Office. Blanchard v. White, 13 Land Dec. 66.

On or about June 3d, 1889, White's homestead entry being still intact, of record, McMichael entered upon the land with a view of establishing his residence thereon and initiating a homestead right to it; and on July 21st, 1889, he made application to the local office to enter the land, tendering the required fees; but his application was rejected by the local office as being in conflict with White's entry. From that order no appeal was taken.

On August 31st, 1889, McMichael again tendered his application to the local office, with the required fees. That application was received, but it was suspended pending the contest of White, Blanchard and Cook. On the day last named McMichael filed a contest or protest, alleging that he had made settlement on the land on June 3d, 1889, had lived there in a tent with his family until August 2d, 1889, when, at the instance of White, he was forcibly removed therefrom by the military authorities; that his rights were superior to those of White, Blanchard, and Cook, all of whom, he alleged, were disqualified by reason of having entered the territory during the period prohibited by law; that his application of June 3d was rejected because it conflicted with White's interests, although he was the only qualified settler on the tract entitled to make entry. The case, as between McMichael and Murphy, having been heard on February 15th, 1892, a decision was rendered in favor *of the latter. Thereupon McMichael appealed to the General Land Office, which, on January 18th, 1893, affirmed the decision of the local office. He then appealed to the Secretary of the Interior, and that officer, on February 25th, 1895, affirmed the decision of the Land Office. McMichael v. Murphy, 20 Land Dec. 147.

A patent was issued to Murphy for the land; whereupon the present action was brought in the district court of Oklahoma county by McMichael against Murphy and his grantees, the relief asked being a decree declaring the legal title to be held in trust for the use and benefit of McMichael. Murphy demurred on the ground that the petition did not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action; McMichael's claim being that the Secretary of the Interior had misconstrued and misapplied the law. The demurrer was sustained, and, the plaintiff having elected to stand on his petition, the court dismissed the case. From that decree the plaintiff brings the case here for review.

After the cause was entered in the supreme court of the territory McMichael died, and the cause was revived in the name of his heirs.

The particular question involved in this case is whether a settlement or entry on public land already covered of record by another entry, valid upon its face, gives the second entryman any right in the land, notwithstanding the first entry may subsequently be relinquished or be ascertained to be invalid by reason of facts dehors the record of such entry.

By virtue of the authority vested in him by acts of Congress, particularly by the Indian appropriation act of March 2d, 1889 (25 Stat. at L. 1004, chap. 412), the President by proclamation dated March 23d, 1889, declared that certain lands theretofore obtained from Indians (among which were those in dispute) would "at and after the hour of 12 o'clock, noon, of the twenty-second day of April, next, and not before, be open for settlement, under the terms of, and subject to, all the conditions, limitations, and restrictions" contained in the above act and in the laws of the United States applicable thereto. 26 *Stat. at L. 1544. That proclamation contains the following clause: "Warning is hereby again expressly given, that no person entering upon and occupying said lands before said hour of 12 o'clock, noon, of the twenty-second day of April, A. D. eighteen hundred and eighty-nine, hereinbefore fixed, will ever be permitted to enter any of said lands or acquire any rights thereto; and that the officers of the United States will be required to strictly enforce the provision of the act of Congress to the above effect." 26 Stat. at L. 1544-1546.

It may be assumed, for the purpose of this case, that White entered the territory and occupied the land before noon of April 22d, 1889, in violation of the act of Congress and the proclamation of the President. But his entry did not, on its face or in the papers connected therewith, disclose the fact of his personal disqualification to make a valid entry. While the entry remained uncanceled of record by any direct action of the Land Office or by relinquishment, could another person, by making an entry, acquire a right in the land upon which a patent could be based? If not, then McMichael acquired no right by his entry or application to enter.

The supreme court of the territory held that White's homestead entry was prima facie valid, and that, so long as White's entry remained uncanceled of record, it segregated the tract of land from the mass of the public domain, and precluded McMichael from acquiring an inceptive right thereto by virtue of his alleged settlement.

We are of opinion that there was no error in this ruling. It is supported by the adjudged cases. Kansas P. R. Co. v. Dunmeyer, 113 U. S. 629, 28 L. ed. 1122, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 566; Hastings & D. R. Co. v. Whitney, 132 U. S. 357, 361, 362, 33 L. ed. 363, 365, 366, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 112; Sioux City & I. F. Town Lot & Land Co. v. Griffey, 143 U. S. 32, 38, 36 L. ed. 64, 65, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 362; Whitney v. Taylor, 158 U. S. 85, 91-94, 39 L. ed. 906, 908, 909, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 796; Northern P. R. Co. v. Sanders, 166 U. S. 620, 631, 632, 41 L. ed. 1139, 1143, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 671; Northern P. R. Co. v. De Lacey, 174 U. S. 622, 634, 635, 43 L. ed. 1111, 1115, 1116, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 791; and Hodges v. Colcord, 193 U. S. 192, 194-196, 48 L. ed. 677-679, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 433.

In the last-named case the question now before us was directly presented and decided. It was there alleged that one *Gay-[312] man, who had made a homestead entry, was disqualified by reason of his having entered the territory of Oklahoma in violation of the above act of Congress and the proclamation of the President. The court said: "Gayman's homestead entry was prima facie valid. There was nothing on the face of the record to show that he had entered the territory prior to the time fixed for the opening thereof for settlement, or that he had in any manner violated the statute or the proclamation of the President. This prima facie valid entry removed the land, temporarily at least, out of the public domain, and beyond the reach of other homestead entries. . . . Generally, a homestead entry while it remains uncanceled withdraws the land from subsequent entry. Such has been the ruling of the Land Department. . . . The entry of Gayman, though ineffectual to vest any rights in him, and therefore void as to him, was such an entry as prevented the acquisition of homestead rights by another until it had been set aside."

Following the adjudged cases, we hold that White's original entry was prima facie valid, that is, valid on the face of the record, and McMichael's entry, having been made at a time when White's entry remained uncanceled, or not relinquished, of record, conferred no right upon him, for the reason that White's entry, so long as it remained undisturbed of record, had the effect to segregate the lands from the public domain and make them not subject to entry. Upon White's relinquishment they again became public lands, subject to the entry made by Murphy.

In addition, it may be observed that the action of the Land Department under the statutes relating to the public lands has been in line with the above views. This appears from the decision in Hodges v. Colcord, and from the opinion of the Secretary of the Interior in McMichael v. Murphy, 20 Land Dec. 147. It is our duty not to overrule the construction of a statute upon which the Land Department has uniformly proceeded in its administration of the public lands, except for cogent reasons. United States v. Johnston, 124 U. S. 236, 31 L. ed. 389, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 446; United States v. Alabama G. S. R. Co. 142 U. S. 615, 35 L. ed. 1134, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 306; United States v. Philbrick, 120 U. S. 52, 30 L. ed. 559, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 413; United States v. Hcaley, 160 U. S. 138, 141, 40 L. ed. 370, 371, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 247.

The judgment is affirmed.

A. Y. CHRISMAN and H. T. Chrisman, Plffs. in Err.,

v.

E. O. MILLER and the Home Oil Company.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 313-323.)

Error to state court—conclusiveness of findings of fact—mining claims—discovery.

1. Findings of fact are conclusive on the Supreme Court of the United States in cases coming up from a state court.
2. Even as between rival mineral claimants to petroleum lands, there must have been such a discovery, in order to sustain a location, as would justify a prudent person in the expenditure of money and labor in exploitation for petroleum.

[No. 171.]

Argued March 8, 1905. Decided April 3, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of California to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Superior Court of Fresno County in that state in favor of plaintiffs in an action to quiet title to mineral lands. Affirmed.

See same case below, 140 Cal. 440, 98 Am. St. Rep. 63, 73 Pac. 1083, 74 Pac. 444.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brewer:

This was an action in the superior court of Fresno county, California, to quiet title to certain lands in that county. The complaint by Miller and the Home Oil Company was filed October 14, 1898. The case was tried by the court without a jury, findings of fact were made, and a decree entered in favor of the plaintiffs. On appeal to the supreme court of the state this decree was affirmed, September 13, 1903. 140 Cal. 440, 98 Am. St. Rep. 63, 73 Pac. 1083, 74 Pac. 444. Thereafter the case was brought to this court on writ of error. The dispute between the parties was as to the validity of respective locations of the land under the mineral laws of the United States. The mineral found therein, and on account of which the locations were made, was petroleum. From the findings it appears that on June 14, 1895, eight persons, one Barieau being of the number, attempted to make a mineral location upon the tract in controversy, the same being an entire quarter section. Whatever interest they thus acquired was, on December 24, 1896, conveyed to E. O. Miller. On December 31, 1896, Miller by his written declaration abandoned and relinquished all rights which he had acquired by this conveyance. On the same day and about four hours thereafter Miller and seven others, duly qualified to make entries, made a mineral location of the entire tract. Subsequently all interests obtained thereby were vested in the plaintiffs. On January 1, 1897, the defendants attempted to make a location of certain portions of the tract. The tenth, eleventh, fifteenth, seventeenth and eighteenth findings are as follows:

"10. That immediately after going into possession of said northeast quarter of said section 20, the said plaintiff, Home Oil Company, commenced digging, boring, and excavating thereon for petroleum and other fluid products, and has expended in such work the sum of more than $30,000, and by means of such digging, boring, and excavat-

197 U. S.

NOTE.—On what questions the Federal Supreme Court will consider in reviewing the judgments of state courts—see note to Missouri ex rel. Hill v. Dockery, 63 L. R. A. 571.

ing discovered large quantities of petroleum therein; and there now exists, and did at the commencement of this action, wells of great depth, sunk and excavated upon said property by said Home Oil Company, from which there is a daily flow of large quantities of petroleum of great value.

315] "11. That ever since the 17th day of September, 1897, the said plaintiff, Home Oil Company, has been and is now *in the sole and exclusive possession of all of said real property, and engaged in working, developing, and mining the same, and extracting petroleum and other fluid products therefrom.

"15. That said defendant A. Y. Chrisman never at any time discovered a seepage of petroleum or other mineral oil upon said land or any part thereof, and the defendant H. T. Chrisman never discovered a seepage of petroleum or other mineral oil upon said land or upon any part thereof, and that the only discovery of petroleum or any other fluid produce upon said lands or upon any part thereof is the discovery made by the plaintiff Home Oil Company as in these findings before stated.

"17. That on the said 1st day of January, 1897, no part of the said northeast quarter of section 20 was vacant public mineral land or open to exploration or location for mining purposes, but, on the contrary, the whole of said northeast quarter of said section 20 was then in the possession of J. A. Hannah, E. O. Miller, W. F. Hall, D. G. Overall, L. E. Hall, Harry Levinson, R. B. Biddle, and Charles H. Smith, under and by virtue of their location of said land hereinbefore mentioned.

"18. That the said defendants, A. Y. Chrisman and H. T. Chrisman, did not make the location for mining purposes hereinbefore mentioned in good faith, and did not, nor did either of them, enter into the possession thereof or any part of the same for the purpose of working and mining thereon on the 1st day of January, 1897, or upon any other date; and said defendants have not and neither of them has since the 1st day of January, 1897, or since any day whatever, done and performed upon said land or any part thereof such work and labor or made improvements thereon as is required by the laws of the United States or of the state of California; and that the said defendants have not been and neither of them has been in the exclusive possession of said tracts of land so claimed by them; and said defendants are not, and neither of them is, in the possession of said 316] tracts of land so claimed by them or *either of them, or any part thereof; and the said 197 U. S.

defendants ever since the said 1st day of January, 1897, or since any day whatever or at all have not been nor are they or either of them now entitled to the exclusive or any possession of the tracts of land claimed by them or any part thereof, nor are said defendants entitled, nor is either of them entitled, to the exclusive or any possession whatever of any part of said northeast quarter of said section 20, in township 19 south, range 15 east, Mt. Diablo base and meridian."

Mr. William H. Metson argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Joseph C. Campbell, Frank C. Drew, and Philip Mansfield, filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

The value of a mineral deposit is a matter into which the government does not inquire as between two mineral claimants. Inquiries of this character are confined to controversies between mineral and agricultural claimants.

1 Lindley, Mines, 2d ed. p. 609; Tam v. Story, 21 Land Dec. 440.

In a case of contest between mineral claimants on one side and parties holding town-site patents on the other, this court has repeatedly declared that in order to except mines or mineral lands from the operation of a town-site patent it is not sufficient that the lands do in fact contain minerals, or even valuable minerals, when the town-site patent takes effect, but they must at that time contain mineral of such extent and value as to justify expenditures for the purpose of extracting them.

Deffeback v. Hawke, 115 U. S. 392, 29 L. ed. 423, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 95; Davis v. Weibbold, 139 U. S. 507, 35 L. ed. 238, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 628; Dover v. Richards, 151 U. S. 658, 38 L. ed. 305, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 452; Migeon v. Montana R. Co. 23 C. C. A. 156, 44 U. S. App. 724, 77 Fed. 249.

Between two placer claimants the rule is different.

1 Lindley, Mines, 2d ed. p. 606.

Seepages of oil, when discovered upon government land, constitute a discovery of oil.

Book v. Justice Min. Co. 58 Fed. 106; McShane v. Kenkle, 18 Mont. 208, 33 L. R. A. 851, 56 Am. St. Rep. 578, 44 Pac. 979; Montana C. R. Co. v. Migeon, 68 Fed. 811, 23 C. C. A. 156, 44 U. S. App. 724, 77 Fed. 249; Erhardt v. Boaro, 113 U. S. 527, 28 L. ed. 1113, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 560; Donahue, Petroleum & Gas, 1902, p. 233; Nevada Sierra Oil Co. v. Home Oil Co. 98 Fed. 673; 1 Lindley, Mines, p. 779.

Messrs. William H. Metson and Joseph C. Campbell filed a separate brief for plaintiffs in error:

The Supreme Court of the United States will look into the case and see what is the real substance and effect of the decision. Accident, fraud, or mistake cannot deprive it of its right to review.

McCullough v. Virginia, 172 U. S. 116, 117, 43 L. ed. 387, 388, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 134.

Discovery is a matter of law as much as certain marks upon the ground.

McKinley Creek Min. Co. v. Alaska United Min. Co. 183 U. S. 563, 570, 46 L. ed. 331, 334, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 84.

Mr. L. L. Cory argued the cause and filed a brief for defendants in error:

The findings of fact of the trial court, affirmed by the supreme court, are conclusive and final, and all the facts so found will be taken as true upon this hearing.

Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 193 U. S. 53, 48 L. ed. 614, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 396; Clipper Min. Co. v. Eli Min. & Land Co. 194 U. S. 220, 48 L. ed. 944, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 632; Thayer v. Spratt, 189 U. S. 346, 47 L. ed. 845, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 576; Jenkins v. Neff, 186 U. S. 230, 46 L. ed. 1140, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 905; E. Bement & Sons v. National Harrow Co. 186 U. S. 70, 46 L. ed. 1058, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747; Egan v. Hart, 165 U. S. 188, 41 L. ed. 680, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 300.

A mineral discovery sufficient to warrant the location of a mining claim may be regarded as proven, where mineral is found, and the evidence shows that a person of ordinary prudence would be justified in the further expenditure of his labor and means, with a reasonable prospect of success in developing a valuable mine.

Harrington v. Chambers, 3 Utah, 94, 1 Pac. 362; Shreve v. Copper Bell Min. Co. 11 Mont. 309, 28 Pac. 315.

It is the finding of the mineral in rock in place as distinguished from float rock that constitutes the discovery, and warrants the prospectors in making a location of a mining claim.

Book v. Justice Min. Co. 58 Fed. 106.

Mere discovery of fragments of mineral bearing ore not in lode formation will not form the basis of a valid location of a lode claim.

Waterloo Min. Co. v. Doe, 56 Fed. 685.

Locations existing simply upon a conjecture or imaginary existence of a vein or lode within their limits shall not be permitted. A location can only rest upon an actual discovery of the vein or lode.

King v. Amy & S. Consol. Min. Co. 152 U. S. 227, 38 L. ed. 421, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 510; 1 Lindley, Mines, § 336, p. 436.

There is no evidence that the "indications" discovered by Barieau were of such a character as the miners in that district would follow, and there is no evidence that these "indications" would justify miners in working the claim, and there is no evidence that practical miners ever had or ever would attach any significance to these indications, and there is no evidence that indications of similar character had ever been followed up by any persons whatever, or had ever resulted in the finding or development of a petroleum claim.

See Shoshone Min. Co. v. Rutter, 31 C. C. A. 223, 59 U. S. App. 538, 87 Fed. 801.

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

In cases coming from a state court we do not review questions of fact, but accept the conclusions of the state tribunals as final. Clipper Min. Co. v. Eli Min. & Land Co. 194 U. S. 220, 48 L. ed. 944, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 632, and cases cited in the opinion; Kaufman v. Tredway, 195 U. S. 271, ante, 190, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 33; Smiley v. Kansas, 196 U. S. 447, ante, 546, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289.

By the findings of the trial court the Chrismans, plaintiffs in error, never made any discovery of petroleum or other mineral oil, did not make the attempted location in good faith, and never did any work on the tract. These findings were of date June 24, 1899, nearly two years and a half after their attempted location. It would seem from these facts that they had no pretense of right to the premises.

It is contended, however, that the supreme court, in its opinion, practically set aside these findings in one respect, and that is the discovery of petroleum. We do not so understand that opinion. The only reference made to the matter is in these words: "The alleged discovery of defendants under their location may be disposed of in a single sentence. It amounted to no more than the pretended discovery by Barieau;" and in reference to Barieau's alleged discovery the court said:

"Upon the question of discovery the sole evidence is that of Barieau himself. Giving fullest weight to that testimony, it amounts to no more than this, that Barieau had walked over the land at the time he posted his notice, and had discovered 'indications' of petrolcum. Specifically, he says that he saw a spring, and 'the oil comes out and floats over the water in the summer time, when it is hot. In June, 1895, there was a little water with oil and a little oil with water coming out. It was dripping over a rock about 2 feet high. There was no pool; it was just dripping a little water and oil, not much *'water.' This is all the [320] 'discovery' which it is even pretended was made under the Barieau location."

There is nothing in this language from which it can be inferred that the supreme court of the state set aside the finding of the trial court. All that it said was in answer to the contention of the defendants that they had made a discovery, and that contention the supreme court repudiated, leaving the finding of fact to stand as it was made by the trial court.

It is further contended that the location made by Barieau and his associates, and conveyed by them to Miller, did not lapse until midnight of December 31, 1896; that then it lapsed by reason of the failure to do the annual work required by statute; that Miller could not prior thereto abandon and relinquish that location, and at the same time make a new one, as he attempted to do on the afternoon of December 31, because the effect of such action would be to continue a possessory right to the tracts without compliance with the statutory requirement of work. Hence, as contended, the only valid location was that made on January 1, 1897, by the defendants. It may be doubted whether, in view of their want of good faith, the defendant's can avail themselves of their contention, and, indeed, also doubted whether they could uphold their location by proof of a discovery by some other party. But it has no foundation in fact, for, as found by the trial and held by the supreme court of the state, the attempted location by Barieau and his associates in June, 1895, was a failure by reason of a lack of discovery. We have already quoted the declaration of the supreme court. The testimony referred to in that quotation, even if true, does not overthrow the finding. It does not establish a discovery. It only suggests a possibility of mineral of sufficient amount and value to justify further exploration.

By 29 Stat. at L. p. 526, chap. 216, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1434, "lands containing petroleum or other mineral oils, and chiefly valuable therefor," may be entered and patented "under the provisions of the laws relating to placer mineral claims." By § 2329, Rev. Stat. U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1432, *placer claims are "subject to entry and patent, under like circumstances and conditions, and upon similar proceedings, as are provided for vein or lode claims." By § 2320, Rev. Stat. U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1424, "no location of a mining claim shall be made until the discovery of the vein or lode within the limits of the claim located."

What is necessary to constitute a discovery of mineral is not prescribed by statute, but there have been frequent judicial declarations in respect thereto. In United States v. Iron Silver Min. Co. 128 U. S. 197 U. S.

673, 32 L. ed. 571, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 195, a suit brought by the United States to set aside placer patents on the charge that the patented tracts were not placer mining ground, but land containing mineral veins or lodes of great value, as was well known to the patentee on his application for the patents, we said (p. 683, L. ed. p. 575, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 199):

"It appears very clearly from the evidence that no lodes or veins were discovered by the excavations of Sawyer in his prospecting work, and that his lode locations were made upon an erroneous opinion, and not upon knowledge, that lodes bearing metal were disclosed by them. It is not enough that there may have been some indications, by outcroppings on the surface, of the existence of lodes or veins of rock in place bearing gold or silver or other metal, to justify their designation as 'known' veins or lodes. To meet that designation the lodes or veins must be clearly ascertained, and be of such extent as to render the land more valuable on that account, and justify the exploitation. Although pits and shafts had been sunk in various places, and what are termed in mining cross-cuts had been run, only loose gold and small nuggets had been found, mingled with earth, sand, and gravel. Lodes and veins in quartz or other rock in place bearing gold or silver or other metal were not disclosed when the application for the patents were made."

This definition was accepted as correct in Iron Silver Min. Co. v. Mike & S. Gold & Silver Min. Co. 143 U. S. 394, 36 L. ed. 201, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 543, though in that case there was a vigorous dissent upon questions of fact, in *which Mr. Justice Field, [322] speaking for the minority, said (p. 412, L. ed. p. 207, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 548): "The mere indication or presence of gold or silver is not sufficient to establish the existence of a lode. The mineral must exist in such quantities as to justify expenditure of money for the development of the mine and the extraction of the mineral." And again (p. 424, L. ed. p. 211, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 552): "It is not every vein or lode which may show traces of gold or silver that is exempted from sale or patent of the ground embracing it, but those only which possess these metals in such quantity as to enhance the value of the land and invite the expenditure of time and money for their development. No purpose or policy would be subserved by excepting from sale and patent veins and lodes yielding no remunerative return for labor expended upon them."

By the Land Department this rule has been laid down (Castle v. Womble, 19 Land Dec. 455, 457):

"Where minerals have been found, and the evidence is of such a character that a person of ordinary prudence would be justified in the further expenditure of his labor and means, with a reasonable prospect of success, in developing a valuable mine, the requirements of the statute have been met. To hold otherwise would tend to make of little avail, if not entirely nugatory, that provision of the law whereby 'all valuable mineral deposits in lands belonging to the United States . . . are . . . declared to be free and open to exploration and purchase.' "

Some cases have held that a mere willingness on the part of the locator to further expend his labor and means was a fair criterion. In respect to this Lindley on Mines, 1st ed. § 336, says:

"But it would seem that the question should not be left to the arbitrary will of the locator. Willingness, unless evidenced by actual exploitation, would be a mere mental state which could not be satisfactorily proved. The facts which are within the observation of the discoverer, and which induce him to locate, should be such as would [323] justify a man of ordinary *prudence, not necessarily a skilled miner, in the expenditure of his time and money in the development of the property."

It is true that, when the controversy is between two mineral claimants, the rule respecting the sufficiency of a discovery of mineral is more liberal than when it is between a mineral claimant and one seeking to make an agricultural entry, for the reason that where land is sought to be taken out of the category of agricultural lands the evidence of its mineral character should be reasonably clear, while in respect to mineral lands, in a controversy between claimants, the question is simply which is entitled to priority. That, it is true, is the case before us. But even in such a case, as shown by the authorities we have cited, there must be such a discovery of mineral as gives reasonable evidence of the fact, either that there is a vein or lode carrying the precious mineral, or, if it be claimed as placer ground, that it is valuable for such mining.

Giving full weight to the testimony of Barieau, we should not be justified, even in a case coming from a Federal court, in overthrowing the finding that he made no discovery. There was not enough in what he claims to have seen to have justified a prudent person in the expenditure of money and labor in exploitation for petroleum. It merely suggested a possibility that the ground contained oil sufficient to make it "chiefly valuable therefor." If that be true were the case one coming from a Federal court, a fortiori must it be true when the case comes to us from a state court, whose findings of fact we have so often held to be conclusive.

The judgment of the Supreme Court of California is affirmed.

*IN THE MATTER OF MORRIS [324] STRAUSS.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 324-334.)

Extradition—complaint before committing magistrate is a charge of crime.

A person against whom a complaint for a felony has been filed before a committing magistrate, who can only charge or hold for trial before another tribunal, is "charged" with the crime within the meaning of U. S. Const. art. 4, § 2, subd. 2, and of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5278 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3597), providing for the extradition of persons charged with treason, felony, or other crime.

[No. 186.]

Argued and submitted March 16, 1905. Decided April 3, 1905.

ON A CERTIFICATE from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit presenting the questions whether extradition of a person against whom a complaint of felony is filed before a committing magistrate is authorized by the Federal Constitution, and whether the congressional legislation providing for such extradition is unconstitutional. The first question answered in the affirmative and the second in the negative.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brewer:

The petitioner was charged by affidavit before a justice of the peace of Youngstown township, Ohio, with the crime of obtaining $400 worth of jewelry at Youngstown, Ohio, by false pretenses, contrary to the law of that state. He was arrested as a fugitive from justice and brought before a magistrate of the city of New York, August 11, 1902. The governor of New York, after a hearing, at which the accused was represented by counsel, issued his warrant, dated August 22, 1902, directed to the police commissioner of New York city, directing him to arrest the accused and deliver him to the duly accredited agent of Ohio, to be taken to that state.

The warrant recites that it has been represented by the *governor of Ohio that the [325] accused stands charged in that state of the crime of securing property by false pretenses, which is a crime under its law, and that he has fled from that state. It also recites that the requisition was accompanied by affidavits and other papers, duly certified by the governor of Ohio to be authentic, charging the accused with having committed the said crime, and with having fled from Ohio and taken refuge in the state of New York.

On the 29th of August, after the arrest of the petitioner, a writ of habeas corpus was allowed by the district court. The police commissioner made return that he held the accused by virtue of the governor's warrant. On September 16, 1902, the district court discharged the writ and remanded the accused to the custody of the police commissioner. This order was taken on appeal to the circuit court of appeals of the second circuit, which certified the following questions:

"First. Whether the delivery up of an alleged fugitive from justice against whom a complaint for the crime of securing property by false pretenses has been sworn to and is pending before a justice of the peace of Ohio, having the jurisdiction conferred upon him by the laws of that state, is authorized in view of the provisions of article 4, § 2, subd. 2, of the Constitution?

"Second. Is § 5278 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3597), in as far as it authorizes the delivery up of an alleged fugitive from justice upon an affidavit of complaint pending before a justice of the peace in Ohio for the crime of securing property by false pretenses, which said justice of the peace has the jurisdiction conferred upon him by the laws of the said state, violative of article 4, § 2, subd. 2, of the Constitution?"

Article 4, § 2, subd. 2, of the Constitution reads:

"A person charged in any state with treason, felony, or other crime, who shall flee from justice and be found in another state, shall, on demand of the executive authority of the state from which he fled, be delivered up to be removed to the state having jurisdiction of the crime."

[326] *Revised Statutes, § 5278, so far as is material, is:

"Whenever the executive authority of any state or territory demands any person as a fugitive from justice, of the executive authority of any state or territory to which such person has fled, and produces a copy of an indictment found or an affidavit made before a magistrate of any state or territory, charging the person demanded with having committed treason, felony, or other crime, certified as authentic by the governor or chief magistrate of the state or territory from whence the person so charged has fled, it shall be the duty of the executive authority of the state or territory to which such person has fled to cause him to be arrested and secured, and to cause notice of the arrest to be given to the executive authority making such demand, or to the agent of such authority appointed to receive the fugitive, and to cause the fugitive to be delivered to such agent when he shall appear."

Mr. Max J. Kohler argued the cause, and, with Mr. Moses H. Grossman, filed a brief for Strauss:

The executive authority of the state was not authorized to make the demand unless the party was charged in the regular course of judicial proceedings.

Kentucky v. Dennison, 24 How. 66, 16 L. ed. 717.

The Constitution contemplates a charge in a court where there can be a trial and conviction, and not simply a decision whether the accused shall give bond for his appearance in another court to answer a charge that may or may not be preferred against him.

3 Crim. Law Mag. p. 787.

This precisely accords with the holding of this court as to the nature of preliminary proceedings, made under the statute governing removal to the Federal courts of prosecutions against persons claiming to have acted under Federal authority.

Virginia v. Paul, 148 U. S. 107, 119, 37 L. ed. 386, 390, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 536; Com. v. Artman, 5 Phila. 304, Fed. Cas. No. 10,952; Virginia v. Felts, 133 Fed. 85.

Of course, if the cause be triable before the justice of the peace, and he is not sitting merely as a committing magistrate, a different rule obtains.

Virginia v. Bingham, 88 Fed. 561.

Historically, it is certainly true that these preliminary proceedings were merely a melioration of the practice of arresting without warrants for crime, to secure presence on indictment to be found.

Stephen, History of Crim. Law 1, 190, 192; 3 Crim. Law Mag. The Preliminary Investigation of Crime, p. 297; 16 Enc. Pl. & Pr. Preliminary Examination, p. 820.

The English common-law practice authorized removal only after indictment found.

Re Dana, 68 Fed. 886.

Oppressive removals to the mother country for trial for alleged crime was one of the grievances specifically set forth in the Declaration of Independence.

Friedenwald, The Declaration of Independence (1904) pp. 249, 250; 6 Winsor, Narrative & Critical History of America, p. 53; 6 Bancroft, History of United States, 1857 ed. 417, 418, 441, 450, 451.

It seems quite unreasonable to suppose that the colonists intended to open the door to such oppressive removals as would be involved in rendition on mere complaints to distant states, to answer indictments that might never be found.

Jack v. Martin, 14 Wend. 507.

The constitutional provision requires actual physical surrender and removal, and bail is not authorized after an unreviewed warrant of extradition has been issued.

Ex parte Erwin, 7 Tex. App. 288; Re Foye, 21 Wash. 250, 57 Pac. 825.

Of course, bail is authorized while proceedings superseding or delaying surrender are actually pending in the remanding state.

State v. Hufford, 23 Iowa, 579; Roberts v. Reilly, 116 U. S. 80, 90, 29 L. ed. 544, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 291; Hawley, International Extradition, p. 59; Wright v. Henkel, 190 U. S. 40, 47 L. ed. 948, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 781; Re Ah Tai, 125 Fed. 795.

The English common law made most ample provision for bailing in the county of arrest, even where an indictment was found in another county.

Rex v. Bomaster, 1 Wm. Bl. 233; Rex v. Jones, 1 Barn. & Ald. 209; Rex v. Braithwaite, 2 Lewin, C. C. 55; Rex v. Booker, 2 Dowl. P. C. 446.

Where gross oppression must result, removal on mere complaint before a committing magistrate was not designed by the framers of the Constitution.

This is a singular contrast to the methods of Federal removal for crime against the United States.

Price v. McCarty, 32 C. C. A. 162, 59 U. S. App. 578, 89 Fed. 84; Beavers v. Henkel, 194 U. S. 73, 83, 48 L. ed. 882, 886, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 605.

Rendition on mere complaints for indictable offenses is unnecessary, and answers no useful purpose, but, on the contrary, creates gross hardship and oppression.

People ex rel. Lawrence v. Brady, 56 N. Y. 186; People ex rel. Corkran v. Hyatt, 172 N. Y. 176, 60 L. R. A. 774, 92 Am. St. Rep. 706, 64 N. E. 825.

All our states provide methods of arrest and detention of fugitives from justice before the governor's warrant of extradition issues.

Re Mohr, 73 Ala. 503, 49 Am. Rep. 63; Robinson v. Flanders, 29 Ind. 10; Com. v. Tracy, 5 Met. 536; Ex parte Ammons, 34 Ohio St. 518; Ex parte Cubreth, 49 Cal. 436; Ex parte Rosenblat, 51 Cal. 285; Kurtz v. State, 22 Fla. 36, 1 Am. St. Rep. 173; Ex parte White, 49 Cal. 433; Holmes v. Jennison, 14 Pet. 540, 547, 10 L. ed. 579, 583; Re Strauss, 63 C. C. A. 99, 126 Fed. 327; Moore v. Illinois, 14 How. 13, 14 L. ed. 306; Prigg v. Pennsylvania, 16 Pet. 539, 10 L. ed. 1060; 12 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 607.

The words "charged with treason, felony, or other crime" were used by the framers of the Constitution in the same sense as that in which analogous words are elsewhere used in the same instrument concerning criminal proceedings, and are inapplicable to preliminary examinations.

Ex parte Milligan, 4 Wall. 2, 18 L. ed. 281; Ex parte Wilson, 114 U. S. 417, 29 L. ed. 89, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 935; Ex parte Bain, 121 U. S. 1, 30 L. ed. 849, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 781; Re Dana, 7 Ben. 1, Fed. Cas. No. 3,554.

It is well settled that there need be no jury trial in preliminary proceedings; that they are not the basis of the plea of res judicata, but that successive proceedings on the same claim are authorized, and that they are required to be held in the district of arrest, and not in the place where the crime is claimed to have been committed, and that they do not constitute a "trial."

16 Enc. Pl. & Pr. p. 821; Price v. McCarty, 32 C. C. A. 162, 59 U. S. App. 578, 89 Fed. 84; Re Dana, 68 Fed. 886; United States v. Lumsden, 1 Bond, 15, Fed. Cas. No. 15,641; French v. People, 3 Park. Crim. Rep. 114; 1 Bishop's New Crim. Proc. § 239a; Re Garst, 10 Neb. 78, 4 N. W. 511; Latimer v. State, 55 Neb. 609, 70 Am. St. Rep. 403, 76 N. W. 207; Hamilton v. People, 29 Mich. 173; Cox v. Coleridge, 1 Barn. & C. 37; Ex parte Porter, 16 Tex. App. 321; State, Duffy, Prosecutor, v. Britton, 47 N. J. L. 251; State v. Powell, 44 Mo. App. 21.

Preliminary proceedings not being essential to a prosecution for crime, it is submitted that they do not constitute such charge of crime "in the regular course of judicial proceedings," as this court, speaking by Chief Justice Taney, in Kentucky v. Denison, said must underlie the demand under this very article of the Constitution.

Benson v. McMahon, 127 U. S. 457, 32 L. ed. 234, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1240; Thiede v. Utah, 159 U. S. 510, 513, 40 L. ed. 237, 239, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62; United States v. King, 147 U. S. 676, 685, 37 L. ed. 328, 331, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 439.

Criminal proceedings do not begin when preliminary proceedings are instituted.

Virginia v. Paul, 148 U. S. 107, 37 L. ed. 386, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 536.

The only exception recognized by the authorities deals with the question whether their institution bars the running of the statute of limitations. As to that question, it must be conceded that the authorities are conflicting, though the weight of authority is to the effect that they do not, especially not under the Federal statute.

Com. v. Haas, 57 Pa. 443; Re Griffith, 35 Kan. 377, 11 Pac. 174; Pilot Grove v. McCormick, 56 Mo. App. 530; Boughn v. State, 44 Neb. 889, 62 N. W. 1094; Vondersmith's Case, Wharton, Crim. Law, 6th ed. § 436, note; Re Lacey, 6 Okla. 4, 37 Pac. 1095.

The word "charge," in article 4, § 2, subd. 2, where it is connected with the phrase "to be removed to the state having jurisdiction of the crime," is used in the same sense in which the framers of the Constitution, in article 3, defined "cases" within the judicial power of the United States, and should be construed in the same manner by excluding mere preliminary examinations before mere committing magistrates acting as conservators of the peace.

Robertson v. Baldwin, 165 U. S. 275, 278-280, 41 L. ed. 715, 716, 717, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 326; Todd v. United States, 158 U. S. 278, 39 L. ed. 982, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 889.

The words "indictment" and "affidavit," charging crime, in U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5278 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3597), are used distributively, just as they are used in the similar provisions of the judiciary act of 1790, as to statutes of limitations for crimes.

Mackin v. United States, 117 U. S. 348, 29 L. ed. 909, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 777.

Removal should not be authorized where the pending proceeding does not provide for jury trial in cases where that is a right, even though trial de novo after conviction, before a jury in another court, be provided for; and the circumstance that Federal removal, as distinguished from interstate rendition, was there involved, is immaterial.

Re Dana, 7 Ben. 1, Fed. Cas. No. 3,554; Callan v. Wilson, 127 U. S. 540, 32 L. ed. 223, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1301.

Charges must be made "in the regular course of judicial proceedings."

State v. Hufford, 28 Iowa, 391; Ex parte Powell, 20 Fla. 807; State ex rel. Stundahl v. Richardson, 34 Minn. 115, 24 N. W. 354; Ex parte Pearce, 32 Tex. Crim. App. 301, 23 S. W. 15.

Mr. Howard S. Gans submitted the cause for respondent. Mr. William Travers Jerome was on the brief:

A reading of a statute or constitution which leads to absurd or noxious results will be rejected, unless the plain language of the instrument leaves no room for escape from that construction.

Prigg v. Pennsylvania, 16 Pet. 539, 612, 10 L. ed. 1060, 1088; Re Chapman, 166 U. S. 661, 667, 41 L. ed. 1154, 1158, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 677; Lau Ow Bew v. United States, 144 U. S. 47, 59, 36 L. ed. 340, 344, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 517; Church of Holy Trinity v. United States, 143 U. S. 457, 461, 36 L. ed. 227, 228, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 511; Jarrold v. Moberly, 103 U. S. 580, 586, 26 L. ed. 492, 494.

The Constitution imposed no limitation upon the states as to the method in which criminal actions should be commenced or criminal charges should be made.

197 U. S. U. S., Book 49.

Hurtado v. California, 110 U. S. 516, 28 L. ed. 232, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111, 292.

The universal recognition that it is easier to challenge the sufficiency of proof by affidavit than to find any defect in an indictment has led to the common use of indictments by prosecuting officers as the final basis of interstate rendition, even in cases where the fugitive has first been held upon the basis of magistrate's papers, though, of course, renditions upon the basis of affidavits have not been uncommon.

Re Clark, 9 Wend. 212; Kingsbury's Case, 106 Mass. 223; Re Burke, 19 Alb. L. J. 509, Fed. Cas. No. 2,158; Kurtz v. State, 22 Fla. 36, 1 Am. St. Rep. 173; Re Manchester, 5 Cal. 237; Re White, 5 C. C. A. 29, 14 U. S. App. 87, 55 Fed. 54; Re Keller, 36 Fed. 681; State ex rel. Stundahl v. Richardson, 34 Minn. 115, 24 N. W. 354; Re Hooper, 52 Wis. 699.

The word "charged," in its ordinary acceptance, while doubtless sufficiently technical to exclude the idle gossip of the neighborhood, or any informal accusation, is also sufficiently inclusive to embrace any formal accusation made before a judicial officer in the regular course of a criminal proceeding.

Kentucky v. Dennison, 24 How. 104, 16 L. ed. 728.

Manifestly, it was thus that the Congress construed it in 1793, when Washington, the President of the Constitutional Convention, was President of the United States, and when many of the delegates to that Convention were members of the Congress that enacted the law; and concededly this construction is entitled to, and will be accorded, the greatest weight.

Prigg v. Pennsylvania, 16 Pet. 621, 10 L. ed. 1091; Kentucky v. Dennison, 24 How. 104, 16 L. ed. 728.

And this construction has been followed and sanctioned in practice from the early years to the present time without question as to its validity.

2 Moore, Extradition, § 546, p. 871; Spear, Extradition, p. 266.

And manifestly this is the sense in which the word "charged" is commonly used in the law.

Bouvier, Law Dict.

The constitutional provision has never heretofore been construed in any such spirit of narrowness or technicality as is involved in the contentions of the relator, for otherwise it could never have been held that a person became a "fugitive" merely by departing from a state in which he had committed a crime, though his departure were unaccompanied by evidences of haste or evasion (Ex parte Reggel, 114 U. S. 642, 29 L. ed. 250, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1148), or that the delivery up to the state "having jurisdiction of the crime" warranted a delivery up to that state for prosecution for any other crime, without even an attempt to prosecute for the crime upon which the extradition proceeding was founded.

Lascelles v. Georgia, 148 U. S. 537, 37 L. ed. 549, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 687.

Interstate rendition is no new thing. There was inter-colonial rendition by treaty between the New England colonies as early as 1643. A similar practice obtained among the other colonies, even in the absence of express provision of law, the basis of the rendition being the certificate of a judicial officer.

Kentucky v. Dennison, 24 How. 100, 101, 16 L. ed. 726, 727; 13 Am. Law Rev. 188; 2 Moore, Extradition, § 518.

The practice was continued under the "Articles of Confederation, which limited the obligation to surrender to cases of treason, felony, and high misdemeanors," and required the demand of the executive of the pursuing state; and concurrently with the rendition under that provision it was not unusual to surrender fugitives under the old methods without requiring the intervention of the executive.

2 Moore, Extradition, § 519; 13 Am. Law Rev. 189, 190.

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

The Constitution provides for the surrender of a person charged with treason, felony, or other crime. The statute prescribes the evidence of the charge to be produced, to wit: "A copy of an indictment found or an affidavit made before a magistrate . . . charging . . . treason, felony, or other crime." The offense for which extradition was sought is, under the Ohio statute, a felony (Bates' Anno. Stat. Ohio 4th ed. § [330] 7076), and subject to trial only upon an "indictment" (Ohio Const. art. 1, § 10, Bill of Rights), the proceedings in such a case before a justice of the peace being only preliminary and for the purpose of securing arrest and detention. It is contended that the constitutional provision for the extradition of persons "charged with treason, felony, or other crime" requires that the charge must be pending in a court that can try the defendant, and does not include one before a committing magistrate, who can only discharge or hold for trial before another tribunal.

But why should the word "charged" be given a restricted interpretation? It is found in the Constitution, and ordinarily words in such an instrument do not receive a narrow, contracted meaning, but are presumed to have been used in a broad sense, with a view of covering all contingencies.

In M'Culloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 4 L. ed. 579, one question discussed was as to the meaning of the word "necessary," as found in the clause of the Constitution giving to Congress power "to make all laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into execution the foregoing powers, and all other powers vested by this Constitution in the government of the United States, or in any department or officer thereof." Chief Justice Marshall, speaking for the court, said (p. 415, L. ed. p. 603):

"This word, then, like others, is used in various senses; and, in its construction, the subject, the context, the intention of the person using them, are all to be taken into view.

"Let this be done in the case under consideration. The subject is the execution of those great powers on which the welfare of a nation essentially depends. It must have been the intention of those who gave these powers, to insure, as far as human prudence could insure, their beneficial execution. This could not be done by confining the choice of means to such narrow limits as not to leave it in the power of Congress to adopt any which might be appropriate, and which were conducive to the end. This provision is made in a Constitution intended to endure for ages to come, and, consequently, *to be adapted to the various crises of hu-[331] man affairs. To have prescribed the means by which government should, in all future time, execute its powers, would have been to change entirely the character of the instrument, and give it the properties of a legal code. It would have been an unwise attempt to provide, by immutable rules, for exigencies which, if foreseen at all, must have been seen dimly, and which can be best provided for as they occur. To have declared that the best means shall not be used, but those alone without which the power given would be nugatory, would have been to deprive the legislature of the capacity to avail itself of experience, to exercise its reason, and to accommodate its legislation to circumstances."

Under the Constitution each state was left with full control over its criminal procedure. No one could have anticipated what changes any state might make therein, and doubtless the word "charged" was used in its broad signification, to cover any proceeding which a state might see fit to adopt by which a formal accusation was made against an alleged criminal. In the strictest sense of the term a party is charged with crime when an affidavit is filed, alleging the commission of the offense, and a warrant is issued for his arrest; and this is true whether a final trial may or may not be had upon such charge. It may be, and is, true, that in many of the states some further proceeding is, in the higher grade of offenses at least, necessary before the party can be put upon trial, and that the proceedings before an examining magistrate are preliminary, and only with a view to the arrest and detention of the alleged criminal; but extradition is a mere proceeding in securing arrest and detention. An extradited defendant is not put on trial upon any writ which is issued for the purposes of extradition, any more than he is upon the warrant which is issued by the justice of the peace directing his arrest.

Cases are referred to, such as Virginia v. Paul, 148 U. S. 107, 37 L. ed. 386, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 536, in which a distinction is made between the preliminary proceedings look-[332]ing to the arrest and detention of the *defendant, and those final proceedings upon which the trial is had. That was a removal case, and, discussing the question, Mr. Justice Gray, speaking for the court, said (p. 119, L. ed. p. 390, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 540): "By the terms of § 643 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 521), it is only after 'any civil suit or criminal prosecution is commenced in any court of a state,' and 'before the trial or final hearing thereof,' that it can 'be removed for trial into the circuit court next to be holden in the district where the same is pending,' and 'shall proceed as a cause originally commenced in that court.'"

"Proceedings before a magistrate to commit a person to jail, or to hold him to bail, in order to secure his appearance to answer for a crime or offense, which the magistrate has no jurisdiction himself to try, before the court in which he may be prosecuted and tried, are but preliminary to the prosecution, and are no more a commencement of the prosecution than is an arrest by an officer without a warrant for a felony committed in his presence."

But such decisions, instead of making against the use in this constitutional section of the word "charged" in its broad sense, make in its favor, because, as we have noticed, an extradition is simply one step in securing the arrest and detention of the defendant. And these preliminary proceedings are not completed until the party is brought before the court in which the trial may be had. Why should the state be put to the expense of a grand jury and an indictment before securing possession of the party to be tried? It may be true, as counsel urge, that persons are sometimes wrongfully extradited, particularly in cases like the present; that a creditor may wantonly swear to an affidavit charging a debtor with obtaining goods under false pretenses. But it is also true that a prosecuting officer may either wantonly or ignorantly file an information charging a like offense. But who would doubt that an information, where that is the statutory pleading for purposes of trial, is sufficient to justify an extradition? Such *possibilities as these cannot be [333] guarded against. While courts will always endeavor to see that no such attempted wrong is successful, on the other hand care must be taken that the process of extradition be not so burdened as to make it practically valueless. It is but one step in securing the presence of the defendant in the court in which he may be tried, and in no manner determines the question of guilt.

While perhaps more pertinent as illustration than argument, the practice which obtains in extradition cases between this and other nations is worthy of notice. Sections 5270 to 5277, Rev. Stat. (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 3591 to 3597), inclusive, provide for this matter. In none of these sections or in subsequent amendments or additions thereto is there any stipulation for an indictment as a prerequisite to extradition. On the contrary, the proceedings assimilate very closely those commenced in any state for the arrest and detention of an alleged criminal. They go upon the theory that extradition is but a mere step in securing the presence of the defendant in the court in which he may lawfully be tried. In the memorandum issued by the Department of State in May, 1890, in reference to the extradition of fugitives from the United States in British jurisdiction, is this statement (1 Moore, Extradition, p. 335):

"It is stipulated in the treaties with Great Britain that extradition shall only be granted on such evidence of criminality as, according to the laws of the place where the fugitive or person charged shall be found, would justify his apprehension and commitment for trial if the crime or offense had there been committed.

"It is admissible, as constituting such evidence, to produce a properly certified copy of an indictment found against the fugitive by a grand jury, or of any information made before an examining magistrate, accompanied by one or more depositions setting forth as fully as possible the circumstances of the crime."

And this is in general harmony with the thought underlying extradition.

*Entertaining these views, we answer the [334] first question in the affirmative and the second in the negative.

Mr. Justice Harlan did not hear the argument and took no part in the decision of this case.

JOSHUA BISHOP, Appt.,

v.

UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 334-343.)

Court-martial—prior punishment for offense charged—notice of charges—objection to number of judges—waiver—confirmation of sentence—by officer convening court—by President.

1. The suspension of a naval officer charged with drunkenness and neglect of duty, from morning until evening of the same day, when he was restored to duty to give "time to investigate the case," is not such a punishment for the offense as precludes, under the Navy Regulations of 1865, ¶ 1205, further proceedings against him by court-martial, but must be deemed simply a temporary precaution for the preservation of good order and discipline.
2. The copy of charges against a naval officer, which, together with the specifications, must be served, under the Navy regulation act of April 23, 1800, art. 38 (2 Stat. at L. 50, 51, chap. 33), on a person sought to be court-martialed, "at the time he is put under arrest," need not be served when he is placed under arrest as a temporary precaution for the preservation of good order and for further investigation, but the service is in time, where he has been released from such arrest and returned to duty, conformably to the Navy Regulations of 1865, ¶ 1202, when made on the day of his rearrest.
3. The expressed satisfaction of the accused with the court-martial as constituted precludes collateral attack on its judgment on the ground that as many officers as could be convened without injury to the service were not summoned, as the act of July 17, 1862, art. 11 (12 Stat. at L. 603, chap. 204), requires.
4. Confirmation of the sentence of a court-martial by the officer convening it was not required by the act of July 17, 1862, arts. 19, 20 (12 Stat. at L. 605, chap. 204), where the sentence extended to dismissal from the service, since under the first of such articles such a sentence must be approved by the President.
5. The confirmation by the President of the sentence of a court-martial sufficiently appears from the statement to that effect in a letter from the Secretary of the Navy notifying the accused that he was dismissed from the service, and the President's signed approval of the brief of the findings of the court-martial submitted to him by the Navy Department for his action.

[No. 92.]

*Argued and submitted March 2, 3, 1905.
Decided April 3, 1905.*

APPEAL from the Court of Claims to review the dismissal of a petition for pay

NOTE.—On naval court-martials—see note to Wilkes v. Dinsman, 12 L. ed. U. S. 618.

as an officer in the Navy between the date of his dismissal from the service pursuant to the sentence of a court-martial and his reinstatement by Congress. Affirmed.

See same case below, 38 Ct. Cl. 473.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brown:

This is a petition for pay as a lieutenant commander from February 8, 1868, when defendant was dismissed from the naval service pursuant to the sentence of a general court-martial, until March 9, 1871, when he was reinstated by special act of Congress. The court of claims made a finding of facts, the material parts of which are incorporated in the opinion, and dismissed the petition. 38 Ct. Cl. 473.

Mr. Irvin W. Schultz argued the cause and filed a brief for appellant:

Statutory regulations governing the proceedings of a court-martial must be complied with.

Brown v. Keene, 8 Pet. 112, 8 L. ed. 885.

The judgment of a court-martial may be collaterally attacked.

Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 207, 7 L. ed. 654.

There is no averment why more than the seven officers, as members, to the number of thirteen, could not have been convened without injury to the service. The omission of such an averment; or the omission of an averment to the effect that only the officers as members who were convened were all that could be summoned without injury to the service; or the omission of an averment that no other officers than those named could be summoned without injury to the service,—is jurisdictional and fatal to the jurisdiction of that court.

Mills v. Martin, 19 Johns. 29; Runkle v. United States, 122 U. S. 543, 30 L. ed. 1167, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1141; Brown v. Keene, 8 Pet. 115, 8 L. ed. 886.

Where power is given by permissive language to do certain things, the language used will be regarded as peremptory when the public interests or individual rights require that it should be done.

Rock Island County v. United States, 4 Wall. 446, 18 L. ed. 422.

When the statutory conditions as to the constitution of the jurisdiction of the court are not observed, there is no tribunal authorized by law to render the judgment.

Keyes v. United States, 109 U. S. 336, 27 L. ed. 954, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 202; Wells, Jurisdiction of Courts, ed. 1880, §§ 15-17, pp. 11, 12.

The action of inferior courts must be confined strictly within the prescribed limits; and this must appear on the face of the proceedings, which must also show the facts and ground of jurisdiction. A general averment of jurisdiction amounts to nothing; the facts upon which it depends must specifically appear. Nor is it sufficient that jurisdiction may be inferred argumentatively from the averments, but the jurisdiction must be positively averred, and the facts upon which it depends must be expressly set forth: every fact essential to the jurisdiction should appear on the record.

Wells, Jurisdiction of Courts, ed. 1880, §§ 40-42, pp. 19, 30.

Whether the record recites the jurisdictional facts or not, the judgments of courts of limited and inferior jurisdiction are open to impeachment by extrinsic evidence showing want of jurisdiction.

People ex rel. Frey v. County Jail, 100 N. Y. 26, 2 N. E. 870.

Whether an accused can waive an objection to the jurisdiction of the court is questionable.

Brooks v. Davis, 17 Pick. 148; Brooks v. Daniels, 22 Pick. 498.

Consent cannot give jurisdiction in a criminal case where the indictment is for a subject-matter out of the jurisdiction, not even if the prisoner enter of record a waiver of "all objections" to an irregularity in finding of indictment and to jurisdiction, or where the law imperatively requires twelve jurors, and by consent the case is tried by six only, etc.

Wells, Jurisdiction of Courts, § 66, pp. 47, 48.

The proceedings of the court-martial are not definite, but merely in the nature of an inquest, to inform the conscience of the commanding officer.

Mills v. Martin, 19 Johns. 30.

That the President must confirm such sentence; that his approval must be authenticated in a way to show otherwise than argumentatively that his approval is the result of his own judgment, and not a mere departmental order, which may or may not have attracted his attention, and the fact that the order was his own, and not left to inference only; that the action required of the President is judicial, and not administrative,—is clearly laid down in the case of Runkle v. United States, 122 U. S. 543, 30 L. ed. 1167, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1141.

Assistant Attorney General Pradt and Mr. Felix Brannigan submitted the cause for appellee:

The officer who convened the court-martial was the sole and exclusive judge of the question as to whether the court could be composed of a lesser number of officers than thirteen "without injury to the service." Nothing in the act of Congress requires the appointing officer to state that conclusion in his prescript or elsewhere.

197 U. S.

Martin v. Mott, 12 Wheat. 19, 31, 6 L. ed. 537, 541; Mullan v. United States, 140 U. S. 240, 245, 35 L. ed. 489, 491, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 788.

The sentence of dismissal was approved by the President of the United States. As to the manner of the approval, the statute gives no directions. The approval may be oral or in writing, or in any other manner that the President in his discretion pleases.

United States v. Page, 137 U. S. 673, 679, 34 L. ed. 828, 830, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 219; United States v. Fletcher, 148 U. S. 84, 37 L. ed. 378, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 552.

Assistant Attorney General Pradt also filed a separate brief for appellee:

The presumption must be that the Secretary and the President performed the duties devolved upon them in the premises.

United States v. Fletcher, 148 U. S. 84, 37 L. ed. 378, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 552.

Mr. Justice Brown delivered the opinion of the court:

This case depends upon the validity of the findings and sentence of the court-martial, and is brought under an act of Congress approved June 6, 1900 (31 Stat. at L. 1612, chap. 839), nearly thirty years after petitioner was recommissioned as a lieutenant commander, which enacted "that the claim of Joshua Bishop for alleged items of pay, due and unpaid to him for services as a lieutenant commander . . . be, and the same is hereby, referred to the court of claims. Jurisdiction is hereby conferred on said court to try said cause,—the statute of limitations shall not apply thereto,—and to render final judgment therein, subject to the right of appeal by either party." Claimant insisted in the court below that this statute was not a mere waiver of limitations, but a recognition that claimant was a lieutenant commander during the time referred to in the act; but as this point is not made in the briefs filed in this court, it may be considered as abandoned.

The action of the court-martial in dismissing the petitioner from the service is attacked upon the following grounds:

1. That the court had no jurisdiction over him, because he had already been punished for the offenses charged against him, viz., drunkenness and neglect of duty.

It appears from the findings that Bishop was a lieutenant commander in the naval service, attached to the steamer Wyoming, then lying in the harbor of Nagasaki, Japan; that he was ordered by his commanding officer to have his ship ready for sea by daylight on the morning of the 31st *of May, 1867, but that he went ashore and [337] did not return until after daylight. On May 31 the following entries appear on the log:

From 4 to 8 A. M.

Lieutenant Commander Joshua Bishop was suspended from duty by order of Lt. Commander C. C. Carpenter.

George B. Glidden, Master.

From 6 to 8 P. M.

At 6.40 Lt. Comdr. Joshua Bishop was restored to duty by order of Rear Admiral H. H. Bell.

George B. Glidden, Master.

Upon being placed on trial before the court-martial Bishop pleaded that he was placed under arrest for the offenses specified (drunkenness and neglect of duty), but was ordered released from arrest by Rear Admiral Bell; and in this connection refers the court to § 1205, Navy Regulations of 1865, then in force, as follows:

"An offense committed at any one time, for which a person in the Navy shall have been placed under arrest, suspension, or confinement, and subsequently entirely discharged therefrom by competent authority, or for which he shall have been otherwise fully punished, is to be regarded as expiated, and no further martial proceedings against him for the offense itself are ever afterwards to take place." etc.

Conceding that the petitioner was within the letter of the regulations, inasmuch as he was suspended from duty in the morning of May 31 and restored to duty on the evening of the same day, we do not think the case is within its real meaning, which looks to a punishment of the offense by such suspension. As it appears that Bishop was intoxicated during the preceding day, and went ashore and failed to report at daylight on the next morning, it would naturally be inferred that his suspension from duty was not intended as a punishment, but as a reasonable precaution for the maintenance of good order and discipline aboard.

[338] *That this was the understanding of the rear admiral is evidenced from the following letter restoring him to duty:

U. S. Flagship Hartford,

Nagasaki, Japan, May 31, 1867.

Lieut. Comm'd'r C. C. Carpenter,

Comm'd'g U. S. S. Wyoming, Nagasaki.

Sir:—

Your communication of this date, reporting Lieutenant Commander Bishop to me, is received.

You will restore Lieutenant Commander

Bishop to duty to await an opportunity for time to investigate the case.

I am, sir, very respectfully,

H. H. Bell,

Rear Admiral, Commanding

U. S. Asiatic Squadron.

It is quite evident that the words "arrest, suspension, or confinement," in § 1205, contemplate an action in the nature of a punishment, upon the infliction of which the offense is to be regarded as expiated; but as the order restoring Bishop to duty was on its face merely to give "time to investigate the case," we do not think the order of suspension could have been intended as a punishment in itself, or as an expiation of the previous offense, nor did the order of Admiral Bell "entirely discharge" the accused within the meaning of § 1205 of the Navy Regulations.

2. No further proceedings appear to have been taken until June 21, 1867, when charges and specifications were preferred by Rear Admiral Bell, and on September 5, 1867, the following entry appears upon the log:

From 4 to 8 A. M.

Lt. Comdr. Joshua Bishop placed under arrest to await trial by court-martial, and served with copy of charges, by order of Rear Admiral H. H. Bell, comdg. U. S. Asiatic Squadron.

E. F. Crawford, Mate.

The petitioner cites in this connection article 38 of the laws regulating the Navy, approved April 23, 1800 (2 Stat. at L. 50, 51, chap. 33), providing that "all charges on which an application *for a general[399] court-martial is founded shall be exhibited in writing to the proper officer, and the person demanding the court shall take care that the person accused be furnished with a true copy of the charges, with the specifications, at the time he is put under arrest," and insists in this connection that he should have been served with a copy of the charges and specifications on May 31, 1867, when he was suspended. The objection is unfounded.

As already indicated, the first arrest was a temporary precaution for the preservation of good order and for further investigation. There was no opportunity for the preparation of charges and specifications, and evidently this was not the arrest contemplated by the above act.

It is true that § 1202 of the Navy Regulations of 1865 provides that offenders shall be brought to trial within thirty days after notice to the proper authority, empowered to convene such court, or shall be released from arrest and returned to duty, and so remain until a court-martial can be convened to try him, "when he shall be again arrested on the day before the court is convened, so as to undergo his trial before it." As petitioner had been "released from arrest and returned to duty" on May 31, and so remained until September 5, when he was "again arrested" on the day before the court-martial was ordered to convene; and as he was served with a copy of the charges and specifications on the day he was arrested,—we see nothing in these proceedings of which he is entitled to complain. The point is completely covered by Johnson v. Sayre, 158 U. S. 109, 117, 39 L. ed. 914, 917, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 773.

3. Petitioner's contention that the court-martial was illegally constituted rests upon article 11 of the act of July 17, 1862 (12 Stat. at L. 603, chap. 204), providing that "no general court-martial shall consist of more than thirteen nor less than five commissioned officers as members; and as many officers shall be summoned on every such court as can be convened without injury to the service, so as not to exceed thirteen; and the senior officer shall always preside, the [340] others taking place *according to their rank; and in no case, where it can be avoided without injury to the service, shall more than one half the members, exclusive of the president, be junior to the officer to be tried."

The argument is that, as the court-martial consisted of only seven officers, it had not power or authority to try and sentence petitioner without showing affirmatively that no more could be convened without injury to the service. As the court-martial consisted of more than five commissioned officers, viz., seven, all of whom were of equal or superior rank to the petitioner, it was a question for the officer convening the court to determine whether more could be convened without injury to the service; and we do not think his action or nonaction in this particular can be collaterally attacked. The regulations have been recently amended in that particular. As the accused when arraigned said he had no objection to any member of the court, and knew of no reason why the court should not proceed with his trial, it is manifestly too late to raise the objection, in view of our decision in Mullan v. United States, 140 U. S. 240, 35 L. ed. 489, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 788, in which we held that when the commander-in-chief of a squadron not in the waters of the United States convenes a court-martial, more than one half of whose members are juniors in rank to the accused, the courts of the United States will assume, when his action is attacked collaterally, that he properly exercised his discretion, and the trial of the accused by such a court could not be avoided without inconvenience to the service. The rank and number of the members of a court-martial must necessarily be, and is, left somewhat to the discretion of the officer convening the court. There is nothing in this case to indicate an abuse of discretion, or that a larger number of officers might have been convened without injury to the service, although if the accused had taken prompt advantage of the defect it might have been necessary to show that a larger number could not have been obtained. His expressed satisfaction with the court as constituted was a clear waiver of any objection to its personnel.

*4. The objection that the court-martial [341] proceedings are void because its sentence was not approved or confirmed by Rear Admiral Bell, who convened the court, is answered by articles 19 and 20 of the act of July 17, 1862, for the better government of the Navy. 12 Stat. at L. 605, chap. 204. The first of these articles provides that "all sentences of courts-martial which shall extend to the loss of life shall require the concurrence of two thirds of the members present," as well as confirmation by the President. "All other sentences may be determined by a majority of votes, and carried into execution, on confirmation of the commander of the fleet, or officer ordering the court, except such as go to the dismissal of a commissioned or warrant officer, which are first to be approved by the President of the United States." As the sentence in this case extended to a dismissal from the service, no confirmation was necessary by Admiral Bell, whose duty was discharged by forwarding the papers to the President.

Petitioner relies upon article 20 of the same act, which declares that "every officer who is by this act authorized to convene courts-martial shall have power, on revisal of its proceedings, to remit or mitigate, but not to commute, the sentence of any such court, which . . . he is authorized to approve and confirm." Obviously, this article extends only to such sentences as the convening officer is authorized to approve and confirm, and has no application where the punishment of dismissal is imposed.

5. The last point made is that the court-martial proceedings are void because the sentence was never confirmed by the President of the United States. The record shows that the proceedings of the court-martial were forwarded and submitted to the Secretary of the Navy for the action of the President, under article 19, above quoted; that the papers were submitted to some officer connected with the Navy Department, who made a statement, termed a "brief," of the findings of the court, and added the following: "The evidence in the case is positive and clear, and the findings of the court [342]sustained *thereby. Lieut. Comdr. Bishop produces no witnesses in his behalf, and the statement made by him to the court is lame throughout. There is no recommendation by the court for clemency."

December 3, 1867, the Secretary of the Navy certified that the case was submitted to the President for his action in accordance with article 19 of the above act, to which are added the words: "Approved: Andrew Johnson."

On February 8, 1868, the Secretary of the Navy addressed to the petitioner a letter notifying him of the sentence of court-martial, and added as follows: "The sentence of the court in your case having been approved by the President, you are hereby dismissed from the Navy service," etc. It is difficult to see how the personal approval of the President could appear more clearly than in this case. In United States v. Fletcher, 148 U. S. 84, 37 L. ed. 378, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 552, there appeared only the certificate of the Secretary of War that the proceedings of the court-martial were forwarded to the Secretary of War for the action of the President, and that "the proceedings, findings, and sentence are approved;" but it was held that the order was valid, though it did not appear that the President personally examined the proceedings and approved the execution of the sentence. Criticism was made in that opinion of Runkle v. United States, 122 U. S. 543, 30 L. ed. 1167, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1141, upon the ground that the circumstances of that case were so exceptional as to render it an unsafe precedent in any other. It was held in that case that there was no sufficient evidence that the action of the court-martial was approved, and it followed that the officer was never legally dismissed the service. No such criticism can be made here, as it not only appears from the letter of February 8 that the sentence of the court had been approved by the President, but his approval distinctly appears at the foot of the brief.

We find nothing in this case of which the petitioner has any just reason to complain. The proceedings of the court-martial were conducted with a substantial, if not a literal, conformity *to the law, and we must [343] presume, at least, that there was sufficient evidence to support the sentence. While drunkenness is not ordinarily considered as criminal, the intoxication of a naval officer while on duty is a gross breach of discipline, and liable to be attended by very serious consequences. Congress evidently acted with forbearance and generosity in reinstating petitioner in the service after a lapse of three years, and thereby condoned the offense. But it has never, directly or indirectly intimated that petitioner was entitled to pay during the suspension.

The judgment of the Court of Claims is affirmed.

SAMUEL McMILLEN et al., Plffs. in Err.,
v.
FERRUM MINING COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 343-348.)

Error to state court—Federal question—when raised in time.

1. A Federal question first raised by a petition for a rehearing in the highest state court is too late to support the appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of the United

NOTE.—On the general subject of writs of error from United States Supreme Court to state courts—see notes to Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 267; Kipley v. Illinois, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998; and Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884.

On when the Federal question is raised in time to sustain the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court over state courts—see notes to Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L. R. A. 33; and Chicago, I. & L. R. Co. v. McGuire, ante, 413.

Review in the Supreme Court of the United States of decisions of state courts in cases involving mining claims.

McMILLEN v. FERRUM MIN. CO. is not the first case in which the mere fact that the suit was brought under U. S. Rev. Stat. § 2326 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1430), to try adverse rights to a mining claim, has been held not necessarily to involve a Federal question so as to authorize a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States to a state court. The same ruling was made in Beals v. Cone, 188 U. S. 184, 47 L. ed. 435, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 275.

Likewise, the mere fact that defendant in a suit to quiet title to a mining claim claims title under a location made under the general mining laws of the United States is not in itself sufficient to raise a Federal question which will sustain a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States to a state court, where the gravamen of defendant's argument is not the denial of any right under the mining laws, but the invalidity of the proceedings in a state court under which plaintiffs claim to have acquired title by virtue of a prior location. De Lamar's Nevada Gold Min. Co. v. Nesbitt, 177 U. S. 523, 44 L. ed. 872, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 715.

The question of fact as to the true course of a mining lode or vein, arising in an action of ejectment brought under U. S. Rev. Stat. § 2326 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1430), to recover possession of a certain portion of a surface location of a mining claim, is not a Federal one. Bushnell v. Crooke Min. & Smelting Co. 148 U. S. 682, 37 L. ed. 610, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 771.

Whether there has been such laches as bars
197 U. S.

States, where the state court, in denying the petition, made no reference to the Federal question.

2. The mere fact that the suit was brought under U. S. Rev. Stat. § 2326 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1430), to try adverse rights to a mining claim, does not necessarily involve a Federal question so as to authorize a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States to a state court.

[No. 185.]

Argued March 15, 16, 1905. Decided April 3, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Colorado to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District Court of Lake County in that State in favor of defendant in a suit to try adverse rights to a mining claim. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

See same case below (Colo.) 74 Pac. 463.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brown:

By this writ of error it is sought to review a judgment of the supreme court of Colorado, affirming a judgment of the dis-the assertion of a right to a mining claim is not a Federal question. Moran v. Horsky, 178 U. S. 205, 44 L. ed. 1038, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 856.

Whether ejectment for a mining claim is defeated by a state statute of limitations and an estoppel in pais is not a Federal question. Carothers v. Mayer, 164 U. S. 325, 41 L. ed. 453, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 106.

The question of the estoppel of a party to deny the validity of a mining location is not a Federal one. Speed v. McCarthy, 181 U. S. 269, 45 L. ed. 855, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 613.

Whether statements made on a hearing before the Land Department of a protest against a mineral entry work an estoppel in pais which amounts to a defense to a claim of title under a subsequent entry involves no Federal question, but is determined by rules of general law. Beals v. Cone, 188 U. S. 184, 47 L. ed. 435, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 275.

See also note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L. R. A. 513, on What adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts.

A statement in an amended answer, that plaintiff intended to set up certain rights under certain mining claims, and that these claims were abandoned and forfeited before certain other claims through which defendants asserted title were located, is not sufficient to constitute a definite claim of right or title under a statute of the United States, which will present a Federal question on writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States to a state court. Speed v. McCarthy, 181 U. S. 269, 45 L. ed. 855, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 613.

Whether, upon general principles of law and a state statute, a grantor of a portion of a mining claim is, by his deed, estopped to claim priority of title to the space of vein intersection by reason of a location of the portion of the tract court of Lake county in favor of the Ferrum Mining Company in a proceeding brought by the plaintiffs in error under Rev. Stat. § 2326 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1430), to determine the right of possession to certain mining grounds, plaintiffs claiming title as owners of the Eulalia Lode Mining claim, and the defendant claiming title to the same ground as the Golden Rod Lode Mining claim.

*The case was tried before the court and a jury, resulting in a verdict and judgment in favor of the defendant, which was affirmed by the supreme court upon the ground that plaintiffs had not complied with either the Federal or the state statutes, in showing a valid discovery of mineral in their location.

Mr. George R. Elder argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. George Cavender argued the cause, and, with Mr. John A. Ewing, filed a brief for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Brown delivered the opinion of the court:

In their amended complaint the plaintiffs averred that in the location and record of claim which he retained, which he had made subsequent to the deed, but before location by the grantee of the land conveyed to him, is not a Federal question. Gillis v. Stinchfield, 159 U. S. 658, 40 L. ed. 295, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131.

A ruling of a state court sustaining a demurrer to a replication in which plaintiff alleged that the decision by the Land Department of a question of fact on the hearing of a protest filed by him and others against defendants' original mineral entry was res judicata in an adverse suit in which defendants rely on a subsequent entry involves no decision of a Federal question, but is a mere determination that one who was not a party could not claim the advantages of a party. Beals v. Cone, 188 U. S. 184, 47 L. ed. 435, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 275.

A Federal question is involved in a decision of a state court in favor of plaintiff in a controversy over the ownership of ore in which defendant claimed that, under the act of May 10, 1872 (17 Stat. at L. 91, chap. 152, §§ 2, 3, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 1424, 1425), title thereto passed to it through its patent, instead of to plaintiff, because the end lines of the latter's patent were not parallel; plaintiff contending that its title was acquired under the act of July 26, 1866 (14 Stat. at L. 251, chap. 262), which did not require parallelism of end lines. Kennedy Min. & Mill. Co. v. Argonaut Min. Co. 189 U. S. 1, 47 L. ed. 685, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 501.

A decision by a state court sustaining the defense of laches against the assertion of a right to a mining claim after it had been abandoned for fourteen years, during which an apparent title had been obtained under a patent to a probate judge for the property as part of a town site, is based on a ground independent of any Federal question. Moran v. Horsky, 178 U. S. 205, 44 L. ed. 1038, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 856.

A decision of a state court in a suit to recover the value of gold alleged to have been taken by the Eulalia Lode Mining claim their grant- or had complied with the laws of the United States, the laws of Colorado, and the rules and regulations of miners in the district, with reference to the discovery, location, and appropriation of said Eulalia Mining claim. They did not question the validity of the state statutes, which prescribe certain acts as necessary to a valid location, but set up a compliance with them, and contended that the defendant did not establish a valid location.

Plaintiffs did not claim by virtue of a discovery of their own, but by virtue of their knowledge of the existence of a vein within the surveyed limits of that claim, though several hundred feet distant from the discovery shaft of the Eulalia, which he, McMillen, together with his co-owner, had previously discovered in the process of its development; and insisted that this knowledge was equivalent to an actual discovery by him of a vein within the Eulalia location.

The proposition of plaintiffs, as stated by their counsel, was this:

"That Mr. McMillen, as an owner and a locator of the Eulalia lode, knew at the time he placed his stake upon the Eulalia claim on the 30th of May, 1893, that he in company with the co-owners of the Pocket Liner claim had discovered ore in the shaft of the Pocket Liner claim; that at the moment that he placed his stake upon that ground, claiming the Eulalia claim as abandoned and unoccupied territory, that theretofore there had been a discovery of mineral within the requirements of the statutes of the United States and of the state of Colorado, and that that knowledge within the mind of *Mr. McMillen constituted a complete, final, [346] and perfect location of that mining claim, provided he did the other things requisite under the statutes of the state of Colorado, by sinking a discovery shaft 10 feet in depth, etc., etc., etc."

The substance of the plaintiffs' argument was that the mere knowledge of the Eulalia locator of the existence of a vein in the Pocket Liner, the previous lode, made his location valid, provided he performed the other things requisite under the statutes of the state of Colorado, besides the actual discovery of mineral. The court did not deny the proposition that, if the locator knew that there had been a discovery of a vein or lode within his location, he might base his location upon it, although he made no discovery himself; but the statutes of Colorado provide (Mills's Anno. Stat. § 3152) certain requirements in addition to those specified in the Revised Statutes, among which were that the discoverer, before filing his location certificate, shall sink a discovery shaft to the depth of at least 10 feet from the lowest part of the rim of such shaft at the surface, defendants from plaintiff's mining claim, which is based upon an estoppel deemed by that court to operate upon general principles and a local statute, rests upon an independent non-Federal ground broad enough to maintain the judgment. Gillis v. Stinchfield, 159 U. S. 658, 40 L. ed. 295, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131.

A decision by a state court in a controversy as to the right of a cotenant to relocate a mining claim when the annual assessment work has not been done, and obtain title as against his cotenants, that a cotenant who relocates a mining claim held in common is to be deemed a trustee for all the cotenants, disposes of the case upon general principles of law. Speed v. McCarthy, 181 U. S. 269, 45 L. ed. 855, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 613.

See also note to Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L. R. A. 33, on How and when questions must be raised and decided in a state court in order to make a case for a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States.

The conclusions of the highest court of a state upon the questions of fact whether a placer claim was duly located, whether the annual work had been performed, whether there was a valid subsisting placer location, and whether the lodes were discovered by their locators within the boundaries of the placer claim subsequently to its location, cannot be reviewed by the Supreme Court of the United States on writ of error to that court. Clapper Min. Co. v. Ell Min. & Land Co. 194 U. S. 220, 48 L. ed. 944, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 632.

Findings of fact with reference to the discovery of petroleum, the making of the attempted location in good faith, and the doing of the requisite work, are conclusive on the Supreme Court of the United States in reviewing the judgment of a state court in an action to quiet title to mineral lands. Chrisman v. Miller, 197 U. S. 313, ante, p. 770, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 468.

See also note to Missouri ex rel. Hill v. Dockery, 63 L. R. A. 571, on What questions the Federal Supreme Court will consider in reviewing the judgments of state courts.

The amount of the bond on a writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court to a state court in order to supersede a judgment determining the right of possession of a mining claim should be sufficient to cover damages for delay in working all the ores in the disputed ground, including not only those in sight, but such as, in the judgment of the judge allowing the writ, from the evidence before him, with reasonable probability exist. Rose v. Richmond Min. Co. 17 Nev. 70, 27 Pac. 1115.

See also note to Wedding v. Meyler, 66 L. R. A. 833, on Practice and procedure governing the transfer of causes to the Federal Supreme Court on writ of error or appeal.

Other notes not hereinbefore mentioned relating to the appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of the United States over state courts are: What the record must show respecting the presentation and decision of a Federal question in order to confer jurisdiction on the Supreme Court of the United States of a writ of error to a state court (Hooker v. Los Angeles, 63 L. R. A. 471), and What is the record for this purpose (Home for Incurables v. New York, 63 L. R. A. 329).

or deeper, if necessary, to show a well-defined crevice, and shall also post at the point of discovery a notice containing the name of the lode, the name of the locator, and the date of the discovery, and shall also mark the surface boundary of the claim. The court further held that where "the locator himself selects the discovery shaft, as the one in which the discovery of mineral has been made, and there posts his location stake, and bases his location upon such discovery, he may not, after intervening rights have attached, abandon and disregard the same, neglect to comply with such provisions, and select another discovery upon which his location was not predicated." [74 Pac. 463.]

In this connection the court held that, if the plaintiffs relied upon a former discovery they were bound to show that it was claimed by their locator, or adopted by him as the only one upon which the Eulalia lode was made; and that the court was correct in refusing to hear the proof offered, since it did not meet the requirements of the decisions, [347] to the effect that "a former discovery may be made the basis of a valid location. The court, however, found expressly that the plaintiffs not only did not question the validity of the state statutes, which prescribe certain acts as necessary to a valid location, but averred in their complaint that those statutes had been complied with.

After the disposition of the case by the supreme court, plaintiffs in error filed a petition for a rehearing, in which, for the first time, they raised the question that, as there had been upon their part a full compliance with the requirements of Rev. Stat. § 2320 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1424), before any valid adverse rights had intervened, there was a perfect and complete appropriation of this ground, and that court should have so adjudicated. In its opinion the court reiterated what it had previously said, that, admitting that the plaintiffs might have availed themselves of the previous discovery within the Eulalia location, and adopted the same as their own without making a valid discovery for themselves, they had not brought themselves within this principle, since in their offer of proof they merely relied upon a former knowledge of such location. In its opinion the court made no mention of the Federal question, which does not seem to have been pressed upon their attention. Though unnecessary to our decision, a recent case upon this subject is instructive. Butte City Water Co. v. Baker, 196 U. S. 119, ante, 409, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 211.

It is sufficient for the purposes of this case to say that no Federal question appears to have been raised until the petition was filed for a rehearing. This was obviously too late, unless, at least, the court grants the rehearing and then proceeds to consider the question. Mallett v. North Carolina, 181 U. S. 589, 45 L. ed. 1015, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 730; Loeber v. Schroeder, 149 U. S. 580, 37 L. ed. 856, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 934; Miller v. Texas, 153 U. S. 535, 38 L. ed. 812, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 874.
197 U. S.

In both courts the question was treated as one of local law, and the mere fact that suit was brought under Rev. Stat. § 2326 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1430), to try adverse rights to a mining claim, does not necessarily involve a Federal question, so as to authorize a writ of error from this court. Bushnell v. Crooke Min. & Smelting Co. *148 U. S. 682, 37 L. ed. 610, 13 Sup. Ct. [348] Rep. 771; Telluride Power Transmission Co. v. Rio Grande Western R. Co. 175 U. S. 639, 44 L. ed. 305, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 245; Blackburn v. Portland Gold Min. Co. 175 U. S. 571, 44 L. ed. 276, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 222; Shoshone Min. Co. v. Rutter, 177 U. S. 505, 44 L. ed. 864, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 726.

The writ of error is accordingly dismissed.

ALFRED W. CARTER, Guardian, Plff. in Err.,
v.

GEORGE D. GEAR, Circuit Judge, etc.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 348-355.)

Courts—power of Hawaiian judges at chambers—effect of organic act.

The power of the Hawaiian judges at chambers in proceedings not incident or ancillary to some cause pending before a court, conferred by the Hawaiian laws in force at the passage of the organic act of April 30, 1900 31 Stat. at L. 141, chap. 339), was preserved by the provision of § 81 of that act, continuing in force the previous laws of Hawaii concerning "the civil courts and their jurisdiction and procedure."

[No. 442.]

Submitted March 3, 1905. Decided April 3, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the Territory of Hawaii to review a judgment denying a writ of prohibition to prevent a judge of the Circuit Court of that Territory from entertaining a petition at chambers for the removal of a guardian, which was not incident or ancillary to some cause pending before a court. Affirmed.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brown:

This was a writ of error to review a judgment of the supreme court of the Territory of Hawaii denying a writ of prohibition.

[349] The facts of the case are substantially as follows: On July 27, 1904, one Low, as next friend of Annie T. K. Parker, a minor, filed a petition before the defendant, George D. Gear, judge of the first judicial circuit, in probate, at chambers, asking for the removal of Alfred W. Carter, plaintiff in error, as guardian of the estate of said minor. He had been originally *appointed such guardian September 29, 1899. The petition was entitled "In the Circuit Court of the First Judicial Circuit, Territory of Hawaii. In Probate. At Chambers," and was in fact filed before the circuit judge sitting at chambers. A demurrer was interposed to the petition upon the ground that the circuit judge had no jurisdiction of the proceedings, for the reason that the statute conferring judicial powers upon the judges at chambers was in conflict with the organic act of the territory.

The demurrer was overruled, and the jurisdiction of the court sustained, apparently with some doubt, by the circuit judge.

This petition for a writ of prohibition was then filed by Carter in the supreme court of the territory against the defendant, Gear, as circuit judge, and Low, the next friend of Annie T. K. Parker, praying that the said circuit judge be prohibited from taking further cognizance of the petition for the removal of Carter, or proceeding therein until the further order of the supreme court. After a full hearing the supreme court affirmed the judgment of the circuit court, and dismissed the petition.

Messrs. Joseph J. Darlington and William F. Mattingly submitted the cause for plaintiff in error:

The organic act of the territory takes the place of a constitution as the fundamental law of the local government.

First Nat. Bank v. Yankton County, 101 U. S. 129, 133, 25 L. ed. 1046, 1047.

No Hawaiian law relating to the judiciary, whether previously existing or subsequently enacted, can stand if in conflict with the provisions of that act.

23 Ops. Atty. Gen. 539.

A clause like the one in question is an entire distribution of the judicial power, and the legislature cannot vest any portion of it elsewhere.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. 129, note 3.

Under constitutional provisions similar to our organic act the word "court" does not include a judge at chambers, and it is not competent for the legislature to vest in judges at chambers any judicial power not incident or ancillary to some cause pending in a court.

Spencer Creek Water Co. v. Vallejo, 48 Cal. 70; Risser v. Hoyt, 53 Mich. 185, 18 N. W. 611; Toledo, A. A. & G. T. R. Co. v. Dunlap, 47 Mich. 456, 11 N. W. 271; Rowe v. Rowe, 28 Mich. 353; Pittsburg, Ft. W. & C. R. Co. v. Hurd, 17 Ohio St. 144; State ex rel. Ballew v. Woodson, 161 Mo. 444, 61 S. W. 252.

There are many other statutes in which the word "court" is held not to be synonymous with "judge."

8 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 23; McKnight v. James, 155 U. S. 685, 39 L. ed. 310, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 248.

Mr. John S. Low, guardian, in propria persona submitted the cause for defendant in error:

The supreme court of Hawaii has repeatedly held that a judge sitting at chambers in probate is a court of record.

Re Brash, 15 Hawaiian Rep. 372; Hoare v. Allen, 13 Hawaiian Rep. 257; Aldrich v. First Judge, 9 Hawaiian Rep. 470.

Independently of the construction which has been placed upon the words "in chambers," in Hawaii, the words "circuit courts," in § 81 of the organic act, mean the courts referred to in the expression "in chambers."

Wilcox v. Wilcox, 14 N. Y. 577; Pressley v. Lamb, 105 Ind. 171, 4 N. E. 682; Granite Mountain Min. Co. v. Weinstein, 7 Mont. 349, 17 Pac. 108; O'Bear v. Little, 79 Ga. 384, 4 S. E. 914; Pease v. Wagnon, 93 Ga. 361, 20 S. E. 637; Stewart v. Daggy, 13 Neb. 290, 13 N. W. 399.

Chambers is only a place where the court sits without a jury.

Com. v. McLaughlin, 122 Mass. 449.

Mr. Justice Brown delivered the opinion of the court:

The writ of prohibition was demanded upon the ground that there was no cause pending in the circuit court of the first circuit, to which the motion and petition of Low, as next friend, was incidental or ancillary, and that Judge Gear, sitting at chambers, was hearing questions of a judicial nature entirely independent of any cause pending in that court.

The single question presented by the record is whether the statutes of the territory of Hawaii, purporting to confer upon the judges of the several courts, at chambers, within their respective jurisdictions, judicial power not incident or ancillary to some cause pending before a court, were in conflict with § 81 of the act of Congress approved April 30, 1900 * (31 Stat. at L. 141, [353] chap. 339), commonly known as the organic act of the territory. This section, page 157, enacts that "the judicial power of the territory shall be vested in one supreme court, circuit courts, and in such inferior courts as the legislature may from time to time establish. And, until the legislature shall otherwise provide, the laws of Hawaii heretofore in force concerning the several courts and their jurisdiction and procedure shall continue in force, except as herein otherwise provided."

At the time the act of Congress was passed there was in force in the territory of Hawaii an act known as chapter 57 of the Laws of 1892, the 37th section of which gave to the judges of the several circuit courts, at chambers, very ample powers in admiralty, equity, bankruptcy, and probate causes, among which were proceedings "to remove any executor, administrator, or guardian." This act was conceded to be sufficient to justify the action of Judge Gear in removing the guardian in this case. It was substantially re-enacted with amendments in 1903.

The argument is made that § 81 of the organic act is identical with the constitutional provisions of many states, under which similar statutes purporting to confer judicial powers upon circuit judges at chambers, not incident to, or ancillary to, any cause pending in any court, have usually been declared unconstitutional; citing Spencer Creek Water Co. v. Vallejo, 48 Cal. 70; Risser v. Hoyt, 53 Mich. 185, 18 N. W. 611; Toledo, A. A. & G. T. R. Co. v. Dunlap, 47 Mich. 456, 11 N. W. 271; Rowe v. Rowe, 28 Mich. 353; Pittsburg, Ft. W. & C. R. Co. v. Hurd, 17 Ohio St. 144, 146; State ex rel. Ballew v. Woodson, 161 Mo. 444, 61 S. W. 252. We are also referred to McKnight v. James, 155 U. S. 685, 39 L. ed. 310, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 248, in which we held that a writ of error could not go to an order of a judge of a circuit court, made at chambers.

But, conceding the correctness of these decisions under the constitutions of the several states, and also conceding that the organic act stands in the place of a constitution for the territory of Hawaii, to which its laws must conform, does it follow that the laws respecting proceedings at chambers [354] *are in excess of the powers conferred under the organic act?

Bearing in mind that § 81 of the organic act is but one of a hundred sections, all of which are entitled to equal respect, it is evident that to obtain a comprehensive view of the intention of Congress we are bound to consider the whole act so far as it relates to the disposition of judicial power. To segregate § 81 from all the other provisions of the act must necessarily result in giving it undue prominence.

By § 6 "the laws of Hawaii not inconsistent with the Constitution or laws of the United States, or the provisions of this act, shall continue in force, subject to repeal or amendment by the legislature of Hawaii, or the Congress of the United States." By § 7 the Constitution of the Republic of Hawaii and a large number of its laws, specially enumerated, are repealed; but the statutes giving probate and equity jurisdiction to the circuit courts are not mentioned.

By § 10 all actions at law, suits in equity, and other proceedings then pending in the courts of the Republic of Hawaii shall be carried on to final judgment and execution in the corresponding courts of the territory of Hawaii. As petitioner, Carter, was appointed guardian of the minor's estate in 1899 by the then judge of the first circuit, and was still proceeding to wind up the estate, we think the petition for his removal was filed in a pending proceeding within the meaning of this section.

Now, as it appears that the powers of judges at chambers had been fixed since 1892, eight years before the organic act was passed, that by § 6 and the final clause of § 81 the laws of Hawaii theretofore in force concerning the several courts and their jurisdiction and procedure were continued in force, except as therein otherwise provided, it would seem that these provisions were especially intended to apply to cases like the present, where a system of procedure which had previously existed was recognized as valid and still existing. In Hawaii v. Mankichi, 190 U. S. 197, 47 L. ed. 1016, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 787, a similar provision in the resolution *of annexation was held not [355] to abrogate a system of trials by information and convictions by a non-unanimous jury, as applied to cases prior to the organic act of April 30, 1900.

But we do not think it necessary to go further than § 81 itself to find authority for a recognition of the laws previously existing in Hawaii concerning the constitution of its courts and their method of procedure. Whether a petition to a circuit court acting as a court of probate shall be addressed to and passed upon by the judge while sitting in court at chambers is, after all, much more a matter of form than of substance. Com. v. McLaughlin, 122 Mass. 449. The petition for the removal of the guardian in this case is entitled: "In the Circuit Court of the First Judicial Circuit, Territory of Hawaii. In Probate. At Chambers." It appears to have been heard by the circuit judge without a jury, his decision being entitled "Before a Judge of the Circuit Court, of the First Circuit, Territory of Hawaii." It must doubtless be treated as a proceeding at chambers, but, for reasons already given, we think the power to act at chambers was saved by § 81 continuing in force the previous laws of Hawaii concerning the courts and their procedure. It would be too narrow a construction to hold that this did not include the procedure before judges of those courts sitting at chambers.

The decree dismissing the writ is affirmed.

[356] *GUILFORD B. KEPPEL, Trustee, etc.

v.

TIFFIN SAVINGS BANK.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 356-388.)

Bankruptcy—retention of preference until judgment of avoidance does not prevent proof of claim.

A creditor of a bankrupt, who has in good faith received a preference voidable under the bankrupt act of July 1, 1898, § 67e (30 Stat. at L. 565, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3449), solely because given within four months prior to the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, and who has in good faith retained the preference until deprived thereof by the judgment of a court in a suit by the trustee, still may prove the debt so voidably preferred, notwithstanding the provision of § 57g that "the claims of creditors who have received preferences shall not be allowed unless such creditors shall surrender their preferences."

[No. 116.]

Argued and submitted January 6, 1905. Decided April 3, 1905.

ON A CERTIFICATE from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit presenting the question whether the creditor of a bankrupt, who has in good faith received a merely voidable preference, may prove his claim, where he has retained the preference until deprived thereof by the judgment of a court in a suit by the trustee. Answered in the affirmative.

Statement by Mr. Justice White:

Charles A. Goetz became a voluntary bankrupt on October 12, 1900. Guilford B. Keppel, the trustee, sued the Tiffin Savings Bank in an Ohio court to cancel two real-estate mortgages executed by Goetz, one to secure a note for $4,000 and the other a note for $2,000. The mortgage to secure the $4,000 note was made more than four months before the adjudication in bankruptcy. The mortgage securing the $2,000 note was executed a few days before the bankruptcy, the mortgagor being at the time insolvent and intending to prefer the bank. The bank defended the suit, averring its good faith and asserting the validity of both the securities. In a cross petition the enforcement of both mortgages was prayed. The court held the mortgage* [357] securing the $4,000 note to be valid, and the mortgage securing the $2,000 note to be void. The trustee appealed to a circuit court, where a trial de novo was had. At such trial the attorney for the bank stated to the court that the bank waived any claim to a preference as to the $2,000 note, but that he could not assent to a judgment to that effect. A judgment was entered sustaining the security for the $4,000 note and avoiding that for the $2,000 note.

The bank subsequently sought to prove that it was a creditor of the estate upon the note for $2,000, and upon two other unsecured notes, aggregating $835. The referee refused to allow the proof, upon the ground that, as the bank had compelled the trustee to sue to cancel the security, and a judgment nullifying it had been obtained, the bank had lost the right to prove any claim against the estate. The district judge, upon review, reversed this ruling. The circuit court of appeals to which the issue was taken, after stating the case as above recited, certified questions for our determination.

Mr. John C. Royer argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Henry Weller, and Bunn & Royer, filed a brief for Keppel.

Messrs. George E. Seney and John L. Lott submitted the cause for the Tiffin Savings Bank. Mr. Milton Sayler was on the brief.

Mr. Justice White, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

The following are the questions asked by the court of appeals:

'First. Can a creditor of a bankrupt, who has received a merely voidable preference, and who has in good faith retained such preference until deprived thereof by the judgment of a court upon a suit of the trustee, thereafter prove the debt so voidably preferred?

"Second. Upon the issue as to the allowance of the bank's claims, was it competent, in explanation of the judgment of the Ohio circuit court in favor of the trustee and against the bank in respect to its $2,000 mortgage, to show the disclaimer made in open court by the attorney representing the bank, of any claim of preference, and the grounds upon which the bank declined to consent to a judgment in favor of the trustee?

"Third. If the failure to 'voluntarily' surrender the mortgage given to secure the $2,000 note operates to prevent the allowance of that note, does the penalty extend to and require the disallowance of both the other claims?"

[360] Before we develop the legal principles essential to the solution *of the first question, it is to be observed that the facts stated in the certificate and implied by the question show that the bank acted in good faith when it accepted the mortgage and when it subsequently insisted that the trustee should prove the existence of the facts which, it was charged, vitiated the security. It results that the voidable nature of the transaction alone arose from § 67e of the act of 1898, invalidating "conveyances, transfers, or encumbrances of his property made by a debtor at any time within four months prior to the filing of the petition against him, and while insolvent, which are held null and void as against the creditors of such debtor by the laws of the state, territory, or district in which such property is situate" [30 Stat. at L. 565, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3449], and giving the assignee a right to reclaim and recover the property for the creditors of the bankrupt estate.

On the one hand, it is insisted that a creditor who has not surrendered a preference until compelled to do so by the decree of a court cannot be allowed to prove any claim against the estate. On the other hand, it is urged that no such penalty is imposed by the bankrupt act, and hence the creditor, on an extinguishment of a preference, by whatever means, may prove his claims. These contentions must be determined by the text, originally considered, of § 57g of the bankrupt act, providing that "the claims of creditors who have received preferences shall not be allowed unless such creditors shall surrender their preferences." We say by the text in question, because there is nowhere any prohibition against the proof of a claim by a creditor who has had a preference, where the preference has disappeared as the result of a decree adjudging the preferences to be void, unless that result arises from the provision in question. We say also from the text as originally considered, because, although there are some decisions, under the act of 1898, of lower Federal courts, which are referred to in the

[361] margin,† denying the right of a creditor *to prove his claim, after the surrender of a preference by the compulsion of a decree or judgment, such decisions rest not upon an analysis of the text of the act of 1898 alone considered, but upon what were deemed to have been analogous provisions of the act of 1867 and decisions thereunder. We omit, therefore, further reference to these decisions, as we shall hereafter come to consider the text of the present act by the light thrown upon it by the act of 1867 and the judicial interpretation which was given to that act.

The text is, that preferred creditors shall not prove their claims unless they surrender their preferences. Let us first consider the meaning of this provision, guided by the cardinal rule which requires that it should, if possible, be given a meaning in accord with the general purpose which the statute was intended to accomplish.

We think it clear that the fundamental purpose of the provision in question was to secure an equality of distribution of the assets of a bankrupt estate. This must be the case, since, if a creditor having a preference retained the preference, and at the same time proved his debt and participated in the distribution of the estate, an advantage would be secured not contemplated by the law. Equality of distribution being the purpose intended to be effected by the provision, to interpret it as forbidding a creditor from proving his claim after a surrender of his preference, because such surrender was not voluntary, would frustrate the object of the provision, since it would give the bankrupt estate the benefit of the surrender or cancellation of the preference, and yet deprive the creditor of any right to participate, thus creating an inequality. But it is said, although this be true, as the statute is plain, its terms cannot be disregarded by allowing that to be done which it expressly forbids. This rests upon the assumption that the word "surrender" necessarily implies only voluntary action, and hence excludes the right to prove where the surrender is the result of a recovery compelled by judgment or decree.

*The word "surrender," however, does not [362] exclude compelled action, but, to the contrary, generally implies such action. That this is the primary and commonly accepted meaning of the word is shown by the dictionaries. Thus, the Standard Dictionary defines its meaning as follows: "1. To yield possession of to another upon compulsion or demand, or under pressure of a superior force; give up, especially to an enemy in warfare; as, to surrender an army or a fort." And in Webster's International Dictionary the word is primarily defined in the same way. The word, of course, also sometimes denotes voluntary action. In the statute, however, it is unqualified, and generic, and hence embraces both meanings. The construction which would exclude the primary meaning, so as to cause the word only to embrace voluntary action, would read into the statute a qualification, and this in order to cause the provision to be in conflict with the purpose which it was intended to accomplish,—equality among creditors. But the construction would do more. It would exclude the natural meaning of the word used in the statute, in order to create a penalty, although nowhere expressly or even by clear implication found in the statute. This would disregard the elementary rule that a penalty is not to be readily implied, and, on the contrary, that a person or corporation is not to be subjected to a penalty unless the words of the statute plainly impose it. Tiffany v. National Bank, 18 Wall. 409, 410, 21 L. ed. 862, 863. If it had been contemplated that the word “surrender” should entail upon every creditor the loss of power to prove his claims if he submitted his right to retain an asserted preference to the courts for decision, such purpose could have found ready expression by qualifying the word “surrender” so as to plainly convey such meaning. Indeed, the construction which would read in the qualification would not only create a penalty alone by judicial action, but would necessitate judicial legislation in order to define what character and degree of compulsion was essential to prevent the surrender in fact from being a surrender within the meaning of the section.

†Re Greth, 112 Fed. 978; Re Keller, 109 Fed. 126, 127; Re Owings, 109 Fed. 624.

[363] *It is argued, however, that courts of bankruptcy are guided by equitable considerations, and should not permit a creditor who has retained a fraudulent preference until compelled by a court to surrender it, to prove his debt, and thus suffer no other loss than the costs of litigation. The fallacy lies in assuming that courts have power to inflict penalties, although the law has not imposed them. Moreover, if the statute be interpreted as it is insisted it should be, there would be no distinction between honest and fraudulent creditors, and therefore every creditor who in good faith had acquired an advantage which the law did not permit him to retain would be subjected to the forfeiture simply because he had presumed to submit his legal rights to a court for determination. And this accentuates the error in the construction, since the elementary principle is that courts are created to pass upon the rights of parties, and that it is the privilege of the citizen to submit his claims to the judicial tribunals,—especially in the absence of malice and when acting with probable cause,—without subjecting himself to penalties of an extraordinary character. The violation of this rule, which would arise from the construction, is well illustrated by this case. Here, as we have seen, it is found that the bank acted in good faith, without knowledge of the insolvency of its debtor and of wrongful intent on his part, and yet it is asserted that the right to prove its lawful claims against the bankrupt estate was forfeited simply because of the election to put the trustee to proof, in a court, of the existence of the facts made essential by the law to an invalidation of the preference.

We are of opinion that, originally considered, the surrender clause of the statute was intended simply to prevent a creditor from creating inequality in the distribution of the assets of the estate by retaining a preference, and at the same time collecting dividends from the estate by the proof of his claim against it, and consequently that whenever the preference has been abandoned or yielded up, and thereby the danger of inequality has been prevented, such creditor is entitled to stand *on an equal footing[364] with other creditors and prove his claims.

Is the contention well founded that this meaning which we deduce from the text of the surrender clause of the present act is so in conflict with the rule generally applied in bankruptcy acts, and is, especially, so contrary to the act of 1867 and the construction given to it, that such meaning cannot be considered to have been contemplated by Congress in adopting the present act, and hence a contrary interpretation should be applied?

Without attempting to review the English bankruptcy acts, or the provisions contained therein concerning what constituted provable debts, and the decisions relating thereto, it is clear that under those acts, where a debt was otherwise provable and the creditor had acquired a lien to which he was not entitled, the English courts in bankruptcy did not imply a forfeiture by refusing to allow proof of the debt because there had not been a voluntary surrender of the preference. On the contrary, where claims were filed against the estate by one who was asserted to have retained a preference, a well-settled practice grew up, enforced from equitable considerations. The practice in question was followed in the case of Ex parte Dobson, 4 Deacon & C. 69, decided in 1834, and was thus stated in the opinion of Sir G. Rose (p. 78):

“I apprehend the practice to be settled, where a creditor applies to prove a debt, and claims a right to property to which the commissioners think he has no lien, that the commissioners admit the proof, and leave the question to be controlled merely by retention of the dividend. This was settled by the case of Ex parte Ackroyd [1 Rose, 391], where the commissioners had rejected the proof of a creditor, because he had received a portion of his debt, which the assignees contended he was bound to refund;

but when the question came before Sir John Leach, as vice chancellor, he decided that the proof of the debt was not to be rejected, [365] because there was a question *to be tried between the bankrupt's assignees and the creditor, although it was proper that no dividend should be paid on that proof, until the question was determined."

And Erskine, Ch. J., p. 74, after assuming that the transaction complained of might have been fraudulent and amounted to an act of bankruptcy, said—italics mine—(p. 75.):

"The next part of the prayer is that the claim should be disallowed. But though the assignment of the property may be invalid, that will not invalidate the debt of the respondents. We could not, therefore, disallow the claim, or expunge the proof, if the claim had been converted to a proof; all that we can do is to restrain the respondents from receiving any dividends until they give up the property."

Thus the English rule substantially conformed to the construction we have given to the bankruptcy act before us.

Neither our bankrupt act of 1800 (2 Stat. at L. 19, chap. 19) nor that of 1841 (5 Stat. at L. 440, chap. 9) contained a surrender clause, or any provision generally denying the right of a creditor of a bankrupt to prove his debt in the event that he had received a preference. But, under those acts, bankruptcy courts must necessarily have exercised the power of protecting the estate by preventing a creditor having an otherwise provable debt, who retained that which belonged to the estate, from at the same time taking dividends from it.

The purpose of Congress when a forfeiture or penalty was intended, not to leave it to arise from mere construction, but to expressly impose such penalty or forfeiture, is well illustrated by the bankrupt act of 1800, wherein numerous penalties and forfeitures were explicitly declared. Two instances are illustrative. By § 16 it was provided: "That if any person or persons shall fraudulently or collusively claim any debts, or claim or detain any real or personal estate of the bankrupt, every such person shall forfeit double the value thereof, to and for the use of the creditors." And by § 28 it was provided that a creditor suing out a commission, who subsequently accepted a preference, "shall forfeit and [366] lose, as well *his or her whole debts, as the whole he or she shall have taken and received, and shall pay back, or deliver up the same, or the full value thereof, to the assignee or assignees who shall be appointed or chosen under such commission, in manner aforesaid, in trust for and to be divided among the other creditors of the said bankrupt, in proportion to their respective debts."

The bankrupt act of 1867 (14 Stat. at L. 528, chap. 176) contained the following surrender clause:

"Sec. 23. . . . Any person who after the approval of this act shall have accepted any preference, having reasonable cause to believe that the same was made or given by the debtor, contrary to any provision of this act, shall not prove the debt or claim on account of which the preference was made or given, nor shall he receive any dividend therefrom until he shall first have surrendered to the assignee all property, money, benefit, or advantage received by him under such preference."

And § 35 of the act conferred power upon the assignee to sue to set aside and recover illegal preferences, transfers, etc., but there was not contained in the section any provision prohibiting the proof of claims after recovery by the assignee. In § 39 of the act, however, which was found under the head of involuntary bankruptcy, there was contained an enumeration of the various acts which would constitute acts of bankruptcy, and following a grant of authority to the assignees to sue for and recover property transferred, etc., by the bankrupt contrary to the act, the section concluded with the declaration that when the recipient had reasonable cause to believe that a fraud on the act was intended, and that the debtor was insolvent, "such creditor shall not be allowed to prove his debt in bankruptcy."

Passing the present consideration of the judicial construction given to the act of 1867, and treating, as we believe should be done, the restriction as to the proof of debts expressed in § 39 as applicable to voluntary as well as involuntary bankruptcy, we think, as a matter of original interpretation, the surrender clause of the act of 1867 not only fortifies, but absolutely *sus- [367] tains, the construction which we have given to the surrender clause of the act of 1898. Whilst the surrender clause of the act of 1867 changed the method of procedure prevailing under the English rule, and presumptively also obtaining under the acts of 1800 and 1841, by which a creditor holding a preference might prove his claim, but was allowed to obtain no advantage from so doing until he had surrendered his preference, it cannot, we think, in reason be considered that this mere alteration in the practice to be followed was intended in and of itself to impose a penalty upon a creditor who did not voluntarily surrender his preference. And this we think is demonstrated when it is seen that, after making the change as to the procedure in the proof of debts by preferred creditors, there was subsequently embodied in § 39 an express prohibition, in the nature of a penalty, forbidding the proof of debt by a creditor who came within the purview of the section. Either that provision solely related to proof of debts embraced in the previous surrender clause or it did not. If it did, then the expression of the penalty in § 39 indicates that it was not deemed that the surrender clause contained provision for the penalty, otherwise § 39 would in that regard be wholly superfluous. If, on the other hand, it be considered that § 39 embraced other debts or claims against the estate than those to which the surrender clause related, then the expression of the penalty in § 39, under the rule of expressio unius, could not by implication be read into the previous surrender clause. That is to say, if § 23 and § 39 of the act of 1867 be considered as not in pari materia, then it follows that the former,—the surrender clause,—standing alone, did not impose the penalty or forfeiture provided for in the latter. If they were in pari materia, then the penalty, whilst applicable and controlling as to both, because of its expression in the later section, cannot be said to have existed alone in and by virtue of an earlier section, wherein no penalty was expressed.

[368] The decisions of the lower Federal courts interpreting the *sections in question, as they stood prior to the amendment of § 39 by the act of 1874, hereafter to be referred to, were numerous, and we shall not attempt to review them in detail. They will be found collected in a note contained in the eleventh edition of Bump on Bankruptcy, pp. 550 et seq. Disregarding the discord of opinion shown by those decisions concerning what constituted an involuntary surrender,—that is, whether it was involuntary if made at any time after suit brought by the assignee, or was only so after recovery by the force of a judgment or decree,—and putting out of view also the differences of opinion which were engendered by the fact that the forfeiture imposed by § 39 was found in that portion of the act of 1867 which related to involuntary bankruptcy, we think the decisions under the act of 1867, prior to the amendment of 1874, may be classified under four headings.

First. The cases which held that the prohibition of § 39 against the proof of debt operated as a bar to such proof, even although there was a voluntary surrender, where the preference had the characteristics pointed out in § 39. These cases were, however, contrary to the great weight of authority under the act, and the construction which they enforced may be put out of view.

Second. Those cases which, whilst treating the surrender clause as giving a creditor an alternative which he might exercise without risk of penalty or forfeiture, yet held that by the operation of § 39 upon the surrender clause the creditor lost the option to prove his claim, when the surrender was compelled by a judgment or decree at the suit of the assignee. The cases enforcing this interpretation constituted the weight of authority, and such construction may, therefore, be said to have been that generally accepted, and, in our judgment, was the correct one.

These cases, which thus held that the loss of the right to prove, after compulsory surrender, arose not from the surrender clause independently considered, but solely from the operation upon that clause of § 39, are exemplified by *the case of Re Le- [369] land, 7 Ben. 156, Fed. Cas. No. 8,230, opinion of Blatchford, J. In that case, after holding (p. 162) that the prohibition of § 39 applied as well to cases of voluntary as to cases of involuntary bankruptcy, the court came to consider the surrender clause of § 23 as affected by the penalty provided for in § 39, and said:

"This provision is to be construed in connection, and in harmony, with the provision of the 23d section, before cited. If, under the 23d section, the preferred creditor were allowed to surrender to the assignee the property received in preference, even after it had been recovered back by the assignee, as mentioned in the 39th section, so as to be able to prove his debt, no creditor taking a preference would ever be debarred from proving his debt. If, under the 39th section, it were held that the mere taking of a preference by a creditor would debar him from proving his debt, without the precedent necessity for a recovery back by the assignee of the property conveyed in preference, there never could be any scope for the operation of the 23d section in respect to a surrender."

—thus clearly pointing out that by the surrender clause alone the creditor would not be debarred from proving his claim, if in fact there had been a surrender, whether voluntary or not, but that, as a result solely of the prohibition of § 39, the creditor would be barred after recovery by the assignee.

Third. Cases which treated the surrender clause as in and of itself forbidding a surrender after recovery, because the recovery authorized by § 35 was the antithesis of the surrender and precluded a surrender after recovery. This class of cases in effect treated the prohibition expressed in § 39 as unnecessary, quoad the subject-matters to which §§ 23 and 35 were addressed. The cases, however, were few in number, and are illustrated by the case of Re Tonkin, 4 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 52, Fed. Cas. No. 14, 094.

Fourth. Cases which, without seemingly considering the incongruity of the reasoning, adopted both theories; treated *§§ 23, 35, and 39 as in pari materia, and hence applied the prohibition of § 39 to the other two sections, and yet reasoned to show that the surrender clause alone prohibited a surrender after recovery by the assignee. This class of cases is illustrated by Re Richter, 1 Dill. 544, 4 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 221, Fed. Cas. No. 11,803. In that case a creditor who, in consequence of a recovery by the assignee, had surrendered a preference, sought to prove his claim against the estate, and his right to do so was resisted. Analyzing the act and stating the different constructions of which it was susceptible, the court expressly declared that the correct view was to construe §§ 23, 35, and 39 together, and that the result of so doing would be to annex to both §§ 35 and 23 the penalty provided in § 39. The surrender clause was then noticed, it being said:

"It is urged by the claimants that this refusal was erroneous, because they had, before the time when they made their motion, surrendered to the assignee all property received by them under the preference. This devolves upon us the duty of interpreting the meaning of the word "surrender," as it is here used. And it is our opinion that a creditor who receives goods by way of fraudulent preference, and who refuses the demand therefor which the assignee is authorized to make (§ 15), denies his liability, allows suit to be commenced by the assignee, defends it, goes to trial, is defeated, and judgment passes against him, which he satisfies on execution, cannot be said, within the meaning of the statute, to have surrendered to the assignee the property received by him under such preference. He has surrendered nothing."

As an alternative, however, to this view, and treating the sections referred to as in pari materia, it was reiterated that § 23 was limited and controlled by the penalty provided in § 39.

We need not further notice the cases under the act of 1867, because of the action of Congress on the subject. In 1874 (18 Stat. at L. 178, chap. 390) § 39 of the act of 1867 was amended and re-enacted. That amendment consisted of omitting the forfeiture *clause as originally contained in the section, and substituting in its stead the following proviso:

"Provided, . . . and such person, if a creditor, shall not, in cases of actual fraud on his part, be allowed to prove for more than a moiety of his debt; and this limitation on the proof of debts shall apply to cases of voluntary as well as involuntary bankruptcy."

Plainly, this amendment not only abolished the penalty provided in § 39 as originally enacted, since it allowed a creditor to prove his claim for the whole amount thereof after recovery against him if he had not been guilty of actual fraud, and, even in case of actual fraud, after recovery, permitted him to prove for a moiety. The amendment clearly also was repugnant to that construction of the act of 1867 given in some of the cases to which we have referred under the third classification, wherein in the reasoning employed it was assumed that a forfeiture or penalty might be implied alone from the terms of the surrender clause, irrespective of the operation of § 39. This results from the very words of the amendment, which says, "and this limitation on the proof of debts shall apply," etc., showing that the restriction on the right to prove after a compulsory yielding up of a preference was deemed by Congress to result not from the surrender clause, but from the limitation expressly declared by § 39 as amended, which operated a qualification of the broad terms of the surrender clause. It manifestly also arises from the fact that, whilst Congress plainly intended by the amendment to make a change in the rigor of the rule previously obtaining, the phraseology of the surrender clause as originally found in the act was not altered.

After the adoption of the amendment of 1874 it is true that in one or two instances it was held that the amendment, instead of mitigating the severity of § 39 as it stood before the amendment, had increased it by adding an additional limitation, viz., prohibiting a preferred creditor who had been guilty of actual fraud from proving for more than one half of his claim, even where he had voluntarily surrendered his *prefer- [372] ence. But these were isolated cases, since practically the otherwise universal construction was that the amendment was remedial and intended by Congress to mitigate, even in cases of actual fraud, the severity of the prohibition of § 39 as originally enacted.

The import of the amendment was tersely stated by Mr. Justice Clifford in Re Reed, 3 Fed. 798, 800, as follows:

"Beyond doubt the question must depend upon the true construction of the act of Congress, and I am of the opinion that Congress intended to moderate the rigor of the prior rules and to allow the creditor, after payment back of the preference, whether by suit or otherwise, to prove their whole debt, in case they had been guilty of no actual fraud."

And such construction was also expounded in the following cases: Re Currier (1875) 2 Low. Dec. 436, Fed. Cas. No. 3,492; Burr v. Hopkins (1875) 6 Biss. 345, Fed. Cas. No. 2,192, per Drummond, J.; Re Black (1878) 17 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 399, Fed. Cas. No. 1,459, per Lowell, J.; Re Newcomer (1878) 18 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 85, Fed. Cas. No. 10,148, per Blodgett, J.; Re Kaufman (1879) 19 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 283, Fed. Cas. No. 7,627, per Nixon, D. J.; Re Cadwell (1883) 17 Fed. 693, per Coxe, J.

The meaning of the amendment of 1874 was considered by the court of appeals of New York in the case of Jefferson County Nat. Bank v. Streeter, 106 N. Y. 186, 12 N. E. 706. The New York court expressly adopted the construction given in the cases to which reference has just been made, and its action in so doing was affirmed by this court in Streeter v. Jefferson County Nat. Bank, 147 U. S. 40, 37 L. ed. 70, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 236.

It follows that the construction which we at the outset gave to the text of the act of 1898, instead of being weakened, is absolutely sustained by a consideration of the act of 1867, both before and after the amendment of 1874, and the decisions construing the same, since in the present act, as we have said, there is nowhere found any provision imposing even the modified penalty which was expressed in the amendment of 1874. The contention that, because the act of 1898 contains a surrender clause, [373] therefore it must be assumed that *Congress intended to inflict the penalty originally imposed by § 39 of the act of 1867, must rest upon the erroneous assumption that that penalty was the result of the surrender clause alone. But this, as we have seen, is a misconception, since from the great weight of judicial authority under the act of 1867, as well as by the express enactment of Congress in the amendment of 1874 and the decisions which construed that amendment, it necessarily results that the penalty enforced under the act of 1867 arose not from the surrender clause standing alone, but solely from the operation upon that clause of the express prohibition contained in § 39 of that act. When, therefore, Congress in adopting the present act omitted to re-enact the provision of the act of 1867, from which alone the penalty or forfeiture arose, it cannot in reason be said that the omission to impose the penalty gives rise to the implication that it was the intention of Congress to re-enact it. In other words, it cannot be declared that a penalty is to be enforced because the statute does not impose it.

And, irrespective of this irresistible implication, a general consideration of the present act persuasively points out the purpose contemplated by Congress in refraining from re-enacting the penalty contained in § 39 of the act of 1867. Undoubtedly the preference clauses of the present act, differing in that respect from the act of 1867, as is well illustrated by the facts of this case, include preferences where the creditor receiving the same acted without knowledge of any wrongful intent on the part of the debtor, and in the utmost good faith. Pirie v. Chicago Title & T. Co. 182 U. S. 454, 45 L. ed. 1179, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 906. Having thus broadened the preference clauses so as to make them include acts never before declared by Congress to be illegal, it may well be presumed that Congress, when it enacted the surrender clause in the present act, could not have contemplated that that clause should be construed as inflicting a penalty upon creditors coming within the scope of the enlarged preference clauses of the act of 1898, thereby entailing an unjust and unprecedented result.

*Our conclusion, therefore, is that the [374] first question propounded must be answered in the affirmative, and that the two other questions require no response.

And it is ordered accordingly.

Mr. Justice Day, dissenting:

I am unable to agree with the construction given to the sections of the bankruptcy act under consideration, and, because of the importance of the questions involved, have deemed proper a statement of the conclusions reached.

Notwithstanding the first question propounded by the court of appeals presupposes that the $2,000 mortgage was a preference within the meaning of the bankrupt act, it is argued on behalf of the creditors that, although the mortgage made a few days prior to the bankruptcy proceedings and when the bankrupt was insolvent, was void under § 6343 of the Revised Statutes of Ohio, as amended April 26, 1898 (93 Ohio Laws, p. 290), read in connection with § 67, paragraph e, of the bankruptcy act, it did not constitute a preference which must be surrendered preliminary to proof of the creditor's claim because there was no actual transfer of any property to the creditor, and the only thing obtained was a void mortgage.

The Ohio statute makes provision, among other things, as to sales, etc., in trust or otherwise, in contemplation of insolvency, or with a design to prefer one or more creditors to the exclusion, in whole or in part, of others, and sets forth:

"And every such sale, conveyance, transfer, mortgage, or assignment made, . . . by any debtor or debtors, in the event of a deed of assignment being filed within ninety

(90) days after the giving [or doing] of such thing or act, shall be conclusively deemed and held to be fraudulent, and shall be held to be void as to the assignee of such debtor or debtors, where, upon proof shown, such debtor or debtors was or were actually insolvent at the time of giving or [375] doing of such act *or thing, whether he or they had knowledge of such insolvency or not. . . ."

By § 67, paragraph e, of the bankrupt act, it is provided:

"And all conveyances, transfers, or encumbrances of his property, made by a debtor at any time within four months prior to the filing of the petition against him, and while insolvent, which are held null and void as against the creditors of such debtor by the laws of the state, territory, or district in which such property is situate, shall be deemed null and void under this act against the creditors of such debtor, if he be adjudged a bankrupt, and such property shall pass to the assignee and be by him reclaimed and recovered for the benefit of the creditors of the bankrupt."

Under § 60 of the bankruptcy act of 1898 it was provided:

"a. A person shall be deemed to have given a preference if, being insolvent, he has procured or suffered a judgment to be entered against himself in favor of any person, or made a transfer of any of his property, and the effect of the enforcement of such judgment or transfer will be to enable any one of his creditors to obtain a greater percentage of his debt than any other of such creditors of the same class.

"b. If a bankrupt shall have given a preference within four months before the filing of a petition, or after the filing of the petition and before the adjudication, and the person receiving it or to be benefited thereby, or his agent acting therein, shall have had reasonable cause to believe that it was intended thereby to give a preference, it shall be voidable by the trustee, and he may recover the property or its value from such person."

In § 1, ¶ 25, of the act of 1898, a "transfer" is defined to include the sale and every other and different mode of disposing of or parting with the property or the possession of property, absolutely or conditionally, as a payment, pledge, mortgage, gift, or security.

This definition of a transfer covers a [376] mortgage given for the *security of a debt in express terms, and § 60 provides that preferences shall include transfers, the effect of the enforcement of which would be to enable any one of the bankrupt's creditors to obtain a greater percentage of his 197 U. S.

debt than other creditors of the same class.

It is true that if the mortgage is void it can have no effect to diminish the estate of the bankrupt, but upon its face the mortgage is good as against the bankrupt and the creditors of the estate.

It is said that, the mortgage being void, the creditor had nothing to surrender, but this assumes the invalidity of the security. Until set aside or voluntarily surrendered it is a good encumbrance upon the property, whether regarded as a conditional conveyance or as a mere security for the debt. It could be set aside by the trustee upon proof of insolvency of the bankrupt and other conditions named in the act at the time of giving it; otherwise it would stand as a valid security, unless the creditor should elect to surrender it and make proof of his claim as a general creditor.

There seems to be no question that, upon its face, though void in the light of the facts found, this mortgage was one of the transfers of property which was invalidated by the act, it being given within the time limited, and at a time when the bankrupt was in fact insolvent, and expressly made void by the Ohio statute when read with the bankrupt act of 1898.

The answer to the first question requires a consideration of § 57g of the act of 1898, which, as it stood prior to the amendment of February 5, 1903 (32 Stat. at L. 797, chap. 487, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1903, 415), read: "The claims of creditors who have received preferences shall not be allowed unless such creditors shall surrender their preferences." May a creditor who has received a preference, voidable by the act, contest the validity thereof, and, if it is declared invalid, still prove his debt upon surrender of his preference as though no contest had been had?

It was held by this court in Pirie v. Chicago Title & T. Co. 182 U. S. 438, 45 L. ed. 1171, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 876, that a creditor who had received a *preference, although he [377] did not have reason to believe that one was intended, could only keep the property transferred upon condition of refraining from proof of the balance of his debt.

It was pointed out, in that case, in the opinion of the court by Mr. Justice McKenna, that § 60 in its various provisions permitted a creditor who had innocently received a preference to hold it if he chose, and it could only be recovered by the trustee in the event that he had reasonable cause to believe that a preference was intended, in which case the trustee might recover the property or its value. But the innocent creditor might keep the property transferred to him, although a preference within the definition of the act, upon terms of non-participation in the bankrupt estate in the general distribution to the creditors.

Section 23 of the bankruptcy act of 1867 provided: "Any person who, after the approval of this act, shall have accepted any preference, having reasonable cause to believe that the same was made or given by the debtor contrary to any provision of this act, shall not prove the debt or claim on account of which the preference was made or given, nor shall he receive any dividend therefrom until he shall first have surrendered to the assignee all property, money, benefit, or advantage received by him under such preference." Section 57*g* of the present act, prior to the amendment of February 5, 1903, required broadly that claims of creditors who have received preferences shall be surrendered, and that the same shall not be allowed unless this is done.

Under the former act the surrender was required of creditors who had accepted preferences, having reasonable cause to believe the same contrary to the provisions of the act, and such creditor could not receive any dividend until he had first surrendered the preference. In passing the act of 1898, Congress doubtless had before it prior legislation on the subject, and particularly the act of 1867, the most recent enactment on the subject.

[378] Section 57*g* provides that all preferences, whether innocent *or otherwise, shall be surrendered before the creditor can prove his claim, and the right of proof is not postponed until the surrender, but claims are not to be allowed unless creditors shall surrender their preferences. The element of time is indicated in the word "until," which means to the time of, or up to, while the use of "unless" more emphatically denies the right of proving the claim, save or except upon terms of relinquishing the preference.

In view of the purpose of the bankruptcy act to make an equal distribution of the bankrupt's estate among creditors of the same class and to avoid preferences made within four months, I think, having in view the first question put by the circuit court of appeals, that the sections of the law in question must be construed to put a creditor who has received a merely voidable preference, which could be recovered from him by the trustee, to his election between striving to retain that which he has received, and voluntarily surrendering his preference, and filing his claim that he may participate with other unsecured creditors in the general distribution of the estate.

The law looks to a prompt, equal, and inexpensive distribution of the estate among those entitled thereto, and I do not think it was intended to permit a creditor to take the chances of litigation with the trustee, and, when defeated, still have the right to "surrender" his preference and participate in the distribution of the general estate. I think the surrender contemplated by the law is not the capitulation which comes after unsuccessful resistance, but is intended to require the creditor, who must be presumed to know the law, to make a prompt election and to stand or fall upon the choice made. In other words it was not intended to permit a creditor who holds security liable to defeat under the law to keep it if he can maintain it by successful contest, and, if not, to have the same right and privilege as to proof of his debt that he would have if he promptly availed himself of the privilege of surrender, which the law gives to one who would place himself upon a general equality with other creditors of the estate.

*These conclusions are sustained by a con-[379] sideration of the terms of the law under discussion, as well as the adjudicated cases which have arisen under it. The act of 1898 made important changes when compared with the bankrupt law of 1867. As we have already seen, § 23 of the latter act limited the requirement as to the surrender of preferences to those made or given contrary to the provisions of the act. Section 35 of the same law gave the right to the assignee in bankruptcy to set aside illegal preferences, and § 39, after enumerating certain transactions which should amount to acts of bankruptcy, including fraudulent conveyances as therein described, provided that whenever the beneficiary had reasonable cause to believe that a fraud upon the act was intended, or the debtor was insolvent, the assignee might recover the property, and the creditor should not be allowed to prove his debt in bankruptcy. In 1874 (18 Stat. at L. 178, chap. 390), § 39 of the act was amended, and, instead of prohibiting a creditor who had received a conveyance in fraud of the act from proving his debt, it was provided that such creditor should not, in case of actual fraud on his part, be allowed to prove for more than a moiety of his debt, and this limitation should apply to cases of voluntary as well as involuntary bankruptcy.

It will not, in my view, aid in the determination of the proper construction of the act of 1898 to review the numerous and conflicting decisions made under the act of 1867 as to the effect of these various provisions upon the right of the creditor to prove his claim. The great weight of authority is that one who had a voidable preference under the act could not be permitted to prove his claim after a judgment had been rendered against him in a contest with the trustee.

Presumably with the provisions of the act of 1867 before it, providing that in certain cases of fraudulent conveyance the creditor could not prove his claim in bankruptcy, first as to the whole, and later as to a half of the debt, and the limitations of the requirement to surrender preferences to those made in violation of the act, Congress [380] laid aside these requirements, *and broadly provided in § 57g of the act of 1898 that all preferences must be surrendered as a condition of proof of claims against the estate. The innocent holder of a preference could not be deprived of his right of election between proof of his debt and the surrender of his preference. He who had a voidable preference might surrender it and prove his debt. If he did not "surrender," the trustee could recover the preference, and the privilege of proof which was conditioned upon surrender no longer existed.

Prior to the amendment of 1903 this court in the case of Pirie v. Chicago Title & T. Co., already referred to, decided that the requirement extended to all manner of preferences, whether innocently received or otherwise, and this was the law until the amendment of 1903.

Therefore the sole question here is: What is meant by the term "surrender" as used in the act of 1898?

We have been referred to four cases decided under this law before the passage of the amendment of 1903. Before passing to them I may refer to a decision of Judge Dillon at the circuit (Re Richter, 1 Dill. 544, Fed. Cas. No. 11,803), rendered in 1870 under the act of 1867; but in defining the word "surrender," and pointing out its meaning, the language of the learned judge is as pertinent now as it was then. Having before him the construction of the term "surrender" as used in § 23 of the act of 1867, and speaking of the right of a creditor to prove the balance of a claim which had been illegally preferred, the judge said:

"The statute is that they shall not prove up the debt or claim on account of which the preference was given. It was this precisely which, by the motion under consideration, they sought to have done, and which the court refused to allow.

"It is urged by the claimants that this refusal was erroneous because they had, before the time when they made their motion, surrendered to the assignee all property received by them, under the preference. This devolves upon us the duty of interpreting the meaning of the word 'surrender,' as it is here used. And it is our opinion that a [381] creditor who receives *goods by way of fraudulent preference, and refuses the demand therefor which the assignee is authorized to make (§ 15), denies his liability, allows suit to be commenced by the assignee, 197 U. S.

defends it, goes to trial, is defeated and judgment passes against him, which he satisfies on execution, cannot be said, within the meaning of the statute to have surrendered to the assignee the property received by him under such preference.

"He has surrendered nothing. He accepted a fraudulent preference and defended it to the last. Paying a judgment which he stoutly resisted, and from which he could not escape, is not such a surrender as the statute contemplates. To hold that it was would be against the spirit of the statute, which is to discourage preferences. Such a holding would manifestly encourage them, for if the transaction should be upheld the creditor would profit; if overthrown, he would lose nothing, and stand upon an equal footing with those over whom he had attempted to secure an illegal advantage, and whom he has, by litigation, delayed in the collection of their claims."

The question, under the act of 1898, came before the United States district court for the northern district of Iowa, in the case of Re Keller, 109 Fed. 118, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 334, where the subject is discussed by Judge Shiras. Summing up the matter, the learned judge said:

"It would certainly be wholly inequitable to hold that a creditor who has received a preference from an insolvent debtor can refuse to account therefor, and, after causing the other creditors the delay, cost, and expense of litigation, after being defeated therein, can still prove up his claim, and take an equal share in the proceeds of the estate after depleting the same in the manner stated. Contesting the claim of the trustee, and paying back the preference in obedience to the process of the court, is not a surrender, within the meaning of clause g of § 57. Therefore there is this difference between a preferred creditor who surrenders the preference, and a preferred creditor from whom the preference is recovered by the trustee: *The former, having voluntarily [382] surrendered the preference received, is entitled to prove up his entire claim, and share with the other creditors. The latter, having refused to surrender, cannot prove the claim or share in the estate."

To the same effect is Re Owings, 109 Fed. 623, and in Re Greth, 112 Fed. 978, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 598, the cases are reviewed and the same conclusion reached.

In Collier on Bankruptcy, 3d edition, page 319, that author says:

"The question what constitutes a surrender has received much discussion. It is admitted by all that if the assignee is compelled to bring an action to invalidate a transfer, and if he recovers and enters up judgment, no subsequent payment of that judgment by the preferred creditor, and no subsequent compliance by him with its terms can be considered a surrender. By his judgment the trustee has 'recovered' the property. In legal effect the transferee no longer has anything to surrender."

And in the 5th edition of the same work, page 420, it is said:

"What is a surrender.—Here the doctrines declared under the law of 1867 seem at least somewhat applicable. The phrasing of that statute undoubtedly colored some of the decisions under it. But, under well-recognized principles of law, a surrender that is compulsory is not a surrender. The element of fraud is usually present, but may be lacking; the test is, Was the act a voluntary one? Each case turns on its own facts, and there is some conflict, but the weight of decision under the present law supports this view."

The only case decided under the act of 1898, which has come to my attention sustaining a contrary view, is Re Richard, 94 Fed. 633, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 506, in which it was decided that, notwithstanding the preference was set aside after a fruitless fight with the trustee, the creditor might prove his claim.

We are cited to Streeter v. Jefferson County Nat. Bank, 147 U. S. 36, 37 L. ed. 68, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 236, as sustaining the contrary view of the meaning of the term [383] "surrender" as used in this act. The case was under the act of 1867. But in that case the contest was over a stock of goods, and the creditor—the bank—had consented through its attorneys to the appointment of a special receiver, who was ordered to sell the goods and pay the proceeds into court. Of this feature of the case Mr. Justice Shiras, who delivered the opinion of the court, said (p. 45, L. ed. p. 71, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 238):

"To sustain the contention that the bank did not surrender its preference, it is urged that the bank did not at once, on demand of the assignee, turn over the goods levied on, but litigated the matter with the assignee in both the district and the circuit courts, and that the proceeds of the executions were not relinquished until final judgment was entered against the bank.

"It was the opinion of the state court that, as the sheriff, having custody of the goods seized on execution, was, with the consent of the bank's attorneys, appointed special receiver, and was ordered to sell the goods and pay the proceeds into court to await the result of the litigation between the bank and the assignee in bankruptcy, and that as the proceeds were finally turned over to the assignee, and thus became subject to distribution as bankruptcy assets, the transaction amounted to a surrender under § 5084. In so holding we think the state court was right."

We are also cited to the meaning of the word "surrender" as given in the Standard Dictionary:

"1. To yield possession of to another upon compulsion or demand, or under pressure of a superior force; give up, especially to an enemy in warfare; as to surrender an army or a fort."

This definition is given in support of the contention that a surrender may sometimes be made involuntarily. This is doubtless true, and obviously the term may have different meanings when used in different connections. It may be that an army may surrender a fort after a most vigorous contest, while there is still the choice between further resistance and *yielding the fortress to [384] an enemy; but the most liberal meaning of the term could hardly describe as a surrender the occupation which a victorious army has gained of a fort after it has ejected the enemy from its walls and is securely intrenched therein without leave of those who have been forcibly driven out.

The bankrupt law contemplates that a secured creditor who holds a security voidable under the law, and which he should put into the common fund as a condition of the right to participate with other unsecured creditors in the division of the estate, must make his choice while he has yet something to give for the privilege of being taken from the class of those who have a security which may be taken from them, and placed in a class, always favored in the bankrupt law, who shall share in the equal distribution of the bankrupt's estate, freed from fraudulent conveyances and voidable preferences.

The complete answer to the argument that one who has received a preference which he must give up before proof as a general creditor has the right to try out with the trustee the question of the validity of the preference, and then surrender, is that when the judgment of the law has taken the preference from him he has nothing left to surrender, and if then so disposed the creditor cannot surrender a thing which has been wrested from him by the strong hand of the law.

In this case the Ohio statutes, when read with the bankrupt law, distinctly avoid preferences, and the trustee, by bringing the action, diminished the estate and delayed its distribution. The creditor, before the litigation had his election as to the course he would pursue. While he had something to surrender he might give it up, prevent costs, delay, and litigation, and aid the speedy and equal distribution of the bankrupt's estate. After two judgments against him, and when he had absolutely nothing to give up to the bankrupt's estate, it is, in our view, too late to "surrender."

I think the construction here given comports with the purposes and carries into effect the design of the act as expressed *by [385] its terms. It is true that in the present case, after resisting the attack upon the $2,000 mortgage in the court of common pleas, and when the judgment had gone against the bank, it did not appeal, and its counsel in the circuit court disclaimed intention to insist upon the preference of the $2,000 mortgage, but even then refused consent to a decree against the mortgage; and in our opinion the time of election was before judgment in the court of original jurisdiction wherein the mortgage was contested and defeated. It is unnecessary to consider whether an election to surrender the preference can be made after issue joined and before judgment. In this case a trial was had upon the merits. The judgment rendered was vacated by the appeal, and in the appellate court, notwithstanding the qualified disclaimer of counsel for the bank, a final judgment was rendered against the mortgage.

These considerations lead to the conclusion that the first and second questions should be answered in the negative.

The importance of the ruling just made is shown in its application, not only to the act of 1898 as it originally stood, but to the act as it now stands since the amendment of February 5, 1903, which only requires a surrender of preferences when the same are in violation of subdivision b of § 60, or void or voidable under § 67, subdivision e. The reasoning of the majority of the court permits the holder of a preference, no matter how fraudulent, to contest with the trustee when his preference is attacked, and, when convicted of fraud and an intention to defeat the purposes of the law, to "surrender" that which the law has declared he cannot hold, and prove his debt as a general creditor. To permit this seems to me to defeat the purpose of the act, and to encourage the very thing the surrender clause was intended to promote,—a prompt and inexpensive distribution of the estate. The fraudulent transferee, although he has lost his suit, has taken no risk, and may still prove his claim on an equality with unpreferred creditors over whom he has sought an illegal advantage. I cannot agree *with this construction, and therefore dissent from the judgment and reasoning of the majority of the court. [386]

197 U. S.

I am permitted to state that Mr. Justice Harlan, Mr. Justice Brewer, and Mr. Justice Brown concur in this dissent.

UNITED STATES, Appt.,

v.

JOHN SMITH.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 386-393.)

Court-martial—time for service of charges—necessity of authorization of general court-martial by President.

1. The arrest referred to in U. S. Rev. Stat. § 1624, art. 43 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1117,) as the time when the person accused is to be furnished with a copy of the charges and specifications on which he is to be tried by a naval court-martial, is not the preliminary arrest or detention while awaiting the action of higher authority to frame charges and specifications and order the court-martial, but is the arrest resulting from the preferring of the charges by the proper authority and the convening of the court-martial.
2. The prohibition against the convocation of a general court-martial by the commander of a fleet or squadron without the previous authorization of the President, which is made by U. S. Rev. Stat. § 1624, art. 38 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1116), when such fleet or squadron is "in the waters of the United States," applies only to those waters which are within what was termed by the act of March 3, 1901 (31 Stat. at L. 1108, chap. 852, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1040), the continental limits of the United States.

[No. 184.]

Argued March 15, 1905. Decided April 3, 1905.

APPEAL from the Court of Claims to review a judgment awarding the pay which would have been earned by the claimant but for his confinement under sentence of a naval court-martial. Reversed.

See same case below, 38 Ct. Cl. 257.

Statement by Mr. Justice White:

On May 26, 1899, John Smith was serving under enlistment as a fireman of the first class on board the United States naval vessel Yorktown, then at anchor in Iloilo harbor, Philippine Islands. On the date named Smith was reported to the commanding officer of the Yorktown as having refused to do duty, and consequently such officer ordered him "put under sentries as a prisoner in single irons for safekeeping to await trial by a general court-martial." Subsequently, on June 30, 1899, Rear Admiral Watson, the commander-in-chief of the [387] United States naval force on the Asiatic station, convened a general court-martial, to meet on July 3, 1899, for the purpose of trying accused persons who might be legally brought before the court, and on the same day a charge was preferred against Smith, by the rear admiral, accompanied with a specification, for refusing to obey a lawful order of his superior officer. Smith, who, as already stated, had been placed under arrest on May 26, 1899, was served on July 1, 1899, with a copy of the charge and specification which had been preferred against him, and an extra watch was put over him as well as over other prisoners who were being held for trial. On July 5, 1899, Smith was sent under guard before the court-martial. He was tried, found guilty, and sentenced "to be confined in such place as the Secretary of the Navy may direct for a period of one year, to perform extra police duties during such confinement, to lose all pay that may become due him during such confinement, except the sum of three dollars ($3) per month for necessary prison expenses, and a further sum of $20 to be paid him at the expiration of his term of confinement, when he shall be dishonorably discharged from the United States Navy."

NOTE.—On naval courts-martial—see note to Wilkes v. Dinsman, 12 L. ed. U. S. 618.

The term of imprisonment prescribed in the sentence was somewhat mitigated by the Secretary of the Navy. Thereafter, on being released, Smith sued in the court of claims to recover the pay which would have been earned by him had he been entitled to receive the same during the period covered by the sentence. The right to recover was based on the averment that a copy of the charge had not been served on Smith when he was originally put under arrest on May 26, 1899, it being claimed that for this reason the judgment of the court-martial was void. After finding the facts as above recited, the court of claims concluded, as matter of law, that the claimant was entitled to recover, and from the judgment entered upon such finding the government appealed.

Assistant Attorney General Pradt argued the cause, and, with Mr. Felix Brannigan, filed a brief for appellant.

Mr. Edwin B. Hanna also argued the cause, and, with Assistant Attorney General Pradt, filed a brief for appellant.

Mr. John Spalding Flannery argued the cause, and, with Mr. Frederic D. McKenney, filed a brief for appellee.

Mr. Justice White, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

Article 43 of § 1624 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1117), upon which the court of claims based its legal conclusion that the action of the court-martial in question was void because the charge and specification were not served upon the claimant at the time of the original arrest, reads as follows: "The person accused shall be furnished with a true copy of the charges, with the specifications, at the time he is put under arrest."

It is conceded by the findings that at once, when the charge and specification were formulated by Rear Admiral Watson and the court-martial was ordered to be convened, a copy of the charge and specification was served upon Smith. It is also established by the findings that no objection as to tardiness of service was made at the time of trial. Conceding, arguendo solely, and without so deciding, that under these circumstances the objection as to the lateness of the service was jurisdictional, and could be collaterally inquired into, we think the contention is wholly devoid of merit. Nearly ten years before the trial in question was had, in the year 1890, the Secretary of the Navy submitted to the Attorney General the question of whether the arrest referred to in article 43 related to the preliminary arrest which might be consequent upon the commission of an offense, or applied to the arrest made after charges had been formulated and a court-martial ordered. The Attorney General advised that the word "arrest," as employed in article 43, did not relate to the preliminary arrest or detention of an accused person awaiting the action of higher authority to frame charges and specifications and order a court-martial, but to the arrest resulting from the preferring of the charges by the proper authority and the convening of a court-martial. 19 Ops. [392] Atty. Gen. 472. The reasoning by which the Attorney General reached the conclusion just stated we think was absolutely conclusive. Doubtless the opinion became the rule of practice in the Navy, and the construction affixed by the Attorney General to the statute was sanctioned by this court in Johnson v. Sayre, 158 U. S. 109, 39 L. ed. 914, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 773, and such construction has been reiterated in an opinion announced this day. Bishop v. United States, 197 U. S. 334, ante, 780, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 440.

Whilst these considerations dispose of the contentions raised and passed on below, a new ground for reversal was urged at bar, founded on article 38 of § 1624 of the Revised Statutes. That article reads as follows:

"Art. 38. General courts-martial may be convened by the President, the Secretary of the Navy, or the commander-in-chief of a fleet or squadron; but no commander of a fleet or squadron in the waters of the United States shall convene such court without express authority from the President."

Although it is not denied that Rear Admiral Watson was a commander of a fleet within the meaning of that expression as employed in article 38, it is insisted that, as he convened the court-martial while in Manila bay, about six weeks after the treaty with Spain by which the Philippine Islands were acquired by the United States, therefore the fleet or squadron under his command was "in the waters of the United States," within the meaning of those words as employed in the enactment in question, and there was no power in the commander-in-chief to convoke a court-martial without express authority from the President, which is not found to have been given. This objection, if well taken, is jurisdictional, but in our judgment it is without merit; and we reach this conclusion wholly irrespective of the status of the Philippine Islands.

The clause in question was originally enacted in 1862, before even the acquisition of Alaska, and was intended, we think, to apply to those waters within what was termed by Congress in the act of March 3, 1901 (31 Stat. at L. 1108, chap. 852, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1040), the continental [393] limits of the United States. In other words, the provision in question did not take into view the dominion or sovereignty of the United States over territory beyond the seas and far removed from the seat of government, but contemplated waters within the United States in the stricter and popular sense of the term. Looking to the language used, in the light of the surrounding circumstances and the purpose which it was intended to accomplish (Platt v. Union P. R. Co. 99 U. S. 64, 25 L. ed. 429), it is, we think, manifest that the prohibition against the convocation by the commander of a fleet or squadron of a general court-martial, without the previous authorization of the President, was intended to be operative only when the fleet or squadron was in a home port, as above defined. That is to say, that Congress contemplated the necessity of an order from the President when the circumstances supposed to require the convening of the court-martial could be with facility submitted to the President for his action in the premises. To give a broad meaning to the expression "waters of the United States," as employed in article 38, by construing those words as referring, not only to the home waters, but to far distant waters, would, we think, defeat the plain purposes of Congress, and seriously impair, if not destroy, an important power vested in the commander of a fleet or squadron when at distant stations, remote from the home country. Certainly, if the remoteness from the continental limits of the United States is immaterial, and the restriction of article 38 is applicable to the commander when his fleet or squadron is within waters thousands of miles removed from the boundaries of the United States, in the restricted sense of that term, no good reason is apparent why the commander of a fleet or squadron should not have been forbidden, without the leave of the President, to convoke a general court-martial, irrespective of where his fleet or squadron might be situated.

Judgment reversed.

*MIDDLETOWN NATIONAL BANK [394]

v.

TOLEDO, ANN ARBOR, & NORTHERN MICHIGAN RAILWAY COMPANY
et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 394-406.)

Corporations—right to enforce stockholder's liability outside of state of incorporation.

A stockholder's liability in an Ohio corporation cannot be enforced outside of the jurisdiction of that state, on the theory that Ohio Const. art. 13, § 3, is, for that purpose, self-executing, when it provides for the individual liability of the stockholders, where an action in the Ohio courts alone is contemplated by Ohio Rev. Stat. 1880, § 3260, as amended in 1894, which was enacted in pursuance of this constitutional provision, and itself provides for the procedure and states the remedy.

[No. 167.]

Argued and submitted March 7, 1905. Decided April 3, 1905.

ON A CERTIFICATE from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit presenting the question whether the provision of the Constitution of Ohio for the individual liability of stockholders in a domestic corporation is so far self-executing that it may be enforced out-

NOTE.—On the right to enforce stockholder's liability outside of the state of incorporation—see note to Cushing v. Perot, 34 L. R. A. 737.

As to the self-executing nature of constitutional provisions declaring the liability of stockholders in corporations—see note to Whitman v. National Bank, 44 L. ed. U. S. 587.

side the jurisdiction of that state without compliance with the requirements of the Ohio statutes with reference to the enforcement of such liability. Answered in the negative.

Statement by Mr. Justice Peckham:

This case comes here by virtue of a certificate from the United States circuit court of appeals for the second circuit, which sets forth the following facts:

The case came before the circuit court of appeals by appeal from the decree of the United States circuit court for the southern district of New York, sustaining demurrers to the bill of complaint and dismissing the bill. The complainant in the bill was a creditor of the railway company (the defendant), which is a corporation created under the laws of the state of Ohio; and complainant recovered a judgment against the defendant railway company in the supreme court of the state of New York, upon which execution was issued and returned unsatisfied. The complainant then brought its bill in equity in the United States circuit court for the southern district of New York, for the benefit of itself and other creditors, against numerous stockholders of the railway company, defendant, residing in the district, to enforce the liability of those [395] *stockholders for the debts of the railway company, under the laws of Ohio, and that company was made a party defendant.

The Constitution of Ohio (1851), art. 13, § 3, is as follows:

"Dues from corporations shall be secured by such individual liability of the stockholders, and other means, as may be prescribed by law; but in all cases, each stockholder shall be liable, over and above the stock by him or her owned, and any amount unpaid thereon, to a further sum, at least equal in amount to such stock."

In pursuance of this provision of the Constitution the legislature of Ohio adopted statutory provisions with respect to the stockholders of certain corporations, which appear in the Revised Statutes of 1880, § 3258, in the following form:

"The stockholders of a corporation which may be hereafter formed, and such stockholders as are now liable under former statutes, shall be deemed and held liable, in addition to their stock, in an amount equal to the stock by them subscribed, or otherwise acquired, to the creditors of the corporation, to secure the payment of the debts and liabilities of the corporation."

Section 3260 of the Revised Statutes of 1880, as amended in 1894, provided as follows:

"A stockholder or creditor may enforce such liability by action jointly against all the holders or owners of stock, which action shall be for the benefit of all the creditors of the corporation, and against all persons liable as stockholders; and in such action there shall be found and determined the amount payable by each person liable as stockholder on all the indebtedness of the corporation, in which adjudication no costs shall be taxed to nor collected of any stockholder to an amount which, together with the amount to be paid on said indebtedness, will exceed the amount of the stock on which he is liable, Provided, that in any such action, the plaintiff may file in the court a sworn statement that a stockholder or stockholders or the legal representatives of a deceased stockholder have not *been [396] summoned, giving their residence if known, and that it is impracticable to secure service of summons upon such stockholders or such legal representatives of a stockholder, and remitting from the claims of the plaintiff, or of other creditors consenting, so much as may be found payable by such stockholders not served with summons except those who may be insolvent or nonresident of the state; and judgment shall be rendered against the stockholders who have been served with summons for the pro rata amount for which they would be liable if all solvent stockholders resident of the state were served with summons; and when a creditor has prosecuted against a corporation an action of [at] law begun before any action to enforce the stockholders' liability, and has recovered final judgment only after such an action to enforce the stockholders' liability has been prosecuted to a final decree in the court in which the action was commenced, such judgment creditor may bring a like action against the stockholders of the corporation to enforce such judgment at any time within four years after the recovery of his said judgment, but the stockholders shall not be liable for any amount in excess of that provided in § 3258."

As so amended this section stood at the time when this suit was begun. Afterwards, in 1900, but before the filing of the second amended bill of complaint, the section, as further amended and supplemented, provided as follows:

"Sec. 3260. Whenever any creditor of a corporation seeks to charge the directors, trustees, or other superintending officers of a corporation, or the stockholders thereof, on account of any liability created by law, he may file his complaint for that purpose in any common pleas court which possesses jurisdiction to enforce such liability.

"Sec. 3260 (a). The court shall proceed thereon, as in other cases, and, when necessary, shall cause an account to be taken of the property and obligations due to and from such corporation, and may appoint one or more receivers.

[397] "Sec. 3260 (b). If, on the coming in of the answer or upon the taking of such account, it appears that such corporation is insolvent, and has not sufficient property or effects to satisfy such creditor, the court may proceed to ascertain the respective liabilities of the directors, officers, and stockholders, and enforce the same by its judgment, as in other cases.

"Sec. 3260 (c). In all cases in which the directors or other officers of a corporation, or the stockholders thereof, are made parties to an action in which a judgment is rendered, if the property of such corporation is insufficient to discharge its debts, the court shall give notice to nonresident stockholders, as provided in §§ 5048, 5049, 5050, 5051, or 5052 of the Revised Statutes, and shall first proceed to compel each stockholder to pay in the amount due and remaining unpaid on the shares of stock held by him, or so much thereof as is necessary to satisfy the debts of the company.

"Sec. 3260 (d). If the debts of the company remain unsatisfied, the court shall proceed to ascertain the respective liabilities of the directors or other officers and of the stockholders, and to adjudge the amount payable by each, and enforce the judgment as in other cases. The court may authorize and direct the receiver to prosecute such action in his own name as receiver, as may be necessary, in other jurisdictions, to collect the amount found due from any officer or stockholder.

"Sec. 3260 (e). Whenever any action is brought against any corporation, its directors or other superintending officers, or stockholders, according to the provisions of this chapter, the court, whenever it appears necessary or proper, may order notice to be published in such manner as it shall direct, requiring all creditors of such corporation to exhibit their claims and become parties to the action, within a reasonable time, not less than six months from the first publication of such order, and, in default thereof, to be precluded from all benefit of the judgment which shall be rendered in such action, and from any distribution which shall be made under such judgment.

[398] *"Sec. 3260 (f). Upon a final judgment in any such action against an insolvent corporation, the court shall cause a just and fair distribution of the property and assets of such corporation or the proceeds thereof to be made among its creditors.

"Sec. II. That said § 3260 be, and hereby is, repealed.

"Sec. III. This act shall apply to pending actions, and shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage."

197 U. S.

The court below sustained the demurrer on the following ground:

"It is thought that the question raised by this demurrer should be decided upon the assumption that the action is the one provided for by § 3260, Ohio Rev. Stat. as it stood after the amendment of 1894. Inasmuch as that section expressly provides for an action jointly against all the stockholders, including such as are out of the jurisdiction or for other causes cannot be served, and the complaint avers that there are stockholders who have not been made parties, there is a lack of parties defendant, and the demurrer is sustained. If, moreover, the amendments of the statute passed in 1900 are to be considered, the position of the demurrants is even stronger. Manifestly, this action is not the one thereby provided for."

Mr. Frederick C. McLaughlin argued the cause, and, with Mr. Harvey Scribner, filed a brief for the bank:

Article 13, § 3, of the Ohio Constitution is self-executing to the extent of declaring a general contractual obligation and a general rule as to property rights.

Whitman v. National Bank, 176 U. S. 559, 44 L. ed. 587, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 477; Willis v. Mabon (Willis v. St. Paul Sanitation Co.) 48 Minn. 140, 16 L. R. A. 281, 31 Am. St. Rep. 626, 50 N. W. 1110; State ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Sherman, 22 Ohio St. 411; Brown v. Hitchcock, 36 Ohio St. 667; Kirtley v. Holmes, 52 L. R. A. 738, 46 C. C. A. 102, 107 Fed. 1; Harpold v. Stobart, 46 Ohio St. 397, 15 Am. St. Rep. 618, 21 N. E. 637.

Section 3260 of the Revised Statutes of Ohio as originally enacted, and as amended in 1894, was declaratory merely of rules of chancery practice long previously followed by Ohio courts.

Umsted v. Buskirk, 17 Ohio St. 113; Smith v. Newark, S. & S. R. Co. 8 Ohio, C. C. 583.

The remedy, therefore, is nothing more than the appropriate remedy in equity for the enforcement of a proportionate, collateral liability; and such remedy, from its very origin and nature, is transitory.

Kirtley v. Holmes, 52 L. R. A. 738, 46 C. C. A. 102, 107 Fed. 1.

This general contractual obligation is enforceable in any United States circuit court having jurisdiction of the parties indispensable to a decree.

Smith v. Ft. Scott, H. & W. R. Co. 99 U. S. 398, 401, 25 L. ed. 437, 438; Reynolds v. First Nat. Bank, 112 U. S. 405, 410, 28 L. ed. 733, 735, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 213; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Whitton, 13 Wall. 270, 286, 20 L. ed. 571, 576; Suydam v. Broad- naa, 14 Pet. 67, 10 L. ed. 357. See also Smith v. Reeves, 178 U. S. 442-444, 44 L. ed. 1143, 1144, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 919; Foster, Fed. Pr. 3d ed. §§ 6, 7.

The statutory origin of the obligation is immaterial.

Dennick v. Central R. Co. 103 U. S. 11, 26 L. ed. 439; Whitman v. National Bank, 176 U. S. 559, 44 L. ed. 587, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 477.

The United States circuit court can and will enforce it.

American File Co. v. Garrett, 110 U. S. 288, 292, 28 L. ed. 149, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 90; Smith v. Ft. Scott, H. & W. R. Co. 99 U. S. 398, 401, 25 L. ed. 437, 438; Owings v. Hull, 9 Pet. 607, 624, 9 L. ed. 246; Hanley v. Donoghue, 116 U. S. 1, 6, 29 L. ed. 535, 537, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 242; Barrow S. S. Co. v. Kane, 170 U. S. 100, 42 L. ed. 964, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 526; Hale v. Haddon, 37 C. C. A. 240, 95 Fed. 747; State Nat. Bank v. Sayward, 33 C. C. A. 564, 63 U. S. App. 20, 91 Fed. 443; Erickson v. Nesmith, 15 Gray, 221; New Haven Horse Nail Co. v. Linden Spring Co. 142 Mass. 349, 7 N. E. 773; Post & Co. v. Toledo, C. & St. L. R. Co. 144 Mass. 341, 59 Am. Rep. 86, 11 N. E. 540.

Complainant seeks to enforce this liability precisely as it is enforced in Ohio.

Fourth Nat. Bank v. Francklyn, 120 U. S. 747, 758, 30 L. ed. 825, 829, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 757; Pollard v. Bailey, 20 Wall. 520, 22 L. ed. 376; Slater v. Mexican Nat. R. Co. 194 U. S. 120, 48 L. ed. 900, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; Davis v. Mills, 194 U. S. 451, 454, 48 L. ed. 1067, 1070, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 692; Harpold v. Stobart, 46 Ohio St. 397, 15 Am. St. Rep. 618, 21 N. E. 637.

An Ohio corporation may be found and sued in the circuit court of the United States for the southern district of New York.

St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. McBride, 141 U. S. 127, 35 L. ed. 659, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 982; Central Trust Co. v. McGeorge, 151 U. S. 129, 38 L. ed. 98, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 286; Interior Constr. & Improv. Co. v. Gibney, 160 U. S. 217, 219, 40 L. ed. 401, 402, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 272; Re Keasbey & M. Co. 160 U. S. 221, 229, 40 L. ed. 402, 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; New England Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Woodworth, 111 U. S. 138, 146, 28 L. ed. 379, 381, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 364; Barrow S. S. Co. v. Kane, 170 U. S. 100, 42 L. ed. 964, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 526.

The decision of the court below resulted from an erroneous legal presumption based upon the false premise that the legislature created and controlled the right.

Whitman v. National Bank, 28 C. C. A. 404, 51 U. S. App. 536, 83 Fed. 288.

The lex loci contractus governs as to the substance or obligation of a contract, while the lex fori governs the form of action or procedure.

Kent, Com. 14th ed. pp. 461, 462; 16 Harvard Law Rev. p. 262.

This is true whether the origin of the liability be in the statute or the common law, and whether the remedy be statutory or otherwise.

Dennick v. Central R. Co. 103 U. S. 11, 26 L. ed. 439; Davis v. Mills, 194 U. S. 451, 454, 48 L. ed. 1067, 1070, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 692; Blair v. Newbegin, 65 Ohio St. 425, 58 L. R. A. 644, 62 N. E. 1040.

Every condition and limitation imposed upon the substantive right has been complied with, and there is no defect of parties defendant in equity.

Shields v. Barrow, 17 How. 139, 15 L. ed. 160; Ribon v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 16 Wall. 446, 21 L. ed. 367; Cameron v. M'Roberts, 3 Wheat. 591, 4 L. ed. 467.

Mr. Lucius H. Beers argued the cause and filed a brief for Eno:

The highest court of Ohio has sanctioned and followed the practice of referring to the debates of the Constitutional Convention as throwing light on the meaning of words used by the framers of the Ohio Constitution.

State ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Kennon, 7 Ohio St. 546.

In the construction of a doubtful and ambiguous law, the contemporaneous construction of those who were called upon to act under the law, and were appointed to carry its provisions into effect, is entitled to very great respect.

Edwards v. Darby, 12 Wheat. 206, 210, 6 L. ed. 603, 604.

In considering the subject of stockholders' liability as created by the statutes of Ohio, the highest courts of that state have uniformly referred to such liability as being statutory, and have not referred to it as being created by the Constitution.

Citizens' Bank v. Wright, 6 Ohio St. 318; State ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Sherman, 22 Ohio St. 411; Rider v. Fritchey, 49 Ohio St. 285, 15 L. R. A. 513, 30 N. E. 692; Brown v. Hitchcock, 36 Ohio St. 676.

Similar constitutions have been so construed as to involve the decision that the constitutional provision was not self-executing.

French v. Teschmaker, 24 Cal. 518; German v. Benton, 79 Mo. 148; Central Agri. & Mechanical Asso. v. Alabama Gold L. Ins. Co. 70 Ala. 120.

The construction which has been placed on the Ohio Constitution by the highest courts of Ohio is controlling in this court.

Luther v. Borden, 7 How. 1, 40, 12 L. ed. 581, 598; Post v. Kendall County, 105 U. S. 667, 26 L. ed. 1204; Bucher v. Ches- hire R. Co. 125 U. S. 555, 581-584, 31 L. ed. 795, 798, 799, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 974.

The highest court of Ohio has held that § 3 of article 13 of the Ohio Constitution is not self-executing.

State ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Sherman, 22 Ohio St. 411; Rider v. Fritchey, 49 Ohio St. 285, 15 L. R. A. 513, 30 N. E. 692; Citizens' Bank v. Wright, 6 Ohio St. 318.

Mr. Joseph Fettretch argued the cause and filed a brief for Hudson:

In several of the states where the same, or substantially the same, constitutional provision formed part of the law of the state, it has been held that such provisions were not self-executing, and that they did require legislation to determine the liability and the method of its enforcement.

Woodworth v. Bowles, 61 Kan. 569, 60 Pac. 331; Tuttle v. National Bank, 161 Ill. 497, 34 L. R. A. 750, 44 N. E. 984; Marshall v. Sherman, 148 N. Y. 9, 34 L. R. A. 757, 51 Am. St. Rep. 654, 42 N. E. 419; Morley v. Thayer, 3 Fed. 737. See also Mechanics' Sav. Bank v. Fidelity Ins. Trust & S. D. Co. 87 Fed. 113; State Nat. Bank v. Sayward, 86 Fed. 45, Affirmed in 33 C. C. A. 564, 63 U. S. App. 20, 91 Fed. 443; Fourth Nat. Bank v. Francklyn, 120 U. S. 747, 30 L. ed. 825, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 757; Ward v. Joslin, 186 U. S. 142, 46 L. ed. 1093, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 897; Evans v. Nellis, 187 U. S. 271, 47 L. ed. 173, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 74; Hale v. Allinson, 188 U. S. 56, 47 L. ed. 380, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 244; Platt v. Wilmot, 193 U. S. 602, 48 L. ed. 809, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 542; Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. p. 121.

Messrs. Charles N. Judson and William B. Hale submitted the cause for Ivison:

Whether or not a constitutional provision is self-executing depends upon the intention of the framers. A provision will be held to be self-executing only where there is a manifest intention that it shall go into immediate effect without the aid of any ancillary legislation.

6 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. pp. 912, 915, title Constitutional Law; Groves v. Slaughter, 15 Pct. 449, 10 L. ed. 800; Fusz v. Spaunhorst, 67 Mo. 265; Morley v. Thayer, 3 Fed. 740; Willis v. Mabon (Willis v. St. Paul Sanitation Co.) 48 Minn. 150, 16 L. R. A. 281, 21 Am. St. Rep. 626, 50 N. W. 1110; Tuttle v. National Bank, 161 Ill. 502, 34 L. R. A. 750, 44 N. E. 984.

In Barnes v. Wheaton, 80 Hun, 8, 29 N. Y. Supp. 830, it was held that the Ohio constitutional provision here in question is not self-executing.

See also Cleveland, L. & W. R. Co. v. Kent, 87 Hun, 329, 34 N. Y. Supp. 427; Nimick v. Mingo Iron Works Co. 25 W. Va. 184; Marshall v. Sherman, 148 N. Y. 9, 34

L. R. A. 757, 51 Am. St. Rep. 654, 42 N. E. 419.

Every case in the Ohio reports down to the enactment of § 3260 was expressly based on the statutory liability created by § 3258, and not upon the constitutional provision. The discussion in these cases was always as to the remedy to enforce the statutory liability, and never as to the remedy for, or the existence of, a constitutional liability.

Wright v. McCormack, 17 Ohio St. 87; Umsted v. Buskirk, 17 Ohio St. 115; Brown v. Hitchcock, 36 Ohio St. 667; Hawkins v. Iron Valley Furnace Co. 40 Ohio St. 513; Mason v. Alexander, 44 Ohio St. 325, 7 N. E. 435.

As a general rule, constitutional provisions as to stockholders' liability are not self-executing.

6 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 915, title Constitutional Law; Henley v. Stevenson, 67 Kan. 4, 72 Pac. 518; Woodworth v. Bowles, 61 Kan. 569, 60 Pac. 331; Marshall v. Sherman, 148 N. Y. 9, 34 L. R. A. 757, 51 Am. St. Rep. 654, 42 N. E. 419; Tuttle v. National Bank, 161 Ill. 497, 34 L. R. A. 750, 44 N. E. 984; Fowler v. Lamson, 146 Ill. 478, 37 Am. St. Rep. 163, 34 N. E. 932; Morley v. Thayer, 3 Fed. 740; French v. Teschemaker, 24 Cal. 518; Barnes v. Wheaton, 80 Hun, 8, 29 N. Y. Supp. 830.

If the constitutional provision is not self-executing, we have the ordinary case of a statutory liability coupled with a statutory remedy. In such cases the remedy forms an inseparable part of the liability, and is exclusive.

Pollard v. Bailey, 20 Wall. 520, 22 L. ed. 376; Fourth Nat. Bank v. Francklyn, 120 U. S. 747, 30 L. ed. 825, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 757; Morley v. Thayer, 3 Fed. 741.

Statutory remedies for the enforcement of of stockholder's liability have been universally held to be exclusive.

Evans v. Neilis, 187 U. S. 271, 47 L. ed. 173, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 74; Hale v. Allinson, 188 U. S. 56, 47 L. ed. 380, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 244; Pollard v. Bailey, 20 Wall. 520, 22 L. ed. 376; Fourth Nat. Bank v. Francklyn, 120 U. S. 747, 30 L. ed. 825, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 757; Morley v. Thayer, 3 Fed. 737; Nimick v. Mingo Iron Works Co. 25 W. Va. 184; Tuttle v. National Bank, 161 Ill. 497, 34 L. R. A. 750, 44 N. E. 984; May v. Black, 77 Wis. 101, 45 N. W. 949; Miller v. Smith (R. I.) 66 L. R. A. 473, 58 Atl. 634; Henley v. Stevenson, 67 Kan. 4, 72 Pac. 518; Waller v. Hamer, 65 Kan. 168, 69 Pac. 185; Barnes v. Wheaton, 80 Hun, 8, 29 N. Y. Supp. 830; Russell v. Pacific R. Co. 113 Cal. 258, 34 L. R. A. 747, 45 Pac. 323; Savings Asso. v. O'Brien, 51 Hun, 45, 3 N. Y. Supp. 764; Marshall v. Sherman, 148 N. Y. 9, 34 L. R. A. 757, 51 Am. St. Rep. 654, 42 N. E. 419;

Cleveland, L. & W. R. Co. v. Kent, 87 Hun, 329, 34 N. Y. Supp. 427; Howarth v. Angle, 162 N. Y. 179, 47 L. R. A. 725, 56 N. E. 489.

But even if the constitutional provision were held to be self-executing, the legislature having acted and prescribed a remedy, that remedy is exclusive. So far as a statute does not contravene the Constitution, it has equal force and effect.

Whitman v. National Bank, 176 U. S. 559, 44 L. ed. 587, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 477; Evans v. Nellis, 187 U. S. 271, 47 L. ed. 173, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 74; Hale v. Allinson, 188 U. S. 56, 47 L. ed. 380, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 244; Willis v. Mabon, 48 Minn. 140, 16 E. R. A. 281, 31 Am. St. Rep. 626, 50 N. W. 1110; Morley v. Thayer, 3 Fed. 737.

Whichever of the statutory remedies existing at different times is applicable to this case, that remedy is exclusive. Accordingly a stockholder's liability cannot be enforced either within or without the state of Ohio, without compliance with the statutory provisions governing the remedy.

Fourth Nat. Bank v. Francklyn, 120 U. S. 758, 30 L. ed. 829, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 757; Marshall v. Sherman, 34 L. R. A. 757, note, 148 N. Y. 9, 51 Am. St. Rep. 654, 42 N. E. 419; Jessup v. Carnegie, 80 N. Y. 441, 36 Am. Rep. 643; Viele v. Wells, 9 Abb. N. C. 277; Halsey v. McLean, 12 Allen, 438, 90 Am. Dec. 157.

The liability under the Ohio statute cannot be enforced extraterritorially without first complying with the provisions of the Ohio statute governing the remedy.

Tuttle v. National Bank, 161 Ill. 497, 34 L. R. A. 750, 44 N. E. 984; Marshall v. Sherman, 148 N. Y. 9, 34 L. R. A. 757, 51 Am. St. Rep. 654, 42 N. E. 419; Cleveland, L. & W. R. Co. v. Kent, 87 Hun, 329, 34 N. Y. Supp. 427; Savings Asso. v. O'Brien, 51 Hun, 45, 3 N. Y. Supp. 764; Morley v. Thayer, 3 Fed. 737; Russell v. Pacific R. Co. 113 Cal. 258, 34 L. R. A. 747, 45 Pac. 323; May v. Black, 77 Wis. 101, 45 N. W. 949.

There are two classes of statutes making stockholders liable beyond their subscriptions for stock, for the debts of the corporation. One class imposes a primary and direct liability, such as partners are subject to towards the creditors of the firm, though limited in amount. The liability under this class of statutes may be enforced against a stockholder anywhere according to the laws of the forum.

Whitman v. National Bank, 176 U. S. 559, 44 L. ed. 587, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 477; Miller v. Smith (R. I.) 66 L. R. A. 473, 58 Atl. 634; Zang v. Wyant, 25 Colo. 551, 71 Am. St. Rep. 145, 56 Pac. 565; Rhodes v. United States Nat. Bank, 34 L. R. A. 742, 13 C. C. A. 612, 24 U. S. App. 607, 66 Fed. 512; Flash v. Conn, 109 U. S. 371, 27 L. ed.

966, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 263; Savings Asso. v. O'Brien, 51 Hun, 45, 3 N. Y. Supp. 764.

The second class of statutes, to which the Ohio statutes belong, provides only for contribution to a fund to be distributed by a court of equity among creditors generally. Under this class of statutes, the action must first be brought in the state where the corporation is located. Afterwards, nonresident stockholders may be sued in other jurisdictions to enforce the liability as ascertained in the original statutory proceeding.

Evans v. Nellis, 187 U. S. 271, 47 L. ed. 173, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 74; Miller v. Smith (R. I.) 66 L. R. A. 473, 58 Atl. 634; Tuttle v. National Bank, 161 Ill. 497, 34 L. R. A. 750, 44 N. E. 984; Marshall v. Sherman, 148 N. Y. 9, 34 L. R. A. 757, 51 Am. St. Rep. 654, 42 N. E. 419; Barnes v. Wheaton, 80 Hun, 8, 29 N. Y. Supp. 830; Cleveland, L. & W. R. Co. v. Kent, 87 Hun, 329, 34 N. Y. Supp. 427; Nimick v. Mingo Iron Works Co. 25 W. Va. 184; Erickson v. Nesmith, 4 Allen, 233; Hale v. Hardon, 37 C. C. A. 240, 95 Fed. 747; State Nat. Bank v. Sayward, 86 Fed. 45, Affirmed in 33 C. C. A. 564, 63 U. S. App. 20, 91 Fed. 443; Hale v. Allinson, 188 U. S. 56, 47 L. ed. 380, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 244.

Three cases decided by this court are practically decisive of the questions certified.

Whitman v. National Bank, 176 U. S. 559, 44 L. ed. 587, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 477; Evans v. Nellis, 187 U. S. 271, 47 L. ed. 173, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 74; Hale v. Allinson, 188 U. S. 56, 47 L. ed. 380, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 244.

The extraterritorial enforcement of the stockholders' liability under the Ohio laws has been sought in six cases. In four of these cases the suits failed because the Ohio statute had not been followed, and there had been no original proceeding in Ohio.

State Nat. Bank v. Sayward, 86 Fed. 45, Affirmed in 33 C. C. A. 564, 63 U. S. App. 34, 91 Fed. 443; Nimick v. Mingo Iron Works Co. 25 W. Va. 184; Barnes v. Wheaton, 80 Hun, 17, 29 N. Y. Supp. 830; Cleveland, L. & W. R. Co. v. Kent, 87 Hun, 329, 34 N. Y. Supp. 427.

In two cases the liability under the Ohio laws was enforced extraterritorially, but in each case the Ohio statute had been followed. An original statutory proceeding had been had in the courts of Ohio, and the foreign suits were brought by a receiver appointed in the original proceeding.

Kirtley v. Holmes, 52 L. R. A. 738, 46 C. C. A. 102, 107 Fed. 1; Burr v. Smith, 113 Fed. 858.

Mr. Arthur F. Cosby submitted the cause for Clews et al.:

The Constitution and statutes of Ohio must be taken together as making one body of law.

Whitman v. National Bank, 176 U. S. 559, 44 L. ed. 587, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 477; Fourth Nat. Bank v. Francklyn, 120 U. S. 758, 30 L. ed. 829, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 757; Pollard v. Bailey, 20 Wall. 520, 22 L. ed. 376; Kirtley v. Holmes, 52 L. R. A. 738, 46 C. C. A. 102, 107 Fed. 1; State Nat. Bank v. Sayward, 33 C. C. A. 564, 63 U. S. App. 20, 91 Fed. 443; Hale v. Allinson, 188 U. S. 56, 47 L. ed. 380, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 244; Finney v. Guy, 189 U. S. 335, 47 L. ed. 839, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 558.

The complainant should pursue the ordinary remedy by an original suit in Ohio.

Whitman v. National Bank, 176 U. S. 559, 44 L. ed. 587, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 477; Hancock Nat. Bank v. Farnum, 176 U. S. 640, 44 L. ed. 619, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 506; Evans v. Nellis, 187 U. S. 271, 47 L. ed. 173, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 74; Hale v. Allinson, 188 U. S. 56, 47 L. ed. 380, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 244; Hale v. Hardon, 37 C. C. A. 240, 95 Fed. 747; Finney v. Guy, 189 U. S. 335, 47 L. ed. 839, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 558; Elkhart Nat. Bank v. Northwestern Guaranty Loan Co. 30 C. C. A. 632, 58 U. S. App. 83, 87 Fed. 252; Kirtley v. Holmes, 52 L. R. A. 738, 46 C. C. A. 102, 107 Fed. 1; State Nat. Bank v. Sayward, 86 Fed. 45, Affirmed in 33 C. C. A. 564, 63 U. S. App. 20, 91 Fed. 443.

The practice under the Ohio laws and decisions was not followed.

Umsted v. Buskirk, 17 Ohio St. 114; Brown v. Hitchcock, 36 Ohio St. 667; Wheeler v. Faurót, 37 Ohio St. 26; Bullock v. Kilgour, 39 Ohio St. 543; Hawkins v. Iron Valley Furnace Co. 40 Ohio St. 513; Mason v. Alexander, 44 Ohio St. 325, 7 N. E. 435; Bonewitz v. Van Wert County Bank, 41 Ohio St. 78; Harpold v. Stobart, 46 Ohio St. 397, 15 Am. St. Rep. 618, 21 N. E. 637; Younglove v. Kelly Island Lime Co. 49 Ohio St. 667, 33 N. E. 234; Herrick v. Wardwell, 58 Ohio St. 294, 50 N. E. 903; Kulp v. Fleming, 65 Ohio St. 321, 87 Am. St. Rep. 611, 62 N. E. 334.

Mr. John G. Milburn submitted the cause on behalf of Astor.

Mr. Justice Peckham, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

The questions propounded by the circuit court of appeals are the following:

First. Whether art. 13, § 3, of the Constitution of Ohio is so far self-executing that it may be enforced outside of the jurisdiction of said state without compliance with said requirements of § 3260 of the Revised Statutes of said state as amended in 1894.

Second. Whether art. 13, § 3, of the Constitution of Ohio is so far self-executing that it may be enforced outside of the jurisdiction of said state without compliance with said requirements of § 3260 of the Revised Statutes of said state as amended in 1900.

The counsel for the complainant contends that the article of the Ohio Constitution, above set forth, is self-executing to the extent of declaring the general contractual obligation and the general rule as to property rights; and it is insisted that the liability of the stockholders in the railway corporation may be enforced by the courts of another jurisdiction without compliance with the requirements of any of the statutes which have been passed by the legislature of Ohio in regard to the enforcement of the liability provided for in the Constitution. These statutes, it is said, refer only to the form and mode of procedure in local courts, and neither of them contains any limitation or condition imposed upon the substantive right declared by the Constitution, as construed and enforced by the Ohio courts for many years prior to the statutory enactments.

We have not been referred to any decision of the Ohio supreme court directly involving the question whether the provision of the Constitution referred to is self-executing or not. If there were any such decision we should follow it. That court has, however, regarded the liability of stockholders as statutory in its nature, as is seen from its decisions in the cases hereinafter cited.

The question has arisen in some of the other states regarding this same provision, and it has been held to be not self-executing. Barnes v. Wheaton, 80 Hun, 8, 29 N. Y. Supp. 830. In that case it was held by the appellate division that it was obvious that the provision was not self-executing, but its purpose was to confer upon the legislature the power and impose upon it the duty of securing dues from corporations by imposing upon the stockholders of such corporations as are organized under the laws of that state an individual liability, and by such other means as, in its discretion, it should deem proper, but limiting such power and discretion by the provision that each stockholder should be made liable to an amount at least equal to the amount of stock held by him. This provision was not regarded as imposing a liability independent of the statute, nor as conferring upon the plaintiff any right to maintain the action then before the court. It has been held substantially to the same effect in Nimick v. Mingo Iron Works Co. 25 W. Va. 184.

But whether the constitutional provision might be regarded as, to a certain extent, self-executing in the absence of any statute on the subject, we find that the legislature of Ohio has passed statutes to enforce such liability. The cases of Wright v. McCormack, 17 Ohio St. 86, and Umsted v. Buskirk, 17 Ohio St. 113, were both brought under a statute enacted to provide a method for enforcing the constitutional liability, and in the former case the courts speaks of the liability of the stockholders as a "statutory liability," and of the statute itself as a

[405] "statute *under which the liability arises." That was an early statute, passed not long after the adoption of the constitutional provision, and for the purpose of executing it. 50 Ohio Laws, 296, passed May 1, 1852. Wright v. McCormack was approved in Umsted v. Buskirk, 17 Ohio St. 113. Subsequent statutes were passed for the same purpose of enforcing the liability of stockholders, and those set out in the record not only definitely state the liability, but give the procedure and provide the remedy in order to enforce it. It will be seen that the constitutional provision refers in terms to the securing of dues from corporations by the individual liability of stockholders, and by such other means as may be prescribed by law. The Constitution evidently looks to the legislature for providing means. A statute which is passed in pursuance of such a provision, and which itself provides for the procedure and states the remedy, even though imposing no limit or conditions in regard to such liability other than such as are found in the constitutional provision itself, is, nevertheless, a statute providing a remedy which is to be followed within the principle sustained by the authorities cited below. The statute, under such circumstances, may be said to so far provide for the liability and to create the remedy as to make it necessary to follow its provisions and to conform to the procedure provided for therein. See Pollard v. Bailey, 20 Wall. 520, 526, 22 L. ed. 376, 378; Fourth Nat. Bank v. Franklyn, 120 U. S. 747, 756, 758, 30 L. ed. 825, 829, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 757; Evans v. Nellis, 187 U. S. 271, 47 L. ed. 173, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 74; Morley v. Thayer, 3 Fed. 737, circuit court, district of Massachusetts; Cleveland, L. & W. R. Co. v. Kent, 87 Hun, 329, 34 N. Y. Supp. 427; Nimick v. Mingo Iron Works Co. 25 W. Va. 184. In Fourth Nat. Bank v. Franklyn, 120 U. S. 747, 756, 758, 30 L. ed. 825, 829, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 757. Mr. Justice Gray, speaking for this court, said: "In all the diversity of opinion in the courts of the different states, upon the question how far a liability imposed upon stockholders in a corporation by the law of the state which creates it can be pursued in a court held beyond the limits of that state, no case has been found in which such a liability has been enforced by any court without a compliance with the conditions *applicable to it under the [406] legislative acts and judicial decisions of the state which creates the corporation and imposes the liability. To hold that it could be enforced without such compliance would be to subject stockholders residing out of the state to a greater burden than domestic stockholders." In order to comply with the conditions of the statute of Ohio it seems plain from the provisions of the statute that the action must be brought in that state.

In the case now before us the complainant has paid no attention to the statutes of Ohio, so far as bringing suit in that state is concerned, and therefore has not followed the provisions contained in them. It has commenced no action in the state of Ohio, but, on the contrary, assumes to ask the Federal circuit court in New York state to administer the relief asked for in its bill, against stockholders who are residents of New York, the same as if the suit had been commenced in Ohio. This, we think, the complainant could not do. By the terms of the Ohio statute, properly construed, the remedy must be pursued in the courts of that state. The case of a plaintiff failing to obtain satisfaction of his judgment by following, in Ohio, the remedies given by the Ohio statute, is not before us, and we need not determine the character of any other remedy, or where it may be enforced.

We therefore answer the first question in the negative. It is unnecessary to answer the second question. The answer will be certified to the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

So ordered.

*PENNSYLVANIA LUMBERMEN'S MUTUAL FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY

v.

CHARLES C. MEYER.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 407-419.)

Federal courts — jurisdiction of action against foreign corporation — validity of service of summons on resident director.

1. A foreign insurance company is doing business within the state, so far as the question of the power of a Federal court, sitting in that state, to obtain jurisdiction over such corporation, is concerned, where, under the terms of its policies covering property in that state, it sends its agents there to adjust losses.

NOTE.—As to service of process on foreign corporations—see notes to Foster v. Charles Betcher Lumber Co. 23 L. R. A. 490; and Eldred v. Americau Palace-Car Co. 45 C. C. A. 3.

As to service on state officer as service on foreign corporation—see note to Mutual Reserve Fund Life Assn. v. Phelps, 47 L. ed. U. S. 987.

2. A cause of action founded on a loss of the property covered by a policy of insurance issued by a foreign corporation arises within the state, within the meaning of the provision for service of summons on foreign corporations contained in N. Y. Code Civ. Proc. § 432, subd. 3. where the property insured was situated in that state, the loss was to be adjusted there, and the company, in case of loss, was given the option of payment or of repairing or rebuilding.
3. Service of summons within the state on a resident director of a foreign insurance company, as provided by N. Y. Code Civ. Proc. § 432, subd. 3, when the cause of action arises therein, is a valid service if the company is doing business in the state, and confers jurisdiction on a Federal court sitting in that state.

[No. 182.]

Argued March 14, 15, 1905. Decided April 3, 1905.

ON A CERTIFICATE from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, presenting a question as to the validity of the service of summons on a resident director of a foreign insurance company. Answered in the affirmative.

Statement by Mr. Justice Peckham:

Meyer, the plaintiff below, recovered judgment in the United States circuit court for the western district of New York, against the corporation defendant, for five thousand and some odd dollars, upon policies of fire insurance issued by it upon certain buildings (and the machinery therein) in the city of Rochester, in the state of New York. The corporation sought to obtain a review of the judgment, and to that end sued out a writ of error, and the case was brought before the court of appeals for the second circuit, which has certified certain facts upon which it desires the opinion of this court. These facts are as follows:

The action was commenced in the supreme court of the state of New York by service of the summons on Samuel H. Beach, at the city of Rome, New York, a director of the company, who resided in that city, and, on application of the company, appearing specially, the case was removed into the United States circuit court for the western district of New York, because of diverse citizenship of the parties. By motion, on special appearance, to set aside the service, by plea, exception, and assignment of error, the question as to whether jurisdiction of the company had been obtained by such service has been properly raised.

The defendant in error is, and at the time of the commencement of this action was, a citizen and resident of the state of New York. The plaintiff in error is a fire-insurance corporation, organized under the laws of the state of Pennsylvania, and its office is in Philadelphia. Written applications were duly made to it for the issuance of the policies in suit, and were mailed from Rochester, New York, to the company, at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. The policies were made out and executed by it at Philadelphia, and were sent to the insured at Rochester, New York, where he received the same. All transactions between the company and said insured, subsequent to the issuance of said policies, and until after the destruction of said property by fire, were by correspondence, in writing from Philadelphia to him, at Rochester, and he, writing from Rochester, to it, in Philadelphia.

Three of the said company's thirteen directors reside in the state of New York, but the only act done by them for it is to attend, from time to time, the meetings of the board of directors, which are held in the city of Philadelphia, and there to give such advice and take such action in connection with its business as may seem to them proper. They perform no duties and do no acts for the company in the state of New York, and never have. The company has no agents or officers within that state, and has not had at any time. It has no office within that state, has never been authorized or licensed by the insurance department thereof to do business therein, and has not taken the steps required by law for that purpose. At the date of the service of the summons, as aforesaid, the said company had and now has about nine hundred thousand dollars ($900,000) outstanding insurance on property within the state of New York, which is something less than one third of its total risks. The applications therefor were made by mail, addressed to it at Philadelphia, and the policies were executed and issued at that city, and sent by mail from there to the insured within the state of New York.

Ever since the plaintiff in error was incorporated it has been engaged in the business of insuring property located in the state of New York and other states against loss by fire, and has sent by mail circulars from Philadelphia into said state, soliciting business. In the prosecution of its business, and for the purpose of increasing it, the company sends its general manager to the different conventions of lumbermen held in the state of New York, for the purpose of urging upon those attending upon such conventions the advantages of insuring with it. It sends its adjusters into the state of New York when a loss by fire occurs there to property insured by it, for the purpose of adjusting the amount of such loss. It originally placed insurance upon the property covered by the policies in question after its manager had pointed out the advantage of insuring in the company, the conversation being had at the city of Rochester, in that state.

Mr. Frank P. Prichard argued the cause and filed a brief for the insurance company:

In order to give a Federal court jurisdiction in a suit against a corporation foreign to the state within whose borders the suit is brought, two facts must be shown, viz.:

First. That the foreign corporation is carrying on business within the state.

Second. That the corporation is properly brought into court by service upon an officer or agent who can fairly be said to be its representative agent within the state.

St. Clair v. Cox, 106 U. S. 350, 27 L. ed. 222, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 354; Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Spratley, 172 U. S. 602, 43 L. ed. 569, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 308.

The residence in a state of directors of a foreign corporation does not give the corporation a domicile in the state, or constitute the carrying on of business there.

Conley v. Mathieson Alkali Works, 190 U. S. 406, 47 L. ed. 1113, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 728.

The mere fact that the contracts made in the home state relate to property or persons in the foreign state does not make the execution and performance of such contracts the doing of business in such foreign state.

Allgeyer v. Louisiana, 165 U. S. 578, 41 L. ed. 832, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427; United States v. American Bell Teleph. Co. 29 Fed. 17; Marine Ins. Co. v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. 41 Fed. 643; Sullivan v. Sheehan, 89 Fed. 247; Hyde v. Goodnow, 3 N. Y. 266; Huntley v. Merrill, 32 Barb. 626; Cummer Lumber Co. v. Associated Mfrs. Mut. F. Ins. Co. 67 App. Div. 151, 73 N. Y. Supp. 668, Affirmed in 173 N. Y. 633, 66 N. E. 1106; Scamans v. Knapp-Stout & Co. Co. 89 Wis. 171, 27 L. R. A. 362, 46 Am. St. Rep. 825, 61 N. W. 757; Clay F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Huron Salt & Lumber Mfg. Co. 31 Mich. 346; New Orleans v. Rhenish Westphalian Lloyds, 31 La. Ann. 781; State v. Williams, 46 La. Ann. 922, 15 So. 290.

In the cases in which this court has sustained findings that a foreign corporation was doing business in a state, the decision has always rested on the fact that the business was being actually conducted in the state by agents of the corporation, and not on the fact that the contracts related to property within the state.

Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Spratley, 172 U. S. 602, 43 L. ed. 569, 19 Sup. Ct.

Rep. 308; Chattanooga Nat. Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Denson, 189 U. S. 408, 47 L. ed. 870, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 630.

The sending of adjusters into New York to adjust the amount of loss was not doing business in the state.

Sullivan v. Sheehan, 89 Fed. 247; People ex rel. McCall v. Gilbert, 44 Hun, 522; French v. People, 6 Colo. App. 311, 40 Pac. 463.

The solicitation of business by mail circulars, and the advertising of the merits of the company by its manager while attending conventions, are not doing business within the state.

Carpenter v. Westinghouse Air-brake Co. 32 Fed. 434.

Was the service on a resident director who had no duties and performed no acts in the state for the corporation, a sufficient service?

St. Clair v. Cox, 106 U. S. 350, 27 L. ed. 222, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 354; Schmidlaff v. La Confiance Ins. Co. 71 Ga. 246; Clark & M. Priv. Corp. § 690; Goldey v. Morning News, 156 U. S. 518, 39 L. ed. 517, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 559; Conley v. Mathieson Alkali Works, 190 U. S. 406, 47 L. ed. 1113, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 728; Barrow S. S. Co. v. Kane, 170 U. S. 100, 42 L. ed. 964, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 526; Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Spratley, 172 U. S. 602, 43 L. ed. 569, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 308.

The right to appeal to the Federal courts, and the right to be exempt from suit and judgment except by due process of law, are rights which cannot be taken away from a corporation simply because it is doing business within a state. It may be that the state can expel the corporation from its borders, but it cannot oust the jurisdiction of the Federal courts, or compel those courts to give judgment where there has been no real service.

Cable v. United States L. Ins. Co. 191 U. S. 288, 48 L. ed. 188, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 74; Barron v. Burnside, 121 U. S. 186, 30 L. ed. 915, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 295, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 931.

If the New York statute is to be construed as authorizing a service upon a person who, under the decisions of this court, is not really its representative, then it amounts to a provision that, if the corporation does business within the state, it shall submit to judgments against it without due process of law. This, it is submitted, is beyond the power of the state.

Frawley v. Pennsylvania Casualty Co. 124 Fed. 259.

Mr. Heman W. Morris argued the cause and filed a brief for Meyer:

In contracts for the payment of money, if the instrument is silent as to the place of payment, it is the duty of the debtor to seek out the creditor and make payment to him at his place of residence.

Sanderson v. Boues, 14 East, 507; Hale v. Patton, 60 N. Y. 233, 19 Am. Rep. 168; Dockham v. Smith, 113 Mass. 320, 18 Am. Rep. 495.

Immediately upon the happening of the loss, the loss of the assured, to the extent of the amount insured, becomes a debt against the company which it is bound to discharge as other debts are discharged.

Wood, Fire Ins. 2d ed. 322.

The contract represented by a fire insurance policy is, in case of a loss under it, to be performed on the part of the company where the insured property is situated and the loss occurs.

LaFayette Ins. Co. v. French, 18 How. 404, 15 L. ed. 451; Paul v. Virginia, 8 Wall. 168, 19 L. ed. 357.

The cause of action in this case arose in the state of New York, and under the laws of that state the state court acquired jurisdiction of the plaintiff in error by the service of the summons on one of its directors within the state.

Childs v. Harris Mfg. Co. 104 N. Y. 477, 11 N. E. 50; Ithaca Fire Department v. Beecher, 99 N. Y. 429, 2 N. E. 154; Griesa v. Massachusetts Ben. Asso. 39 N. Y. S. R. 1, 15 N. Y. Supp. 71; Fidelity Mut. Life Asso. v. Ficklin, 74 Md. 172, 21 Atl. 680, 23 Atl. 197; Burckle v. Eckhart, 3 N. Y. 132.

As to whether the service of process issued by a state court will be deemed sufficient under the laws of that state, the decisions of the highest courts of the state on that point will be regarded as controlling upon the Federal courts.

Ex parte Schollenberger, 96 U. S. 369, 24 L. ed. 853; New England Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Woodworth, 111 U. S. 146, 28 L. ed. 381, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 364; Amy v. Watertown, 130 U. S. 301, 32 L. ed. 946, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 530.

The plaintiff in error was doing business in the state of New York at the time the cause of action accrued, and also at the time the action was commenced.

Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Spratley, 172 U. S. 602, 43 L. ed. 569, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 308; New York v. Hamilton F. Ins. Co. 39 N. Y. 45, 100 Am. Dec. 400; LaFayette Ins. Co. v. French, 18 How. 404, 15 L. ed. 451; Ex parte Schollenberger, 96 U. S. 369, 24 L. ed. 853; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Koontz, 104 U. S. 10, 26 L. ed. 643; Chattanooga Nat. Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Denson, 189 U. S. 408, 47 L. ed. 870, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 630; New Haven Pulp & Board Co. v. Downingtown Mfg. Co. 130 Fed. 605; Firemen's Ins. Co. v. Thompson, 155 Ill. 197 U. S.

204, 46 Am. St. Rep. 335, 40 N. E. 488; Barrow S. S. Co. v. Kane, 170 U. S. 100, 42 L. ed. 964, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 526.

In every case where service upon an officer or a director of a foreign corporation has been set aside, it has been on the ground that the corporation was not doing business in the state, and never upon the ground that the officer or director, not being there engaged in the company's business, was not a proper representative of the company upon whom service could be made.

St. Clair v. Cox, 106 U. S. 353, 27 L. ed. 223, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 354; Conley v. Mathieson Alkali Works, 190 U. S. 406, 47 L. ed. 1113, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 728.

Directors are deemed proper officers on whom service of process against a corporation may be made.

Hiller v. Burlington & M. River R. Co. 70 N. Y. 223; Childs v. Harris Mfg. Co. 104 N. Y. 477, 11 N. E. 50.

In actions in the state courts against foreign corporations, where the corporation is found within the state for the purposes of the suit, jurisdiction on it may be obtained by service of process upon an officer, director, or agent of the corporation, in the manner provided by the laws of the state, with the exception that if the laws authorize service on an agent it must be one who represents the corporation in the state.

New England Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Woodworth, 111 U. S. 146, 28 L. ed. 381, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 364; Amy v. Watertown, 130 U. S. 301, 32 L. ed. 946, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 530.

Mr. Justice Peckham, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

Upon the facts thus certified the circuit court of appeals asks the question: "Had the circuit court jurisdiction of the plaintiff in error?"

In addition to the facts contained in the foregoing certificate, the counsel for the respective parties stipulated upon the argument in this case before this court that a copy of one of the policies on which suit was brought in this case was correctly set out in the printed record in the circuit court of appeals, and that this court might consider and decide the case with the same effect as if, in the statement of facts accompanying the question certified by the circuit court of appeals, that court had found and certified the additional fact that the record in the circuit court of appeals contained a true copy of one of the policies, and that the others sued upon were in the same form and language as the one set out in that record.

The policies in suit were issued upon a two-story frame sawmill building and additions, and also upon engines and boilers and other machinery placed in that building, situated on Monroe avenue, in the city of Rochester, state of New York. The policies provide that the company shall not be liable beyond the actual cash value of the property at the time any loss or damage occurs, and that such loss or damage is to be ascertained or estimated according to such actual cash value, with proper deduction for depreciation, however caused, and shall in no event exceed what it would then cost the insured to repair or replace the same with material of like kind and quality; the assessment or estimate is to be [413] made by the insured *and the company; if they differ as to the amount of loss, the same is to be ascertained by two competent and disinterested appraisers, the insured and the company each selecting one, and the two so chosen are to select a competent and disinterested umpire; the appraisers together are to estimate and appraise the loss, stating separately sound value and damage, and, failing to agree, they are to submit their differences to the umpire; and the award in writing of any two shall determine the amount of the loss. After the amount of the loss or damage has been thus determined, the sum for which the company is liable is payable in sixty days. It is optional with the company to repair, rebuild, or replace the property lost or damaged with other of like kind and quality, within a reasonable time, as provided for in the policy.

In order that a Federal court may obtain jurisdiction over a foreign corporation, the corporation must, among other things, be doing business within the state. St. Clair v. Cox, 106 U. S. 350, 27 L. ed. 222, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 354; Goldney v. Morning News, 156 U. S. 518, 39 L. ed. 517, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 559; Barrow S. S. Co. v. Kane, 170 U. S. 100, 42 L. ed. 964, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 526; Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Spratley, 172 U. S. 602, 43 L. ed. 569, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 308.

To obtain jurisdiction of a foreign corporation under the Code of New York, personal service of the summons upon and a delivery to the defendant must be made in the manner designated by § 432 of the Code of Civil Procedure of that state. Subdivision 1 of that section provides for the service of the summons on and its delivery to the president, treasurer, or secretary; subdivision 2 provides for like service upon and delivery to a person designated for the purpose by the corporation. The service was made in this case under subdivision 3 of that section, which reads as follows:

3. "If such a designation is not in force, or if neither the person designated nor an officer specified in subdivision first of this section can be found with due diligence, and the corporation has property within the state, or the cause of action arose therein, to the cashier, a director, or a managing agent of the corporation within the state."

*It does not appear that the company had [414] any property within the state, and therefore, in order to come within subdivision (3) of the section, the cause of action must have arisen therein, and the summons must have been served within the state upon one of the officers named in that subdivision; viz., the cashier, a director, or a managing agent of the corporation.

(1) Was the company doing business in New York state? Nearly one third of the amount of its total fire risks was in that state when these policies were issued and when the loss occurred. If it be conceded that the contract was made in Philadelphia, it does not follow that all its business was therefore done in the state of Pennsylvania. The contract was an insurance policy issued upon real estate and machinery in a building situated in the city of Rochester, in New York. The contract was to pay the amount of loss which might be sustained by fire, as specified in the policy. The policy provides for the manner of determining the amount of this loss, either by agreement between the company and the owner, or, in case of disagreement, then by the appraisers, as already stated. The provisions of the contract clearly contemplate the presence of an agent of the company at the place of the loss after it has occurred, for the purpose of determining its extent, and adjusting, if possible, the amount payable by the company to the owner. If no such adjustment can be made, the policy provides in terms for the appointment of appraisers, one by the company and one by the owner, and that they disagreeing, an umpire shall be appointed, and the agreement by any two shall be binding. After that, the loss is payable to the owner by the company within sixty days. As the policy insures against loss, it of course contemplates that such loss may occur; and it also contemplates that the company shall send to the place where the loss occurred, that is, to New York, its agent, for the purpose stated. When, under the terms of the contract, the company sends its agent into the state where the property was insured, and where the loss *occurred, for [415] the purpose of adjustment, it would seem plain that it was then doing the business contemplated by its contract, within the state. A fire-insurance company which issues its policies upon real estate and personal property situated in another state is as much engaged in its business when its agents are there under its authority, adjusting the losses covered by its policies, as it is when engaged in making contracts to take such risks. If not doing business in such case, what is it doing? It is doing the act provided for in its contract, at the very place where, in case a loss occurred, the company contemplated the act should be done; and it does it in furtherance of the contract, and in order to carry out its provisions, and it could not properly be carried out without this act being done; and the contract itself is the very kind of contract which constituted the legal business of the company, and for the purpose of doing which it was incorporated. This is not a sporadic case, nor the contracts in suit the only ones of their kind issued upon property within the state of New York. Many contracts of the nature of the one in suit were entered into by the company, covering property within the state. We think it would be somewhat difficult for the defendant to describe what it was doing in New York, if it was not doing business therein, when sending its agents into that state to perform the various acts of adjustment provided for by its contracts, and made necessary to carry them out.

We have no difficulty in concluding that the defendant was doing business in the state of New York during all the time of the existence of these policies.

(2) Did the cause of action arise within that state? Although the contract may have been a Pennsylvania contract, yet it does not follow that all its provisions were to be carried out in that state. The policy of insurance was, as we have said, upon real estate within the state of New York, and upon machinery contained in the buildings insured. After the defendant and the owner had either agreed upon the amount of loss, or the same had been estimated and determined [416] upon by *the appraisers, as provided for in the policy, the defendant, by the terms of that instrument, promised to pay to the owner the amount thus arrived at, within sixty days. The policy does not state in so many words where such payment is to be made, but it is a general rule that, in the absence of any such provision, or of any language from which a different inference may be inferred, the right of the creditor to demand payment at his own domicile exists, and it is the duty of the debtor to pay his debt to the creditor in that way. It is stated in the opinion of this court, by Mr. Justice Field, in State Tax on Foreign-held Bonds (Cleveland, P. & A. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania), 15 Wall. 300, 320, 21 L. ed. 179, 187: "All the property there can be in the nature of things in debts of corporations belongs to the creditors, to whom they are payable, and follows their domicile, wherever that may be. Their debts can have no locality separate from the parties to whom they are due. This principle might be stated in many different ways, and supported by citations from numerous adjudications, but no number of authorities, and no forms of expression, could add anything to its obvious truth, which is recognized upon its simple statement." It is stated in 2 Parsons on Contracts, 8th ed. 702, as follows: "All debts are payable everywhere, unless there be some special limitation or provision in respect to the payment; the rule being that debts as such have no locus or situs, but accompany the creditor everywhere, and authorize a demand upon the debtor everywhere." See also Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Sturm, 174 U. S. 710, 43 L. ed. 1144, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 797. In Hale v. Patton, 60 N. Y. 233, 236, 19 Am. Rep. 168, Andrews, J., in delivering the opinion of the court, said: "In general, a debtor who is indebted on a money obligation is bound, if no place of payment is specified in the contract, to seek the creditor, and make payment to him personally. But this rule is subject to the exception that if the creditor is out of the state when payment is to be made, the debtor is not obliged to follow him, but readiness to pay within the state in that case will be as effectual as actual payment to save a forfeiture. Co. Litt. 304, 2; Smith v. Smith, 25 Wend. 405; Allshouse v. Ramsay, 6 Whart. *331, 37 Am. Dec. 417; [417] Southworth v. Smith, 7 Cush. 391; Tasker v. Bartlett, 5 Cush. 359." And the same views in Dockhan v. Smith, 113 Mass. 320, 18 Am. Rep. 495. The exception as to the creditor being out of the state, spoken of by Judge Andrews, refers to the subsequent absence of the creditor from the state which was his domicile when the contract was there made.

In some other of the cases above cited, it is said the debtor need not follow the creditor out of the state where the contract was made in order to pay or make tender of payment of the debt. That depends upon the contract, and what inference of the place of payment may be drawn from its contents, when it does not state in so many words where payment is to be made. Where the debtor is a fire-insurance company, and makes such a contract as the policies in suit, and it is engaged in doing business by insuring property outside the state of its creation, and makes provision such as is made in this case for payment or for rebuilding or repairing, we think the place of payment in contemplation of the parties, and to be inferred from the facts set forth, is at the domicile of the creditor, in the state where the property insured was situated.

Instead of making payment for the loss sustained by fire, the defendant had the option of repairing or rebuilding. If it availed itself of that right, of course it would have to rebuild at the place where the loss occurred. So far as appears from the statement of facts, the defendant has failed to make payment, and has also failed to avail itself of its option to rebuild. The payment, we think, was to be made at the same place where the rebuilding was to be done, in case the defendant availed itself of its right to rebuild; that is, within the state of New York, where the loss occurred. Failing to make payment, or failing to build or repair, it failed to comply with the terms of its contract, and out of that failure the cause of action arose in the state of New York.

(3) We think the service of the summons within the state of New York upon a director residing in that state was, under the facts of this case, a good service. As is [418] seen, the company *was doing business within the state, and the cause of action arose therein, and, in such a case, service upon a director residing in the state was sufficient. There is nothing in the cases of Conley v. Mathieson Alkali Works, 190 U. S. 406, 47 L. ed. 1113, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 728, and Geer v. Mathieson Alkali Works, 190 U. S. 428, 47 L. ed. 1122, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 807, to the contrary. The first of the above-cited cases seems rather to assume that if the company were doing business in the state, the service on a resident director would have been good. Although it is stated in the case at bar that the duties of a director of this defendant were to be performed at Philadelphia, where the board of directors met, yet that fact is not material in this case. A foreign fire-insurance corporation doing business within another state, and voluntarily electing a part of its directors from among those who are residents of such state, may be said, from that very fact, to add to the confidence of possible insurers with the company in that state, and in that way to secure more business therein than would otherwise be the case. Although doing no particular act in the state for this company, such directors are, nevertheless, members of and policy holders therein, and are a part of the governing body of the company, and are, by their position, so far representative thereof as, in our judgment, to render service of process upon them in the state of their residence, when the company is doing business therein, a good service upon the company itself. Service upon them, it may be assumed, would certainly result in notice to the company itself, which is at least one of the reasons for holding a service on an agent good.

It would be most unwise to hold, upon the facts herein stated, that a person who suffered loss under a policy of insurance could only obtain redress, when refused by the company, in the courts of the state where the company was incorporated. It is not unreasonable for the state, under such facts, to endeavor to secure to its citizens a remedy in the domestic forum upon this very important class of contracts. Lafayette Ins. Co. v. French, 18 How. 404, 407, 15 L. ed. 451, 452. And we have no doubt that if it were generally understood by *policy [419] holders in states other than the state where the company was created that resort for the enforcement of their rights must, in all cases, be had to the courts of the state of the creation of the company, even though the company did business in such other states, the number of policy holders in the other states would seriously fall off.

The service of the summons was, in our judgment, a good service on the company, and we therefore answer the question of the Circuit Court of Appeals in the affirmative; and it is so ordered.

Mr. Justice Harlan took no part in the decision of this case.

FREDERIC W. LINCOLN, Henry W. Peabody, John R. Bradlee, and Charles D. Barry, Trading as Copartners under the Firm Name and Style of Henry W. Peabody & Company, Plffs. in Err.,

v.

UNITED STATES. (No. 149.)

WARNER, BARNES, & COMPANY, Limited, Appt.,

v.

UNITED STATES. (No. 466.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 419-429.)

Duties—on imports to Manila—scope of President's order—ratification.

1. The existence of an armed insurrection of the natives in the Philippine Islands after the ratification of the treaty of peace with Spain did not justify the exaction of duties on imports from the United States into Manila after that date, under an order of the President issued during the Spanish-American war, that "on the occupation of any forts and places in the Philippine Islands by the forces of the United States" the duties shall be levied and collected "as a military contribution."
2. The collection of duties on imports to Manila, which was not authorized by the President's order of July 12, 1898, after the ratification of the treaty of peace with Spain, was not ratified by the act of July 1, 1902, § 2 (32 Stat. at L. 691, 692, chap. 1369, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. p. 242), ratifying such order and the action of the Federal authorities taken in accordance with its provisions.

[Nos. 149, 466.]

Argued March 3, 1905. Decided April 3, 1905.

IN ERROR to the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York to review a judgment dismissing a suit to recover duties exacted on imports from New York to Manila after the ratification of the treaty of peace with Spain. Reversed. Also an—APPEAL from the Court of Claims to review the dismissal of a petition which sought to recover other duties exacted under similar circumstances. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Paul Fuller, Frederic R. Coudert, Jr., and Henry M. Ward argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiffs in error and appellant:

Manila was not hostile territory, and the possession and sovereignty of the United States were complete.

De Lima v. Bidwell, 182 U. S. 1, 180, 45 L. ed. 1041, 1049, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 743.

The President had not the power, after the ratification of the treaty, to collect the duties involved in these cases.

Dooley v. United States, 182 U. S. 222, 45 L. ed. 1074, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 762.

This court has decided that the language of the order under which these duties were collected did not authorize their collection after the ratification of the treaty.

Dooley v. United States, 182 U. S. 235, 45 L. ed. 1081, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 762.

There is no legal distinction between the status of Manila at the time of the exaction of these duties, and that of Porto Rico prior to the passage of the Foraker act.

Fourteen Diamond Rings v. United States (The Diamond Rings) 183 U. S. 176, 46 L. ed. 138, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 59.

The contention of the government and ruling of the court of claims that Manila was "hostile territory" after the ratification is wholly unsound.

Prize Cases, 2 Black, 635, 673, 674, 17 L. ed. 459, 478, 479; Coleman v. Tennessee, 97 U. S. 517, 24 L. ed. 1122; Birkhimer, Military Government & Martial Law, p. 53; United States v. Rice, 4 Wheat. 246, 254, 4 L. ed. 562, 564; United States v. Hayward, 2 Gall. 485, Fed. Cas. No. 15,336; Fourteen Diamond Rings v. United States (The Dia- mond Rings) 183 U. S. 176, 46 L. ed. 138, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 59.
197 U. S.

Messrs. Hillary A. Herbert and Benjamin Micou filed a brief for certain claimants having interests similar to those of appellant in No. 466.

Solicitor General Hoyt argued the cause and filed a brief for the United States:

Not until after the formal declaration of the end of the insurrection did hostilities die out in sporadic instances of ladronism or brigandage. The facts are found and are irresistible. Indeed, they are patent to the knowledge of all as part of history. The court will take judicial notice of such events.

Brown v. Piper, 91 U. S. 37, 23 L. ed. 200; The Delaware, 161 U. S. 472, 40 L. ed. 776, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516; New York Indians v. United States, 170 U. S. 32, 42 L. ed. 938, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 531; United States v. Rio Grande Dam & Irrig. Co. 174 U. S. 698, 43 L. ed. 1139, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770.

In the absence of any laws of Congress on this subject, the regulating and collecting of such revenues in enemy's territory in the possession of the United States devolves upon the President, as the constitutional Commander in Chief, and upon the military and naval officers under his direction.

2 Halleck, International Law, 3d ed. pp. 445-449.

These doctrines apply equally to foreign and civil wars.

Matthews v. McStea, 91 U. S. 7, 23 L. ed. 188; 1 Kent, Com. p. 66; 1 Halleck, International Law, p. 527.

The following decisions uphold the right of the Federal authorities to regulate or restrict trade with domestic territory in which a condition of war prevails as a result of insurrection.

United States v. Grossmayer, 9 Wall. 72, 19 L. ed. 627; Hanger v. Abbott, 6 Wall. 532, 18 L. ed. 939; McKee v. United States, 8 Wall. 163, 19 L. ed. 329; Prize Cases, 2 Black, 635, 17 L. ed. 459; Hamilton v. Dilin, 21 Wall. 73, 22 L. ed. 528; The Reform (United States v. The Reform) 3 Wall. 617, 18 L. ed. 105; The Sea Lion (The Sea Lion v. United States) 5 Wall. 630, 18 L. ed. 618; The Ouachita Cotton (Withenbury v. United States) 6 Wall. 521, 18 L. ed. 935; Coppell v. Hall, 7 Wall. 542, 19 L. ed. 244; Mrs. Alexander's Cotton (United States v. Alexander) 2 Wall. 404, 17 L. ed. 915.

The war power embraces, whenever necessary, the authority to raise revenue by imposing taxes.

Lamar v. Browne, 92 U. S. 187, 23 L. ed. 650; New Orleans v. New York Mail & S. S. Co. 20 Wall. 393, 22 L. ed. 357.

A treaty of peace cannot operate instantly to supplant executive acts and orders when, because of any paramount necessity, like the condition of war in the Philippines, that result should not follow.

Leitensdorfer v. Webb, 20 How. 178, 15 L. ed. 891; Hamilton v. Dillin, 21 Wall. 73, 22 L. ed. 528; Cross v. Harrison, 16 How. 190, 14 L. ed. 899.

The attitude of the legislature in approving the executive action under the circumstances is evidence that Congress united with the executive in the opinion that, under the prevailing conditions, the military government was legal and necessary.

Prize Cases, 2 Black, 670, 17 L. ed. 477; Hamilton v. Dillon, 21 Wall. 73, 22 L. ed. 528.

The test always is: Does the legislative body or other agency of government which ratifies possess authority to do the act, or to confer power to do it, in the first instance?

Marsh v. Fulton County, 10 Wall. 676, 19 L. ed. 1040; Norton v. Shelby County, 118 U. S. 451, 30 L. ed. 189, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1121; Sykes v. Columbus, 55 Miss. 137; Grenada County v. Brogden (Grenada County v. Brown) 112 U. S. 261, 28 L. ed. 704, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 125; Brown v. New York, 63 N. Y. 239; State v. Torinus, 26 Minn. 1, 37 Am. Rep. 395, 49 N. W. 259; McMillen v. Boyles, 6 Iowa, 304; Mattingly v. District of Columbia, 97 U. S. 687, 24 L. ed. 1098; Thomson v. Lee County, 3 Wall. 327, 18 L. ed. 177; Campbell v. Kenosha, 5 Wall. 194, 18 L. ed. 610; Marshall County v. Schenck, 5 Wall. 772, 18 L. ed. 713; Gelpcke v. Dubuque, 1 Wall. 175, 202, 17 L. ed. 520, 524; Fleekner v. Bank of United States, 8 Wheat. 338, 363, 5 L. ed. 631, 637.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

These are suits to recover duties exacted from the plaintiffs in error and appellants upon merchandise shipped by them from New York to Manila, and landed at the latter port between April 11, 1899, the date when the ratifications of the treaty with Spain [30 Stat. at L. 1754] were exchanged, and October 25, 1901. The duties were levied under an order of the President dated July 12, 1898. The case of Peabody & Company was decided on demurrer to the answer of the United States, which set up that during the time mentioned there existed an armed insurrection in the Philippine Islands, of such size as to call for military operations by the United States; that, although Manila was in our possession, it was held only by force of arms as a part of hostile territory, and that the President's order was a lawful exercise of the war power of the United States. The district court overruled the demurrer and dismissed the suit. — Fed. —.

The case of Warner, Barnes, & Company was decided on a finding of facts by the court of claims, and that court also dismissed the petition. — Ct. Cl. —. These facts mainly concern the magnitude of the insurrection, and need not be stated.

It will be observed that the President's order relied upon was an order issued during the war with Spain, nine months before the treaty of peace was made. It was a measure taken with reference to that war alone, and not with reference to the insurrection of the native inhabitants of the Philippines, which did not happen until much later. Aguinaldo declared hostilities on February 4, 1899. The natural view would be that the order expired by its own terms when the war with Spain *was at an end. The order directs[428] that "upon the occupation of any forts and places in the Philippine Islands by the forces of the United States" the duties shall be levied and collected "as a military contribution." Of course, this was not a power in blank for any military occasion which might turn up in the future. It was a regulation for and during an existing war, referred to as definitely as if it had been named. See Dooley v. United States, 182 U. S. 222, 234, 235, 45 L. ed. 1074, 1082, 1083, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 762.

However this may be, we are of opinion that the cases before us are governed by the decision in Fourteen Diamond Rings v. United States (The Diamond Rings) 183 U. S. 176, 180, 181, 46 L. ed. 138, 142, 143, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 59. In that case it was decided that after the title passed to the United States there was nothing in the Philippine insurrection of sufficient gravity to give to the islands the character of foreign countries within the meaning of a tariff act. That means that there was no such "firm possession" by an organized hostile power as made Castine a foreign port in the war of 1812. United States v. Rice, 4 Wheat. 246, 254, 4 L. ed. 562, 564. Whatever sway the Philippine government may have had in Luzon, we suppose that probably at any time the United States could have sent a column of a few thousand men to any point on the island, as was stated by the Secretary of War in his report in 1899, and as the United States was willing that the court of claims should find. In the language of the above-mentioned decision: "If those in insurrection against Spain continued in insurrection against the United States, the legal title and possession of the latter remained unaffected."

Apart from the question of the duration of the President's order, it plainly was an order intended to deal with imports from foreign countries only and Philippine ports not in the actual military control of the United States. But even had it been intended to have a wider scope, we do not perceive any ground on which it could have been extended to imports from the United States to Manila,—a port which was continuously in the possession as well as ownership of the United States from the time of the treaty with Spain. Manila was not like Nashville during the Civil War, a part of a [429] state recognized as *belligerent and as having impressed a hostile status upon its entire territory. Hamilton v. Dillin, 21 Wall. 73, 94-96, 22 L. ed. 528, 533, 534. The fact that there was an insurrection of natives not recognized as belligerents in another part of the island, or even just outside its walls, did not give the President power to impose duties on imports from a country no longer foreign. See Dooley v. United States, 182 U. S. 222, 234, 45 L. ed. 1074, 1082, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 762.

We see no sufficient ground for saying that the collection of these duties has been ratified by Congress. The only act needing mention is that of July 1, 1902 (chap. 1369, § 2, 32 Stat. at L. 691, 692, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1903, p. 242). That act ratifies the action of the President "heretofore taken by virtue of the authority vested in him as Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy, as set forth in his order of July 12th, 1898," etc., together with the subsequent amendments to that order. "And the actions of the authorities of the government of the Philippine Islands, taken in accordance with the provisions of said order and subsequent amendments, are hereby approved." Without considering how far the first part of the section extends, the approval of the action of the authorities is confined to those which were in accordance with the provision of the order, which, as we already have intimated, the collection of these duties was not. See, further, De Lima v. Bidwell, 182 U. S. 1, 199, 200, 45 L. ed. 1041, 1057, 1058, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 743.

Judgments reversed.

Leave to file petitions for rehearing on ratification by Congress of collection of duties, granted May 29, 1905.

[430]*LOUISVILLE & NASHVILLE RAILROAD COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.

BARBER ASPHALT PAVING COMPANY and The City of Louisville.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 430-435.)

NOTE.—On the necessity for special benefit to sustain assessments for local improvements—see note to Re Madera Irrig. Dist. Bonds, 14 L. R. A. 755.
197 U. S.

Public improvements—assessment under area rule—lack of benefits as depending on use of property.

The fact that the only use made of a lot abutting on a street improvement is for a railway right of way does not make invalid, under U. S. Const. 14th Amend., for lack of benefits, an assessment thereon for the grading, curbing, and paving, made under the area rule prescribed by Ky. Stat. §§ 2833, 2834.

[No. 170.]

Argued March 7, 8, 1905. Decided April 3, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Court of Appeals of the State of Kentucky to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Jefferson Circuit Court in that state enforcing the lien of an assessment for a street improvement. Affirmed.

See same case below, 25 Ky. L. Rep. 1024, 76 S. W. 1097.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Helm Bruce argued the cause, and, with Messrs. James P. Helm and T. K. Helm, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The only constitutional basis for taxation by special assessment upon selected property, as distinguished from general taxation, is special benefits to the property assessed, accruing from the improvement for which the assessment is made.

2 Dill. Mun. Corp. § 761, subsec. 3; Barnes v. Dyer, 56 Vt. 469; McCormack v. Patchin, 53 Mo. 33, 14 Am. Rep. 440; State, Agens, Prosecutor, v. Newark, 37 N. J. L. 415, 18 Am. Rep. 729; Hammett v. Philadelphia, 65 Pa. 146, 3 Am. Rep. 615; King v. Portland, 38 Or. 402, 55 L. R. A. 812, 63 Pac. 2; Preston v. Roberts, 12 Bush, 587; Norwood v. Baker, 172 U. S. 269, 43 L. ed. 443, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 187; Adams v. Shelbyville, 154 Ind. 467, 49 L. R. A. 797, 77 Am. St. Rep. 484, 57 N. E. 114; Lathrop v. Racine, 119 Wis. 461, 97 N. W. 192; White v. Tacoma, 109 Fed. 32; Sears v. Boston, 173 Mass. 71, 43 L. R. A. 834, 53 N. E. 138; Hutcheson v. Storrrie, 92 Tex. 685, 45 L. R. A. 289, 71 Am. St. Rep. 884, 51 S. W. 848; Schroder v. Overman, 61 Ohio St. 1, 47 L. R. A. 156, 76 Am. St. Rep. 354, 55 N. E. 158; Kersten v. Milwaukee, 106 Wis. 200, 48 L. R. A. 851, 81 N. W. 948, 1103; Smith v. Worcester, 182 Mass. 232, 59 L. R. A. 728, 65 N. E. 40.

The prohibitions of the 14th Amendment to the Federal Constitution, against depriving any person of his property without due process of law, are leveled not only against the legislative department of the state, but run against the judicial and executive departments as well.

Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 233, 41 L. ed. 979, 983, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581.

A railway right of way cannot be assessed with any part of the cost of improving a street, because it is one class of property concerning which it is not possible to indulge the presumption that it is benefited by such an improvement.

Alleghany City v. Western Pennsylvania R. Co. 138 Pa. 375, 21 Atl. 763; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Milwaukee, 89 Wis. 506, 28 L. R. A. 249, 62 N. W. 417; Detroit, G. H. & M. R. Co. v. Grand Rapids, 106 Mich. 13, 28 L. R. A. 793, 58 Am. St. Rep. 466, 63 N. W. 1007; State, New Jersey R. & Transp. Co., Prosecutor, v. Elizabeth, 37 N. J. L. 330; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Ottumwa, 112 Iowa, 300, 51 L. R. A. 763, 83 N. W. 1074.

Messrs. Helm Bruce and James P. Helm also filed a brief for plaintiff in error in opposition to a motion to dismiss or affirm.

Messrs. William Furlong and A. E. Richards argued the cause, and, with Mr. Benjamin F. Washer, filed a brief for defendants in error:

In French v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co. 181 U. S. 324, 45 L. ed. 879, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 625, this court is particular to affirm and reaffirm the validity of those systems of taxation in which the legislature, determining finally and conclusively the question of benefits, prescribes the tax territory to contribute to the cost of local improvements.

Other cases support this proposition.

Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 24 L. ed. 616; Mattingly v. District of Columbia, 97 U. S. 687, 24 L. ed. 1098; Spencer v. Merchant, 125 U. S. 345, 31 L. ed. 763, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 921; Parsons v. District of Columbia, 170 U. S. 45, 42 L. ed. 943, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 521; Fallbrook Irrig. Dist. v. Bradley, 164 U. S. 112, 41 L. ed. 369, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 56; Wight v. Davidson, 181 U. S. 371, 45 L. ed. 900, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 616; Tonawanda v. Lyon, 181 U. S. 389, 45 L. ed. 908, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609; Cass Farm Co. v. Detroit, 181 U. S. 396, 45 L. ed. 914, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644; Webster v. Fargo, 181 U. S. 394, 45 L. ed. 912, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 623; Deroit v. Parker, 181 U. S. 399, 45 L. ed. 917, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 624; King v. Portland, 184 U. S. 61, 46 L. ed. 431, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 290; Chadwick v. Kelley, 187 U. S. 540, 47 L. ed. 293, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 175; Seattle v. Kelleher, 195 U. S. 351, ante, 232, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 44.

The assessment challenged as unconstitutional in the case now submitted is but the enforcement of the settled laws of Kentucky, applied, since the origin of the state, to all persons in like circumstances and under similar conditions.

Lexington v. McQuillan, 9 Dana, 513, 35 Am. Dec. 159; Louisville v. Hyatt, 2 B. Mon. 177, 36 Am. Dec. 594; Louisville v. Louisville Rolling Mill Co. 3 Bush, 424, 96 Am. Dec. 243; Howell v. Bristol, 8 Bush, 498; Loeser v. Redd, 14 Bush, 20; Pearson v. Zable, 78 Ky. 170; Preston v. Rudd, 84 Ky. 150; Barfield v. Gleason, 111 Ky. 491, 63 S. W. 964; Pfaffinger v. Kremer, 115 Ky. 498, 74 S. W. 238; Louisville v. Bitzer, 115 Ky. 359, 61 L. R. A. 434, 73 S. W. 1115.

When a case presents considerations of peculiar and extraordinary hardships amounting, in the opinion of the judges of the court of appeals, to actual confiscation of private property to public use, the Kentucky law affords ample constitutional protection.

See Louisville v. Bitzer, 115 Ky. 359, 61 L. R. A. 434, 73 S. W. 1115; Covington v. Southgate, 15 B. Mon. 491; Louisville v. Louisville Rolling Mill Co. 3 Bush, 416, 96 Am. Dec. 243; Broadway Baptist Church v. McAtee, 8 Bush, 508, 8 Am. Rep. 480; Frantz v. Jacob, 88 Ky. 532, 11 S. W. 654; Preston v. Rudd, 84 Ky. 153.

The same statute now under review has been upheld in this court.

Walston v. Nevin, 128 U. S. 578, 32 L. ed. 544, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192.

The contention of counsel for plaintiff in error, that the perpetual right of way of the railroad is not property to be taxed under the Kentucky law of special assessments, does not present a question determinable in this court.

Commercial Bank v. Buckingham, 5 How. 326, 12 L. ed. 173; Murray v. Gibson, 15 How. 423, 14 L. ed. 756; Guthrie's 14th Amendment, p. 44; Turner v. Wilkes County, 173 U. S. 461, 43 L. ed. 768, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 464; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. McCann, 174 U. S. 580, 43 L. ed. 1093, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 755; Sioux City, O'N. & W. R. Co. v. Manhattan Trust Co. 172 U. S. 642, 43 L. ed. 1180, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 879; Morley v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 146 U. S. 162, 36 L. ed. 925, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 54; Board of Liquidation v. Louisiana, 179 U. S. 622, 45 L. ed. 347, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 263; Arndt v. Griggs, 134 U. S. 316, 33 L. ed. 918, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 557; Merchants' & M. Nat. Bank v. Pennsylvania, 167 U. S. 461, 42 L. ed. 236, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 829.

Railway rights of way are assessable for street improvements.

Ludlow v. Cincinnati Southern R. Co. 78 Ky. 357; Cicero & P. Street R. Co. v. Chicago R. Co. 176 Ill. 501, 52 N. E. 866; Indianapolis & V. R. Co. v. Capitol Paving &

Constr. Co. 24 Ind. App. 114, 54 N. E. 1076; State, Patterson & H. River R. Co. Prosecutor, v. Passaic, 54 N. J. L. 341, 23 Atl. 945; Smith, Modern Law of Mun. Corp. § 1239; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Decatur, 147 U. S. 190, 37 L. ed. 132, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 293.

Messrs. William Furlong, Benjamin F. Washer, and Henry L. Stone also filed a brief for defendants in error on a motion to dismiss or affirm.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a proceeding under the Kentucky Statutes, § 2834, to enforce a lien upon a lot adjoining a part of Frankfort avenue, in Louisville, for grading, curbing, and paving with asphalt the carriage way of that part of the avenue. The defendant, the plaintiff in error, pleaded that its only interest in the lot was a right of way for its main roadbed, and that neither the right of way nor the lot would or could get any benefit from the improvement, but, on the contrary, rather would be hurt by the increase of travel close to the defendant's tracks. On this ground it set up that any special assessment would deny to it the equal protection of the laws, contrary to the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States. It did not object to the absence of the parties having any reversionary interest, but defended against any special assessment on the lot. The answer was demurred to, judgment was rendered for the plaintiff, and this judgment was affirmed by the Kentucky court of appeals. 25 Ky. L. Rep. 1024, 76 S. W. 1097. A writ of error was taken out, and the case was brought to this court. It will be noticed that the case concerns only grading, curbing, and paving, and what we shall have to say is confined to a case of that sort.

The state of Kentucky created this lien by a statute entitled "An Act for the Government of Cities of the First Class." Louisville is the only city of the first class at present in Kentucky, and the general principles of the act are taken verbatim from the part of the charter of Louisville which was considered and upheld by this court in Walston v. Nevin, 128 U. S. 578, 32 L. ed. 544, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192. But we take the statute as a general prospective law, and not as a legislative adjudication concerning a particular place and a particular plan, such as may have existed in Spencer v. Merchant, 125 U. S. 345, 31 L. ed. 763, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 921. and as was thought to exist [433] in Smith v. Worcester, 182 Mass. 232, 59 L. R. A. 728, 65 N. E. 40, referred to at the argument.

The law provides in the case of original construction, such as this improvement was, 197 U. S.

that it shall be made at the exclusive cost of the adjoining owners, to be equally apportioned according to the number of feet owned by them. In the case of a square or subdivision of land bounded by principal streets, which the land including the defendant's lot was held to be (see Cooper v. Nevin, 90 Ky. 85, 13 S. W. 841; Nevin v. Roach, 86 Ky. 492, 499, 5 S. W. 546), the land is assessed half way back from the improvement to the next street. Act of 1898, chap. 48; Ky. Stat. § 2833. A lien is imposed upon the land, and "the general council, or the courts in which suits may be pending, shall make all corrections, rules, and orders to do justice to all parties concerned." § 2834. The principle of this mode of taxation seems to have been familiar in Kentucky for the better part of a hundred years. Lexington v. McQuillan, 9 Dana, 513, 35 Am. Dec. 159.

The argument for the plaintiff in error oscillates somewhat between the objections to the statute and the more specific grounds for contending that it cannot be applied constitutionally to the present case. So far as the former are concerned they are disposed of by the decisions of this court. There is a look of logic when it is said that special assessments are founded on special benefits, and that a law which makes it possible to assess beyond the amount of the special benefit attempts to rise above its source. But that mode of argument assumes an exactness in the premises which does not exist. The foundation of this familiar form of taxation is a question of theory. The amount of benefit which an improvement will confer upon particular land—indeed, whether it is a benefit at all—is a matter of forecast and estimate. In its general aspects, at least, it is peculiarly a thing to be decided by those who make the law. The result of the supposed constitutional principle is simply to shift the burden to a somewhat large taxing district,—the municipality,—and to disguise, rather than to answer, the theoretic *doubt. It is [434] dangerous to tie down legislatures too closely by judicial constructions not necessarily arising from the words of the Constitution. Particularly, as was intimated in Spencer v. Merchant, 125 U. S. 345, 31 L. ed. 763, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 921, it is important for this court to avoid extracting from the very general language of the 14th Amendment a system of delusive exactness in order to destroy methods of taxation which were well known when that amendment was adopted, and which it is safe to say that no one then supposed would be disturbed. It now is established beyond permissible controversy that laws like the one before us are not contrary to the Constitution of the United States. Walston v. Nevin, 128 U. S. 578, 32 L. ed. 544, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192; French v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co. 181 U. S. 324, 45 L. ed. 879, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 625; Webster v. Fargo, 181 U. S. 394, 45 L. ed. 912, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 623; Cass Farm Co. v. Detroit, 181 U. S. 396, 45 L. ed. 914, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644; Detroit v. Parker, 181 U. S. 399, 45 L. ed. 917, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 624; Chadwick v. Kelley, 187 U. S. 540, 543, 544, 47 L. ed. 293-295, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 175; Schaefer v. Werling, 188 U. S. 516, 47 L. ed. 570, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 449; Seattle v. Kelleher, 195 U. S. 351, 358, ante, 232, 235, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 44.

A statute like the present manifestly might lead to the assessment of a particular lot for a sum larger than the value of the benefits to that lot. The whole cost of the improvement is distributed in proportion to area, and a particular area might receive no benefits at all, at least if its present and probable use be taken into account. If that possibility does not invalidate the act, it would be surprising if the corresponding fact should invalidate an assessment. Upholding the act as embodying a principle generally fair and doing as nearly equal justice as can be expected seems to import that if a particular case of hardship arises under it in its natural and ordinary application, that hardship must be borne as one of the imperfections of human things. And this has been the implication of the cases. Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 106, 24 L. ed. 616, 620; Mattingly v. District of Columbia, 97 U. S. 687, 692, 24 L. ed. 1098, 1100; Parsons v. District of Columbia, 170 U. S. 45, 52, 55, 42 L. ed. 943, 946, 947, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 521; Detroit v. Parker, 181 U. S. 399, 400, 45 L. ed. 917, 921, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 624; Chadwick v. Kelley, 187 U. S. 540, 544, 47 L. ed. 293, 294, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 175.

But in this case it is not necessary to stop with these general considerations. The plea plainly means that the improvement [435] *will not benefit the lot, because the lot is occupied for railroad purposes and will continue so to be occupied. Compare Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 257, 258, 41 L. ed. 979, 992, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581. That, apart from the specific use to which this land is devoted, land in a good-sized city generally will get a benefit from having the streets about it paved, and that this benefit generally will be more than the cost, are propositions which, as we already have implied, a legislature is warranted in adopting. But, if so, we are of opinion that the legislature is warranted in going one step further and saying that on the question of benefit or no benefit the land shall be considered simply in its general relations and apart from its particular use. See Illinois C. R. Co. v. Decatur, 147 U. S. 190, 37 L. ed. 132, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 293. On the question of benefits the present use is simply a prognostic, and the plea of prophecy. If an occupant could not escape by professing his desire for solitude and silence, the legislature may make a similar desire fortified by structures equally ineffective. It may say that it is enough that the land could be turned to purposes for which the paving would increase its value. Indeed, it is apparent that the prophecy in the answer cannot be regarded as absolute, even while the present use of the land continues; for no one can say that changes might not make a station desirable at this point; in which case the advantages of a paved street could not be denied. We are not called on to say that we think the assessment fair. But we are compelled to declare that it does not go beyond the bounds set by the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States.

Judgment affirmed.

Mr. Justice Harlan, not having been present at the argument, took no part in the decision.

Mr. Justice White and Mr. Justice Peckham dissent.

*JAMES STILLMAN, Appt., [436]

v.

C. B. COMBE, Independent Executor of the Estate of Stephen Powers, Deceased, C. B. Combe, et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 436-442.)

Federal courts—jurisdiction—ancillary action.

Jurisdiction of a bill which seeks to reach and distribute to the persons found entitled thereto the proceeds of a sale of lands to the United States cannot be entertained by a Federal circuit court on the theory that the cause is ancillary to an action at law to recover the lands from the United States, as occupied without right, in which the rival claimants had united in procuring final judgment in favor of two of their number, leaving their respective interests to be settled by arbitration.

[No. 174.]

Argued March 10, 13, 1905. Decided April 3, 1905.

NOTE.—On ancillary jurisdiction of Federal courts—see note to Rosenbaum Bros. v. Council Bluffs Ins. Co. 3 L. R. A. 190.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of Texas to review a decree granting the relief sought by a bill, jurisdiction of which was entertained on the ground that the cause was ancillary to an action at law. Reversed with directions to make restitution to the appellant, and to dismiss the bill.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. John A. Garver and James M. Beck argued the cause and filed a brief for appellant:

A suit is ancillary when it is supplemental to a previous action or suit, and so connected with it as to form an incident to it and substantially a continuation of it.

Barrow v. Hunton, 99 U. S. 80, 82, 25 L. ed. 407, 408; Marshall v. Holmes, 141 U. S. 589, 597, 35 L. ed. 870, 873, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62; Raphael v. Trask, 194 U. S. 272, 278, 48 L. ed. 973, 978, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 647.

The cases in which suits have been held to be ancillary fall into two general classes.

I. In the following cases the court was in control of the fund at the time of the commencement of the ancillary suit:

Freeman v. Howe, 24 How. 450, 16 L. ed. 749; Milwaukee & M. R. Co. v. Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. (Milwaukee & M. R. Co. v. Soutter) 2 Wall. 609, 17 L. ed. 886; People's Bank v. Calhoun (People's Bank v. Winslow) 102 U. S. 256, 26 L. ed. 101; Krippendorf v. Hyde, 110 U. S. 276, 28 L. ed. 145, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 27; Gumbel v. Pitkin, 124 U. S. 131, 31 L. ed. 374, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 379; Morgan's L. & T. R. & S. S. Co. v. Texas C. R. Co. 137 U. S. 171, 34 L. ed. 625, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 61; Re Tyler, 149 U. S. 164, 37 L. ed. 689, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 785; White v. Ewing, 159 U. S. 36, 40 L. ed. 67, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1018; Baggs v. Martin, 179 U. S. 206, 45 L. ed. 155, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 109; Julian v. Central Trust Co. 193 U. S. 93, 113, 48 L. ed. 629, 639, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399; McBee v. Marietta & N. G. R. Co. 48 Fed. 243; Compton v. Jesup, 15 C. C. A. 397, 31 U. S. App. 486, 68 Fed. 263; New York Commercial Co. v. Francis, 28 C. C. A. 199, 51 U. S. App. 663, 83 Fed. 769; Widaman v. Hubbard, 88 Fed. 806; Davis v. Martin, 51 C. C. A. 27, 113 Fed. 6; Memphis Sav. Bank v. Houchens, 52 C. C. A. 176, 115 Fed. 96; Re Sabin, 18 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 151, Fed. Cas. No. 12,195.

II. The second class of cases, where ancillary bills have been entertained, is where the court is asked to take some action with reference to a previous judgment or decree rendered by it, or with reference to an action still pending and undetermined. There are two different kinds of applications which can be made under this class:

1. To assist in carrying the previous judgment or decree into effect.

2. To correct or modify the previous judgment or decree, or to vacate it on the ground of fraud or mistake, or to enjoin its enforcement, or to enjoin the prosecution of a pending action at law.

Where the previous action was one at law, the method of enforcing the final judgment in it is by a common-law writ. In an action of debt or assumpsit or conversion, the writ is an execution. In an action of ejectment, it is a writ of possession.

A court of equity lends its assistance for the purpose of enforcing a previous judgment in an action at law only where the common-law writ is ineffective,—as, for instance, where property belonging to the judgment debtor and properly applicable to the satisfaction of the judgment is held for his benefit by another or has been fraudulently disposed of by him.

Babcock v. Millard, 4 West. Law Month. 314, Fed. Cas. No. 699; Hatch v. Dorr, 4 McLean, 112, Fed. Cas. No. 6,206; First Nat. Bank v. Turnbull, 16 Wall. 190, 21 L. ed. 296; New Orleans v. Fisher, 180 U. S. 185, 45 L. ed. 485, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 347.

Cases of this character, in which a court of equity is most frequently appealed to, are those where some additional action is essential to make the previous decree of the court in a suit in equity effective. Such cases are the directing of a supplemental account, compelling the performance of some affirmative act or the observance of the terms of the previous decree, etc.

Milwaukee & M. R. Co. v. Chamberlain, 6 Wall. 748, 18 L. ed. 859; Root v. Woolworth, 150 U. S. 401, 37 L. ed. 1123, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 136.

Every court of general jurisdiction has complete control over its own proceedings and over its judgments and decrees during the term at which they are rendered; and at any time before the end of the term, it may set aside or amend them in any manner deemed advisable.

Henderson v. Carbondale Coal & Coke Co. 140 U. S. 25, 40, 35 L. ed. 332, 338, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 691.

But it has no power to do this, upon petition, after the expiration of the term (Bronson v. Schulten, 104 U. S. 410, 26 L. ed. 797; Central Trust Co. v. Grant Locomotive Works, 135 U. S. 207, 34 L. ed. 97, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 736), although, in some states, this power has been extended by statute beyond the term at which the proceedings were held.

But where, owing to the expiration of the term, the court has no power to grant relief upon petition, it will do so upon suit brought for the purpose; and such suit is regarded as dependent or ancillary. The most familiar examples of this class are stockholders' bills to vacate foreclosure decrees against corporations on the ground of collusion, and bills to enjoin the enforcement of judgments or decrees so as to permit a defendant to interpose a defense or counterclaim which was not provable in the original action.

Dunn v. Clarke, 8 Pet. 1, 8 L. ed. 845; Pennock v. Coe, 23 How. 117, 16 L. ed. 436; Jones v. Andrews, 10 Wall. 327, 19 L. ed. 935; Dewey v. West Fairmont Gas Coal Co. 123 U. S. 329, 31 L. ed. 179, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148; Johnson v. Christian, 125 U. S. 642, 31 L. ed. 820, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 989, 1135; Pacific R. Co. v. Missouri P. R. Co. 111 U. S. 505, 28 L. ed. 498, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 583; Carey v. Houston & T. C. R. Co. 161 U. S. 115, 40 L. ed. 638, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 537; Cortes Co. v. Thannhauser, 20 Blatchf. 59, 9 Fed. 226; Symmes v. Union Trust Co. 60 Fed. 830; McDonald v. Seligman, 81 Fed. 753; Brown v. Walker, 84 Fed. 532; Broadis v. Broadis, 86 Fed. 951; Richardson v. Loree, 36 C. C. A. 301, 94 Fed. 375; Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Leland, 38 How. Pr. 31, Fed. Cas. No. 9,452; Dunlap v. Stetson, 4 Mason, 349, Fed. Cas. No. 4,164; Thompson v. McReynolds, 29 Fed. 657.

Mr. Fred Beall argued the cause, and, with Mr. C. L. Bates, filed a brief for appellees:

The circuit court in which the consent judgment was rendered is vested with ancillary jurisdiction to entertain this suit in equity for the purposes of granting to the parties to the former suit and their privies equitable relief against the aforesaid unjust, inequitable, and fraudulent use of said judgment and the process of the court that rendered it, and the violation of said contract, and the breach of said trust; and to determine the conflicting claims of the parties to said fund; and to compel appellant to account for the trust fund converted by him and pay the same over to the parties found to be entitled to it, and to secure to the parties the fruits, benefits, and advantages of the proceedings and judgment in the former suit; and to regulate the operation of said judgment by ingrafting a trust upon it.

Krippendorf v. Hyde, 110 U. S. 276, 287, 28 L. ed. 145, 149, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 27; Pacific R. Co. v. Missouri P. R. Co. 111 U. S. 505, 28 L. ed. 498, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 583; New Orleans v. Fisher, 180 U. S. 185, 199, 45 L. ed. 485, 492, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 347; Pennock v. Coe, 23 How. 117, 16 L. ed. 436; Clarke v. Mathewson, 12 Pet. 164, 9 L. ed. 1041; Dunn v. Clarke, 8 Pet. 1, 8 L. ed. 845; Jones v. Andrews, 10 Wall. 327, 19 L. ed. 935; Root v. Woolworth, 150 U. S. 401, 37 L. ed. 1123, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 136; Freeman v. Howe, 24 How. 450, 16 L. ed. 749; Mil- waukee & M. R. Co. v. Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. (Milwaukee & M. R. Co. v. Soutter) 2 Wall. 609, 645, 17 L. ed. 886, 900; Hatch v. Dorr, 4 McLean, 112, Fed. Cas. No. 6,206; Babcock v. Millard, 4 West. Law Month. 314, Fed. Cas. No. 699; Dunlap v. Stetson, 4 Mason, 349, Fed. Cas. No. 4,164; Cortes Co. v. Thannhauser, 20 Blatchf. 59, 9 Fed. 226; Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Leland, 38 How. Pr. 31, Fed. Cas. No. 9,452; Thompson v. McReynolds, 29 Fed. 657; Lamb v. Ewing, 4 C. C. A. 320, 12 U. S. App. 11, 54 Fed. 272; First Nat. Bank v. Turnbull, 16 Wall. 190, 21 L. ed. 296.

Mr. J. D. Childs also argued the cause and filed a brief for appellees:

This suit is undoubtedly an ancillary one.

Carey v. Houston & T. C. R. Co. 161 U. S. 113, 40 L. ed. 638, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 537; Krippendorf v. Hyde, 110 U. S. 276, 28 L. ed. 145, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 27; 2 Thompson's ed. Supp. Rose's Notes 1905, p. 605.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an appeal from a decree of the circuit court, upon the single question of the jurisdiction of that court. The jurisdiction was sustained de bene, on appeal from a preliminary *injunction, by the circuit [439] court of appeals. 29 C. C. A. 660, 52 U. S. App. 622, 86 Fed. 202. It is certified that jurisdiction was entertained solely upon the ground that this cause is ancillary to an action at law and the final judgment rendered therein. If that ground fails, it is apparent from the record, and is not disputed, that there is no other. To decide the case it is not necessary to consider anything except the allegations of the bill, and a large part of those may be laid on one side as not material to the question here.

The purpose of the bill is to reach and distribute, to the parties found entitled to the same, the proceeds of a sale to the United States of land which the defendants Stillman (the appellant) and Carson, as administrator, recovered in the above-mentioned action at law. The land was occupied without right by the United States as part of the Fort Brown military reservation, and on March 3, 1885, Congress appropriated $160,000 to pay for the land and its use and occupation, but not until a complete title should be vested in the United States, the full amount of the price to be paid directly to the owners of the property. The next year certain claimants brought suit for the land, in a state court, against Colonel Kellogg, the officer in command of the reservation. The suit was removed to the United States circuit court, the United States intervened, and, for the purpose of settling the title, set up outstanding rights in third persons. Other known claimants, including Stillman and Carson, as administrator, each of whom claimed an undivided half, became or were made parties. By the local practice the respective shares of the parties might have been determined in the action as well as the principal question of the right of all or some of them to recover from Colonel Kellogg. But on July 13, 1887, most, although not all, of the claimants, including Stillman and Carson, made an agreement on which the jurisdiction in the present cause is based.

This agreement recited that the case was likely to be tried the next day, that it was [440] apprehended that unless a perfect title could be adjudged to some of the parties there was danger of losing the appropriation, that in the time available there was little chance of an accurate adjudication of all rights, that it was primarily desirable to have a judgment which would be satisfactory to the department at Washington, and secondarily, to agree on a method of working out the exact rights of the parties, after judgment, conveyance to the government by those adjudicated to be owners, and payment of the money. It also recited the claims of others not parties to the agreement, and the belief of the contractors that those claims would fail at the trial. Therefore it was agreed that the parties to the contract would unite in procuring a judgment for the whole property in favor of Stillman and Carson, administrator, that upon its being procured a conveyance should be made by the said owners to the government, and a warrant for the price upon the Treasurer of the United States obtained from the Secretary of War. After a preliminary payment, the rest of the money was to be deposited in a named bank in Galveston, to the credit of three arbitrators, also named. The parties to the agreement submitted their claims to these arbitrators, with somewhat blind provisions for substitution, and the arbitrators were to give their checks upon the fund to those whom they found entitled, for the sums found due.

The next day after this agreement was made, on July 14, 1887, a verdict was rendered for Stillman and Carson, administrator, one undivided half to each, and judgment was entered upon the same, both, it is alleged, by consent of parties. But the next steps contemplated by the agreement did not follow as quickly as anticipated. Without any fault of Stillman and Carson, they did not get their pay and deliver the deed until April, 1895,—nearly eight years later. At that time, according to Stillman's answer, at all events, before June 14, 1897, when this bill was filed, according to the allegations of the bill, one of the arbitrators named was dead, and another refused to act, so that the arbitration agreed upon was impossible in its original form. It also appears from the decree *that Stillman [441] had expended large sums in collecting the money from the United States. The bill alleges that Stillman and Carson fraudulently appropriated to their own use the whole fund of $160,000 received from the United States. It further alleges that they are conspiring fraudulently to prevent a decision by arbitration, as agreed, and fraudulently are using the judgment to deprive the true owners of their rights. On these allegations the bill seeks not to have the arbitration carried out, but to obtain a distribution of the fund by the court.
197 U. S. U. S., Book 49.

We are somewhat at a loss to add anything to a statement of the case to show how utterly without foundation is the claim of jurisdiction over this bill as an ancillary suit. The bill does not seek either to disturb the judgment or to have anything done towards carrying it out. The judgment was satisfied, and the functions of the court in the former case were at an end, when the land was recovered. Stillman and Carson cannot be using it fraudulently or in any other way. Its uses all are over. The court had nothing to do with the subsequent sale of the land, and still less with the distribution of the purchase money when the sale was made. There neither was nor ought to have been any fund in court. It may be that the judgment would not have been the same but for the agreement of some of the parties upon those matters. But the bill does not allege that it was obtained by fraud, and, as we have said, does not seek to set it aside. The agreement no doubt put Stillman and Carson in a position of trust, but, no matter to whom it was known, it did not make Stillman and Carson trustees of the court, as they are called in the bill. It did not extend the duties of the court beyond the recovery of the land to seeing that the parties who recovered it, in case of a subsequent sale, should pay over in due proportion to those equitably entitled. The parties gave up their right to have the court decide who had rights in the land, and the extent of their shares, and substituted a contract and a decision out of court. They still rely upon the contract, and they must be left to their remedy upon it.

*It is suggested that the affirmance by the [442] circuit court of appeals of an interlocutory decree appointing a receiver, and issuing a preliminary injunction against Stillman and Carson using the judgment for the purpose of depriving the other parties in interest of their rights in the $160,000, in some way prejudices the present appeal. It is enough to say that the action of the circuit court of appeals was on the appeal of Carson alone, Stillman not having appeared in the action.

Decree reversed, with directions to make restitution to the appellant, and to dismiss the bill.

H. HACKFELD & COMPANY, Limited,
Petitioner,
v.
UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 442-453.)

Agreed case—stipulation of ultimate fact—immigration—shipowner's duty to detain and deport immigrants.

1. A stipulation of the parties that the escape of immigrants who had been received on board a steamship for deportation to the port from whence they came could not have been reasonably anticipated by the master or officers, and did not occur by reason of any negligence or want of proper care upon their part, is as binding on the courts as the specific evidentiary facts set out in such stipulation.
2. Shipowners who have wrongfully brought aliens into the United States, and have received them back on board the vessel for deportation, are not made absolute insurers of the return of the immigrants to the port from whence they came, by the act of March 3, 1891, § 10 (26 Stat. at L. 1084, chap. 551, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1299), punishing as a misdemeanor the "neglect" to detain the persons so received, or to return them to that port; but nothing more is required than a faithful and careful effort to carry out the duty so imposed.

[No. 164.]

Argued March 6, 1905. Decided April 3, 1905.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit to review a judgment which affirmed a conviction in the District Court for the District of Hawaii of a neglect to return to the port from whence they came certain immigrants unlawfully brought into the United States. Reversed and remanded to the District Court, with instructions to discharge the petitioner.

See same case below, 60 C. C. A. 428, 125 Fed. 596.

Statement by Mr. Justice Day:

[443] *This case is here on writ of certiorari to the circuit court of appeals for the ninth circuit, to review a judgment of that court affirming a judgment of the district court for the district of Hawaii, in which the petitioner, Hackfeld & Company, was adjudged guilty of a violation of § 10 of the act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 1084, chap. 551, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1299), and to pay a fine of $600, for neglecting to return to the port from whence they came, Yokohama, Japan, two certain Japanese immigrants unlawfully in the United States, in violation of the act of Congress. The conviction was upon information filed and trial had to the court, a jury having been waived, and upon a stipulated finding of facts, agreed upon by the attorney for the United States and the petitioner. After statements as to the corporate character of the defendant company, and that it was the agent of the steamship Korea, a vessel plying between the state of California and the Empire of Japan, it is stipulated that the vessel brought into the port of San Francisco, in the United States, two certain Japanese immigrants from Yokohama, Japan, on October 28, 1902; that on the following day, October 29, 1902, the said Japanese were denied admission into the United States by the board of special inquiry at the port of San Francisco, and the said board, being duly appointed and authorized in the premises, ordered the deportation of the said Japanese immigrants. That on the 7th day of November, 1902, the said Japanese were received on board the vessel Korea for transportation to Japan. The stipulation then recites the following facts:

"That on the 12th day of November, A. D. 1902, the said steamship Korea did arrive at the port of Honolulu, in the district and territory of Hawaii; that at the time of the arrival of said steamship Korea at said port of Honolulu the said immigrants were still on board of said vessel; that said Japanese immigrants, together with certain deported Chinese, were placed in a room on board said vessel and locked up by the steerage steward of said vessel; at 12 o'clock midnight of said 12th day of November, A. D. 1902, said Japanese were still *on board[444] said vessel in said room; that between that time and 5 o'clock on the morning of the 13th day of November, A. D. 1902, said Japanese had effected their escape; that the only method of egress was through portholes, which were nearly 25 feet above the water; that this method of escape could not have been reasonably anticipated by the master, or officers, or agents of said steamship Korea; that said escape did not occur by vis major, or inevitable accident; and that said escape did not occur by reason of any negligence or lack of proper care on the part of the officers of the vessel or said defendant.

"That the said defendant made search for said escaped immigrants, but up to the present time have not apprehended the said immigrants, and said immigrants have not been returned to Japan."

From the conviction in the lower court upon these stipulated facts a writ of error was taken to the circuit court of appeals for the ninth circuit. In that court, without passing upon the question whether the statute justified conviction without proof of negligence, it was held that the judgment of conviction should be affirmed because the facts recited left room for the inference that the petitioner was found guilty of negligence in putting the Japanese in the room without taking the necessary precautions against escape through the portholes. The stipulation that the escape did not occur by reason of negligence or lack of proper care on the part of the officers of the vessel it was held did not bind the court, nor prevent it from placing upon the facts stipulated the construction which, in its judgment, they should properly receive. 60 C. C. A. 428, 125 Fed. 596.

Mr. Maxwell Evarts argued the cause and filed a brief for petitioner:

The trial court was bound by the stipulation of the parties.

Raimond v. Terrebonne Parish, 132 U. S. 192, 194, 33 L. ed. 309, 310, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 57; Wilson v. Merchants' Loan & T. Co. 183 U. S. 121, 128, 46 L. ed. 113, 116, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 55.

The relation of the trial court to a stipulation of facts is not unlike the attitude of an appellate court in reference to the findings of the court below. If the lower court finds the ultimate facts in the case, then the appellate court is necessarily bound by such findings, and cannot overcome it by claiming that the evidential facts show such finding to be wrong.

Dooley v. Pease, 31 C. C. A. 582, 60 U. S. App. 248, 88 Fed. 446, 180 U. S. 126, 45 L. ed. 457, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 308; Wayne County v. Kennicott, 103 U. S. 554, 20 L. ed. 486.

Penal statutes should be construed strictly.

United States v. Wiltberger, 5 Wheat. 95, 5 L. ed. 42.

Assistant Attorney General Robb argued the cause and filed a brief for respondent:

Where the facts are undisputed, admitted, or conclusively proved, negligence is a question of law for the court.

21 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 506; Grand Trunk R. Co. v. Ives, 144 U. S. 408, 36 L. ed. 485, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 679; Elliott v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 150 U. S. 245, 37 L. ed. 1068, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 85; Union P. R. Co. v. McDonald, 152 U. S. 262, 38 L. ed. 434, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 619; Southern P. Co. v. Pool, 160 U. S. 438, 40 L. ed. 485, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 338.

197 U. S.

It is well settled at common law that an officer who keeps a prisoner so negligently that he escapes is answerable for his neglect as a crime.

1 Bishop, Crim. Law, ed. 1865, § 392; 2 Bishop, Crim. Law, ed. 1865, § 1056; 1 Russell, Crimes, 8th Am. ed. 420; Smith v. Com. 59 Pa. 325.

The transportation company having been the custodian of these alien immigrant prisoners, and having permitted them to escape, negligence was to be presumed. The court was clearly right, upon the admitted facts, in ruling that defendant was guilty of negligence.

San Francisco Lumber Co. v. Bibb, 139 Cal. 325, 73 Pac. 864; Berkshire v. Missouri P. R. Co. 28 Mo. App. 225; Graves v. Alsap, 1 Ariz. 274, 25 Pac. 836; Detroit v. Beckman, 34 Mich. 125, 22 Am. Rep. 507; Murphy v. People, 3 Colo. 147; Atty. Gen. v. Rice, 64 Mich. 385, 31 N. W. 203; Jones v. Madison County, 72 Miss. 777, 18 So. 87; Holms v. Johnston, 12 Heisk. 155; Happel v. Brethauer, 70 Ill. 166, 22 Am. Rep. 70.

The admission of specific facts nullifies a reservation denying their legal effect.

20 Enc. Pl. & Pr. 661; Haight v. Green, 19 Cal. 113.

The contemporaneous and long-continued practice of officers required to execute or take special cognizance of a statute is strong evidence of its true meaning, and should not be disregarded except for cogent reasons.

26 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 635; Stuart v. Laird, 1 Cranch, 299, 2 L. ed. 115; Edwards v. Darby, 12 Wheat. 206, 6 L. ed. 603; United States v. State Bank, 6 Pet. 29, 8 L. ed. 308; Cooley v. Port Wardens, 12 How. 299, 13 L. ed. 996; Union Ins. Co. v. Hoge, 21 How. 35, 16 L. ed. 61; Havemeyer v. Iowa County, 3 Wall. 294, 18 L. ed. 38; United States v. Gilmore, 8 Wall. 330, 19 L. ed. 396; United States v. Moore, 95 U. S. 760-763, 24 L. ed. 588, 589; United States v. Johnston, 124 U. S. 236-253, 31 L. ed. 389, 396, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 446; Pennoyer v. McConnaughy, 140 U. S. 1-23, 35 L. ed. 363-370, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 699; Burrow-Giles Lithographic Co. v. Sarony, 111 U. S. 53, 28 L. ed. 349, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 279; Brown v. United States, 113 U. S. 568, 28 L. ed. 1079, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 648; The Laura (Pollock v. Bridgeport S. B. Co.) 114 U. S. 411, 29 L. ed. 147, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 881; United States v. Philbrick, 120 U. S. 52, 30 L. ed. 559, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 413; United States v. Hill, 120 U. S. 169, 30 L. ed. 627, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 510; Schell v. Fauche, 138 U. S. 572, 34 L. ed. 1043, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 376; Heath v. Wallace, 138 U. S. 573, 34 L. ed. 1063, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 380; United States v. Alabama G. S. R. Co. 142 U. S. 615, 35 L. ed. 1134, 12

Sup. Ct. Rep. 306; Swift's Case, 14 Ct. Cl. 208.

While it is true that penal statutes should be construed strictly, it is equally true that they will be construed so as to give effect to the legislative intent, and where that intent is clear, courts will not construe a statute with such technicality as to defeat its purpose.

United States v. Hartwell, 6 Wall. 385-397, 18 L. ed. 830-833; Hawaii v. Mankichi, 190 U. S. 197, 47 L. ed. 1016, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 787; Johnson v. Southern P. Co. 195 U. S. 1, ante, 65, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 158; United States v. Lacher, 134 U. S. 624, 33 L. ed. 1080, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 625; Bolles v. Outing Co. 175 U. S. 262, 44 L. ed. 156, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 94; O'Grady v. Wiseman, Rap. Jud. Quebec, 9 B. R. 169, 3 Can. Crim. Cas. 332; Indianapolis v. Huegele, 115 Ind. 581, 18 N. E. 172; State v. McCrystol, 43 La. Ann. 907, 9 So. 922; State v. Glaudi, 43 La. Ann. 914, 9 So. 925; State v. Archer, 73 Md. 44, 20 Atl. 172; Stricker v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 60 N. J. L. 230, 37 Atl. 776; State v. Godfrey, 97 N. C. 507, 1 S. E. 779; Hardwick v. Vermont Teleph. & Teleg. Co. 70 Vt. 180, 40 Atl. 169.

When an act or part thereof which has received a judicial interpretation is re-enacted in the same terms, or where words used in a statute have a definite and well-known meaning in law, that construction or that meaning must be considered to have the sanction of the legislature unless the contrary appears.

26 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 650; United States v. Central P. R. Co. 118 U. S. 235, 30 L. ed. 173, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1038; United States v. Le Bris, 121 U. S. 278, 30 L. ed. 946, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 894; United States v. Mooney, 116 U. S. 104-106, 29 L. ed. 550, 551, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 304; The Devonshire, 8 Sawy. 209, 13 Fed. 39; Rutland v. Mendon, 1 Pick. 154; 44 Am. Dig. col. 2865.

The word "neglect" is used here in its ordinary sense, and means to omit.

2 Bouvier, Dict. Neglect, 478; Rosenplaenter v. Roessle, 54 N. Y. 262; Merrifield v. Cobleigh, 4 Cush. 178; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Billings, 7 Kan. App. 399, 52 Pac. 61; Willoughby v. Willoughby, 9 Q. B. 923; Leslie v. Lorillard, 31 Hun, 305; Daniels v. Ellison, 3 N. H. 279.

Mr. Justice Day, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

The circuit court of appeals disposed of this case upon the view that the judgment of conviction would have been warranted upon the evidentiary facts stipulated, and that the stipulation, in so far as it stated that the escape of the immigrants could not have been reasonably anticipated by the master or officers of the steamship, and did not occur by reason of any negligence or want of proper care upon their part, was the statement of a mere conclusion not binding upon the court, and would not prevent it from rendering an independent judgment upon the facts stated. We cannot take this view of the case. It may be conceded that where the facts are all stated the court cannot be concluded by a stipulation of the parties as to the legal conclusions to be drawn therefrom, but we know no rule of public policy which will prevent the United States attorney from stipulating with the defendant in a case of this character as to the ultimate facts in the controversy. It is to be presumed that such an officer will do his duty to the government, and not stipulate away the rights of the prosecution. The question of negligence in a given case is not usually reduced to one of law, and, as is the case here, its presence or absence is the ultimate question to be decided between the parties. Ordinarily, the issue of negligence is one of fact to be determined *by the jury.[447] This proposition has been so often adjudicated in this court that it is only necessary to refer to the cases in passing. It has been held that, where there is no reasonable doubt as to the facts or the inference to be drawn from them, the question becomes one of law. Where the state of facts is such that reasonable minds may fairly differ upon the question as to whether there was negligence or not, its determination is a matter of fact for the jury to decide. Grand Trunk R. Co. v. Ives, 144 U. S. 408-417, 36 L. ed. 485-489, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 679; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Griffith, 159 U. S. 603-611, 40 L. ed. 274-278, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 105; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Gentry, 163 U. S. 353-368, 41 L. ed. 186-193, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1104; Warner v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 168 U. S. 339, 42 L. ed. 491, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 68.

The evidentiary facts in the stipulation upon which this case was tried are not very fully set forth, and the government and the defendant were content to stipulate that the method of escape through the portholes (assuming that it was by this means the immigrants escaped) could not have been reasonably anticipated by those in charge of the Korea, and that the escape did not occur by reason of any negligence or lack of proper care upon the part of the officers of the vessel or the defendant.

We think the parties were entitled to have this case tried upon the assumption that these ultimate facts, stipulated into the record, were established, no less than the specific facts recited.

We come, then, to the important question in this case, as to the construction of the statute under which the petitioner was convicted and fined. The conviction was under § 10 of the act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 1084, chap. 551, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1299), which is as follows:

"Sec. 10. That all aliens who may unlawfully come to the United States shall, if practicable, be immediately sent back on the vessel by which they were brought in. The cost of their maintenance while on land, as well as the expense of the return of such aliens, shall be borne by the owner or owners of the vessels on which such aliens came; and if any master, agent, consignee, or owner of such vessel shall refuse to receive [448] back *on board the vessel such aliens, or shall neglect to detain them thereon, or shall refuse or neglect to return them to the port from which they came, or to pay the cost of their maintenance while on land, such master, agent, consignee, or owner shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished by a fine of not less than three hundred dollars for each and every offense; and any such vessel shall not have clearance from any port of the United States while any such fine is unpaid."

The question is as to the effect of this requirement upon shipowners who have wrongfully brought aliens into this country, and who, having received them on board the vessel for the purpose of returning them to the place from whence they came, shall neglect to detain them thereon, or neglect to return them. In this case the court found the defendants guilty as charged in the information, in that they refused and neglected to return to the port from whence they came the two Japanese immigrants. It is the contention of the government that this statute requires of persons situated as were the defendants the absolute duty of returning to the place from whence they came immigrants unlawfully brought into the ports of the United States; and that the word "neglect," as used in this statute, is equivalent to the word "fail" or "omit," and the return of the immigrants is required at all hazards, and the vessel owner will only be relieved when the default is the result of vis major, or inevitable accident. This contention finds support in the case of Warren v. United States, 7 C. C. A. 368, 5 U. S. App. 656, 58 Fed. 559, decided in November, 1893, in the circuit court of appeals for the first circuit, in which § 10 of the act of March 3, 1891, was directly under consideration. We are cited to no other cases construing this section, wherein it was directly involved, although in United States v. Spruth, 71 Fed. 678, a case in the district court for the eastern district of Pennsylvania, involving the 8th section of the same act, Judge Butler criticized the decision in the War- ren Case, and expressed doubts as to the construction therein given to the language of a criminal statute. The word "neglect," *as [449] sometimes used, imports an absence of care or attention in the doing or omission of a given act, or it may be used in the sense of an omission or failure to perform some act. To "neglect" is not always synonymous with to "omit." Whether the use of the term is intended to express carelessness or lack of attention required by the circumstances, or to express merely a failure to do a given thing, depends upon the connection in which the term is used and on the meaning intended to be expressed. These meanings find illustration in the lexical definition of the word, as well as the adjudicated cases in which it has been construed when applied to different subjects. In Webster's Dictionary the verb "neglect" is defined as meaning "not to attend to with due care or attention; to forbear one's duty in regard to; to suffer to pass unimproved, unheeded, undone." In the Standard Dictionary the word is defined as meaning "to fail to perform through carelessness." And in the Century Dictionary: "1. To treat carelessly or heedlessly; forbear to attend to or treat with respect; be remiss in attention or duty toward; . . . 2. To overlook or omit; disregard. . . . 3. To omit to do or perform; let slip; leave undone; fail through heedlessness to do or in doing (something)."
197 U. S.

As defined in the penal statutes of several of the states, the word "neglect" is said to import "a want of such attention to the nature or probable consequences of the act or omission as a prudent man ordinarily bestows in acting in his own concerns." Words and Phrases Judicially Defined, vol. 5, p. 4740.

While the term may be used as indicative of carelessness, it may also merely mean an omission or failure to do or perform a given act. This meaning finds illustration in the case of Rosenpluenter v. Roessle, 54 N. Y. 262, 266, in which a guest at a hotel who failed to deposit his valuables for safe-keeping, as required by the statute, was held to have "neglected" to deposit within the meaning of the law, for, having the opportunity so to do, he omitted to avail himself of this means of safe-keeping. An illustration of the meaning of the term when indicative *of a want of care is found in Wat- [450] son v. Hall, 46 Conn. 204, 206, in which case it was held that in a statute by which a grand juror is made subject to prosecution when he shall neglect to make seasonable complaint of a crime, the word "neglect" was construed to be used in the sense of omission from carelessness to do something that can be done and that ought to be done, and the grand juror was held not to have neglected the complaint when, after investigation, he had become convinced that the offense should not be prosecuted.

In which sense is the term used in this statute? This is a highly penal statute, and we think the well-known rule, as laid down by Mr. Chief Justice Marshall in the case of United States v. Wiltberger, 5 Wheat. 76, 95, 5 L. ed. 37, 42, is applicable here:

"The rule that penal laws are to be construed strictly is, perhaps, not much less old than construction itself. It is founded on the tenderness of the law for the rights of individuals, and on the plain principle that the power of punishment is vested in the legislative, not in the judicial, department. It is the legislature, not the court, which is to define a crime and ordain its punishment."

It is true that in the construction of penal statutes, as well as others, the object and purpose is to ascertain the correct meaning of the act, with a view to carrying out the expressed intent of the legislature, and penal statutes are not to be construed so strictly as to defeat the obvious intention of the legislature. United States v. Lacher, 134 U. S. 624, 33 L. ed. 1080, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 625. We are to search for the true meaning of this statute, remembering that it undertakes to define an offense which is not to be broadened by judicial construction so as to include acts not intended by Congress. The statute imposes upon one who has brought immigrants into the United States not permitted to land here the duty of returning them to the place from whence they came, with a penalty by fine in case the duty is neglected. If by this requirement it was intended to make the shipowner or master an insurer of the absolute return of the immigrant, at all hazards, except when excused by vis major, or inevitable

[451] *accident, it would seem that Congress would have chosen terms more clearly indicative of such intention, and, instead of using a word of uncertain meaning, would have affixed the penalty in cases wherein the owner or master omitted or failed to safely return the immigrant illegally brought here, or provided some punishment for the person who had so far complied with the terms of the statute as to receive the immigrant on board his vessel, but had permitted the escape, either with or without fault upon his part. Where the statute permits of a construction which does not require this absolute insurance of the return of the immigrant, but holds the shipowner to the care and diligence required by the circumstances, we do not feel inclined to adopt the construction least favorable to the accused. This statute imports a duty, and, in the absence of a requirement that it shall be performed at all hazards, we think no more ought to be required than a faithful and careful effort to carry out the duty imposed.

830

It is urged by the government that in view of the re-enactment of § 10 as § 19 of the act of 1903 (32 Stat. at L. 1213, chap. 1012, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1903, p. 179), it is to receive a construction in harmony with the judicial interpretation given to the act before the revision. While recognizing the rule that doubtful terms which have acquired through judicial interpretation a well-understood legislative meaning are presumed to be used by the legislature in the sense determined by authoritative decisions—The Abbotsford (The Abbotsford v. Johnson), 98 U. S. 440, 25 L. ed. 168—we do not think the rule applies to this case. So far as we know, there has been but one decision, in the Warren Case, 7 C. C. A. 368, 5 U. S. App. 656, 58 Fed. 559, which was doubted in the Spruth Case, 71 Fed. 678. In 1900 the construction of this act was under consideration by the Attorney General of the United States upon a question submitted by the Secretary of the Treasury, involving the remission of fines to which the owner or master of a vessel was supposed to be liable under the terms of the act now under consideration. In construing § 10 of the act the Attorney General said:

"But while I assume nothing relative to the facts in this *case, with which it is [452] your duty to deal, and not mine. I am clearly of the opinion that in a case where every precaution to detain in safe custody and prevent escape has been rigidly taken, and yet in some real and unforeseen emergency an escape has occurred, there is no such neglect as the act contemplates. If the question were regarded otherwise, the act would rather have said, 'if any such alien shall escape from such vessel, such master shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished.'" 23 Ops. Atty. Gen. p. 277.

In this state of judicial and official opinion we do not think this act can be said to have received such judicial interpretation as should control its legislative meaning. We think the Attorney General, in the case cited, laid down the true rule, which does not make the shipowner the insurer, at all hazards, of the safe return of the immigrant, but does require every precaution to detain him and prevent his escape.

It is further urged by the government that, if the burden of proof in cases under this act is placed upon the prosecution, it will be impossible to convict, as the facts and circumstances under which the escape took place are within the knowledge of the defendants alone. We are not dealing with the question of burden of proof in this case, for here it is expressly stipulated that the defendants could not have anticipated the escape by the method employed, and were not guilty of any want of care in the premises. Undoubtedly, the act of Congress should be given a reasonable interpretation, with a view to effect its purpose to prevent the introduction into this country of classes of persons excluded by the immigration laws. If this act should be construed as requiring the return, at all hazards, of the immigrants, those who are required to perform its mandate will doubtless claim the right to use all the force necessary to avoid the penalty of the law in delivering the immigrant to the country or place from whence he came. What would be the result of such power it is easy to imagine. It is difficult to see how a shipowner could insure the return [453] of such immigrants *without such confinement or imprisonment as may result in great hardship to that class of individuals who may themselves have had no intention to violate any law of this country. We think this statute was intended to secure, not the delivery of the immigrant at all hazards, but to require good faith and full diligence to carry him back to the port from whence he came. It follows that the judgment of the Circuit Court of Appeals must be reversed, and the cause remanded to the District Court, with instructions to discharge the petitioner.

197 U. S.

NEW ORLEANS GASLIGHT COMPANY,
Plff. in Err.,
v.

DRAINAGE COMMISSION OF NEW ORLEANS, The Sewerage & Water Board, Successors, Substituted.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 453-462.)

Contracts—impairment of obligation—due process of law—requiring gas company to bear cost of changing mains to suit city drainage system.

1. The imposition on a gas company of the cost of changes in the location of its pipes and mains under the city streets, necessitated by the construction of the municipal drainage system authorized by La. act July 9, 1896, does not impair any contract rights acquired under its exclusive franchise to supply gas to the city and its inhabitants through pipes and mains laid in the city streets.

2. A gas company has no such property right in the location of its pipes and mains laid under an exclusive franchise to supply gas to the city and its inhabitants, as to make the imposition upon it of the cost of changes in the location of such pipes and mains, necessitated by the construction of the municipal drainage system authorized by La. act July 9, 1896, a taking of property without due compensation.

[No. 172.]

Argued March 8, 9, 1905. Decided April 3, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Louisiana to review a judgment which on rehearing affirmed the judgment of the Civil District Court of the Parish of Orleans in that state denying the right of a gas company to recover the sums paid out for making the changes in the location of its pipes and mains necessitated by the construction of a municipal drainage system. Affirmed.

See same case below, 111 La. 838, 35 So. 929.

Statement by Mr. Justice Day:

The New Orleans Gaslight & Banking Company was incorporated in 1835, and was given the exclusive privilege of vending gas in the city of New Orleans and its faubourgs and the city of La. Fayette, to such persons or bodies corporate as might voluntarily choose to contract for the same; and it *was permitted to lay pipes and conduits at its own expense in the public ways and streets of New Orleans, having due regard for the public convenience. In 1845 and 1854 the charter of the company as to its right to engage in banking was withdrawn, and the right to vend gas and use the streets was continued to the corporation under the name of the New Orleans Gaslight Company until April 1, 1875, when its corporate privileges should end, the com-

NOTE.—On the privilege of using streets as a contract within the constitutional provision against impairing the obligation of contracts—see note to Clarksburg Electric Light Co. v. Clarksburg, 50 L. R. A. 142.

As to what laws are void as impairing obligation of contracts—see notes to Franklin County Grammar School v. Bailey, 10 L. R. A. 405; Fletcher v. Peck, 3 L. ed. U. S. 162; McCanna v. Citizens' Trust & Surety Co. 24 C. C. A. 20; and Montana Ore-Purchasing Co. v. Boston & 197 U. S.

M. Consol. Copper & S. Min. Co. 35 C. C. A. 12.

As to what constitutes due process of law—see Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L. R. A. 655, and note; Re Gannon, 5 L. R. A. 359, and note; Ulman v. Baltimore, 11 L. R. A. 224, and note; and Gilman v. Tucker, 13 L. R. A. 304, and note. And see notes to People v. O'Brien, 2 L. R. A. 255; Pearson v. Yewdall, 24 L. ed. U. S. 436; and Wilson v. North Carolina, 42 L. ed. U. S. 865.

pany during the continuance of its charter to furnish the Charity Hospital with necessary gas and fixtures free of charge. By amendments the contract privilege of the company was extended until April 1, 1895, the exclusive privileges granted by the original charter not to extend beyond the time fixed in the act of incorporation. In 1870 another company, under the name of the Crescent City Gaslight Company, was incorporated, its charter providing that the company, its successors, and assigns, should for fifty years from the expiration of the charter of the New Orleans Gaslight Company have the sole and exclusive privilege of making and supplying gaslight in the city of New Orleans, and for that purpose be allowed to lay pipes and conduits in the streets and alleys of the city where the same may be required, at its own expense, in such manner as to least inconvenience the city and its inhabitants; and the company was also required to afterwards repair, with the least possible delay, the streets it had broken. In 1873 an act of the legislature fixed the date of the expiration of the exclusive franchise of the New Orleans Gaslight Company at April, 1875, and the franchise of the Crescent City Gaslight Company was confirmed from that date for the period of fifty years. On March 29, 1875, the New Orleans Gaslight Company and the Crescent City Gaslight Company were consolidated under the name of the former corporation. This company is the plaintiff in the action in the state court. By an act of the legislature, approved July 9, 1896, the state created a board known as the Drainage Commission of New Orleans, which board was given the power to control and execute a plan for the drainage of the city of New Orleans, and also the power to appropriate property according to the laws of the state, by legal proceedings, for the purpose of constructing a drainage system. After adopting a system of drainage, and proceeding with the construction thereof, according to the plans, it was found necessary to change the location in some places in the streets of the city, of the mains and pipes theretofore laid by the New Orleans Gaslight Company. The testimony shows that there was nothing to indicate that these changes were made in other than cases of necessity and with as little interference as possible with the property of the gas company. By stipulation between the parties it was agreed that the charges should be paid by the gas company when it became necessary to accede to the demands of the drainage commission; the gas company should keep an account thereof; and that its right to recover for the amount expended by it should not be prejudiced by the arrangement made, but should be submitted to the courts for final adjudication. This action was brought to recover the cost of the changes so made. In the court of original jurisdiction there was a judgment in favor of the drainage commission. Upon appeal the supreme court of Louisiana reversed this judgment. Upon rehearing, the latter judgment was reversed and a final decree rendered, affirming the judgment of the lower court, rejecting the claim of the gas company. 111 La. 838, 35 So. 929. A writ of error to this court brings into review that judgment, the contention being that the judgment of the state court has impaired the contract rights of the gas company, and has the effect to take its property without compensation, in derogation of rights secured by the Constitution and the 14th Amendment.

Mr. Charles F. Buck argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The rights of the plaintiff company are of a surer and more permanent character than a mere license,—a user at the pleasure of the sovereign.

New Orleans Gaslight Co. v. Louisiana Light & H. P. & Mfg. Co. 115 U. S. 650, 29 L. ed. 516, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 252.

So far as it may be found necessary in prosecuting the drainage work to appropriate, expropriate, take, or damage the property of the New Orleans Waterworks Company, including the removal and replacing of waterworks, mains, and pipes, the drainage commission can only lawfully proceed by previously making just and adequate compensation.

Moore v. New Orleans Waterworks Co. 114 Fed. 382.

A franchise or privilege to use streets for a quasi-public purpose will constitute an irrevocable contract, unless there is in some form a clear reservation to cancel or revoke it.

Chicago v. Taylor, 125 U. S. 161, 31 L. ed. 638, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 820; Little Nestucca Toll Road Co. v. Tillamook County, 31 Or. 1, 65 Am. St. Rep. 802, 48 Pac. 465; Southwestern R. Co. v. Southern & A. Teleg. Co. 46 Ga. 43, 12 Am. Rep. 585; Connecticut River R. Co. v. Franklin County, 127 Mass. 50, 34 Am. Rep. 338; San Mateo v. Southern P. Co. 8 Sawy. 238, 13 Fed. 733; Rutland Electric Light Co. v. Marble City Electric Light Co. 65 Vt. 377, 20 L. R. A. 821, 36 Am. St. Rep. 868, 26 Atl. 635; State, Hudson Teleph. Co. Prosecutor v. Jersey City, 49 N. J. L. 303, 60 Am. Rep. 619, 8 Atl. 123; Fidelity Trust & Safety Vault Co. v. Mobile Street R. Co. 53 Fed. 687; Clarksburg Electric Light Co. v. Clarksburg, 50 L. R. A. 142, and note, 47 W. Va. 739, 35 S. E. 994;

Louisville Gas Co. v. Citizens' Gaslight Co. 115 U. S. 683, 29 L. ed. 510, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 265; Chicago Municipal Gaslight & Fuel Co. v. Lake, 130 Ill. 42, 22 N. E. 616; Indianapolis v. Consumers Gas Trust Co. 140 Ind. 114, 27 L. R. A. 514, 49 Am. St. Rep. 183, 39 N. E. 433; Sixth Ave. R. Co. v. Kerr, 72 N. Y. 330; 2 Dill. Mun. Corp. 3d ed. § 588, p. 582; Irwin v. Great Southern Teleph. Co. 37 La. Ann. 63; Glover v. Powell, 10 N. J. Eq. 211.

The police power, whatever it may be in nature and scope, is subordinate to the Constitution.

Re Jacobs, 98 N. Y. 98, 50 Am. Rep. 636.

The police power cannot be pleaded to justify damaging or taking of private property engaged in a lawful purpose authorized by the state.

Louisville Gas Co. v. Citizens' Gaslight Co. 115 U. S. 683, 29 L. ed. 510, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 265; Mills, Em. Dom. § 7; Elliott, Roads & Streets, § 20, p. 897, Limitation of Police Power, and Vested Rights; Cooley, Const. Lim. 3d ed. pp. 544, 572, chap. 16; Benson v. New York, 10 Barb. 245; Miller v. New York & E. R. Co. 21 Barb. 516; Russell, Pol. Power, p. 25; Re Cheeseborough, 78 N. Y. 232; Cavanagh v. Boston, 139 Mass. 426, 52 Am. Rep. 716, 1 N. E. 834; Lewis, Em. Dom. § 35; Freund, Pol. Power, §§ 513, 515, 555, 577; Detroit v. Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. 184 U. S. 368, 46 L. ed. 592, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410; Railroad Tax Case, 8 Sawy. 238, 13 Fed. 755; McCauley v. Weller, 12 Cal. 500; The Binghamton Bridge (Chenango Bridge Co. v. Binghamton Bridge Co.) 3 Wall. 51, 18 L. ed. 137; Bridge Proprietors v. Hoboken Land & Improv. Co. 1 Wall. 116, 17 L. ed. 571; Irwin v. Great Southern Teleph. Co. 37 La. Ann. 63; Shreveport & R. River Valley R. Co. v. St. Louis & S. W. R. Co. 51 La. Ann. 814, 25 So. 424; Pontchartrain R. Co. v. Levee Comrs. 49 La. Ann. 570, 21 So. 765; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Myatt, 98 Fed. 335.

The enforced removal and relaying of the mains of the plaintiff company is a "taking" or "damaging" of its private property.

Elliott, Roads & Streets, 2d ed. §§ 202, 203; Freund, Pol. Power, § 507, p. 543; Eaton v. Boston, C. & M. R. Co. 51 N. H. 504, 12 Am. Rep. 147; Pumpelly v. Green Bay & M. Canal Co. 13 Wall. 166, 20 L. ed. 557; Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. 183 U. S. 105, 106, 46 L. ed. 107, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; United States v. Lynah, 188 U. S. 469, 47 L. ed. 548, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 349; Chicago v. Taylor, 125 U. S. 161, 31 L. ed. 638, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 820.

Mr. Omer Villeré argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

Expenses of erecting gates, planking the crossing, and maintaining flagmen, which will necessarily result from the laying out of a street across a railroad, must be regarded as incidental to the exercise of the police powers of the state, and do not constitute an element of just compensation to the railroad.
197 U. S.

Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 41 L. ed. 979, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581.

Expense of changing the location of water pipes in accordance with a change of grade of the street is damnum absque injuria.

Jamaica Pond Aqueduct Corp. v. Brookline, 121 Mass. 5.

The cost of relaying a water pipe to make way for a sewer could not be recovered, although the water pipe had been originally laid under the direction of the city.

National Waterworks Co. v. Kansas City, 28 Fed. 921. See also Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 31 L. ed. 205, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Quincy, 136 Ill. 563, 29 Am. St. Rep. 334, 27 N. E. 193; Middlesex R. Co. v. Wakefield, 103 Mass. 261; Jamaica Pond Aqueduct Corp. v. Brookline, 121 Mass. 5; Columbus Gaslight & Coke Co. v. Columbus, 50 Ohio St. 65, 19 L. R. A. 510, 40 Am. St. Rep. 648, 33 N. E. 292; Cleveland v. Augusta, 102 Ga. 233, 43 L. R. A. 638, 29 S. E. 584.

In creating the drainage commission of New Orleans, and in authorizing and directing it to execute a system of drainage for the city of New Orleans, the legislature was validly exercising the police power of the state in the interest of the health and comfort of its citizens.

Carondelet Canal & Nav. Co. v. New Orleans, 38 La. Ann. 309; Melpomene Street v. New Orleans, 14 La. Ann. 455; Bass v. State, 34 La. Ann. 494.

The franchise of the plaintiff company to make use of the public streets of New Orleans was taken subject to the implied condition that the state in the exercise of its police power might subsequently authorize in such streets other works subservient to the health and comfort of the citizens of New Orleans, the execution of which works might, incidentally, cause damage to the property held by plaintiff under its prior franchise. The loss caused by such subsequently authorized work, when executed with reasonable care, was damnum absque injuria.

Bass v. State, 34 La. Ann. 494; Peart v. Meeker, 45 La. Ann. 421, 12 So. 490; Egan v. Hart, 45 La. Ann. 1360, 14 So. 244; Carondelet Canal & Nav. Co. v. New Orleans, 38 La. Ann. 308; Vidalat v. New Orleans, 43 La. Ann. 1121, 10 So. 175; Ruch v. New Orleans, 43 La. Ann. 275, 9 So. 473; Pontchartrain R. Co. v. Levee Comrs. 49 La. Ann. 570, 21 So. 765; Eldridge v. Trezevant, 160 U. S. 455, 40 L. ed. 490, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep.

345; Dubose v. Levee Comrs. 11 La. Ann. 165; National Waterworks Co. v. Kansas City, 28 Fed. 921; Middlesex R. Co. v. Wakefield, 103 Mass. 261; Cincinnati v. Penny, 21 Ohio St. 499, 8 Am. Rep. 73; Brown v. Duplessis, 14 La. Ann. 854; Dill. Mun. Corp. §§ 656, 671; Lewis, Em. Dom. §§ 107, 109.

The principle is well established that the legislature cannot part with or bargain away any portion of its police power; and from this principle it follows that, even if the plaintiff received an exclusive grant and right in and to the space in the streets of the city of New Orleans occupied by its mains and conduits, such grant would have constituted no bar to the perfection of a system of drainage.

Butchers' Union S. H. & L. S. L. Co. v. Crescent City L. S. L. & S. H. Co. 111 U. S. 746, 28 L. ed. 585, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 652.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

In the case of the New Orleans Gaslight Co. v. Louisiana Light & H. P. & Mfg. Co. 115 U. S. 650, 29 L. ed. 516, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 252, it was held that the complainant, by reason of the franchises granted and agreements made, as fully set forth in that case, had acquired the exclusive right to supply gas to the city of New Orleans and its inhabitants through pipes and mains laid in the streets.

It is the contention of the plaintiff in error that, having acquired the franchise and availed itself of the right to locate its pipes under the streets of the city, it has thereby acquired a property right which cannot be taken from it by a shifting of some of its mains and pipes from their location to accommodate the drainage system, without compensation for the cost of such changes. It is not contended that the gas company has acquired such a property right as will prevent the drainage commission, in the exercise of the police power granted to it by the state, from removing the pipes so as to make room for its work, but it is insisted that this can only be done upon terms of compensation for the cost of removal. This contention requires an examination of the extent and nature of the rights conferred in the grant to the gas company. The exclusive privilege which was sustained by this [459] court in the case of New Orleans Gaslight Co. v. Louisiana Light & H. P. & Mfg. Co. 115 U. S. 650, 29 L. ed. 516, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 252, was the right to supply the city and its inhabitants with gas for the term granted. There was nothing in the grant of the privilege which gave the company the right to any particular location in the streets; it had the right to use the streets, or such of them as it might require in the prosecution of its business, but in the original grant to the New Orleans Gaslight & Banking Company the pipes were to be laid in the public ways and streets, "having due regard to the public convenience." And in the grant to the Crescent City Gaslight Company the pipes were to be "laid in such manner as to produce the least inconvenience to the city or its inhabitants." In the very terms of the grant there is a recognition that the use of the streets by the gas company was to be in such manner as to least inconvenience the city in such use thereof. Except that the privilege was conferred to use the streets in laying the pipes in some places thereunder, there was nothing in the terms of the grant to indicate the intention of the state to give up its control of the public streets,—certainly not so far as such power might be required by proper regulations to control their use for legitimate purposes connected with the public health and safety. In the case above cited, in which the exclusive right to supply gas was sustained, there was a distinct recognition that the privilege granted was subject to proper regulations in the interest of the public health, morals, and safety. Upon this subject Mr. Justice Harlan, speaking for the court, said (115 U. S. 671, 29 L. ed. 524, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 263):

"With reference to the contract in this case it may be said that it is not, in any legal sense, to the prejudice of the public health or the public safety. It is none the less a contract because the manufacture and distribution of gas, when not subjected to proper supervision, may possibly work injury to the public; for the grant of exclusive privileges to the plaintiff does not restrict the power of the state, or of the municipal government of New Orleans acting under authority for that purpose, to establish and enforce regulations which are not *incon-[460] sistent with the essential rights granted by plaintiff's charter, which may be necessary for the protection of the public against injury, whether arising from the want of due care in the conduct of its business, or from an improper use of the streets in laying gas pipes, or from the failure of the grantee to furnish gas of the required quality and amount. The constitutional prohibition upon state laws impairing the obligation of contracts does not restrict the power of the state to protect the public health, the public morals, or the public safety, as the one or the other may be involved in the execution of such contracts. Rights and privileges arising from contracts with a state are subject to regulations for the protection of the public health, the public morals, and the public safety, in the same sense and to the same extent as are all contracts and all property, whether owned by natural persons or corporations."

The drainage of a city in the interest of the public health and welfare is one of the most important purposes for which the police power can be exercised. The drainage commission, in carrying out this important work, it has been held by the supreme court of the state, is engaged in the execution of the police power of the state. State v. Flower, 49 La. Ann. 1199, 1203, 22 So. 623.

It is admitted that in the exercise of this power there has been no more interference with the property of the gas company than has been necessary to the carrying out of the drainage plan. There is no showing that the value of the property of the gas company has been depreciated, nor that it has suffered any deprivation further than the expense which was rendered necessary by the changing of the location of the pipes to accommodate the work of the drainage commission. The police power, in so far as its exercise is essential to the health of the community, it has been held cannot be contracted away. New York & N. E. R. Co. v. Bristol, 151 U. S. 556, 567, 38 L. ed. 269, 272, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 437; Butchers' Union S. H. & L. S. L. Co. v. Crescent City L. S. L. & S. H. Co. 111 U. S. 746, 751, 28 L. ed. 585, 587, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 652; Stone v. Mississippi, 101 U. S. 814, 816, 25 L. ed.

[461] 1079. In a large city *like New Orleans, situated as it is, and the entrepôt of an extensive commerce coming from many foreign countries, it is of the highest importance that the public health shall be safeguarded by all proper means. It would be unreasonable to suppose that in the grant to the gas company of the right to use the streets in the laying of its pipes it was ever intended to surrender or impair the public right to discharge the duty of conserving the public health. The gas company did not acquire any specific location in the streets; it was content with the general right to use them; and when it located its pipes it was at the risk that they might be, at some future time, disturbed, when the state might require for a necessary public use that changes in location be made.

This right of control seems to be conceded by the learned counsel for the plaintiff in error, in so far as it relates to the right to regulate the use of the surface of the streets, and it is recognized that the users of such surface may be required to adapt themselves to regulations made in the exercise of the police power. We see no reason why the same principle should not apply to the subsurface of the streets, which, no less than the surface, is primarily under public control. The need of occupation of the soil beneath the streets in cities is constantly increasing, for the supply of water and light and the construction of systems of sewerage and drainage; and every reason of public policy requires that grants of rights in such subsurface shall be held subject to such reasonable regulation as the public health and safety may require. There is nothing in the grant to the gas company, even if it could legally be done, undertaking to limit the right of the state to establish a system of drainage in the streets. We think whatever right the gas company acquired was subject, in so far as the location of its pipes was concerned, to such future regulations as might be required in the interest of the public health and welfare. These views are amply sustained by the authorities. National Waterworks Co. v. Kansas, 28 Fed. 921, in which the opinion was delivered by Mr. Justice Brewer, *then circuit judge; Columbus Gaslight & Coke Co. v. Columbus, 50 Ohio St. 65, 19 L. R. A. 510, 40 Am. St. Rep. 648, 33 N. E. 292; Jamaica Pond Aqueduct Corp. v. Brookline, 121 Mass. 5; Re Deering, 93 N. Y. 361; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 254, 41 L. ed. 979, 990, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581. In the latter case it was held that uncompensated obedience to a regulation enacted for the public safety under the police power of the state was not taking property without due compensation. In our view, that is all there is to this case. The gas company, by its grant from the city, acquired no exclusive right to the location of its pipes in the streets, as chosen by it, under a general grant of authority to use the streets. The city made no contract that the gas company should not be disturbed in the location chosen. In the exercise of the police power of the state, for a purpose highly necessary in the promotion of the public health, it has become necessary to change the location of the pipes of the gas company so as to accommodate them to the new public work. In complying with this requirement at its own expense, none of the property of the gas company has been taken, and the injury sustained is damnum absque injuria.

197 U. S.

We find no error in the judgment of the Supreme Court of Louisiana, and the same is affirmed.

[463]*IRON CLIFFS COMPANY, Cleveland Cliffs Iron Company, William G. Mather, and Murray M. Duncan, Plffs. in Err.,

v.

NEGAUNEE IRON COMPANY, Edward N. Breitung, and Mary Kaufman.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 463-475.)

Error to state court—Federal question—when decision not involved.

A decree of the state court requiring defendants to vacate certain lands, and enjoining them from further mining thereon, which was the relief prayed in a bill proceeding on the theory that the corporation holding a mining lease under which defendants justified their occupation as its agents was no longer in existence, is not reviewable in the Federal Supreme Court as involving a denial of the claim that in proceeding to determine the case without making the corporation a party defendant it will be deprived of its property without due process of law, since, not being a party, the rights of the corporation are not affected by such decree.

[No. 173.]

Argued March 9, 10, 1905. Decided April 3, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Michigan to review a decree requiring the defendants to vacate certain lands and enjoining them from mining thereon. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

See same case below, 96 N. W. 468.

Statement by Mr. Justice Day:

This case was begun in the circuit court of the state of Michigan by the defendants in error, the Negaunee Iron Company, Edward N. Breitung, and Mary Kaufman, against the Iron Cliffs Company, the Cleveland Cliffs Iron Company, William G. Mather, and Murray M. Duncan. The defendants in error, plaintiffs in the court below, claimed to be the owners of certain premises upon which there was an outstanding lease purporting to run for a term of ninety-nine years from its date, September 17, 1857, made by Charles Harvey to the Pioneer Iron Company. As the controversy in this court centers about this lease, the allegations of the bill in respect thereto may be noticed. It is alleged that the interest conveyed by Harvey on the 17th day of September, 1857, to the Pioneer Iron Company was for the sole purpose of mining and quarrying at its own expense such ores and marble as might be found on the premises, subject to the qualification that the said company should not quarry, mine, or remove any ore from said *lands, except[464] such as it could actually convert into merchantable iron in its own furnaces and forges, being the furnaces and forges then being constructed or about to be constructed by the said company at Negaunee. Complainants allege that at the time of the filing of the bill they were, and for more than fifteen years theretofore had been, in the actual and exclusive possession of all the lands described in the bill, and the ore and marble thereon, claiming to be the exclusive owners thereof. That said Pioneer Iron Company, in the month of September, 1859, erected two certain ore furnaces at Negaunee, instead of one furnace, as contemplated at the time of the execution of the grant or lease by Harvey to the Pioneer Iron Company.

That said Pioneer Iron Company carried on the business of manufacturing iron at its said furnaces from the time they were constructed until about the 1st day of January, 1866. That said Pioneer Iron Company, in carrying on its said business, procured no iron from the premises, or any portion of the premises described in said lease executed by the said Charles T. Harvey to the said Pioneer Iron Company, but procured all of their ore for the manufacturing of iron from other lands.

Complainant alleges that on the 1st day of January, 1866, the Pioneer Iron Company ceased to do business, and has not since that time manufactured or operated under the lease, but, on the contrary, at and from the date aforesaid abandoned the same. On the 10th day of March, 1866, the Pioneer Iron Company entered into an agreement with and leased to the Iron Cliffs Company for the period of ten years its entire real and personal property situated in the county of Marquette, Michigan, consisting of all its iron works, buildings, lands, and property rights. That after making said lease and agreement with the Iron Cliffs Company the said Pioneer Iron Company made and filed no reports as required by the laws of the state of Michigan.

"That at some time prior to the 1st day of January, 1873, the said Iron Cliffs Com-

NOTE.—On the general subject, of writs of error from United States Supreme Court to state courts—see notes to Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 267; Kipley v. Illinois, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998; and Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884.

On what adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts—see note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L. R. A. 513.

On how and when questions must be raised and decided in a state court in order to make a case for a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States—see note to Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L. R. A. 33.

pany became the owner of all the capital stock of said Pioneer Iron Company, and [465] said stock has *since that time been held in the names of different individuals for the uses and purposes of said Iron Cliffs Company, and the certificates of stock representing said capital stock of said Pioneer Iron Company have been and now are held in the names of different individuals who are officers, directors, stockholders, agents, or servants of the said Iron Cliffs Company and of the Cleveland Cliffs Iron Company, a corporation organized under the laws of the state of West Virginia and doing business at Negaunee, in said county of Marquette, Michigan, which two corporations have been operating together in the conduct of their business, and whose officers and agents are in the main the same persons; that said stock is held as aforesaid for the use and benefit of said Iron Cliffs Company and the said Cleveland Cliffs Iron Company.

"That on the 2d day of April, A. D. 1887, the corporate existence of said Pioneer Iron Company, by the terms of its articles of association, expired by limitation, and said corporation became and was thereby dissolved; and that whatever rights, if any, the said Pioneer Iron Company had and held under and by virtue of said lease, were thereby terminated and extinguished, and such rights and interest thereby reverted to and became vested in said Charles T. Harvey and his grantees.

"That all the lands hereinbefore specially described are mineral lands, and have therein large deposits of valuable iron ore, and that the chief value of said lands consists in the iron ore situated therein, and the mining and removing therefrom of said iron ore by the defendants would take from said lands their principal value, and would work and would be to your orators an irreparable injury.

"That the officers and agents of said Iron Cliffs Company and said Cleveland Cliffs Iron Company, who are engaged in and carrying out the said scheme and plan to defraud your orators, and to mine and remove the iron ore from said lands under the cover and by the use of the name of the Pioneer Iron Company, are, so far as they are known to your orators, William G. Mather, who is the president of said Iron [466] Cliffs *Company and also president of said Cleveland Cliffs Iron Company, and Murray M. Duncan, who, your orators are informed and believe, and upon information and belief charge the truth to be, is the managing agent of the said Iron Cliffs Company and of the said Cleveland Cliffs Iron Company. That said Duncan and said Mather and their confederates, as aforesaid, well know that the corporate existence of the said Pioneer Iron Company has long since been terminated and said corporation dissolved, and that the rights and privileges granted in said lease of date September 17, 1857, have reverted to the said Charles T. Harvey and his grantees; notwithstanding which said Duncan, under the pretense that he is acting as agent of said Pioneer Iron Company, is engaged in superintending and directing said work which is being done on said lands by various persons who are laborers acting under his orders."

The prayer of the bill is—

"(1) That by the decree of this honorable court, all the rights and privileges in the mineral and stone granted in said lease, executed by the said Charles T. Harvey as aforesaid, to the said Pioneer Iron Company, be declared to be terminated and of no binding force or effect as against your orators or their said lands.

"(2) That in so far as it affects your orators' said lands, said lease be canceled and the cloud upon your orators' title as aforesaid be removed, and your orators' title to all the iron ore and marble in and upon their said lands be quieted and confirmed in your orators.

"(3) That the said William G. Mather, Murray M. Duncan, the said Iron Cliffs Company, and the said Cleveland Cliffs Iron Company, and their officers, directors, agents, attorneys, and employees, be perpetually enjoined and restrained from setting up in the name of said Pioneer Iron Company or in any other manner any right or title, under said lease from said Charles T. Harvey to said Pioneer Iron Company, in or to your orators' said lands, and entering upon or removing from said lands any *iron ore or marble, and for such other and [467] such further relief as to the court shall seem meet and proper."

One of the defendants, Murray M. Duncan, answering separately, took issue upon the allegations of the bill, and denied specially that the Pioneer Company is dissolved, or any of its rights or property under the lease or conveyance terminated, and avers that the said Pioneer Iron Company is still the owner of the property rights and interests granted and conveyed; admits that he, as an agent of the said company, has actively engaged in conducting operations on some of the lands covered by the conveyance, for the purpose of discovering iron ore to be used in the furnaces of the Pioneer Iron Company, and that if ore sufficient in quantity and quality is discovered on the premises the said Pioneer Iron Company intends immediately to purchase the right to the surface, as required in the agreement, and intends to continue explorations until it finds ore on said lands for the use of its furnaces, or discovers the nonexistence of such ore; and further says that he has no personal interest in the lands set forth in the bill, but in all his actions is merely the agent of the Pioneer Iron Company, and not the agent of any other corporation or person whatsoever.

The Iron Cliffs Company and Cleveland Cliffs Iron Company and William G. Mather answer together, taking issue upon the allegations of the bill, admitting the existence of the lease of the Pioneer Iron Company, and aver that the entering and explorations on the lands were made and have been carried on by the Pioneer Iron Company, and deny that the charter of said company has expired; admit that said company through its agents has continued to carry on the operations begun by the Pioneer Iron Company under the direction of William G. Mather, as one of the officers of said company, and deny any interest in the matter set forth in the bill except as some or all of them may be stockholders or officers in the Pioneer Iron Company.

After issue joined and proofs taken, the bill of complaint was amended so as to charge that the defendants claim and pretend [468] that under the provisions of number 142 of the Public Acts of 1889, and under number 60 of the Public Acts of 1899 of the state of Michigan, said Pioneer Iron Company has been reorganized, and that by reason of said act such reorganized company had the right to mine ore under the said lease. The defendants answered the amendment, and admitted that in April, 1901, the Pioneer Iron Company had caused to be filed in the office of the secretary of state and in the office of the clerk of Marquette county certain perfected articles of incorporation of the said company in renewal of the original organization of said company, and under said reorganization, as well as previous filings, claimed to be a valid corporation. The record discloses that certain articles of association undertaking to reorganize the Pioneer Iron Company were adopted October 18, 1889, and filed in the office of the secretary of state, April 8, 1900, and amended articles were filed on April 8, 1901.

And, raising a Federal question, William G. Mather made the following answer:

"And this defendant, William G. Mather, answering for himself, says he owns in his own right and as trustee 3,940 shares of stock of said company; and that if any decree be rendered in this case by the court in any way declaring a forfeiture or termination or expiration of said ninety-nine-year lease, or in any way affecting the rights of the Pioneer Iron Company thereunder, that said Pioneer Iron Company not being made a party to this proceeding, he as such stockholder, and said Pioneer Iron Company would thereby be deprived of its and his property without due process of law, in violation of the provisions of the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States, which forbids any state to deprive any person of life or liberty or property without due process of law; and this defendant avers that any decision or findings of the court in any way limiting, terminating, changing, modifying, annulling, or diminishing the value of any of the rights of the Pioneer Iron Company under said ninety-nine-year lease, and *as ex-[469] pressed therein, would be void and of no effect under said provision of said Amendment of the Constitution of the United States."

Upon hearing, the circuit court, after setting forth certain findings, entered the following decree:

"Now, therefore, in consideration of the foregoing findings and determinations of the court concerning the particular matters set forth in the complainants' bill of complaint, it is ordered, adjudged, and decreed that the defendants, their counselors, attorneys, solicitors, and agents, and each and every of them, whether acting in their individual or representative capacity, immediately vacate and remove from the lands described in the bill of complaint, and that they and each of them be and they hereby are perpetually enjoined from further entering upon the said lands of the complainants for the purpose of exploring for or taking therefrom any minerals or iron ore, or for any purpose whatever, without the consent and authority of the complainants."

This decree, upon appeal, was affirmed by the supreme court of Michigan. 96 N. W. 468.

From this judgment a writ of error was sued out to this court.

Messrs. James H. Hoyt and Elihu Root argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Hoyt, Dustin, & Kelley, filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

It is not always necessary that the Federal question should appear affirmatively on the record or in the opinion, if an adjudication of such question were necessarily involved in the disposition of the case by the state court.

Kaukauna Water Power Co. v. Green Bay & M. Canal Co. 142 U. S. 254, 35 L. ed. 1004, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 281.

The Federal question is sufficiently set up and claimed if such Federal question was fully considered in the opinion of the court, and was ruled upon against the plaintiffs in error.

San Jose Land & Water Co. v. San Jose Ranch Co. 189 U. S. 177-180, 47 L. ed. 765-768, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 487.

• No particular form of words is necessary to be used in order that the Federal question may be said to be involved.

Dewey v. Des Moines, 173 U. S. 199, 43 L. ed. 667, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 379.

In the case of Roby v. Colehour, 146 U. S. 153, 159, 160, 36 L. ed. 922, 924, 925, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 47, this court refused so technically to construe pleadings as to require a dismissal of the writ of error, where the intention to assert the Federal claim was evident.

Messrs. Scott W. Shaul and Benton Hanchett argued the cause, and, with Mr. Arch B. Eldredge, filed a brief for defendants in error:

A question not Federal was raised and was decided against the plaintiffs in error, which is sufficient to sustain the judgment.

Harrison v. Morton, 171 U. S. 38, 47, 43 L. ed. 63, 66, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 742; Pierce v. Somers R. Co. 171 U. S. 641, 43 L. ed. 316, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 64; Cook County v. Calumet & C. Canal & Dock Co. 138 U. S. 635, 651, 34 L. ed. 1110, 1115, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 435; White v. Leovy, 174 U. S. 91, 96, 43 L. ed. 907, 909, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 604; Remington Paper Co. v. Watson, 173 U. S. 443, 43 L. ed. 762, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 456; McQuade v. Trenton, 172 U. S. 636, 639, 43 L. ed. 582, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 292; Chappell Chemical & Fertilizer Co. v. Sulphur Mines Co. 172 U. S. 465, 471, 43 L. ed. 517, 519, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 265; Capital Nat. Bank v. First Nat. Bank, 172 U. S. 425, 43 L. ed. 502, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 202; Giles v. Teasley, 193 U. S. 146, 160, 48 L. ed. 655, 658, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 359; Eustis v. Bolles, 150 U. S. 361, 369, 370, 37 L. ed. 1111, 1113, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131; California Powder Works v. Davis, 151 U. S. 389, 393, 38 L. ed. 206, 207, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350.

The Federal right must have been specially set up or claimed by the Iron Cliffs Company itself.

Columbia Water Power Co. v. Columbia Electric Street R. Light & P. Co. 172 U. S. 475, 487, 488, 43 L. ed. 521, 525, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 247; Yazoo & M. Valley R. Co. v. Adams, 180 U. S. 1, 14, 45 L. ed. 395, 404, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 240; Sully v. American Nat. Bank, 178 U. S. 289, 297, 44 L. ed. 1072, 1076, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 935.

That such claim was made by the Iron Cliffs Company cannot be left to inference by this court.

Kipley v. Illinois, 170 U. S. 182, 186, 42 L. ed. 998, 1001, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 550; Michigan Sugar Co. v. Michigan (Michigan 197 U. S.

Sugar Co. v. Dix) 185 U. S. 112, 113, 114, 46 L. ed. 829, 830, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; F. G. Oxley Stave Co. v. Butler County, 166 U. S. 648, 654, 41 L. ed. 1149, 1151, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 709; Union Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Kirchoff, 169 U. S. 103, 109, 110, 42 L. ed. 677, 680, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 260; Levy v. Superior Court, 167 U. S. 175, 177, 178, 42 L. ed. 126, 127, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 769; Keokuk & H. Bridge Co. v. Illinois, 175 U. S. 626, 634, 44 L. ed. 299, 302, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 205; Dewey v. Des Moines, 173 U. S. 193, 198-200, 43 L. ed. 665-667, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 379; Chapin v. Fye, 179 U. S. 127, 129, 45 L. ed. 119, 121, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 71; Spies v. Illinois (Ex parte Spies) 123 U. S. 131, 191, 31 L. ed. 80, 91, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 21; French v. Hopkins, 124 U. S. 524, 31 L. ed. 536, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 589; Chappell v. Bradshaw, 128 U. S. 132-134, 32 L. ed. 369, 370, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40; Baldwin v. Kansas, 129 U. S. 52, 56, 32 L. ed. 640, 641, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 193; Leeper v. Texas, 139 U. S. 462, 467, 35 L. ed. 225, 226, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 579; Cook County v. Calumet & C. Canal & Dock Co. 138 U. S. 635, 653, 34 L. ed. 1110, 1116, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 435; Brown v. Massachusetts, 144 U. S. 573, 579, 36 L. ed. 546, 550, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 757; Kennard v. Nebraska, 186 U. S. 304, 308, 46 L. ed. 1175, 1177, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 879; Howard v. Fleming, 191 U. S. 126, 137, 48 L. ed. 121, 125, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 49; San Jose Land & Water Co. v. San Jose Ranch Co. 189 U. S. 177, 179, 180, 47 L. ed. 765, 766, 768, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 487; Giles v. Teasley, 193 U. S. 146, 160, 48 L. ed. 655, 658, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 359.

The briefs presented to the state court cannot be referred to for the purpose of showing that the Federal question was set up or claimed by the Iron Cliffs Company.

Sayward v. Denny, 158 U. S. 180, 183, 39 L. ed. 941, 942, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 777; Gibson v. Chouteau, 8 Wall. 314, 19 L. ed. 317; Zadig v. Baldwin, 166 U. S. 485, 488, 41 L. ed. 1087, 1088, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 639.

The opinion of the circuit court is irrelevant upon the question before this court.

Gregory v. McVeigh, 23 Wall. 294, 305, 306, 23 L. ed. 156, 157; Fashnacht v. Frank, 23 Wall. 416, 420, 23 L. ed. 81, 82; Atherton v. Fowler, 91 U. S. 143, 146, 23 L. ed. 265, 266; Fisher v. Perkins (Fisher v. Carrico) 122 U. S. 522, 525, 30 L. ed. 1192, 1193, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1227.

It clearly appears from the record that the state court based its decree upon facts as having been found by the court, and that such facts having been so found are sufficient to sustain the decree. This court, without inquiring into the soundness of the decision of the state court, refuses to take jurisdiction in such cases.

Klinger v. Missouri, 13 Wall. 257, 263, 20 L. ed. 635, 637; Murdock v. Memphis, 20 Wall. 590, 636, 22 L. ed. 429, 444; Hale v. Akers, 132 U. S. 554, 564, 565, 33 L. ed. 442, 446, 447, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 171; Beaupre v. Noyes, 138 U. S. 397, 402, 34 L. ed. 991, 992, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 296; De Saussure v. Gaillard, 127 U. S. 216, 233, 234, 32 L. ed. 125, 132, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1053; Dibble v. Bellingham Bay Land Co. 163 U. S. 63, 69, 41 L. ed. 72, 74, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 939; Pittsburgh & L. A. Iron Co. v. Cleveland Iron Min. Co. 178 U. S. 270, 279, 44 L. ed. 1065, 1068, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 931; Giles v. Teasley, 193 U. S. 146, 160, 48 L. ed. 655, 658, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 359.

The judgment that the Pioneer Iron Company is not a necessary party does not present any Federal question, and is not subject to review.

Murdock v. Memphis, 20 Wall. 590, 636, 638, 22 L. ed. 429, 444, 445; Avery v. Popper, 179 U. S. 305, 315, 45 L. ed. 203, 207, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 94; Hale v. Akers, 132 U. S. 554, 564, 33 L. ed. 442, 446, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 171; Beaupre v. Noyes, 138 U. S. 397, 401, 402, 34 L. ed. 991, 992, 993, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 296; Telluride Power Transmission Co. v. Rio Grande Western R. Co. 175 U. S. 639, 647, 44 L. ed. 305, 309, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 245.

The court will not, in this case, inquire and determine whether, under the Constitution and statutes of Michigan, the Pioneer Iron Company could be reorganized, and also whether, under proceedings attempted for the purpose, a reorganization was accomplished.

Telluride Power Transmission Co. v. Rio Grande Western R. Co. 175 U. S. 639, 647, 44 L. ed. 305, 308, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 245; Dower v. Richards, 151 U. S. 658, 663, 38 L. ed. 305, 307, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 452; Israel v. Arthur, 152 U. S. 355, 362, 38 L. ed. 474, 478, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 583.

Messrs. S. W. Shaull, Arch B. Eldredge, H. F. Pennington, Charles R. Brown, and Benton Hanchett also filed a brief for defendants in error.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

The Federal question, from which alone this court can take jurisdiction, is alleged to arise from the adverse decision made upon the answer of William G. Mather, setting up, in substance, that in proceeding to determine the case and render a decree without the presence of the Pioneer Iron Company as a party defendant in the action the said company and Mather, as a stockholder therein, were deprived of property without due process of law, in violation of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States. It is elementary that, unless such Federal right set up in the state court was denied the plaintiff in error, this court has no jurisdiction. An examination of the opinion and decision of the supreme court *of Michigan shows the court held, [471] among other things, that the lease to the Pioneer Iron Company and the rights acquired thereby were appurtenant to the furnaces then existing upon the lands, and that it acquired no right to mine more ore than was necessary to supply such furnaces. That, as the right to mine the ore under the lease was appurtenant to the blast furnaces erected and intended to manufacture the iron so mined, the abandonment and destruction of the furnaces destroyed the right to mine the ore under the lease. The Pioneer Company, after the execution of the ninety-nine-year lease, having found ore in nonpaying quantities, had abandoned explorations, and for forty-three years had made no attempt to mine on the lands. That in 1866 the Pioneer Iron Company conveyed to the Iron Cliffs Company, for a period of ten years, all its iron works, buildings, lands, and property rights. The Iron Cliffs Company afterwards became the owner of all the stock of the Pioneer Company, and thereafter carried on the furnace business. That the Pioneer Iron Company was regarded as merged in the Iron Cliffs Company, and never thereafter made or filed any reports as required by the laws of the state of Michigan. That the complainants and those under whom they claim right and title, beginning about the year 1870, spent large sums of money in exploring and developing the lands and opening valuable mines thereon, and that the rights thus acquired, with the knowledge of those in interest, had worked an estoppel of any claim of right under the lease. For these, among other reasons, the supreme court affirmed the decree of the circuit court.

It is apparent that the questions decided in the state supreme court were of a non-Federal character, and give no right of review here unless it is true that in this judgment the Pioneer Iron Company has been concluded and its property rights taken without giving it an opportunity of being heard in the case. It is fundamental that no person can be deprived of property rights by any decree in a case wherein he is not a party. Not being made a party to the suit, the rights of the *Pioneer Iron Com-[472] pany cannot be affected in any way by the decision of the court. Finley v. Bank of United States, 11 Wheat. 304, 307, 6 L. ed. 480; New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. New Orleans, 164 U. S. 471, 480, 41 L. ed. 518, 523, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 161.

But it is urged that, notwithstanding the Pioneer Iron Company is not a party to the record, its rights are necessarily adjudged in the decision, which affects the lease granted to it, and under which the defendants in their answer claim to act. But we cannot concede this proposition. It may be answered primarily that the Pioneer Iron Company cannot thus be denied its rights. The affirmative relief granted to the complainant must be on the case made in the bill, its amendment, and the testimony supporting the allegations therein made. The bill proceeds upon the theory that under the laws of the state of Michigan the charter of the Pioneer Iron Company had expired in 1887,—thirty years from the date of its organization; and there was the most careful avoidance, in the pleadings of the complaint, of any recognition of the existence as a going corporation of the Pioneer Iron Company. It was charged in the bill that its corporate existence had ended, and, so far from making it a party, the complainants refrained from recognizing it as an existing corporation, and the relief sought was against the corporations and persons named and made defendants in their own right, and not as agents of the Pioneer Iron Company, but who were alleged and found to be using the name of that corporation as a cover for wrongful acts of their own. The mere fact that the defendants sought to justify their acts as agents of the Pioneer Iron Company would not warrant the court in awarding a decree against that company or its agents, neither being made a party to the record. Nor, in our opinion, did the judgment rendered have this effect. In the case of Tindal v. Wesley, 167 U. S. 204, 42 L. ed. 137, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770, where a suit was brought in South Carolina to recover possession of certain real property in that state, one of the defendants answered that he had no personal interest in the property except as secretary of the state of South Carolina, in which capacity alone he [473] had acquired *the control of the property. It was argued that in that event the suit could not be maintained, because it was in fact an action against the state within the meaning of the 11th Amendment, and the judgment of the court concluded the state. To this contention this court, speaking by Mr. Justice Harlan, made answer:

"It is said that the judgment in this case may conclude the state. Not so. It is a judgment to the effect only that, as between the plaintiff and the defendants, the former is entitled to possession of the property in question, the latter having shown no valid authority to withhold possession from the plaintiff; that the assertion by the defendants of a right to remain in possession is without legal foundation. The state not being a party to the suit, the judgment will not conclude it. Not having submitted its rights to the determination of the court in this case, it will be open to the state to bring any action that may be appropriate to establish and protect whatever claim it has to the premises in dispute. Its claim, if it means to assert one, will thus be brought to the test of the law as administered by tribunals ordained to determine controverted rights of property; and the record in this case will not be evidence against it for any purpose touching the merits of its claim."

So in this case, notwithstanding the answer of the defendants justifying as agents of the Pioneer Iron Company, the bill made neither the company nor any agent of it as such a party to the proceedings. The mere fact that the claim is made that the Pioneer Iron Company will be concluded can have no effect upon it so long as it has not submitted its rights to adjudication by voluntary proceedings on its part, or been brought into court by proper process. It is true the defendants claim the charter of the company has been renewed, and that it is still a going corporation. It is conceded that at the date of its origin the Constitution of the state of Michigan prohibited the organization of corporations for a period greater than thirty years. That the supreme court of Michigan did *not intend [474] to adjudicate that the Pioneer Iron Company if reorganized was concluded by the decree of the circuit court, is shown by the language used in the conclusion of its opinion:

"The Constitution at the date of its organization and at the expiration of its charter expressly prohibited the organization of corporations beyond the period of thirty years. No provisions then existed, either by the Constitution or by the statute, authorizing a reorganization of corporations which had expired by limitation. A constitutional amendment was adopted in 1889, authorizing the legislature to provide by general laws for one or more extensions of the term of such corporations, and also for the reorganization 'for a further period, not exceeding thirty years, of such corporations whose terms have expired by limitation, on the consent of not less than four fifths of the capital.' Pursuant to this authority the legislature in 1889 passed an act authorizing such reorganization. 2 Comp. Laws, § 7035. Very important questions are raised by counsel as to the effect of this reorganization statute, the validity of the act of reorganization by the Pioneer Iron Company, as to whether the Pioneer Iron Company was in position to avail itself of this statute, and also the effect upon the ninety-nine-year lease should the reorganization be held to be valid. Inasmuch, however, as these questions are not essential to a decision of the case, we refrain from determining them."

But it is said the supreme court affirmed the decree of the lower court, in which the defendants were enjoined in a representative capacity, and that this includes them as agents of the Pioneer Iron Company, and that when the agents of the company are enjoined the decree amounts to a judgment against the corporation which they represent. But in view of the pleadings, as already stated, and the claim made and insisted upon by the complainants that there was no Pioneer Iron Company in existence, we think the language in the decree has reference to the injunction and order against the corporations and individuals made defendants and their attorneys, solicitors, and agents, in their representative capacity, that [475] is, *as representing the defendants in any of the ways mentioned. The decree was rendered after finding in favor of the complainants' theory of the case, and had the effect to require the defendants to the bill, their agents and attorneys, to vacate the premises, and enjoined them from further mining thereon. It is utterly inconsistent with the proceedings and the decree to enlarge the judgment so as to include agents of the Pioneer Iron Company. If it should hereafter be insisted that the rights of that company or its agents are concluded, a Federal question might arise if such effect shall be given to the decree in this action. In our view of this case there is nothing in the proceedings or decree in anywise conclusive of the rights of the Pioneer Iron Company, if it is held to be a living corporation, or any of its duly authorized agents acting in its behalf.

We therefore find that no Federal question arises upon this record. The proceedings in this court will be dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

UNITED STATES, Petitioner,

v.

GEORGE E. CADARR, Edward Parker,
John J. Keating, and John N. Myers.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 475-481.)

Criminal law—limitation of actions—failure of grand jury to act—repeal of statute by implication.

The further prosecution of a criminal offense is not barred by the failure of the grand jury to act within nine months from the date when the accused were held to bail to await such action, although it is provided by D. C. Code, § 939 (31 Stat. at L. 1189, 1342, chap. 854), that under such circumstances, unless the court enlarges the time, "the prosecution of such charge shall be deemed to have been abandoned, and the accused shall be set free, or his bail discharged, as the case may be," but this section must be deemed to operate merely as ending the pending prosecution, and not as repealing pro tanto the general statute of limitations contained in U. S. Rev. Stat. § 1044 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 725), prescribing three years as the limitation for all offenses not capital.

NOTE.—On repeal of statutes by implication—see notes to State v. Massey, 4 L. R. A. 309; First Nat. Bank v. Weidenbeck, 38 C. C. A. 136; and United States v. 356 Caddles of Tobacco, 20 L. ed. U. S. 235.

842

[No. 438.]

Argued February 28, March 1, 1905. Decided April 3, 1905.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Supreme Court of the District, sustaining a motion to quash an indictment because it was not returned within nine months of the day when the accused were held to bail to await the action of the grand jury. Reversed and remanded with directions to reverse the judgment of the Supreme Court of the District, and to remand the cause for further proceedings.

See same case below, 24 App. D. C. 143.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Assistant Attorney General McReynolds argued the cause, and, with Mr. William R. Harr, filed a brief for petitioner:

A simple direction that the prisoner "shall be discharged" for failure to bring him to trial within the time specified does not operate as an acquittal, and bar further prosecution.

Re Edwards, 35 Kan. 99, 10 Pac. 539; State v. Fley, 2 Brev. 338, 4 Am. Dec. 583; State v. Williams, 35 S. C. 163, 14 S. E. 309; State v. Garthwaite, 23 N. J. L. 143; Apgar v. Woolston, 43 N. J. L. 67; Waller v. Com. 84 Va. 492, 5 S. E. 364; Re Bege-row, 133 Cal. 349, 56 L. R. A. 513, 85 Am. St. Rep. 178, 65 Pac. 828, 136 Cal. 293, 68 Pac. 773; Byrd v. State, 1 How. (Miss.) 163; Re Garvey, 7 Colo. 502, 4 Pac. 758.

